Brethren and sisters, be ready and watching, and I will try and do the same.

Wilmington, N. Y. J. S. Hinds.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—Recently my field of labor has been Salem, Lynn, and South Reading. And it is with heartfelt gratitude to God that I can say there is a deep interest manifested among the people to hear the words of Christ.

In Salem the Chapel is well filled Sundays with attentive listeners, who often manifest a deep interest and at times much feeling relative to the truth of Christ's coming and the needful preparation for that glorious rest with life and glory. We have some excellent social meetings, where the Spirit of the Lord quickens and comforts while we exhort one another. There is an interesting company of young disciples, who do not forsake the assembling of themselves with us, and who with the older members seem to be ready for every good word and work. Since the new year came in some have put on Christ, and have found joy and peace and believing. The wants of the poor are looked after, and the love for each other shows itself in that charity that suffers long and is kind. But our tendency is to a formal worship and round of duty, which is not profitable. I do hope in Jesus Christ to see a stirring up of the old members by the Spirit of God imparting to them more zeal and energy, that the young disciples of the flock may be cheered, encouraged, and helped on to their heavenly rest.

In Lynn I found an interesting state of things. The Lord was indeed among them, and a goodly number know it. Some had confessed their backslidings and wrongs, and had received blessings, with joy and peace; others were convinced, but were not quite humble enough to confess and let the work go on, but the spirit of reformation was among them, and the meetings were full of interest. After preaching twenty and more living testimonies were given. There was an interesting desire on the part of the people to hear that truth for which we bear reproach.

We had some blessed good free meetings in praying, singing, and exhorting, with some inquiring the way of life. The brethren here love the coming of their Lord and Master. Their heads are uplifted. They know redemption is near.

At So. Reading the work of reformation is going on. The church are awake to their own interest and that of others. The old veterans of twenty years' warfare are at their post doing duty, while the work of recruiting has been very successful, and is still going on. More than a dozen have confessed Christ and their loyalty to his government. Some enlisted while I was there. We had blessed seasons morning, afternoon, and evening, in urging the conditions and orders necessary to a victorious campaign, while the hearty responses would come from them thick and fast. All seemed ready for marching orders, ready for an aggressive movement. One meeting only created a strong desire for another. Thus the good work is going on. The Lord deepen and speed it on, causing it to spread.

The true light is shining. Fables and religious infidelity are giving way to the revealed word of God. The rational plan of redemption consummating itself at the coming of Jesus the life-giver, and the resurrection of the dead, is being received into good and honest hearts. Glory be to God. Dearly beloved, it is not enough to stand on the defensive. Up! and let us rally in the strength of the mighty One, and give battle to the enemy. Up! and onward with united action, and victory in the name of Jesus Christ is soon ours. Amen. Thine ready for the service,

Salem, Mar. 28th, 1866. L. Boutell.

Sr. P. P. Lamprey, Mast Yard, N. H., writes:—"It is now almost two years since I became a free subscriber for the Crisis. I am very grateful for the favor, and I have tried to do what good I could with them, by lending them to my neighbors, and sending them away to friends in different towns and states. I have succeeded in obtaining several good paying subscribers the past year, and have got one on the commencement of this new year. I am happy to do all I can to promote the usefulness of so good a periodical as the Crisis, whether I be a paying or a free subscriber."

Bro. D. D. Lathrop, Franklin, Pa., writes: "In this vicinity, there are seven different denominations, besides Spiritualists. We are now mostly united in a protracted meeting. Nine have embraced a hope in Christ, and cold ones are revived. Meetings continue under the preaching of the 'Reformed Methodists.'"

Bro. N. Wheeler, Cabot, Vt., writes:—"The cause of God has been prospering in Cabot of late. Some ten young persons have been hopefully converted, and some backsliders reclaimed. To God be all the glory. Pray for us that the work may not cease."

S. W. Worthington, North Bennington, Vt., writes:—"Bro. Grant, I wish to say through the Crisis to the brethren and sisters who preach the word, if any are passing this way, they will find a pilgrim's home with us."

Bro. Munger writes:—The battle goes well here in Concord. Glory to God. Thirteen were forward for prayers last evening. Ten were heads of families. Some forty have started anew, so the brethren say."

Married.

In Newstead, Erie Co., N. Y., March 21st, 1866, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Lyman E. Craw, of Lockport, N. Y., and Miss Esther P. Burnham.

Obituaries.

Hackett. Died in Dover, N. H., March 7th, 1866, after a protracted sickness of extreme suffering, of typhoid fever, Arabella Hackett, daughter of J. M. and Mary A. Hackett, aged ten years. She enjoyed her reason until the last, although deprived the use of speech for two weeks previous to her death. When last exercised, it was used in singing a few lines of a beautiful hymn, after prayers, with brethren Latham and Hawkins. The Holy Spirit seemed to animate and inspire her as she listened to the prayers and joined in the song of praise,—

The last on earth which here she sang,
But soon she'll join the immortal throng,
And sing in sweet, angelic strains,
On fair Eden's blissful plains.

A solemn and appropriate sermon was preached on her funeral occasion, on the 10th ult., from 2 Kings 4: 26, by Eld. T. M. Latham.

Milliken. Fell asleep in Jesus, March 8th, 1866, at her residence in Surry, Me., Mrs. Lydia T. Milliken, aged fifty-four years, seven months, and twenty-five days.

Thus slumbers one who was a faithful wife, an affectionate mother, and an humble christian. Her flesh rests in hope; hence we "sorrow not, even as others which have no hope;" believing that as "Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him" from the dead. Her sufferings, which were great at times, were borne very patiently. She leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. The funeral services were conducted by Eld. H. Hawes. C. H. Leverton.

Pease. Died in Enfield, Ct., March 11th, Sr Evelina Pease, wife of Bro. Theodore Pease, aged fifty-one years.

Sister P. was formerly connected with the M. E. church, until she heard the truth of Jesus' coming; then she, with her companion, was willing to forsake all for Christ and his word. Death had no terror to her, and as she approached the dark stream, she requested her family and friends to sing. Her faith was triumphant, her death peaceful; she rests in hope.

We spoke from Job 14: 14; and showed that the dead would live again. We were assisted in the services by Dr. Brigham, the Congregationalist minister. R. Williams.

Phillips. Died in Cranston, R. I., Feb. 4th, 1866, Carrie Rhodes, eldest daughter of Nathaniel and Caroline Phillips, aged four years and six days.

The parents sorrow, but not without hope of meeting their loved one in the goodly land.

There my little ones, I know,
Round me shall be clinging;
There the loved of long ago
With me shall be singing.
Oh, that land I long to see,
Where the weary-hearted
Shall with Christ in glory be,
Never to be parted.

Hadlock. Died in Savoy, Mass., Feb. 19th, 1866, my mother, Marion Hadlock, aged eighty-eight years and nine months.

Thus another who saw the first signs of a coming Jesus, has passed away. Only here and there one is now left, as old sentinels, testifying to God's veracity. Words of truth and comfort were spoken by Bro. E. Healey. H. Hadlock.

Connell. Died in Parkersburg, Butler Co., Iowa, March 7th, 1866, Clarinda, wife of Wm. H. Connell, in the thirty-second year of her age.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
In the kingdom we will greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

The subject of this notice was converted and baptized by Eld. A. M. Higgins, in the State of Massachusetts. She moved to Iowa in 1856, led a very godly life, and died a happy and peaceful death, expecting to sleep till Jesus comes. John 11: 25 was improved on the occasion, by Bro. Ensign, to comfort the bereaved. P. W. Hough.

Tucker. Died in Thompson, Feb. 2d, 1866, Bro. Silas Tucker, aged sixty-one years.

March 4th, Ida, grand-daughter, aged twelve years and six months.

Also, March 7th, Sr. Esther, wife of Bro. Silas Tucker, aged fifty-five years. [Corrected from last week.]

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool March 21, Queenstown 22d.

A Paris telegram of the 20th to the Daily Telegraph reports on good authority that Head Centre Stephens had just arrived in Paris, having been in Scotland.

Rio Janeiro, Feb. 23. A battle has been fought without decisive results between the Argentine and Paraguayan armies. The loss was heavy on both sides.

The Germans journals continue to represent the relations of Austria and Prussia as very threatening. They even asserted that Austria had ordered the assembling of 100,000 troops on the Bohemian frontier, and sent a circular note to the Powers, disclaiming all responsibility for the consequences of any conflict which may ensue.

The London Times directs attention to the critical state of affairs. It says Bismarck has thrown off his mask and the Duchies are to be annexed to Prussia. Preparations for war were progressing on both sides. In both capitals military councils are held, generals nominated, and plans of a campaign discussed. Funds are depressed in the various markets by disquieting rumors.

DOMESTIC.

New York, March 29. A Paris letter has the text of the Secret Convention between Napoleon and Maximilian at the city of Mexico, on the 29th of September last, fixing the pay and position of French agents in Mexico, the number of whom is large, for five years from above date.

Change of Feeling South.

The Washington Chronicle publishes several private letters from the South, lamenting the marked change of feeling which has taken place among the rebels since the President's veto of the Freedmen's Bureau bill. The most important of these letters, recently received by Senator Sumner from Wilmington, North Carolina, represents that the spirit of hatred towards negroes and Northern men is increasing in malignity, and finds expression in libelling the female teachers from the North, insulting Northern citizens generally, and persecuting the colored people. Arrests of the freedmen it is said are made on the most trifling pretences, and the most degrading and torturing penalties inflicted. The letter states that on the 15th inst., seven or eight colored men and one poor white were seized on an accusation of theft, and at broad noon, in one of the most frequented streets of the city, the colored men were strung up by order of the officers of the County Court, their wrists bound by ropes and drawn up over the branch of a tree till their toes could barely touch the ground, when they were stripped bare to the waist, and in the presence of a crowd of men, women and children, ordered to receive the number of lashes to which they were sentenced. This infliction was made upon three of them, when the affair was brought to the notice of the officer of the bureau, who ordered the work to cease. The white man was released at once, on bail offered by some one present.

A prominent army officer stationed in Wilmington, in a letter received here, relates occurrences illustrative of the same spirit, and attributes them to the same cause. He says the rebels hurrah for Jeff. Davis and President Johnson, and such is the feeling against the military that it is positively unsafe for an officer to venture out alone at night, unless well armed. An ex-officer of the 1st Texas Cavalry now in Texas, writing to one of his former military companions now stationed in this city, after speaking of the attractions of the Texan climate and the inducements to settle in that State, makes the following remarks:—

"There is one thing, however, that is working against the speedy return of quietness, not only in this State, but throughout the entire South, and that is the reconstruction policy of President Johnson. It is doing more to unsettle this country than people who are not practical observers of its workings have any idea of. Before this policy was made known, the people were prepared to accept anything. They expected to be treated as rebels, their leaders to be punished, and their property confiscated. But the moment it was made known their assurance returned. Rebels have again become arrogant and exacting. Treason stalks through the land unabashed. What we now want is emigration from the North, but we cannot look for any great amount until the present policy is changed."

Treatment of the Freedmen.—A commission sent by General Sickles to Greenville, S. C., to inquire into alleged ill-treatment of the freedmen report as follows:

"That there are armed bands in the districts of Newberg and Lawrence, who are harbored and paid by citizens of influence, for the avowed purpose of committing outrages upon freed people by murdering and flogging; that these bands are systematically screened from the authorities, and that no one dares now to report the outrages committed; that in cases where persons have heretofore testified against the perpetrators of these outrages, they have been compelled to leave the districts to escape the vengeance of the friends of the accused; that murder and other outrages have been committed upon the freed people for a price per head."

☞ The European papers present terrible pictures of the mortality attending the new disease, called "trachina," in several parts of the continent. The disease, as is well known, is engendered by eating pork, in which, though unseen, millions of animalculæ abound, that cannot be destroyed except by long and hard boiling. Those pass into the human system, and the person is eaten up alive by them, without being able to help himself. A German physician of Frankfort, who has given the subject much consideration, wrote on the 9th ult., that in a little place near Magdeburg, one hundred children had been rendered orphans by the disease, and upward of three hundred patients were then awaiting death, which they knew to be inevitable, from the same cause. The disease is reported to have appeared in some of the Western cities of the United States.

A Touching Incident.—Last Sabbath evening after an eloquent temperance address by Mr. Uniac at the Town Hall in South Reading, a young man came upon the platform and said: "It is a strange thing that I am here. I have kept the vilest place, and sold the most rum of any man in this town. I have led young men and old men to destruction. A few weeks ago I cursed every man who spoke against my business. I defied God. But soon after I could not sleep. The thought haunted me that some one of the men I had made drunk at night might be dead at my door in the morning. But, thank God, I am converted." He then raised both his hands and said: "I promise before God Almighty, my Maker and Savior, that I will never sell or use another single drop of liquor while God gives me life."—Journal, 21st.

A Fearful Instrument of War.—The Gazette du Midi reports that a new torpedo of a more destructive kind than any hitherto invented has just been tried in the dockyard of Castigneau, Toulon, with complete success. The Vauban ship-of-war, attacked by a boat twenty feet long, supplied with a spur armed with a fulminating torpedo, was lifted three feet out of the water and instantly sunk in consequence of an enormous hole in her keel caused by the torpedo. The success was the more remarkable as the charge of powder was only six pounds.

Explorations in Syria.—A Constantinople paper says that two antiquaries, in making excavations in Syria, have discovered a Jewish habitation entire, the construction of which dates two centuries previous to the Christian era. Its rooms are furnished after the Egyptian style, and these gentlemen found in them the five books of Moses, the Psalms of David, and another book containing Hebrew poetry, completely unknown.

☞ The population of Greece is one million two hundred thousand. The country is able to sustain four times this number.

Notices.

Notice.

We shall commence a meeting in the Chapel, corner of London and Decatur streets, East Boston, Monday evening, April 9th, to continue as long as duty may demand. John G. Hook.
C. Goodrich.

P. S. The meetings will be continued at Lowell Street Chapel this week and next. I expect Bro. I. Damman to assist in the meetings both at Lowell Street and East Boston. John G. Hook.

Discussion at Norway.

We are to have a discussion at Norway, Me., with Mr. N. Gunnerson, Universalist minister, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., April 10th.

First Question:—"Is the second coming of Christ, to judge the world, a future event?"

Second Question:—"Do reason and the Bible teach the immortality of man?"

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. Wm. Sheldon.

Photographs.

Bro. T. E. Wood, of Portsmouth, N. H., will send the photographs of Elds. C. Goodrich and H. Munger (album size) on the receipt of 25 cents each. The large size, suitable for framing, 75 cents each.

He will also send the picture of Bro. M. B. Czechowski (album size) for 25 cents; the proceeds to be appropriated to the European mission.

☞ Address T. E. Wood, Portsmouth, N. H., enclosing stamp to prepay postage.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattarsugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N. Y. Clinton Colegrove, Bap. Minister.

Sickness.

Bro. Grant:—I wish through the Crisis to say to the brothers and sisters of Bro. D. M. Hanscomb that he is very sick and has been for about four weeks. His address is Strickland's Ferry, Maine.

Wayne, Mar. 30, 1866. Hartley Gray.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston.
J. G. Hook .... Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

East Boston.
H. L. Hastings .... Sunday, April 8th

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, April 8th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M. Wm. C. Thurman.

Exeter, N. H. .... Saturday evening, April 7th and over the following Lord's day. Miles Grant.

Lynn, Mass. .... Sunday, April 8th
J. Couch.

Concord, N. H. .... Sunday, April 8th
H. Munger.

South Reading .... evenings, April 5th and 6th
Lawrence .... Sunday, April 8th
C. Goodrich.

North Salem, N. H., Lord's day, April 8th, through the week, and over the following Lord's day.
Summersworth, Great Falls, N. H., Wednesday evening, April 18th, through the week, and over the following Lord's day. L. C. McKinstry.

Plymouth .... Sunday, April 8th
Carver .... Sunday, April 15th
Worcester .... April 22d
Springfield .... April 29th
Hartford, Ct .... May 6th
West Haven, Ct .... May 13th and 20th
New Britain, Ct .... May 27th
Hartford, Ct .... June 3d
New Haven, Ct .... June 10th
Warehouse Point .... June 17th
J. S. White.

Enfield, (at Bro. Theodore Pease's house), Saturday evening, April 14th.
Scitico .... Sunday, April 15th
R. Williams.

Portland, Me .... Sunday, April 8th
Timothy Cole.

Sangerville, (near Bro. Oren French's) .... April 22d
Exeter, (Chamberlain school-house) .... April 29th
Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) .... May 6th
Levant, (Emmerson's Mills) .... May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's) .... May 27th
I. K. Lombard.

East Bowdoinham, (with Bro. H. D. Reed), Thursday evening, April 12th, and over the following Sunday.
R. R. York.

Freeport, (Swamp school-house) .... Sunday, April 15th
I. C. Wellcome.

East Granville, Mass. .... Saturday evening, April 14th and over the next Lord's day, April 15th, at Bro. S. Oatley's.
At Bro. Stephen Herrick's .... Tuesday eve, April 17th
East Hartland .... Wednesday eve, April 18th
Barkhamstead, (at the dwelling of Jason Case), Thursday evening, April 19th. H. Rockwell.

Agawam, Mass.
Bro. Oatley .... Sunday, April 8th
H. Pratt .... Sunday, April 15th

Stafford, Ct., (Free Church) .... Sunday, April 8th
H. Pratt.

Concord, N. H. (Angelos Hall) .... May 6th and 13th
Joseph Pinkham.

Porter, Me. .... Thursday evening, April 5th and over Sunday.
J. G. Smith.
J. Pinkham.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) .... Sunday, April 22d
J. G. Smith.

Harwinton, Ct. (school-house near Bro. Barber's), Sunday, April 8th.
O. D. Woodruff.

Plainfield Pond .... April 22d
West Hoosic, (Advent Chapel) .... April 29th
Wm. J. Blanchard.

Lee, N. H. .... April 8th and 15th
C. S. Emerson.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall), Saturday evening, April 28th, and Sunday, 29th, day and evening.
L. H. Otis.

Champlain, (Corbeau), 6 P. M. .... April 8th
Addison, Vt. .... evenings, April 11th, 12th, and 13th
Rutland, Vt. .... Lord's day, April 15th, and 22d with intervening evenings, if the brethren so arrange.
Champlain (Village), N. Y., A. M. .... April 29th
Massena, (as Bro. D. T. Taylor may arrange), May 6th
G. W. Stetson.

Abington, Ct. .... Sunday, April 15th
E. Bellows.

Danielsonville, Ct. .... Sunday, April 8th
Abington, Ct .... Sunday, April 15th
H. F. Carpenter.

West Falmouth, Me.
R. R. York .... Sunday, April 8th
Clarkson Goud .... Sunday, April 15th

East Bowdoinham, (Lancaster school-house), Sunday, April 15th. H. D. Reed.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. .... Sunday, April 8th
Cheshire Street, Ct. .... Sunday, April 15th
S. Woodruff.

Lake Village, (at the New Chapel) .... Sunday, April 8th
Meredith, (where Bro. Calif may appoint), Sunday, April 15th. Nelson Hartshorn.

Poultney, Vt. .... Friday eve, April 6th and over the following Lord's day.
Manchester, N. H. .... Lord's day, April 15th
Biddeford, Me. .... Lord's day, April 29th
C. C. Stevens.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) .... April 8th
Through the week as may seem duty, and over the Lord's day, April 15th. Geo. W. Brown.

Wallingford Farms, Ct. .... April 8th
B. Hitchcock.

Nottingham, (Union Hall) .... April 8th
H. M. Bryant.

Reynold's Station, (Pine Ridge) .... Sunday, April 8th
No Name—(supposed to be Wm. Shepherd.)

Pleasant Valley, Ct. .... Sunday, April 8th
Stephen Woodruff.

Concord, N. H., (corner of Green and Center Streets), Sundays, April 22d and 29th.
W. W. Sutherland.

Southbridge, Mass., (Brick schoolhouse) .... April 8th
Geo. A. Stebbins.

Thompson, Ct. .... evening, April 6th
Pine Tree School-house, North Salem, N. Y. (or as Bro. Bailey may appoint) .... Sundays, April 15th and 22d
Thompson, Ct. .... Sunday, April 29th
Wrightville .... evening, May 4th
Geo. L. Teeple.

Carlton, Orleans Co. .... April 8th
West Barre .... April 15th
Brockport .... April 22d
Darien City, Genesee Co. (as Bro. Henry Sharrock may appoint), Sunday April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Baptist church, near Bro. H. C. Simonds, at 4 P. M. same day. C. P. Sweezy.

Concord, N. H. .... April 8th
J. K. Bellows.

Bristol, Ct. .... Sunday, April 8th
Newfield, Ct .... Sunday, April 15th
A. Simpson.

Warner, (Waterloo Village), N. H.) .... April 15th
Simeon Roby.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

D. D. Lathrop—Paid to No. 543.
Mrs. C. Howe—It was acknowledged in No. 530, and paid to No. 662.
J. B. Wilcox—Received and sent.
F. R. W. Chapman—Received and acknowledged in No. 533.
CPDow—Credited in No. 644.
Geo. W. Turner—They will be out before a great while, and due notice will be given.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 548. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—E Potter, what P. O.? W Mitchell, what P. O.? B Quint 572, D B Salter 523, E P Streeter 531, E Myers 563, T Cheney 567.

$1.25 each—J D Patterson 573, S B Barnap 573, T. Erskine 573, L M Plummer 572, J H Young 571, S A Miller 570, S D Hastey 549, H Lucas 549, A P Noyes 572, T Snow 521, F Hapgood 573, B F Rice 573, F H Prentice 573, S D Applebee 576, A Jewett 579, R Knight 569, B Herrick 580, E Case 573, W L Huntley 566, F S Mills 572, R C Jackman 572, P O Seenebers 573, W F Dame 572, M E Eastman 573, W Hudson 573, D Richardson 573, E Turner 575, N Batchelder 562, S A Kamerling 532, R Morgan 573, A S Johnson 573, F Gasper 573, J M Eaton 573, J Clark 572, W Grossman 572, O W Brown 573, W Vreeland 573, J Allen 597, A L Boswell 565, G B Cargill 573, J C Burnham 573, P Edwards 561, C Benton 573, O L Rice 572, A H Johnson 572, S J Tyrrell 569, E Ayres 577, J A Clark 575, M. E. Fuller 572, M A Georgia 573, B T Parsons 573, B C Hitchcock 573, I Mayberry 573.

$2.00 each—S J Twing 444, E Good 537, L M Smith 599, S G Dunham 569, C. Haley 601, E. Fisher, what P. O.? W Payne 572, E C Payne 654, C Bemis 573.

$2.50 each—Z Snow 599, J C King 843, J P King 529, W Ingmire 572, C Goodwin 821, A Wright 601, O Evans 601, S Fogg 575, L M Squiers 599, P Dow 604, S Marsh, what P. O.? R A Haggett 598, F. B. Jones 603, M. E. Derrickson 589, V S Parkhurst 589, N Hartshorn 597, J Barrett 599, S G Laskey 599, L C Collins 600, A Hamilton 599, S Hale 629, B Pike 638, H A Gardner 604, R M Brooks 599, S M Mann 572, M Leach 599, J Thompson 599, J W Phelps 591, J Kent 599, W Corey 599, A Reynolds 599, E Clisby 599, M D Richardson 598, M S Barnard 593, P P Smith 634, J Colby 600, J Tracy 595, R Johnson 599, L Town 599, M Sherman 599, B Woodmancy 599, A Edwards 558, H H Kneeland 599, Z Bowe 599, H P Rockwell 599, S Pillsbury 599, S Scott 599, T W Nelson 599, T J Chadwick 599, F Todd 599, F Nelson 587, L J Jenner 598, L Allen 599, J Moody 609, E. P. Whitten 557, O. P. Alderman 599, S. Mayberry 599, E. Jones 596, J M Lydston 606.

$3.00 each—L Rawson 604, C Rice 555, C Silver 555, S K Dyer 541, M Olines 591, N Thompson 572, N Chase 594, J O Merrill 549, W Hathaway 586, B I Burnett 586.

Various sums.—A B Pinkham $1.72, old acct.; J. B. Fowler 62c, 560; J D Waldron $1.50, 555; J Hall $1.50, 513; A Strickland 50c, 556; J U Hathorne $5.00. 630; J W Matts $3.50, 595; D C Poorbouse $1.00, 656; P W Matts $5.00, 650; N Ranney 50c, 637; J. A. Smith 63c, 560; E G Hobbs $1.50, 592; C. Lawton $5.00, 603; M. Durkee $1.50, 574; G W Adams 63c, 546; J S Moulton $1.50, 573; D F Kendall $3.30, 578; M L Bickford 70c, 548; J Jennings 63c, 560; E Davis 63c, 560; S. Perkins $1.15, old acct.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

D T Taylor $4.50, S. Lane 65c, A. Brooks $3.25, D. Howard 50c, W S Raymond $1.01, S Hale $1.46, J Osborn $1.50, S Cooper 50c, S M Shade $2.00, D M Kinter $3.00, J Rogers 58c, A M Smith 45c, R S Robinson 5c, E L Marsh 70c, L Johnson $1.24, A L Boswell 50c, G B Cargill $2.40, A J Tuttle 80c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.—S M Shade, D D Lathrop, J Rogers, R S Robinson, D M Kinter, J Osborn, W H Fisher, S Cooper, L Johnson, F Nelson, G B Cargill, A J Tuttle, E L Marsh, N A Hitchcock, S Pulsbury, E B Card.
By Express—W. N. Pile.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

C. Hill, S. Jackman, M. H. Brown, J G Willis, F H Chamberlain, M. J. Plummer, O P Allen, P S Brock, C H Sweet, S L Manley, S C Wellcome, A N Seymour, D Grant, I A Thayer, S Mix, B P Manning, D Cogswell, A E Smith, H McClary, P S W Deyo, J N Berry, B Perham, P Tandy, I C Wellcome.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
Eld. C. Goodrich—No. 66 Princeton Street, East Boston, Mass.
J. R. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—364 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. F. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 37 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. L. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1.	I don't believe in Religion	12 pp., 3c.
2.	Did the World make itself?	16 pp., 4c.
3.	Is God Everybody, and Everybody God?	16 pp., 4c.
4.	Have we any need of the Bible?	24 pp., 4c.
5.	Who wrote the New Testament?	16 pp., 4c.
6.	Is the Gospel Fact or Fable?	16 pp., 4c.
7.	Can we believe Christ and his Apostles?	16 pp., 4c.
8.	Prophecy	32 pp., 5c.
9.	Moses and the Prophets	28 pp., 5c.
10.	Infidelity among the Stars	28 pp., 5c.
11.	Daylight before Sunrise	36 pp., 5c.
12.	Telescopic Views of Scripture	32 pp., 5c.
13.	Science, or Faith?	32 pp., 5c.

For the Set, (making 304 pp.) .... 40c. postpaid.

FOR A GREATER QUANTITY.

By mail, 800 pp. .... $1.00.
By express, 1000 pp. .... $1.00.
Address all orders to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1.	Home	16 pp.
2.	Life Insurance	16 pp.
3.	Lost! Lost!	16 pp.
4.	Brother, shall we meet?	8 pp.
5.	About God (for children)	4 pp.
6.	Worth Knowing	4 pp.
7.	Peace in Christ	4 pp.
8.	Now	4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent postpaid—
One set (64 pp.) .... 9c.
1200 pp. $1.00
1800 pp., (by express, not prepaid) $1.00
Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES, etc., A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and the Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 8c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.
REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.
THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.
REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.
SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 20c.
THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.
THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 12c; by mail, 15c.
THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 5c.
THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.
THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 6c; by mail, 7c.
THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $5.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.
THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; his Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.
CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.
FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.
ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 29c.
RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c, by mail, 29c.
PAULINE THEOLOGY, or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.
GLAD TIDINGS, or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE OLD PATHS, or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.
IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c, by mail, 8c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.
THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 4c; by mail, 6c.
SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.
REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c, by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS: A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.
THE DAY AND THE HOUR. a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.
CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00, by mail, $2.30c. Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.
DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.86.
CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75, by mail, $2.00.
HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.
THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.
FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.
THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 29c.
CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid, $1.60 per dozen.
THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 19c; $1.50 per dozen, postage, 5c. on every three copies.
SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.
AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c; by mail, 10c.
EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 80c; by mail, 88c.
HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.
COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.
PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.
WHY THE SHOE PINCHES. The Cause of Deformities in the feet, and how to avoid bunions, corns, etc. 30c. postpaid.
THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.
CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.
NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.
DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.
GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 5c. single; by mail, 6c. 50 cents a dozen, postpaid.
HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.
BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.
SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 20c; $2.00 per dozen. Paper, 2c, $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.
CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.
RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of the "cities of the nations." By Wm. Shepherd. 10c. postpaid; 85c. a dozen.
THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Jolliffe. 5c; by mail, 7c.
OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the American Advent Mission Society, its Constitution, Officers, Addresses, etc. 3c.
EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a Slave for forty-three years. 25c.
BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.
THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS, their Origin, Nature, Rank, and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. M. Runnells.

Bro. M. Grant:—Dear Sir, I have been a constant reader of the Crisis for more than two years, and acknowledge myself indebted to it for many invaluable ideas. Much light from the "Sacred Oracles" has been shed upon my mind from reading its pages. I may say that from reading the Crisis, and such books and tracts as my attention has been called to by it, I have become fully convinced that the Bible teaches that man is mortal, and that immortality can only be secured by getting into Christ, and a patient continuance in well doing.

But my experience resembles that of many others who have embraced unpopular teaching. He who feels impressed with the great importance of being "always ready" for the return of the Master, and labors to impress his friends and neighbors with the necessity of directing their minds to an investigation of this subject, will soon be regarded as a fanatic. And if he chance to avow his convictions that the great day of our Lord's second Advent is probably near at hand, he is immediately classed with infidels, heretics, speculative philosophers, and mischievous persons, in the guise of religion.

To give you some idea how Adventists are regarded, generally, I will give you the substance of some remarks that were made a few days since in a religious paper, published in Cincinnati, "The American Christian Review," edited by Messrs. Franklin and Rice. They had received a private letter informing them that a church somewhere had employed for another year the services of an Adventist, as preacher, etc. The Review informs us that the term "Advent" is used to cover up mischief. Then gives a list of the heretical notions that are adroitly covered up by this specious name:—

1st. That the kingdom of Christ has not yet come.

2d. That instead of keeping the first day we should keep the seventh.

3d. That all, both good and bad, are unconscious between death and the resurrection.

4th. That at the last judgment the wicked will be struck out of existence.

5th. That man has no soul but his breath.

6th. That man consists wholly of matter.

I have given the above very nearly in the editor's own words.

I wish to draw this editor, or the strongest man they can produce, into a discussion upon the "immortality of man," and "destiny of the wicked," and I want to know whether you will undertake to discuss these questions with them. I do not know whether I can succeed, but I will press them hard if you will promise to debate. I think such a discussion would do good, as many excellent minds can be reached, that will otherwise remain in darkness. Please let me know, and give me the propositions that you will discuss. Yours truly, J. M. Runnells.

N. Antioch, O.

We should be much pleased to discuss the 1st, 3d and 4th propositions, if we can agree about the preliminaries. We do not believe the 2d and 5th propositions, hence could not debate them. We are not prepared to speak definitely about the 6th, until the terms in it are defined, because the gentleman may not mean by them the same as we do. It would be involved in the 3d.

If arrangements can be made for an oral debate, we will endeavor to attend to it.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

Bro. Grant:—For three weeks past I have been laboring in the townships of Sylvania and Washington, some five and six miles west of Toledo, Ohio. My steps were directed there by Mr. Henry Ware and wife, who are old and well tried friends. They, having sold their farm in Lenawe Co., Mich., and moved to Sylvania township, requested me to make them a visit. I sent an appointment for Tuesday evening, with the request to secure me a full house the first night, which they did, and the truth of God held their attention for nearly two weeks, and the result thus far has been most blessed. Scores have become most deeply effected by the gospel that we as a people are heralding to dying men. The Lord has blessed our labors much. Praise alone belongs to our God.

This dear people are wide awake, and are determined to inform themselves thoroughly touching the glorious news that has been falling so sweetly upon their ears. They are an intelligent, enterprising, good-hearted people, from whom I have received the kindest attention from first to last. May the Lord bless them with every grace that will qualify them for usefulness and the kingdom of God. The influence here has become so permanent and strong that it is spreading over a large territory, and invitations have come in from adjacent townships to have me visit them, in one of which I have preached five discourses, and the influence here is moving with power. Sinners and backsliders are weeping, and saints rejoicing. I expect to continue the meeting after a few days. I have preached by night, visited from house to house by day, and in some instances held Bible classes. Such a thirst for knowledge pertaining to the coming of the Lord and kindred truths I have never seen in all my travels for the last twenty-five years. All are impressed with the idea that the judgment day is upon us surely.

My dear brother, my soul, body and spirit, by which I mean body, mind and strength, are thorough converts to God and his whole revealed will; and I love to preach, pray, talk and sing about the coming One more than I love to eat, drink, or sleep. Bless the dear Lord, my soul is overwhelmed with his goodness to me, and I can but rejoice in hope while my soul is full of glory. But oh! how differently some feel on the subject of the Lord's coming. One woman heard me one night, and a professed christian, who said she should not come again. Why? Said she, "It makes me faint." I wonder if she would faint if an absent and only loved daughter, who had been far and long absent, should propose to come home. Such love for Christ must blush and quake when Jesus comes. Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly, is the burning desire of every heart sanctified by the grace of God.

L. B. Alderman of Toledo, Ohio, a book agent, who has been listening to me and reading on these great questions, has become a convert to the faith,—is now making all arrangements to go out and publish it to the world. He is an amiable man, possessing a good heart and an intelligent mind, and must do good. May the Lord who is calling him into his vineyard to labor endow him with all those heavenly graces that will make him a brilliant star in the church of Christ. Bro. Emerson Haney will yet [illegible] forth the proclamation of a [illegible] Savior. He is a good scholar, a devoted christian, standing aloof from all creeds and sects with his two amiable christian brothers, taking the Bible alone as their criterion, who are deeply interested in the investigation of all Bible truth. Three more lovely young christian gentlemen I never saw before in one family.

Praise the Lord, oh my soul, for the success attending [illegible] proclamation of the gospel proclamation by so feeble an instrumentality. Praise the Lord for ever and ever. Your Bro. looking for Jesus, A. N. Seymour.

Delta, O., Mar. 2nd, 1866.

From Bro. P. B. Manning.

Bro. Grant:—I am still in this wicked world. My health is the same as it was when I last wrote to you; and I wish to say to all of the dear children of the Lord, that I believe in faith, and that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick," and if they "have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Now, then, my dear brethren and sisters in Jesus Christ, don't forget me in your prayers, when you are in your closet. God has heard your prayers in days that are past and gone in my behalf, and raised me up, for which I do feel to praise his holy name.

O how I do long to be out among the dear brethren, to stir up their pure minds by way of remembrance, and try to help save some poor souls from perdition, the Lord helping me by the Holy Spirit. Truly, we are in the last days of this world's history; and O how glad I am that we are so near to the end of our pilgrimage to a better land. Brethren and sisters, cheer up, cheer up; the day breaks o'er thee; soon, if faithful to God, we shall see our blessed Lord coming down the pathway from glory to this earth again, to take his dear children home to himself. O, glory be to God for the blessed promises that are found in his word; but all these promises are on condition, if we live right, and do right, and watch and pray without ceasing, and in every thing give thanks to God; then it will be well with us here in this world, and in the world to come.

While I read in the papers the letters from the dear children of the Lord, it does rejoice my poor heart, and I can say to God be all the glory, for what he is doing in New Bedford, and in Boston, and for what he is doing in New Hampshire, in Woodstock, and other places; and my prayer is, Lord let the work go on, and begin it where thou hast not begun it. O my brethren, wake up to the work anew; time is short, and what is done must be done quickly. The Judge stands at the door.

Your brother, looking for the Lord soon to come and save all of his people,

Goffstown, N. H. B. P. Manning.

From Bro. J. S. Hinds.

Bro Grant:—It has been a long time since I have written any thing for the Crisis, or "Voice of the West." It is now about one year since I first saw the "World's Crisis," and began to receive the light, and come to the knowledge of the truth as it is recorded in the Bible. The light and knowledge of the truth have been increasing ever since. I have not seen a Second Advent preacher since I left Camp Wilbraham, but I thank the Lord that I have had the "Crisis," and the "Voice of the West," ever since I got home. I need not say any thing in their praise, for it seems to me that any Christian that will read them must love them.

Those tracts that I received were a great help. Many of the tracts have been sent to friends at a distance, and also some of my papers to my friends that are scattered abroad in every direction, especially those who have had their letters published in the "Crisis" and "Voice." You may truly imagine that I have been made happy, and edified, and very much strengthened, by reading your letters. Then we have very often a good sermon. O how good that is to us where no one of our belief is to speak to us. Brethren and sisters, pray for me, that I may discharge my duty, whatever it may be. My heart's desire and prayer to God is that those that bear the name of Christian may depart from all unrighteousness.

Although I have but little of the things of this world, yet I feel rich sometimes, when by faith I view the promised land, the saints' inheritance in paradise. Praise the Lord. It was thirty-four years last August since I threw down my weapons against God, and sought pardon through the atonement. I have had a great many happy seasons when meeting with christians of different denominations, as I always loved all christians, and do to this day; but I cannot love error or false doctrine. Sometimes I really hate myself, when I think how long and strongly I held to the never-ending misery of the wicked. Well, I am glad to learn, by the Crisis and some other ways, that this awful doctrine is growing weak.

Brethren and sisters, be ready and watching, and I will try and do the same.

Wilmington, N. Y. J. S. Hinds.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—Recently my field of labor has been Salem, Lynn, and South Reading. And it is with heartfelt gratitude to God that I can say there is a deep interest manifested among the people to hear the words of Christ.

In Salem the Chapel is well filled Sundays with attentive listeners, who often manifest a deep interest and at times much feeling relative to the truth of Christ's coming and the needful preparation for that glorious rest with life and glory. We have some excellent social meetings, where the Spirit of the Lord quickens and comforts while we exhort one another. There is an interesting company of young disciples, who do not forsake the assembling of themselves with us, and who with the older members seem to be ready for every good word and work. Since the new year came in some have put on Christ, and have found joy and peace in believing. The minds of the poor are looked after, and the love for each other shows itself in that charity that suffers long and is kind. But our tendency is to a formal worship and round of duty, which is not profitable. I do hope in Jesus Christ to see a stirring up of the old members by the Spirit of God imparting to them more zeal and energy, that the young disciples of the flock may be cheered, encouraged, and helped [illegible].

In Lynn I found an interesting state of things. [illegible] and a goodly number know it. Some had confessed their backslidings and wrongs, and had received blessings, with joy and peace; others were convinced, but were not quite humble enough to [illegible] the work [illegible], but the spirit of [illegible] them, and the meetings were full of interest. After preaching twenty and more living testimonies were given. There was an increasing desire on the part of the people to hear that truth for which we bear reproach.

We had some blessed good free meetings in praying, singing, and exhorting, with some inquiring the way of life. The brethren here love the coming of their Lord and Master. Their heads are uplifted. They know redemption is near.

At So. Reading the work of reformation is going on. The church are awake to their own interest and that of others. The old veterans of twenty years' warfare are at their post doing duty, while the work of recruiting has been very successful, and is still going on. More than a dozen have confessed Christ and their loyalty to his government. Some enlisted while I was there. We had blessed seasons morning, afternoon, and evening, in urging the conditions and orders necessary to a victorious campaign, while the hearty responses would come from them thick and fast. All seemed ready for marching orders; ready for an aggressive movement. One meeting only created a strong desire for another. Thus the good work is going on. The Lord deepen and speed it on, causing it to spread.

The true light is shining. Fables and religious infidelity are giving way to the revealed word of God. The rational plan of redemption consummating itself at the coming of Jesus the life-giver, and the resurrection of the dead, is being received into good and honest hearts. Glory be to God. Dearly beloved, it is not enough to stand on the defensive. Up! and let us rally in the strength of the mighty One, and give battle to the enemy. Up! and onward with united action, and victory in the name of Jesus Christ is soon ours. Amen. Thine ready for the service,

Salem, Mar. 28th, 1866. L. Boutell.

Sr. P. P. Lampery, Mast Yard, N. H., writes:—"It is now almost two years since I became a free subscriber for the Crisis. I am very grateful for the favor, and I have tried to do what good I could with them, by lending them to my neighbors, and sending them away to friends in different towns and states. I have succeeded in obtaining several good paying subscribers the past year, and have got one on the commencement of this new year. I am happy to do all I can to promote the usefulness of so good a periodical as the Crisis, whether I be a paying or a free subscriber."

Bro. D. D. Lathrop, Franklin, Pa., writes:—"In this vicinity, there are seven different denominations, besides Spiritualists. We are now mostly united in a protracted meeting. Nine have embraced a hope in Christ, and cold ones are revived. Meetings continue under the preaching of the 'Reformed Methodists.'"

Bro. N. Wheeler, Cabot, Vt., writes:—"The cause of God has been prospering in Cabot of late. Some ten young persons have been hopefully converted, and some backsliders reclaimed. To God be all the glory. Pray for us that the work may not cease."

S. W. Worthington, North Bennington, Vt., writes:—"Bro. Grant, I wish to say through the Crisis to the brethren and sisters who preach the word, if any are passing this way, they will find a pilgrim's home with us."

Bro. Munger writes:—"The battle goes well here in Concord. Glory to God. Thirteen were forward for prayers last evening. Ten were heads of families. Some forty have started anew, so the brethren say."

Married.

In Newstead, Erie Co., N. Y., March 21st, 1866, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Lyman E. Craw, of Lockport, N. Y., and Miss Esther P. Burnham.

Obituaries.

Hackett. Died in Dover, N. H., March 7th, 1866, after a protracted sickness of extreme suffering, of typhoid fever, Arabella Hackett, daughter of J. M. and Mary A. Hackett, aged ten years.

She enjoyed her reason until the last, although deprived the use of speech for two weeks previous to her death. When last exercised, it was used in singing a few lines of a beautiful hymn, after prayers, with brethren Latham and Hawkins. The Holy Spirit seemed to animate and inspire her as she listened to the prayers and joined in the song of praise,—

> The last on earth which here she sung,
> But soon she'll join the immortal throng,
> And sing in sweet, angelic strains,
> On fair Eden's blissful plains.

A solemn and appropriate sermon was preached on her funeral occasion, on the 10th ult., from 2 Kings 4:26, by Eld. T. M. Latham.

Milliken. Fell asleep in Jesus, March 8th, 1866, at her residence in Surry, Me., Mrs. Lydia T. Milliken, aged fifty-four years, seven months, and twenty-five days.

Thus slumbers one who was a faithful wife, an affectionate mother, and an humble christian. Her flesh rests in hope; hence we "sorrow not, even as others which have no hope;" believing that as "Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him" from the dead. Her sufferings, which were great at times, were borne very patiently. She leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. The funeral services were conducted by Eld. H. Hawes. C. H. Leverton.

Pease. Died in Enfield, Ct., March 11th, Sr Evelina Pease, wife of Bro. Theodore Pease, aged fifty-one years.

Sister P. was formerly connected with the M. E. church, until she heard the truth of Jesus' coming; then she, with her companion, was willing to forsake all for Christ and his word. Death had no terror to her, and as she approached the dark stream, she requested her family and friends to sing. Her faith was triumphant, her death peaceful; she rests in hope.

We spoke from Job 14:14; and showed that the dead would live again. We were assisted in the services by Dr. Brigham, the Congregationalist minister. R. Williams.

Phillips. Died in Cranston, R. I., Feb. 4th, 1866, Carrie Rhodes, oldest daughter of Nathaniel and Caroline Phillips, aged four years and six days. The parents sorrow, but not without hope of meeting their loved one in the goodly land.

> There my little one, I know,
> [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible]

Connell. Died in Parkersburg, Butler Co., Iowa, March 7th, 1866, Clarinda, wife of Wm. H. Connell, in the thirty-second year of her age.

> Yet again we hope to meet thee,
> When [illegible]
> In the kingdom we will greet thee,
> [illegible]

The subject of this notice was converted and baptized by Eld. [illegible] Higgins, in the State of Massachusetts. She moved to Iowa in 1856, led a very godly life, and died a happy and peaceful death, expecting to sleep till Jesus comes. John 11:25 was improved on the occasion, by Bro. Ensign, to comfort the bereaved. F. W. Hough.

Tucker. Died in Thompson, Feb. 2d, 1866, Bro. Silas Tucker, aged sixty-one years.

March 4th, Ida, granddaughter, aged twelve years and six months.

Also, March 7th, Sr. Esther, wife of Bro. Silas Tucker, aged fifty-five years. [Corrected from last week.]

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool March 21, Queenstown 22d.

A Paris telegram of the 20th to the Daily Telegraph reports on good authority that Head Centre Stephens had just arrived in Paris, having been in Scotland.

Rio Janeiro, Feb. 23. A battle has been fought without decisive results between the Argentine and Paraguayan armies. The loss was heavy on both sides.

The German journals continue to represent the relations of Austria and Prussia as very threatening. They even asserted that Austria had ordered the assembling of 100,000 troops on the Bohemian frontier, and sent a circular note to the Powers, disclaiming all responsibility for the consequences of any conflict which may ensue.

The London Times directs attention to the critical state of affairs. It says Bismarck has thrown off his mask and the Duchies are to be annexed to Prussia. Preparations for war were progressing on both sides. In both capitals military councils are held, generals nominated, and plans of a campaign discussed. Funds are depressed in the various markets by disquieting rumors.

DOMESTIC.

New York, March 29. A Paris letter has the text of the Secret Convention between Napoleon and Maximilian at the city of Mexico, on the 29th of September last, fixing the pay and position of French agents in Mexico, the number of whom is large, for five years from above date.

Change of Feeling South.

The Washington Chronicle publishes several private letters from the South, lamenting the marked change of feeling which has taken place among the rebels since the President's veto of the Freedmen's Bureau bill. The most important of these letters, recently received by Senator Sumner from Wilmington, North Carolina, represents that the spirit of hatred towards negroes and Northern men is increasing in malignity, and finds expression in libelling the female teachers from the North, insulting Northern citizens generally, and persecuting the colored people. Arrests of the freedmen it is said are made on the most trifling pretences, and the most degrading and torturing penalties inflicted. The letter states that on the 15th inst., seven or eight colored men and one poor white were seized on an accusation of theft, and at broad noon, in one of the most frequented streets of the city, the colored men were strung up by order of the officers of the County Court, their wrists bound by ropes and drawn up over the branch of a tree till their toes could barely touch the ground, when they were stripped bare to the waist, and in the presence of a crowd of men, women and children, ordered to receive the number of lashes to which they were sentenced. This infliction was made upon three of them, when the affair was brought to the notice of the officer of the bureau, who ordered the work to cease. The white man was released at once, on bail offered by some one present.

A prominent army officer stationed in Wilmington, in a letter received here, relates occurrences illustrative of the same spirit, and attributes them to the same cause. He says the rebels hurrah for Jeff. Davis and President Johnson, and such is the feeling against the military that it is positively unsafe for an officer to venture out alone at night, unless well armed. An ex-officer of the 1st Texas Cavalry now in Texas, writing to one of his former military companions now stationed in this city after speaking of the attractions of the Texan climate and the inducements to settle in that State, makes the following remarks:—

"There is one thing, however, that is working against the speedy return of quietness, not only in this State, but throughout the entire South, and that is the reconstruction policy of President Johnson. It is doing more to unsettle this country than people who are not practical observers of its workings have any idea of. Before this policy was made known, the people were prepared to accept anything. They expected to be treated as rebels, their leaders to be punished, and their property confiscated. But the moment it was made known their assurance returned. Rebels have again become arrogant and exacting. Treason stalks through the land unabashed. What we now want is emigration from the North, but we cannot look for any great amount until the present policy is changed."

Treatment of the Freedmen.—A commission sent by General Sickles to Greenville, S. C., to inquire into alleged ill-treatment of the freedmen report as follows:

"That there are armed bands in the districts of Newberg and Lawrence, who are harbored and paid by citizens of influence, for the avowed purpose of committing outrages upon freed people by murdering and flogging; that these bands are systematically screened from the authorities, and that no one dares now to report the outrages committed; that in cases where persons have heretofore testified against the perpetrators of these outrages, they have been compelled to leave the districts to escape the vengeance of the friends of the accused; that murder and other outrages have been committed upon the freed people for a price per head."

☞ The European papers present terrible pictures of the mortality attending the new disease, called "trachina," in several parts of the continent. The disease, as is well known, is engendered by eating pork, in which, though unseen, millions of animalculæ abound, that cannot be destroyed except by long and hard boiling. Those pass into the human system, and the person is eaten up alive by them, without being able to help himself. A German physician of Frankfort, who has given the subject much consideration, wrote on the 9th ult., that in a little place near Magdeburg, one hundred children had been rendered orphans by the disease, and upward of three hundred patients were then awaiting death, which they knew to be inevitable, from the same cause. The disease is reported to have appeared in some of the Western cities of the United States.

A Touching Incident.—Last Sabbath evening after an eloquent temperance address by Mr. Uniac at the Town Hall in South Reading, a young man [illegible] came upon the platform and said: "It is a strange thing that I am here. I have kept the [illegible] place, and sold the most rum of any man in this town. I have led young men and old men to destruction. A few weeks ago I cursed every man who spoke against my business. I defied God. But soon after I could not sleep. The thought haunted me that some one of the men I had made drunk at night might be dead at my door in the morning. But, thank God, I am converted." He then raised both his hands and said: "I promise before God Almighty, my Maker and Savior, that I will never sell or use another single drop of liquor while God gives me life."—Journal, 21st.

A Fearful Instrument of War.—The Gazette du Midi reports that a new torpedo of a more destructive kind than any hitherto invented has just been tried in the dockyard of Castigneau, Toulon, with complete success. The Vauban ship-of-war, attacked by it, [illegible] twenty feet long, [illegible] with a [illegible] sunk in consequence of an enormous hole in her [illegible]. The success was the more remarkable as the charge of powder was only six pounds.

Explorations in Syria.—A Constantinople paper says that two antiquaries, in making excavations in Syria, have discovered a Jewish habitation [illegible]

Notices.

Notice.

We shall commence a meeting in the Chapel, corner of London and Decatur streets, East Boston, Monday evening, April 9th, to continue as long as duty may demand. John G. Hook, C. Goodrich.

P. S. The meetings will be continued at Lowell Street Chapel this week and next. I expect Bro. L. Damons to assist in the meetings both at Lowell Street and East Boston. John G. Hook.

Discussion at Norway.

We are to have a discussion at Norway, Me., with Mr. N. Gunderson, Universalist minister, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., April 10th.

First Question.—"Is the second coming of Christ, to judge the world, a future event?"

Second Question.—"Do reason and the Bible teach the immortality of man?"

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. Wm. Sheldon.

Photographs.

Bro. T. E. Wood, of Portsmouth, N. H., will send the photographs of Elds. C. Goodrich and H. Munger (album size) on the receipt of 25 cents each. The large size, suitable for framing, 75 cents each.

He will also send the picture of Bro. M. B. Czechowski (album size) for 25 cents; the proceeds to be appropriated to the European mission.

☞ Address T. E. Wood, Portsmouth, N. H., enclosing stamp to prepay postage.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N. Y. Clinton Colegrove, Bap. Minister.

Sickness.

Bro. Grant,—I wish through the Crisis to say to the brothers and sisters of Bro. D. M. Hanscomb that he is very sick and has been for about four weeks. His address is Strickland's Ferry, Maine. Wayne, Mar. 30, 1866. Hartley Gray.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston.
J. G. Hook ... Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

East Boston
H. L. Hastings ... Sunday, April 8th

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, April 8th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M. Wm. C. Thurman.

Exeter, N. H. ... Saturday evening, April 7th and over the following Lord's day. Miles Grant.

Lynn, Mass. ... Sunday, April 8th. J. Couch.

Concord, N. H. ... Sunday, April 8th. H. Munger.

South Reading ... evenings, April 5th and 5th
Lawrence ... Sunday, April 8th. C. Goodrich.

North Salem, N. H., Lord's day, April 8th, through the week, and over the following Lord's day.
Summersworth, Great Falls, N. H., Wednesday evening, April 18th, through the week, and over the following Lord's day. L. C. McKinstry.

Plymouth ... Sunday, April 8th
Carver ... Sunday, April 15th
Worcester ... April 22d
Springfield ... April 29th
Hartford, Ct. ... May 6th
West Haven, Ct. ... May 13th and 20th
New Britain, Ct. ... May 27th
Hartford, Ct. ... June 3d
New Haven, Ct. ... June 10th
Warehouse Point ... June 17th
J. S. White.

Enfield, (at Bro. Theodore Pease's house), Saturday evening, April 14th.
Scitico ... Sunday, April 15th. R. Williams.

Portland, Me. ... Sunday, April 8th. Timothy Cole.

Sangerville, (near Bro. Oren French's) ... April 22d
Exeter, (Chamberlain school-house) ... April 29th
Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) ... May 6th
Levant, (Emmerson's Mills) ... May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's) ... May 27th
I. K. Lombard.

East Bowdoinham (with Bro. H. D. Reed), Thursday evening, April 12th, and over the following Sunday. R. R. York.

Freeport, (Swamp school house) ... Sunday, April 15th. I. C. Wellcome.

East Granville, Mass. ... Saturday evening, April 14th and over the next Lord's day, April 15th, at Bro. S. Oatley's.
At Bro. Stephen Herrick's ... Tuesday eve, April 17th
East Hartland ... Wednesday eve, April 18th
Barkhamstead, (at the dwelling of Jason Case), Thursday evening, April 19th. H. Rockwell.

Agawam, Mass.
Bro. Oatley ... Sunday, April 8th
H. Pratt ... Sunday, April 15th

Stafford, Ct., (Free Church) ... Sunday, April 8th. H. Pratt.

Concord, N. H. (Angelos Hall) ... May 6th and 13th. Joseph Pinkham.

Porter, Me. ... Thursday evening, April 5th and over Sunday. J. O. Smith, J. Pinkham.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) ... Sunday, April 22d. J. O. Smith.

Harwinton, Ct. (school-house near Bro. Barber's), Sunday, April 8th. O. D. Woodruff.

Plainfield Pond ... April 22d
West Hoosic, (Advent Chapel) ... April 29th
Wm. J. Blanchard.

Lee, N. H. ... April 8th and 15th. C. S. Emerson.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall), Saturday evening, April 28th, and Sunday, 29th, day and evening. L. M. Otis.

Champlain, (Corbeau), 6 P. M. ... April 21st
[illegible], Vt. ... evenings, April 11th, 12th and 13th
Rutland, Vt. ... Sunday eve, April 15th, and 22d
Champlain (Village), N. Y. A. M. ... April 29th
Massena, (as Bro. D. T. Taylor may arrange), April [illegible]
G. W. Stetson.

Abington, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th. E. Bellows.

Danielsonville, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th
Abington, Ct. ... Sunday, April 15th
H. F. Carpenter.

West Falmouth, Me.
R. R. York ... Sunday, April 8th
Clarkson Good ... Sunday, April 15th

East Bowdoinham, (Lancaster school-house), Sunday, April 15th. H. D. Reed.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th
[illegible], Ct. ... Sunday, April 15th
S. Woodruff.

[illegible] Village, (at the New Chapel), Sunday, April 8th
Meredith, (where Bro. [illegible] may appoint), Sunday, April 15th. Nelson Hartshorn.

Poultney, Vt. ... Friday eve, April 6th and over the following Lord's day.
[illegible] ... Lord's day, April 22d
[illegible] ... Lord's day, April 29th
[illegible]

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) ... Through the week as may seem duty, and over the Lord's day, April 15th. Geo. W. Brown.

[illegible]

[illegible] ... Friday [illegible] ... Sunday, April 8th
No Name—(supposed to be Wm. Shepherd).

Pleasant Valley, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th. [illegible]

Concord, N. H. (corner of Green and Center Streets), Sundays, April 22d and 29th. W. W. [illegible]

[illegible] ... Geo. E. [illegible]

Thompson, Ct. ... evening, April [illegible]
Pine Tree School house, North Salem, N. Y. (or as Bro. Bailey may appoint) ... Sundays, April 15th and 22d
Thompson, Ct. ... Sunday, April 29th
Wrightsville ... evening, May 4th
Geo. L. Teeple.

Carlton, Orleans Co. ... April 8th
West Haven ... April 15th
Brockport ... April 22d
Darien City, Genesee Co. (as Bro. Henry Stannard may appoint), Sunday April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Baptist church, near Bro. H. C. Simonds, at 6 P. M., same day. [illegible]

Concord, N. H. ... April 8th. J. K. Bellows.

Bristol, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th
Newfield, Ct. ... Sunday, April 15th
A. Simpson.

Warner, (Waterloo Village), N. H.) ... April 15th. Simeon [illegible]

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

D. D. Lathrop—Paid to No. 542.
Mrs. C. Howe—It was acknowledged in No. 530, and paid to No. 622.
J. B. Wilcox—Received and sent.
F. R. W. Chapman—Received and acknowledged in No. 533.
C P Dow—Credited in No. 644.
Geo. W. Turner—They will be out before a great while, and due notice will be given.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 548. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—E Potter, what P. O.? W Mitchell, what P. O.? B Quint 572, D B Salter 523, E P Streeter 531, E Myers 563, T Cheney 567.

$1.25 each—J D Patterson 573, S B Barnap 573, T Erskine 573, L M Plummer 574, J H Young 571, S A Miller 570, S D Hastey 549, H Lucas 540, A P Noyes 572, T Snow 521, F Hapgood 572, B F Rice 573, F H Prentice 573, S D Appleby 576, A Jewett 579, B Knight 569, B Herrick 580, E Cane 573, W L Huntley 566, F B Mills 572, R C Jackman 572, F O Steenberg 573, W P Dame 573, M R Eastman 573, W Hudson 573, D Richardson 573, E Turner 573, N Batchelder 562, S A Kamerling 582, R Morgan 573, A S Johnson 573, F Gasper 573, J M Eaton 573, J Clark 572, W Grossman 572, G W Brown 573, W Vreeland 572, J Allen 597, A L Boswell 565, G B Cargill 572, J C Barnham 572, F Edwards 561, C Benton 572, G L Rice 572, A H Johnson 573, S J Tyrrell 569, E Ayres 577, J A Clark 578, N E Fuller 572, M A George 573, B T Parsons 573, B C Hitchcock 573, I Mayberry 573.

$2.00 each—S J Twing 444, E Good 537, L M Smith 590, S G Denham 580, C. Haley 607, E. Fisher, what P. O.? W Payne 571, E C Payne 554, C Bemis 573.

$2.50 each—Z Snow 599, J C King 543, J P King 599, W Ingmire 572, C Goodwin 531, A Wright 601, O Evans 601, N Fogg 575, L M Squiers 599, P Dow 604, S Marsh, what P. O.? H A Haggett 598, F. B. Jones 603, M. E. Derrickson 599, V S Parkhurst 589, N Hartshorn 597, J Barrett 599, S G Laskey 599, L C Collins 600, A Hamilton 599, S Hale 619, R Pike 608, E A Gardner 604, R M Brooks 599, S M Mann 572, M Leach 599, J Thompson 599, J W Phelps 601, J Kent 599, W Corey 599, A Reynolds 599, E Utley 599, M D Richardson 599, M S Barnard 593, F P Smith 551, J Colby 600, J Tracy 595, R Johnson 599, L Town 599, M Sherman 599, H Woodmancy 599, A Edwards 558, H H Knowland 599, Z Bowers 599, H P Rockwell 599, S Pillsbury 599, S Scott 599, T W Nelson 599, T J Chadwick 599, E Todd 599, F Nelson 587, L J Jenner 598, L Allen 599, J Moody 609, E P Whaites 557, O. P. Alderman 599, S. Mayberry 599, E Jones 599, J M Lydston 606.

$3.00 each—L Hawson 604, C Rice 555, C Silver 555, S K Dyer 541, M Olinee 591, N Thompson 572, N Chase 594, J O Merrill 549, W Hathaway 565, B I Burnett 586.

Various sums.—A B Pinkham $1.72, old acct; J B Fowler 62c, 560; J D Waldron $1.50, 555; J Hall $4.50, 513, A Strickland 50c, 556, J G Hathorne $5.00 630, J W Mattes $5.50, 593, D C Poorbase $5.00, 656, F W Matts $5.00, 650, N Hanney 50c, 557, J. A. Smith 63c, 500, E G Hobbs $1.50, 591, C. Lawton $5.00, 605, M Durbee $1.50, 574, O W Adams 63c, 546, J S Moulton $1 50, 573, D F Kendall $3.30, 578, M L Bickford 70c, 548, J Jennings 63c, 560, E Davis 63c, 560; S. Perkins $1.15, old acct.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

D T Taylor $4.50, S. Lane 65c, A. Brooks $2.25, D. Howard 50c, W S Raymond $1.00, S Male $1.66, J Osborn $1.50, S Cooper 50c, S M Shada $2.00, D M Kinter $3.00, J Rogers 50c, A M Smith 65c, R S Robinson 5c, E L Marsh 70c, L Johnson $1.26, A L Boswell 60c, O B Cargill $1.40, A J Tuttle 80c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.—S M Shada, D D Lathrop, J Rogers, R S Robinson, D M Kinter, J Osborn, W H Fisher, S Cooper, L Johnson, F Nelson, G B Cargill, A J Tuttle, E L Marsh, N A Hitchcock, S Pulsbury, E B Card.
By Express.—W. N. Pile.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

C. Hill, S. Jackman, M. H. Brown, J G Willis, F H Chamberlain, M. J. Plummer, O P Allen, P S Brock, C H Sweet, S L Manley, S C Wellcome, A N Seymour, D Grant, I A Thayer, S Mix, B P Manning, D Cogswell, A E Smith, H McClary, P S W Deyo, J N Berry, B Perham, P Tandy, I C Wellcome.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. O. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
Eld. C. Goodrich—No. 66 Princeton Street, East Boston, Mass.
J. H. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Ougley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
O. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—364 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Massey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. F. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 57 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. L. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. Do n't believe in Religion ... 12 pp., 2c.
2. Did the World make itself? ... 16 pp., 2c.
3. [illegible] ... 2c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible? ... 16 pp., 2c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament? ... 16 pp., 2c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable? ... 16 pp., 2c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles? ... 16 pp., 2c.
8. Prophecy ... 32 pp., 4c.
9. Moses and the Prophets ... 28 pp., 3c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars ... 28 pp., 4c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise ... 32 pp., 4c.
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture ... 32 pp., 4c.
13. Science, or Faith? ... 32 pp., 4c.

For the Set, (making 304 pp.) ... 40c. postpaid.

For a greater quantity:
By mail, 500 pp. ... $1.00.
By express, 1000 pp. ... $1.00.

Address all orders to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home ... 16 pp.
2. Life Insurance ... 16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost! ... 16 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet? ... 16 pp.
5. About God (by children) ... 16 pp.
6. Worth Knowing? ... 16 pp.
7. Peace in Christ ... 16 pp.
8. Now ... 16 pp.

[illegible]

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston. [illegible]

Works on the Kingdom of God, the Second Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. [illegible]
THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THESSALONICA; the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE; by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Bennett. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 30c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 8c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 25c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 25c.
REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.
REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 20c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.
SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 35c.
THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 5c; by mail, 6c.
LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.
THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 12c; by mail, 15c.
THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 6c.
THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 5c.
THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 6c; by mail, 7c.
THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $3.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.
THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; his Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.
CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.
FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 23c.
ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Leach. 25c; by mail, 28c.
RETRIBUTION, or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.
PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.
GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.
IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 6c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 6c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 6c.
THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c; by mail, 6c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 5c.
THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 3c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 4c; by mail, 5c.
SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.
REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c; by mail, 2c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS; A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.
THE DAY AND THE HOUR. A Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 10c.
CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.
DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures, with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.88.
CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.
THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.
FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.
THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY; or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.74.
THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 29c.
CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid; $1.00 per dozen.
THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK, for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 19c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 5c. on every three copies.
SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.
AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 6c; by mail, 10c.
EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 60c; by mail, 68c.
HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.
COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.
PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.
WHY THE SHOE PINCHES. The Cause of Deformities in the feet, and how to avoid blisters, corns, etc. 30c. postpaid.
THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. [illegible]
CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. [illegible]
NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.
DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.
GLAD VOICES. Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Hallner. [illegible]
HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. [illegible]
[illegible]
CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. [illegible]
RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of "cities of the nations." By Wm. Sheldon. [illegible]
OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the American Advent Missionary Society [illegible]
THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. [illegible]
EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a slave [illegible]
[illegible]

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. H. Runnells.

Bro. M. Grant:—Dear Sir, I have been a constant reader of the Crisis for more than two years, and acknowledge myself indebted to it for many invaluable ideas. Much light from the "Sacred Oracles" has been shed upon my mind from reading its pages. I may say that from reading the Crisis, and such books and tracts as my attention has been called to by it, I have become fully convinced that the Bible teaches that man is mortal, and that immortality can only be secured by getting into Christ, and a patient continuance in well doing.

But my experience resembles that of many others who have embraced unpopular teaching. He who feels impressed with the great importance of being "always ready" for the return of the Master, and labors to impress his friends and neighbors with the necessity of directing their minds to an investigation of this subject, will soon be regarded as a fanatic. And if he chance to avow his convictions that the great day of our Lord's second Advent is probably near at hand, he is immediately classed with infidels, heretics, speculative philosophers, and mischievous persons, in the guise of religion.

To give you some idea how Adventists are regarded, generally, I will give you the substance of some remarks that were made a few days since in a religious paper, published in Cincinnati, "The American Christian Review," edited by Messrs. Franklin and Rice. They had received a private letter informing them that a church somewhere had employed for another year the services of an Adventist, as preacher, etc. The Review informs us that the term "Advent" is used to cover up mischief. Then gives a list of the heretical notions that are adroitly covered up by this specious name.—

1st. That the kingdom of Christ has not yet come.

2d. That instead of keeping the first day we should keep the seventh.

3d. That all, both good and bad, are unconscious between death and the resurrection.

4th. That at the last judgment the wicked will be struck out of existence.

5th. That man has no soul but his breath.

6th. That man consists wholly of matter.

I have given the above very nearly in the editor's own words.

I wish to draw this editor, or the strongest man they can produce, into a discussion upon the "immortality of man," and "destiny of the wicked," and I want to know whether you will undertake to discuss these questions with them. I do not know whether I can succeed, but I will press them hard if you will promise to debate. I think such a discussion would do good, as many excellent minds can be reached, that will otherwise remain in darkness. Please let me know, and give me the propositions that you will discuss. Yours truly, J. M. Runnells.

N. Antioch, O.

We should be much pleased to discuss the 1st, 3d and 4th propositions, if we can agree about the preliminaries. We do not believe the 2d and 5th propositions, hence could not debate them. We are not prepared to speak definitely about the 6th, until the terms in it are defined, because the gentleman may not mean by them the same as we do. It would be involved in the 3d.

If arrangements can be made for an oral debate, we will endeavor to attend to it.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

Bro. Grant:—For three weeks past I have been laboring in the townships of Sylvania and Washington, some five and six miles west of Toledo, Ohio. My steps were directed there by Mr. Henry Ware and wife, who are old and well tried friends. They, having sold their farm in Lenawa Co., Mich., and moved to Sylvania township, requested me to make them a visit. I sent an appointment for Tuesday evening, with the request to secure me a full house the first night, which they did, and the truth of God held their attention for nearly two weeks, and the result thus far has been most blessed. Scores have become most deeply effected by the gospel that we as a people are heralding to dying men. The Lord has blessed our labors much. Praise alone belongs to our God.

This dear people are wide awake, and are determined to inform themselves thoroughly touching the glorious news that has been falling so sweetly upon their ears. They are an intelligent, enterprising, good-hearted people, from whom I have received the kindest attention from first to last. May the Lord bless them with every grace that will qualify them for usefulness and the kingdom of God. The influence here has become so permanent and strong that it is spreading over a large territory, and invitations have come in from adjacent townships to have me visit them, in one of which I have preached five discourses, and the influence here is moving with power. Sinners and backsliders are weeping, and saints rejoicing. I expect to continue the meeting after a few days. I have preached by night, visited from house to house by day, and in some instances held Bible classes. Such a thirst for knowledge pertaining to the coming of the Lord and kindred truths I have never seen in all my travels for the last twenty-five years. All are impressed with the idea that the judgment day is upon us surely.

My dear brother, my soul, body and spirit, by which I mean body, mind and strength, are thorough converts to God and his whole revealed will; and I love to preach, pray, talk and sing about the coming One more than I love to eat, drink, or sleep. Bless the dear Lord, my soul is overwhelmed with his goodness to me, and I can but rejoice in hope while my soul is full of glory. But oh! how differently some feel on the subject of the Lord's coming. One woman heard me one night, and a professed christian, who said she should not come again. Why? Said she, "It makes me faint." I wonder if she would faint if an absent and only loved daughter, who had been far and long absent, should propose to come home. Such love for Christ must blush and quake when Jesus comes. Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly, is the burning desire of every heart sanctified by the grace of God.

L. R. Alderman of Toledo, Ohio, a book agent, who has been listening to me and reading on these great questions, has become a convert to the faith,—is now making all arrangements to go out and publish it to the world. He is an amiable man, possessing a good heart and an intelligent mind, and must do good. May the Lord who is calling him into his vineyard to labor endow him with all those heavenly graces that will make him a brilliant star in the church of Christ. Bro. Emerson Hasty will yet herald forth the proclamation of a soon coming Saviour. He is a good scholar, a devoted christian, standing aloof from all creeds and sects with his two amiable christian brothers, taking the Bible alone as their criterion, who are deeply interested in the investigation of all Bible truth. Three more lovely young christian gentlemen I never saw before in one family.

Praise the Lord, oh my soul, for the success attending a faithful presentation of the gospel proclamation by so feeble an instrumentality. Praise the Lord for ever and ever. Your Bro. looking for Jesus, A. N. Seymour.

Delta, O., Mar. 2nd, 1866.

From Bro. P. B. Manning.

Bro. Grant:—I am still in this wicked world. My health is the same as it was when I last wrote to you; and I wish to say to all of the dear children of the Lord, that I believe in faith, and that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick," and if they "have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Now, then, my dear brethren and sisters in Jesus Christ, don't forget me in your prayers, when you are in your closet. God has heard your prayers in days that are past and gone in my behalf, and raised me up, for which I do feel to praise his holy name.

O how I do long to be out among the dear brethren, to stir up their pure minds by way of remembrance, and try to help save some poor souls from perdition, the Lord helping me by the Holy Spirit. Truly, we are in the last days of this world's history; and O how glad I am that we are so near to the end of our pilgrimage to a better land. Brethren and sisters, cheer up, cheer up; the day breaks o'er thee; soon, if faithful to God, we shall see our blessed Lord coming down the pathway from glory to this earth again, to take his dear children home to himself. O, glory be to God for the blessed promises that are found in his word; but all these promises are on condition, if we live right, and do right, and watch and pray without ceasing, and in every thing give thanks to God; then it will be well with us here in this world, and in the world to come.

While I read in the papers the letters from the dear children of the Lord, it does rejoice my poor heart, and I can say to God be all the glory, for what he is doing in New Bedford, and in Boston, and for what he is doing in New Hampshire, in Woodstock, and other places; and my prayer is, Lord let the work go on, and begin it where thou hast not begun it. O my brethren, wake up to the work anew; time is short, and what is done must be done quickly. The Judge stands at the door.

Your brother, looking for the Lord soon to come and save all of his people,

Goffstown, N. H. B. P. Manning.

From Bro. J. S. Hinds.

Bro. Grant:—It has been a long time since I have written any thing for the Crisis, or "Voice of the West." It is now about one year since I first saw the "World's Crisis," and began to receive the light, and come to the knowledge of the truth as it is recorded in the Bible. The light and knowledge of the truth have been increasing ever since. I have not seen a Second Advent preacher since I left Camp Wilbraham, but I thank the Lord that I have had the "Crisis," and the "Voice of the West," ever since I got home. I need not say any thing in their praise, for it seems to me that any Christian that will read them must love them.

Those tracts that I received were a great help. Many of the tracts have been sent to friends at a distance, and also some of my papers to my friends that are scattered abroad in every direction, especially those who have had their letters published in the "Crisis" and "Voice." You may truly imagine that I have been made happy, and edified, and very much strengthened, by reading your letters. Then we have very often a good sermon. O how good that is to us where no one of our belief is to speak to us. Brethren and sisters, pray for me, that I may discharge my duty, whatever it may be. My heart's desire and prayer to God is that those that bear the name of Christian may depart from all unrighteousness.

Although I have but little of the things of this world, yet I feel rich sometimes, when by faith I view the promised land, the saints' inheritance in paradise. Praise the Lord. It was thirty-four years last August since I threw down my weapons against God, and sought pardon through the atonement. I have had a great many happy seasons when meeting with christians of different denominations, as I always loved all christians, and do to this day; but I cannot love error or false doctrine. Sometimes I really hate myself, when I think how long and strongly I held to the never-ending misery of the wicked. Well, I am glad to learn, by the Crisis and some other ways, that this awful doctrine is growing weak.

Brethren and sisters, be ready and watching, and I will try and do the same.

Wilmington, N. Y. J. S. Hinds.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—Recently my field of labor has been Salem, Lynn, and South Reading. And it is with heartfelt gratitude to God that I can say there is a deep interest manifested among the people to hear the words of Christ.

In Salem the Chapel is well filled Sundays with attentive listeners, who often manifest a deep interest and at times much feeling relative to the truth of Christ's coming and the needful preparation for that glorious rest with life and glory. We have some excellent social meetings, where the Spirit of the Lord quickens and comforts while we exhort one another. There is an interesting company of young disciples, who do not forsake the assembling of themselves with us, and who with the older members seem to be ready for every good word and work. Since the new year came in some have put on Christ, and have found joy and peace and believing. The wants of the poor are looked after, and the love for each other shows itself in that charity that suffers long and is kind. But our tendency is to a formal worship and round of duty, which is not profitable. I do hope in Jesus Christ to see a stirring up of the old members by the Spirit of God imparting to them more zeal and energy, that the young disciples of the flock may be cheered, encouraged, and helped on to their heavenly rest.

In Lynn I found an interesting state of things. The Lord was indeed among them, and a goodly number know it. Some had confessed their backslidings and wrongs, and had received blessings, and joy and peace; others were convinced, but were not quite humble enough to confess and go on, but the spirit of reformation was moving them, and the meetings were full of interest. After preaching twenty and more living testimonies were given. There was an interesting desire on the part of the people to hear that truth for which we bear reproach.

We had some blessed good free meetings in praying, singing, and exhorting, with some inquiring the way of life. The brethren here love the coming of their Lord and Master. Their heads are uplifted. They know redemption is near.

At So. Reading the work of reformation is going on. The church are awake to their own interest and that of others. The old veterans of twenty years' warfare are at their post doing duty, while the work of recruiting has been very successful, and is still going on. More than a dozen have confessed Christ and their loyalty to his government. Some enlisted while I was there. We had blessed seasons morning, afternoon, and evening, in urging the conditions and orders necessary to a victorious campaign, while the hearty responses would come from them thick and fast. All seemed ready for marching orders, ready for an aggressive movement. One meeting only created a strong desire for another. Thus the good work is going on. The Lord deepen and speed it on, causing it to spread.

The true light is shining. Fables and religious infidelity are giving way to the revealed word of God. The rational plan of redemption consummating itself at the coming of Jesus the life-giver, and the resurrection of the dead, is being received into good and honest hearts. Glory be to God. Dearly beloved, it is not enough to stand on the defensive. Up! and let us rally in the strength of the mighty One, and give battle to the enemy. Up! and onward with united action, and victory in the name of Jesus Christ is soon ours. Amen. Thine ready for the service,

Salem, Mar. 28th, 1866. L. Boutell.

Sr. P. P. Lamprey, Mast Yard, N. H., writes:—"It is now almost two years since I became a free subscriber for the Crisis. I am very grateful for the favor, and I have tried to do what good I could with them, by lending them to my neighbors, and sending them away to friends in different towns and states. I have succeeded in obtaining several good paying subscribers the past year, and have got one on the commencement of this new year. I am happy to do all I can to promote the usefulness of so good a periodical as the Crisis, whether I be a paying or a free subscriber."

Bro. D. D. Lathrop, Franklin, Pa., writes:—"In this vicinity, there are seven different denominations, besides Spiritualists. We are now mostly united in a protracted meeting. Nine have embraced a hope in Christ, and cold ones are revived. Meetings continue under the preaching of the 'Reformed Methodists.'"

Bro. N. Wheeler, Cabot, Vt., writes:—"The cause of God has been prospering in Cabot of late. Some ten young persons have been hopefully converted, and some backsliders reclaimed. To God be all the glory. Pray for us that the work may not cease."

S. W. Worthington, North Bennington, Vt., writes:—"Bro. Grant, I wish to say through the Crisis to the brethren and sisters who preach the word, if any are passing this way, they will find a pilgrim's home with us."

Bro. Munger writes:—The battle goes well here in Concord. Glory to God. Thirteen were forward for prayers last evening. Ten were heads of families. Some forty have started anew, so the brethren say."

Married.

In Newstead, Erie Co., N. Y., March 21st, 1866, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Lyman E. Craw, of Lockport, N. Y., and Miss Esther P. Burnham.

Obituaries.

Hackett. Died in Dover, N. H., March 7th, 1866, after a protracted sickness of extreme suffering, of typhoid fever, Arabella Hackett, daughter of J. M. and Mary A. Hackett, aged ten years. She enjoyed her reason until the last, although deprived the use of speech for two weeks previous to her death. When last exercised, it was used in singing a few lines of a beautiful hymn, after prayers, with brethren Latham and Hawkins. The Holy Spirit seemed to animate and inspire her as she listened to the prayers and joined in the song of praise,—

> The last on earth which here she sung,
> But soon she'll join the immortal throng,
> And sing in sweet, angelic strains,
> On fair Eden's blissful plains.

A solemn and appropriate sermon was preached on her funeral occasion, on the 10th ult., from 2 Kings 4: 26, by Eld. T. M. Latham.

Milliken. Fell asleep in Jesus, March 8th, 1866, at her residence in Surry, Me., Mrs. Lydia T. Milliken, aged fifty-four years, seven months, and twenty-five days.

Thus slumbers one who was a faithful wife, an affectionate mother, and an humble christian. Her flesh rests in hope; hence we "sorrow not, even as others which have no hope;" believing that as "Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him" from the dead. Her sufferings, which were great at times, were borne very patiently. She leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. The funeral services were conducted by Eld. H. Hawes. C. H. Leverton.

Pease. Died in Enfield, Ct., March 11th, Sr. Evelina Pease, wife of Bro. Theodore Pease, aged fifty-one years.

Sister P. was formerly connected with the M. E. church, until she heard the truth of Jesus' coming; then she, with her companion, was willing to forsake all for Christ and his word. Death had no terror to her, and as she approached the dark stream, she requested her family and friends to sing. Her faith was triumphant, her death peaceful; she rests in hope.

We spoke from Job 14: 14; and showed that the dead would live again. We were assisted in the services by Dr. Brigham, the Congregationalist minister. R. Williams.

Phillips. Died in Cranston, R. I., Feb. 4th, 1866, Carrie Rhodes, eldest daughter of Nathaniel and Caroline Phillips, aged four years and six days.

The parents sorrow, but not without hope of meeting their loved one in the goodly land.

> There my little ones, I know,
> Round me shall be clinging;
> There the loved of long ago
> With me shall be singing.
> Oh, that land I long to see,
> Where the weary-hearted
> Shall with Christ in glory be,
> Never to be parted. S. L. R.

Hadlock. Died in Savoy, Mass., Feb. 19th, 1866, my mother, Marion Hadlock, aged eighty-eight years and nine months.

Thus another who saw the first signs of a coming Jesus, has passed away. Only here and there one is now left, as old sentinels, testifying to God's veracity. Words of truth and comfort were spoken by Bro. E. Hanley. H. Hadlock.

Connell. Died in Parkersburg, Butler Co., Iowa, March 7th, 1866, Clarinda, wife of Wm. H. Connell, in the thirty-second year of her age.

> Yet again we hope to meet thee,
> When the day of life is fled;
> In the kingdom we will greet thee,
> Where no farewell tear is shed.

The subject of this notice was converted and baptized by Eld. A. M. Higgins, in the State of Massachusetts. She moved to Iowa in 1856, led a very godly life, and died a happy and peaceful death, expecting to sleep till Jesus comes. John 11: 25 was improved on the occasion, by Bro. Ensign, to comfort the bereaved. P. W. Hough.

Tucker. Died in Thompson, Feb. 2d, 1866, Bro. Silas Tucker, aged sixty-one years.

March 4th, Ida, grand-daughter, aged twelve years and six months.

Also, March 7th, Sr. Esther, wife of Bro. Silas Tucker, aged fifty-five years. [Corrected from last week.]

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool March 21, Queenstown 22d.

A Paris telegram of the 20th to the Daily Telegraph reports on good authority that Head Centre Stephens had just arrived in Paris, having been in Scotland.

Rio Janeiro, Feb. 23. A battle has been fought without decisive results between the Argentine and Paraguayan armies. The loss was heavy on both sides.

The German journals continue to represent the relations of Austria and Prussia as very threatening. They even asserted that Austria had ordered the assembling of 100,000 troops on the Bohemian frontier, and sent a circular note to the Powers, disclaiming all responsibility for the consequences of any conflict which may ensue.

The London Times directs attention to the critical state of affairs. It says Bismarck has thrown off his mask and the Duchies are to be annexed to Prussia. Preparations for war were progressing on both sides. In both capitals military councils are held, generals nominated, and plans of a campaign discussed. Funds are depressed in the various markets by disquieting rumors.

DOMESTIC.

New York, March 29. A Paris letter has the text of the Secret Convention between Napoleon and Maximilian at the city of Mexico, on the 29th of September last, fixing the pay and position of French agents in Mexico, the number of whom is large, for five years from above date.

Change of Feeling South.

The Washington Chronicle publishes several private letters from the South, lamenting the marked change of feeling which has taken place among the rebels since the President's veto of the Freedmen's Bureau bill. The most important of these letters, recently received by Senator Sumner from Wilmington, North Carolina, represents that the spirit of hatred towards negroes and Northern men is increasing in malignity, and finds expression in libelling the female teachers from the North, insulting Northern citizens generally, and persecuting the colored people. Arrests of the freedmen it is said are made on the most trifling pretences, and the most degrading and torturing penalties inflicted. The letter states that on the 15th inst., seven or eight colored men and one poor white were seized on an accusation of theft, and at broad noon, in one of the most frequented streets of the city, the colored men were strung up by order of the officers of the County Court, their wrists bound by ropes and drawn up over the branch of a tree till their toes could barely touch the ground, when they were stripped bare to the waist, and in the presence of a crowd of men, women and children, ordered to receive the number of lashes to which they were sentenced. This infliction was made upon three of them, when the affair was brought to the notice of the officer of the bureau, who ordered the work to cease. The white man was released at once, on bail offered by some one present.

A prominent army officer stationed in Wilmington, in a letter received here, relates occurrences illustrative of the same spirit, and attributes them to the same cause. He says the rebels hurrah for Jeff. Davis and President Johnson, and such is the feeling against the military that it is positively unsafe for an officer to venture out alone at night, unless well armed. An ex-officer of the 1st Texas Cavalry now in Texas, writing to one of his former military companions now stationed in this city after speaking of the attractions of the Texan climate and the inducements to settle in that State, makes the following remarks:—

"There is one thing, however, that is working against the speedy return of quietness, not only in this State, but throughout the entire South, and that is the reconstruction policy of President Johnson. It is doing more to unsettle this country than people who are not practical observers of its workings have any idea of. Before this policy was made known, the people were prepared to accept anything. They expected to be treated as rebels, their leaders to be punished, and their property confiscated. But the moment it was made known their assurance returned. Rebels have again become arrogant and exacting. Treason stalks through the land unabashed. What we now want is emigration from the North, but we cannot look for any great amount until the present policy is changed."

Treatment of the Freedmen.—A commission sent by General Sickles to Greenville, S. C., to inquire into alleged ill-treatment of the freedmen report as follows:

"That there are armed bands in the districts of Newberg and Lawrence, who are harbored and paid by citizens of influence, for the avowed purpose of committing outrages upon freed people by murdering and flogging; that these bands are systematically screened from the authorities, and that no one dares now to report the outrages committed, that in cases where persons have heretofore testified against the perpetrators of these outrages, they have been compelled to leave the districts to escape the vengeance of the friends of the accused; that murder and other outrages have been committed upon the freed people for a price per head."

☞ The European papers present terrible pictures of the mortality attending the new disease, called "trichina," in several parts of the continent. The disease, as is well known, is engendered by eating pork, in which, though unseen, millions of animalculæ abound, that cannot be destroyed except by long and hard boiling. Those pass into the human system, and the person is eaten up alive by them, without being able to help himself. A German physician of Frankfort, who has given the subject much consideration, wrote on the 9th ult., that in a little place near Magdeburg, one hundred children had been rendered orphans by the disease, and upward of three hundred patients were then awaiting death, which they knew to be inevitable, from the same cause. The disease is reported to have appeared in some of the Western cities of the United States.

A Touching Incident.—Last Sabbath evening after an eloquent temperance address by Mr. Uniac at the Town Hall in South Reading, a young man came upon the platform and said: "It is a strange thing that I am here. I have kept the vilest place, and sold the most rum of any man in this town. I have led young men and old men to destruction. A few weeks ago I cursed every man who spoke against my business. I defied God. But soon after I could not sleep. The thought haunted me that some one of the men I had made drunk at night might be dead at my door in the morning. But, thank God, I am converted." He then raised both his hands and said: "I promise before God Almighty, my Maker and Savior, that I will never sell or use another single drop of liquor while God gives me life."—Journal, 21st.

A Fearful Instrument of War.—The Gazette du Midi reports that a new torpedo of a more destructive kind than any hitherto invented has just been tried in the dockyard of Castigneau, Toulon, with complete success. The Vauban ship-of-war, attacked by a boat twenty feet long, supplied with a spar armed with a fulminating torpedo, was lifted three feet out of the water and instantly sunk in consequence of an enormous hole in her keel caused by the torpedo. The success was the more remarkable as the charge of powder was only six pounds.

Explorations in Syria.—A Constantinople paper says that two antiquarians, in making excavations in Syria, have discovered a Jewish habitation entire, the construction of which dates two centuries previous to the Christian era. Its rooms are furnished after the Egyptian style, and these gentlemen found in them the five books of Moses, the Psalms of David, and another book containing Hebrew poetry, completely unknown.

☞ The population of Greece is one million two hundred thousand. The country is able to sustain four times this number.

Notices.

Notice.

We shall commence a meeting in the Chapel, corner of London and Decatur streets, East Boston, Monday evening, April 9th, to continue as long as duty may demand. John G. Hook, C. Goodrich.

P. S. The meetings will be continued at Lowell Street Chapel this week and next. I expect Bro. L. Dummon to assist in the meetings both at Lowell Street and East Boston. John G. Hook.

Discussion at Norway.

We are to have a discussion at Norway, Me., with Mr. N. Gunnerton, Universalist minister, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., April 10th.

First Question:—"Is the second coming of Christ, to judge the world, a future event?"

Second Question:—"Do reason and the Bible teach the immortality of man?"

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. Wm. Sheldon.

Photographs.

Bro. T. E. Wood, of Portsmouth, N. H., will send the photographs of Elds. C. Goodrich and H. Munger (album size) on the receipt of 25 cents each. The large size, suitable for framing, 75 cents each.

He will also send the picture of Bro. M. B. Czechowski (album size) for 25 cents; the proceeds to be appropriated to the European mission.

☞ Address T. E. Wood, Portsmouth, N. H., enclosing stamp to prepay postage.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N. Y. Clinton Colegrove, Bap. Minister.

Sickness.

Bro. Grant:—I wish through the Crisis to say to the brothers and sisters of Bro. D. M. Hanscomb that he is very sick and has been for about four weeks. His address is Strickland's Ferry, Maine.

Wayne, Mar. 30, 1866. Hartley Gray.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston.
J. G. Hook ... Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

East Boston.
H. L. Hastings ... Sunday, April 8th

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, April 8th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M. Wm. C. Thurman.

Exeter, N. H. ... Saturday evening, April 7th and over the following Lord's day. Miles Grant.

Lynn, Mass. ... Sunday, April 8th. J. Couch.

Concord, N. H. ... Sunday, April 8th. H. Munger.

South Reading ... evenings, April 5th and 6th
Lawrence ... Sunday, April 8th. C. Goodrich.

North Salem, N. H., Lord's day, April 8th, through the week, and over the following Lord's day.
Summersworth, Great Falls, N. H., Wednesday evening, April 18th, through the week, and over the following Lord's day. L. C. McKinstry.

Plymouth ... Sunday, April 8th
Carver ... Sunday, April 15th
Worcester ... April 22d
Springfield ... April 29th
Hartford, Ct ... May 6th
West Haven, Ct ... May 13th and 20th
New Britain, Ct ... May 27th
Hartford, Ct ... June 3d
New Haven, Ct ... June 10th
Warehouse Point ... June 17th. J. S. White.

Enfield, (at Bro. Theodore Pease's house), Saturday evening, April 14th.
Scitico ... Sunday, April 15th. R. Williams.

Portland, Me. ... Sunday, April 8th. Timothy Cole.

Sangerville, (near Bro. Oren French's) ... April 22d
Exeter, (Chamberlain school-house) ... April 29th
Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) ... May 6th
Levant, (Emmerson's Mills) ... May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's) ... May 27th. I. K. Lombard.

East Bowdoinham (with Bro. H. D. Reed), Thursday evening, April 12th, and over the following Sunday. R. R. York.

Freeport, (Swamp school house) ... Sunday, April 15th. I. C. Wellcome.

East Granville, Mass. ... Saturday evening, April 14th and over the next Lord's day, April 15th, at Bro. S. Oatley's.
At Bro. Stephen Herrick's ... Tuesday eve., April 17th
East Hartland ... Wednesday eve., April 18th
Barkhamsted, (at the dwelling of Jason Case), Thursday evening, April 19th. H. Rockwell.

Agawam, Mass.
Bro. Oatley ... Sunday, April 8th
H. Pratt ... Sunday, April 15th

Stafford, Ct., (Free Church) ... Sunday, April 8th. H. Pratt.

Concord, N. H. (Angelos Hall) ... May 6th and 13th. Joseph Pinkham.

Porter, Me. ... Thursday evening, April 5th and over Sunday. J. G. Smith, J. Pinkham.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) ... Sunday, April 22d. J. G. Smith.

Harwinton, Ct. (school-house near Bro. Barber's), Sunday, April 8th. O. D. Woodruff.

Plainfield Pond ... April 22d
West Hoosic, (Advent Chapel) ... April 29th. Wm. J. Blanchard.

Lee, N. H. ... April 8th and 15th. C. S. Emerson.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall), Saturday evening, April 28th, and Sunday, 29th, day and evening. L. H. Otis.

Champlain, (Corbeau), 6 P. M. ... April 8th
Addison, Vt. ... evenings, April 11th, 12th, and 13th
Rutland, Vt. ... Lord's day, April 15th, and 22d with intervening evenings, if the brethren so arrange.
Champlain (Village), N. Y., A. M. ... April 29th
Massena, (as Bro. D. T. Taylor may arrange), May 6th. G. W. Stetson.

Abington, Ct. ... Sunday, April 15th. E. Bellows.

Danielsonville, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th
Abington, Ct ... Sunday, April 15th. H. F. Carpenter.

West Falmouth, Me.
R. R. York ... Sunday, April 8th
Clarkson Good ... Sunday, April 15th

East Bowdoinham, (Lancaster school-house), Sunday, April 15th. H. D. Reed.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th
Cheshire Street, Ct. ... Sunday, April 15th. S. Woodruff.

Lake Village, (at the New Chapel) ... Sunday, April 8th
Meredith, (where Bro. Calif may appoint), Sunday, April 15th. Nelson Hartshorn.

Poultney, Vt. ... Friday eve., April 6th and over the following Lord's day.
Manchester, N. H. ... Lord's day, April 15th
Biddeford, Me. ... Lord's day, April 29th. C. C. Stevens.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) ... April 8th. Through the week as may seem duty, and over the Lord's day, April 15th. Geo. W. Brown.

Wallingford Farms, Ct. ... April 8th. B. Hitchcock.

Nottingham, (Union Hall) ... Sunday, April 8th. H. H. Brigham.

Bozrahville, Gosh... (Pine Hill) ... Sunday, April 8th. No Name—(supposed to be Wm. Shepherd.)

Pleasant Valley, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th. Barre, Washington.

Concord, N. H. (corner of Green and Center streets), Sundays, April 22d and 29th. W. W. Sutherland.

Southbridge, Mass. (Brick school-house) ... April 8th. Geo. A. Stebbins.

Thomaston, Ct. ... evening, April 10th
Pine Tree School-house, North Salem, N. Y. (or as Bro. Bailey may appoint) ... Sundays, April 15th and 22d
Thomaston, Ct. ... Sunday, April 29th
Wrightville ... evening, May 4th. Geo. L. Teeple.

Carlton, Orleans Co. ... April 8th
West Barre ... April 15th
Brockport ... April 22d
Darien City, Genesee Co. (as Bro. Henry Sherlock may appoint), Sunday, April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Baptist church, near Bro. H. C. Simonds, at 4 P. M. same day. C. P. Owens.

Concord, N. H. ... April 8th. J. K. Bellows.

Bristol, Ct. ... Sunday, April 8th
Newfield, Ct ... Sunday, April 15th. A. Spencer.

Warner, (Waterloo Village), N. H.) ... April 15th. Simeon Rowe.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

D. D. Lathrop—Paid to No. 543.

Mrs. C. Home—It was acknowledged in No. 530, and paid to No. 562.

J. B. Wilson—Received and sent.

F. R. W. Chapman—Received and acknowledged in No. 532.

C. P. Dow—Credited in No. 544.

Geo. W. Turner—They will be out before a great while, and due notice will be given.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 548. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid.

If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe.

For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—E Potter, what P. O.? W Mitchell, what P. O.? B Quint 572, D B Salter 523, E P Streeter 531, E Myers 563, T Cheney 567.

$1.25 each—J D Patterson 573, S B Burnap 573, T Erskine 573, L M Plummer 572, J H Young 571, S A Miller 570, S D Hastey 549, H Lucas 540, A P Noyes 572, T Snow 571, P Hapgood 572, B P Rice 573, F H Prentice 573, S D Applebee 576, A Jewett 579, E Knight 560, B Herrick 580, E Case 573, W L Huntley 566, F S Mills 572, R C Jackman 572, F O Sevenburg 573, W F Dame 573, M E Eastman 573, W Hudson 573, D Richardson 573, E Turner 573, N Batchelder 562, S A Kamerling 551, E Morgan 573, A S Johnson 573, F Gasper 573, J M Eaton 573, J Clark 572, W Greenman 571, O W Brown 573, W Vreeland 572, J Allen 597, A L Boswell 565, G B Cargill 572, J C Burnham 572, F Edwards 561, C Benton 572, G L Rice 573, A H Johnson 573, S J Tyrrell 569, E Ayres 577, J A Clark 573, N E Fuller 572, M A Georgia 573, B T Parsons 573, D C Hitchcock 573, I Mayberry 573.

$2.00 each—S J Twing 444, E Good 577, L M Smith 599, S O Dunham 599, C. Haley 607, E. Fisher, what P. O.? W Payne 573, E C Payne 554, C Bernie 573.

$2.50 each—Z Snow 599, J C King 543, J P King 329, W Ingmire 573, C Goodwin 521, A Wright 601, O Evans 601, S Fogg 573, L M Squiers 599, P Dow 604, S Marsh, what P. O.? R A Hegeest 598, F. B. Jones 603, M. K. Derrickson 599, V S Parkhurst 589, N Hartshorn 597, J Barrett 599, S G Laskey 599, L C Collins 600, A Hamilton 599, S Hale 639, R Pike 638, B A Gardner 504, R M Brooks 599, S M Mann 572, M Leach 599, J Thompson 599, J W Phelps 601, J Kent 599, W Corey 599, A Reynolds 599, E Cluby 599, M D Richardson 598, M S Barnard 593, F P Smith 554, J Colby 600, J Tracy 585, R Johnson 599, L Town 599, M Sherman 599, H Woodmancy 599, A Edwards 556, H H Kneeland 599, Z Rowe 599, H P Rockwell 599, S Pillsbury 599, S Scott 599, T W Nelson 599, T J Chadwick 599, E Todd 599, F Nelson 587, L J Jenner 598, L Allen 599, J Moody 609, E P Whitten 557, O. P. Alderman 599, S. Mayberry 599, E Jones 598, J M Lydston 606.

$3.00 each—L. Rawson 604, C Rice 555, C Silver 553, S K Dyer 541, M Olines 501, N Thompson 572, N Chase 594, J O Merrill 549, W Hathaway 556, B I Burnett 586.

Various sums.—A B Pinkham $1.72, old acct.; J B Fowler 63c, 560; J D Waldron $1.50, 555; J Hall $4.50, 513, A Strickland 50c, 556, J G Hathorne $5.00 630, J W Matts $5.50, 693, D C Peachouse $5.00, 656, P W Matts $5.00, 650, N Ranney 50c, 557, J. A. Smith 63c, 560, E G Hobbs $1.50, 592, C. Lawton $5.00, 605, M Durkee $1.50, 574, G W Adams 63c, 546, J S Moulton $1.50, 573, D F Kendall $3.30, 578, M L Bickford 70c, 548, J Jennings 63c, 560, E Davis 63c, 560; S. Perkins $1.15, old acct.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

D T Taylor $4.50, S. Lane 65c, A. Brooks $3.25, D. Howard 50c, W S Raymond $1.00, S Hale $1.45, J Osborn $1.50, S Cooper 50c, S M Shade $2.00, D M Kinter $3.00, J Rogers 36c, A M Smith 45c, R S Robinson 5c, E L Marsh 70c, L Johnson $2.24, A L Boswell 60c, G B Cargill $2.40, A J Tuttle 50c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.—S M Shade, D D Lathrop, J Rogers, R S Robinson, D M Kinter, J Osborn, W H Fisher, S Cooper, L Johnson, F Nelson, G B Cargill, A J Tuttle, E L Marsh, N A Hitchcock, S Pillsbury, E B Card.

By Express—W. N. Pile.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

C. Hill, S. Jackman, M. H. Brown, J G Willis, F H Chamberlain, M. J. Plummer, O P Allen, P S Broch, C H Sweet, S L Manley, S C Wellcome, A N Seymour, D Grant, I A Thayer, S Mix, B P Manning, D Cogswell, A E Smith, H McClary, P S W Deyo, J N Berry, B Petham, P Tandy, I C Wellcome.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
Eld. C. Goodrich—No. 86 Princeton Street, East Boston, Mass.
J. H. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Cones—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Oagley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—364 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. F. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 30th, Springfield, Mass., 57 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. I. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion ... 12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make itself? ... 16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God? ... 16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible? ... 24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament? ... 16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable? ... 16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles? ... 16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy ... 32 pp., 5c.
9. Moses and the Prophets ... 28 pp., 5c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars ... 28 pp., 5c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise ... 36 pp., 5c.
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture ... 32 pp., 5c.
13. Science, or Faith? ... 32 pp., 5c.

For the Set, (making 304 pp.) ... 40c. postpaid.

FOR A GREATER QUANTITY.

By mail, 500 pp. ... $1.00.
By express, 1000 pp. ... $1.00.

Address all orders to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home ... 16 pp.
2. Life Insurance ... 16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost! ... 8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet? ... 8 pp.
5. About God (for children) ... 4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing ... 4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ ... 4 pp.
8. Now ... 4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent postpaid—

One set (64 pp.) ... 8c.
1200 pp. ... $1.00
1800 pp., (by express, not prepaid) ... $1.00

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING SOCIETY,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—the Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; etc. A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and the Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 8c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 30c.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 30c.

SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 30c.

THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 12c; by mail, 15c.

THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 4c.

THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 4c.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $5.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c, by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.

CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c, paper, 45c.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Positive Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.

ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 28c.

RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 30c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c, by mail, 29c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.

GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c, by mail, 10c.

THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.

IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c, by mail, 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c, by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c, by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c, by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c, by mail, 7c.

THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c, by mail, 8c.

ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c, by mail, 8c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c, by mail, 8c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 5c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 4c; by mail, 4c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c, by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS; A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR. A Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00, by mail, $2.36; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures, with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50, by mail, $1.75.

THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50, by mail, $2.88.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75, by mail, $2.00.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50, by mail, $1.70.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75, by mail, $2.00.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00, by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 29c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid, $2.00 per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK, for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 19c; $1.80 per dozen, postage, 8c. on every three copies.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c, by mail, 10c.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK, the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 80c; by mail, 88c.

HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.

COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.

WHY THE SHOE PINCHES. The Cause of Deformities in the feet, and how to avoid bleins, corns, etc. 20c. postpaid.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.

NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 3c. single; by mail, 6c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

BETHLEHEM; a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 20c; $2.00 per dozen. Paper 2c, $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 6c; per dozen, 50c.

RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of the "cities of the nations." By Wm. Shepherd. 10c, postpaid; 85c. a dozen.

THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Jillson. 5c; by mail, 7c.

OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the American Advent Mission Society, its Constitution, Officers, Addresses, etc. 3c.

EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a Slave for forty-three years. 25c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 24c. per dozen; $1.00 per hundred. Single 1c., postpaid.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank, and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

For the World's Crisis.

WAVES OF SORROW.

"All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me."—Ps. 42: 7.

As moans the troubled main when winds arise,
And roll her billows inland one by one,
So my sad soul, beneath the darkening skies,
And dashing waves of sorrow, weeps alone.

I thought my sea was calm, my favored bark
Seemed to be wafted by propitious gales,
But all at once my heavens grew strangely dark,
And storm's sure portents struck the expanded sails.

I trembled at its coming, and I prayed
My God to guide me on the heaving sea;
I know he will, I do not feel afraid,
Though oft the surging billows break o'er me.

I saw a brother first drink in the waves
Of full mortality, so dark and chill,
I've left him sleeping in the place of graves,
And high the storm is raging round me still.

Another form whose heart to mine united,
Took all its joy or sorrow as her own,
Is wasting, and the hands and hearts we plighted,
Must soon be severed, and I left alone.

Yet not alone, my Father's arms around me,
When earthly friends go down, are folded still;
His eye is on me, and he chooseth for me
The way that's best, albeit good or ill.

And after every storm there comes a calm,
And quiet havens border every sea;
So faith transcending every rude alarm,
Speaks quiet rest and peace at last for me.

Rest with the loved ones past this state of sadness,
Sorrow, pain, death and evil gone,
Peace where the hills shall smile in endless gladness,
Tinged with the light of the unchanging morn.

JAS. A. LIBBY.

My wife's sick room, West Poland, Me., March, 1866.

For the World's Crisis.

THE FREEDMEN'S MISSION.

LETTER FROM BRO. LESLIE.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Again in Tennessee, and now, perhaps, its most corrupt and wicked city (Memphis.)

We arrived here on Monday, the 5th inst., after a journey of six days and nights. We came by the way of St. Louis, and there, providentially, met Bro. Himes, on his way back from Memphis. We were truly glad to meet him and learn the prospects for our mission in Tennessee. It was our intention to stop a few days in St. Louis, and make a report of the mission there; but as we found Bro. Himes on the ground and prepared to report the condition of things, we tarried but a few hours, taking the next steamer for Memphis, which started at 4 o'clock P. M., on Friday the 2nd inst.

Our passage down the Mississippi was not a very pleasant one, the weather being cool, and the wind blowing fresh and chilly all the way. This prevented us from going much on deck, confining us to the cabin most of the time. We therefore paid but little attention to the scenery (if so it may be called) along this king of rivers. I took a very severe cold on the passage down, which nearly resulted in an inflammation of the lungs; but, by God's blessing in the use of means, I am nearly well again.

Sr. Martha S Butler, of Connecticut, who joined me at Bridgeport, was very much exhausted by the journey, but has nearly recovered, and is ready to enter upon the work here, as it may present itself. She will prove, I think, a true missionary, and one whom the Board will be glad they sent out.

We are now boarding in the family of Dr J. C. Bywater, who himself has been for many years a firm believer in the near coming of our Lord, and preached it faithfully until his health became impaired, and he was obliged to leave the work. He, however, still preaches whenever and wherever he can. Two of his daughters, Misses Carrie and Sarah, are teaching the colored school here, established by Bro. Himes. This school, although yet small, is steadily increasing in interest, and I trust may be continued. Its location, however, is not so favorable as I would like, the school being in the midst of or near other schools which have been longer established, and have therefore the advantage of being better known The school was located here for the reason that no other house could then be found in which to hold it. Through the untiring efforts of these two faithful teachers, it has made headway in the midst of the surrounding schools; and, what is most satisfactory, it has called in and is educating those who did not attend any school.

In connection with the day school is an evening school, for both children and adults It would gladden the hearts of our friends could they see the interest that is taken and the progress which is made by those who attend. Such earnestness to learn is truly inspiring to those who teach. I never witnessed more rapid progress in learning than is here made.

Connected with these schools is a Sabbath school, which, under God's care and by his blessing, will in a short time result in great good. The seed we sow here will not be lost. Teaching the members of the school, as we do, the pure word of God, and to live a new life, in view of the judgment at hand, our instructions will be blessed in the preparation of some for the kingdom of Christ when it appears. This people, young and old, want a knowledge of the Bible; especially those who are learning to read. It is the lack of a knowledge of the Bible which produces so much fanaticism and extreme physical excitement among them. Wherever ignorance of God's word exists among a religious people, there will be seen all that is found here. These demonstrations, thought by them to be religious, will become less, and disappear only when the people are well instructed in the Scriptures.

We have no place yet for public worship; the hall which we occupy for the school during the week being used on the Sabbath by the society that owns it. We, however, have it for our Sunday school in the morning at nine o'clock.

There is an open door and a wide field here, so far as it pertains to numbers, who need and desire instruction in all things relating to the present and future life. There is no doubt in regard to our gaining access to the people whom we came here to benefit; but it can be done only through a certain course, pursued with wisdom and patience on our part. "Wise as serpents and harmless as doves," is our motto, and it must be acted upon here. We must not be simply teachers; we must be missionaries, and that in the true sense of the word; going among and identifying ourselves with these poor ones for whom Christ died, and whose blood will be found upon our garments if we do not do something more than teach them to read. There are many teachers here in this dark land, but few missionaries. There are hundreds here teaching, who never get the confidence of the colored people, for the reason that they refuse to associate with them out of the school-room. The work of these teachers is but a partial one, the more important portion being left undone. Our success, therefore, through the wisdom given us by God, must come from hard and continued labor, with his blessing added to all that we may do.

There are two sections of the city now unoccupied by any society or mission, either of which we can enter, with every prospect of doing all the good we desire; but the first thing to be obtained in either is a building, to be used as a Chapel for religious worship on the Sabbath, for Sunday schools and prayer meetings, and day and evening schools through the week. We are praying, hoping and laboring to obtain, in one or the other of these fields, a building of some kind for the above purposes. If we can secure such a place, we shall at once enter upon our work. But, if we fail to do this, we shall have to wait, until the friends of Christ at the North shall furnish the means with which to build a Chapel. This could be done very easily, if our brethren and sisters would set about it. Let each one give one dollar for this object, and enough will be furnished at once to secure here a place where the glorious truths which God has given us may be proclaimed to hundreds who would otherwise never hear them. May God put it into the hearts of those who are looking for the Savior thus to do, and God's blessing will rest upon them.

Pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, for we have here a hard field in which to labor. No harder one, it seems to us, has ever fallen to the lot of God's servants to occupy. Nearly all here are, in some manner, against us. Hatred and prejudice meet us on every hand, and all that Satan can do he will do to prevent us from accomplishing the work which God and you have sent us here to do. We depend much upon your prayers and assistance. What can we do here without them, helpless as we are, and in the midst of enemies? Do not forget us! Remember that we are laboring to publish here, in this unfriendly place, the same glad tidings which have gladdened your hearts, and which you love still so much to hear. We feel with you that time is short, and what we do here must be done quickly We are anxious to do all we can, but we can do but little without your help and God's blessing. The latter we feel sure of, for we shall live so as to secure it. We have had it thus far, and it is still with us

Sunday last, I spoke to a large congregation of colored people in one of the Methodist churches, on the work of redemption, from Gen. 3: 14, 15; Rev. 19: 1, 6, 9; showing, 1. That God's great work of redemption through Christ was not the work of a day or an age, nor a single act; but the work of ages, and a series of acts, with periods of time intervening. 2 That by no one of these great acts of redemption could man be saved, but by them all. 3. That the work of redemption was not yet finished, Christ being yet engaged in it as our great High Priest. 4. That we are near the closing up of this great work,—one more act remaining,—the laying aside of his priestly robes, and putting on his royal apparel; coming again the King of the whole earth, raising the dead, changing the living saints, destroying the kingdoms of the world, and giving the earth to those who are then redeemed by this last act in the great work of redemption.

The truth took effect, and many acknowledged that they had received much light. God bless it to them. A door will be opened to me here, I fully believe; and, as it is opened, I shall, in God's strength, enter.

In earnest, I. I. LESLIE.

Memphis, Tenn., Mar. 10th, 1866

For the World's Crisis.

TRIP TO IOWA.

(Concluded)

BRO GRANT:—My last hasty sketch left me at Boylan's Grove, in the midst of very unpleasant, rainy weather; but the people, though scattering, came out well, and listened attentively to the truth, but my heart was sad, as I gave them my last address O how solemn I felt at parting, and how intensely did I pray that these dear people might meet me in the better land.

Friday, Jan. 12th. Eld. Jaynes and wife took me to Great Bend, a village on the Shell Rock river. I had an appointment out to preach that evening in Marble Rock village, which lies upon the other side of the Shell Rock river; but the late rains had swollen the river and broken up much of the ice on the margin, so that we could not cross it that night; and having done all I could do to get to my appointment, I resigned myself to circumstances, and settled down quietly for the night under the hospitable roof of Bro. and Sr Smith. Our ride the past day had been a very unpleasant one, lying across a broad, open, unsettled prairie, and I thought, as I looked out on the wide expanse, bounded by the blue horizon, how dreadful to be lost on one of these wild prairies on a winter's night. But my friends were well acquainted with the route, and on we travelled, continually annoyed and chilled by a cold, unpleasant wind, and a number of times forced to ford the swollen waters, which to me, who was raised in an old settled country, a land of roads and bridges, is always an uncomfortable thing I was both tired and sick this evening, and as I laid my weary head on the pillow for the night, sighed for home and its surroundings; but that, with its dear familiar faces, was many a weary mile away; many appointments must be filled, and a long reach of thinly settled country be traversed, before I could again enjoy its comforts and its rest. But I laid my cares all on Him who careth for us; and then, as ever, found him a present help in my need. Surely he is as springs in the desert, and as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

Next morning I bid farewell to Eld. Jaynes and wife, who were obliged to return. The Elder's health has been very poor, though now some better. He is faithfully laboring in this western country to win souls unto Christ. I went down this morning to the Shell Rock, hoping to be able, by some means, to cross it, and get to Floyd to my appointment this evening; but could not cross. The friends in Great Bend finding I had come, were peculiarly anxious that I should preach in that place; accordingly, I spoke there that evening to a good and attentive audience. The friends in Marble Rock, hearing I had come and was confined to the other side, procured lumber, and thereby connected the ice, which was firm in the middle of the river, with the main land, so they could cross to the meeting. I met this evening, for the first time, with Eld. Hiscox, who lives in Marble Rock. He assisted me in the exercises of the meeting. I had contracted a severe cold the previous day, and was extremely hoarse, so that I could speak but a little while, and was truly thankful, when I could proceed no further, that Eld. Hiscox was there and able to take up the thread of my discourse and complete it.

I thought it would be out of the question for me to think of speaking the next day, but the request was so urgent, I finally complied, and told them I would say what I could. Next morning being Lord's day, I spoke there again at half past ten, to a full house and an attentive audience. A wet compress, and other preparations, the night previous, had in some measure relieved my hoarseness, and I spoke to them about an hour on the query,—"Where is the promise of his coming?" Eld. Inman, the Free-will Baptist minister of the place, was present and took part in the exercises. At the close of the meeting, he very kindly gave me some medicine to relieve my hoarseness. Eld. Cooley, the M. E. minister of Marble Rock, very courteously sent me word that he would give up his appointment that evening for me, and desired me to fill it, which was seconded by the people; accordingly, I crossed the river on the lumber and ice, and preached in Marble Rock that evening. The M. E. minister and the F. B. minister both took their seats on the stand, together with Eld. Hiscox, and took part in the exercises, while the Elder's wife sat with me. The house was crowded full of people, sitting and standing, while others left, being totally unable to get into the house. I had good liberty in speaking, and was followed by some able and pointed remarks by the Methodist minister, in favor of public speaking by females. I had, from some reason, obtained a very unfavorable opinion of Marble Rock, and almost dreaded to go there; but I must say that in no place was I more kindly received, or treated more courteously, than in this place. All this time I felt quite an anxiety about my appointments at Floyd, but, being completely bound here, consoled myself with the thought that Eld Deyo was there, and amply competent to keep up the meetings until I arrived.

Monday morning, Jan. 15th, opened upon us in the midst of quite a snow storm, but I had been delayed too long already, and must certainly be in Floyd to attend meeting that night Accordingly, off we started in the midst of the falling snow,—Eld. Hiscox and wife with others,—quite a load of us, and struck out on the prairie for Floyd, and arrived at Father Hubbard's little before night I suffered very much during this day's ride, but kept quiet, thinking the least said concerning that which can't be remedied is perhaps the best

I found that the friends in Floyd had become quite alarmed concerning me, and had dispatched a fast team to Marble Rock, to see if I was there, was sick, or what was the trouble We had taken a circuitous route, to avoid a slough, and they had taken a strait course, which resulted in our not meeting each other I felt quite anxious about these young men, lest, blinded by the falling snow, they might get bewildered on the prairie, and be lost, but while we were eating supper they returned, having been clear through to Marble Rock, and there learning I had started, hastened back so as to be in time for the evening meeting. Then for the first time I had the pleasure of greeting Bros. Hubbard and Raymond, who had taken this unpleasant ride in the driving storm to learn the whereabouts of poor me May God bless these young brothers of the church, and enable them to be chosen vessels,—yea, pillars in the house of God

I had suffered considerable anxiety of mind for fear Eld Deyo might have been detained on his route as well as myself, and consequently, the appointment there not filled, and was truly thankful to God to learn that he was there, and had filled every appointment. I did not feel able to preach much that night, but talked a little, and then Elds. Hiscox and Deyo followed. I had not yet recovered from my severe cold and hoarseness, but said I would speak the next evening, whereupon the teacher said if I would speak in the morning, in the hall, school should be dismissed for that purpose. Others wanted me to speak in the evening, as some could attend then who could not in the morning Thinking I ought not to speak but once the next day, I tried to arrange it to have one of the elders speak in the morning, while I spoke in the evening; whereupon I learned the hall could not be had in the morning, only on the condition that I spoke. I immediately told the friends to pray for me, and I would try and speak twice, which I did, thus suiting both classes, and also again on Wednesday evening, to a crowded house, at which time, after my discourse, Eld. Deyo spoke very feelingly to the audience, and made a request, when five came forward; two to be identified with the church, others to evince their determination and request prayers. Was very kindly cared for while at Floyd at the house of Bro. and Sr Lamphire.

Wednesday, took dinner at the house of Bro. and Sr. Hubbard, who showed me a photograph of a little daughter they had recently lost, which seemed the most perfect embodiment of youth, beauty and innocence, I ever saw. How hard it is that we are in the land of the enemy, who gathers our richest and choicest household treasures, and covers them up from sight in the great charnel house. But, thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through the great life-giver Jesus Christ, who, having the keys of hell and of death, will soon unlock the great charnel house, and clothe our loved and lost with immortal beauty and undying vigor.

There was quite a cloud cast over the meeting while at Floyd, in consequence of the sickness of Bro. C. Burroughs, the deacon of the church, and one of its main supporters. May God preserve his valuable life to be a comfort to his dear wife, and a blessing to the church, is my prayer.

Thursday morning, I bade farewell to Bro. J. W. Burroughs and wife, where I had passed the night previous, and in company with Bro. Smith and wife and Eld. Deyo, started for Stacyville. Eld. Deyo organized this church at Floyd in 1859, and during a meeting of six weeks immersed from forty to fifty candidates, which were added to the church. I found, in visiting the churches in Western Iowa, a unanimous voice as to the ability and efficiency of Bro. Deyo as an evangelist; and since God has put it into his heart to visit Minnesota, my prayer is that his labors may be equally blessed in that state. In consequence of the storm, I was obliged to remain in Stacyville over Sunday, where Eld. Deyo preached twice, and I three times. [illegible]

Monday, I went on to Capt. Bennett's, near Riceville, where we were very kindly entertained. We found the Captain to be a gentlemanly, intellectual man, and his wife not only a refined woman, but a believer in the second coming of Christ. I spoke at their school-house that evening for thirty minutes, after which Eld. Deyo addressed the congregation, and distributed tracts.

Tuesday, I had a very long, unpleasant ride to reach Elliots. What gratitude and thanksgiving filled my heart to find myself in my old pilgrim home, under the hospitable roof of Capt. Elliot and wife, while their words of welcome seemed like music in my ear. My first inquiry was for my husband, whom I expected to meet here, and I was at first shocked to think he had not come. But upon Sr. Elliot's explaining to me the state of the roads, the delay of the stage, etc., I felt that all was right, and thanked God I was once more among familiar faces, after my long and wearisome journey amid almost entire strangers.

Next day I had the unalloyed pleasure of meeting my husband, who had been prevented from getting through the previous day, in consequence of the badness of the roads. He was heartily glad to meet Eld. Deyo, with whom he had been previously acquainted, and declared it had relieved his mind from great anxiety in regard to me, in consequence of my letter informing him in regard to his accompanying me from Floyd to Minnesota. He at once decided that the Elder must accompany us to Winona, and commence a series of meetings in our vicinity.

Thursday evening, I preached in Highland. Friday night, Jan. 26th, we arrived safely at home, finding all well. And now, as I close, I must express my heartfelt thanks for the kindness of the friends where I have traveled, in ministering to my wants,—never putting me in the cold spare bed, but providing warm and suitable lodging, conveying me cheerfully to my different places of appointment, and helping me on after a godly sort; for which may God reward them an hundred-fold in this world, and grant them in the world to come eternal life. Without this kind care, I could not possibly have sustained this constant traveling and speaking in midwinter Having in five weeks traveled nearly four hundred miles, visited seven churches, attended the Minnesota and Iowa quarterly meetings, and preached thirty times. While I have thus tried to proclaim the near coming of Christ, through much physical weakness, in the depths of winter, I have felt amply rewarded by the apparent impulse given to the cause, and the expressed determination of God's professed ones to be faithful to the end, while to the throne of grace I would still bear the case of those who said, Pray for me.

RUTH M. ROWELL.

Winona, Jan. 27th, 1866.

CHRISTMAS ON MONDAY, AN ANCIENT PROPHECY.

In regard to the day in which the festival falls this year, the following old prophecy is of interest:—

"If Christmas day on Monday be,
A great winter that year you'll see,
And full of winds both loud and shrill,
But in the summer, truth to tell,
Stern winds shall be and strong,
Full of tempest and lasting long.
While battles, they shall multiply,
'And great plenty of beasts shall die',
He shall be found that stealeth aught—
Though thou be sick thou diest not."

For the World's Crisis.

A SERMON.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25 46.

We will say a few words more about the unquenchable fire, and then say a few words about the resurrection of the righteous and the wicked. Will the reader please turn to Jude 7, where we are informed that "Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them . . . are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." I do not see as it made those wicked inhabitants, or their cities, immortal; and I can find no proof that the cities, or the Sodomites, are yet burning. St. Peter, in 2 Pet. 2. 6, speaks of "Sodom and Gomorrah" being turned "into ashes," and "condemned . . . with an overthrow, making them an example unto those that should live ungodly." We know that the fire from God out of heaven, burning with brimstone, must be an eternal, or unquenchable fire, but the whole account plainly shows that the inhabitants and the cities were wholly destroyed, so far as relates to their existence as cities, or inhabitants; and this plainly proves to us that the wicked will be punished with a final destruction, soul and body.

We will now look at Ezek. 20. 45–48, where "the forest of the south field" was to be destroyed with fire, that should burn up the forests, and should "not be quenched" But this does not prove that the forests were immortal, or suffered endless misery, does it? Never refer to unquenchable fire as a proof of endless misery, when the fact in the case proves utter destruction of every thing which is thrown into the fire.

We will now refer to the resurrection. It matters not to us whether the resurrection of the wicked takes place at the same time with the saints, or not; but we know that there is as much proof of the resurrection of the wicked, as there is that they will be punished for their sins.

In John 5: 28, we are informed by our dear Savior that both classes, saints and sinners, "shall hear his voice, and shall come forth" to receive their rewards; also in Dan. 12: 2, we have the resurrection of saints and sinners clearly and positively brought to view.

King David says, Psa. 17: 15, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." King David, can you not be satisfied before that time, if your soul is immortal, and goes to heaven at death? must you remain dissatisfied because your body lies in the grave, when your soul is in the presence of God and the Lamb, singing in sweet strains of hallelujah to the great Deliverer? Kind reader, do you think that it would be necessary to raise the body of King David, or the old shell, or prison-house, or cage, that imprisoned the soul, and then call the soul out of heaven to enter the old body, before King David could be satisfied?

But where did the soul of King David go to if it left the body at death? Was it borne on angel's wings to that locality which is said to be "beyond the bounds of time and space?" Let us understand that King David means the whole man, that lies in the grave till the resurrection, and then the whole man shall awake in the likeness of Christ's glorious body; and then all is plain and easy to be understood. Then our dear Redeemer will have the full credit of his great mission on the earth; when he raises us up at the last day, and gives us eternal life, by clothing us with immortality.

In Job 14: 14, the good old patriarch says, "all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." Where will Job wait? It must be in the grave; for we are informed by inspiration that "we shall be changed" "in a moment, . . . at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible," or be made immortal. We would ask the candid reader if this change that Job refers to is not the change that will take place at the second coming of Christ, when we are to be fashioned like Christ's glorious body? and also the same event that Job refers to, when he is to stand on the earth and see God in his flesh? But Job does not tell us that his immortal soul would be called out of heaven, from the presence of God, and come down to enter the old prison-house, in order to see God in his flesh.

But will the wicked dead be raised to see the Judge of all the earth, before they receive their punishment of "second death"? We read in the good book that "every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him . . . shall wail because of him." What! those who have been dead hundreds of years wail because of him, and yet not be raised from the dead? How can that be?

More on this subject in our next, and also the saints' inheritance. B. PERHAM.

Vernon, Vt.

For the World's Crisis.

QUERIES CONCERNING THE TWO WITNESSES.

The advocates of two literal witnesses, or two men yet to arise, ask questions like the following:—

1st. Why is France "called Sodom and Egypt?" It is not in a literal sense, but it "IS SPIRITUALLY CALLED," not "that great city," but a "street" of it, or a department of it, because of its Sodom-like character and Egyptian darkness in a moral sense. But if the two witnesses are yet to appear, as two literal men, Jerusalem cannot be the place where they are to be slain, for that is the place "where our Lord was crucified" literally—not "spiritually"

2nd. Why is France called the city "where also our Lord was crucified"? It is not in a literal sense, but "spiritually" it is styled a street of "that great city," or one department of the vast Papal domain where Christ has been crucified, spiritually, in the persons of his saints.

3rd. If Christ was only figuratively crucified in France, has he not also been thus crucified in various localities? Yes, in the various streets of this "great city," of which France was only one "street"

4th. Is not Jerusalem called "Sodom and Egypt"? Figuratively it is once called Sodom, but never "Sodom and Egypt", but if it were, that would not prevent another corrupt power from being entitled to the same name, to set forth its character, any more than the Roman Dragon could be deprived of the name of Satan, to indicate its character (Rev 12: 9), because that name had once been figuratively applied to Peter—"Get thee behind me, Satan."

5th. If the two witnesses symbolize the two testaments, why not a larger number, seeing they contain many books? One testament, or covenant, was given in the old dispensation, and the other was given in the new;—the one being the old dispensation witness from God, comprising all the revelations then given, and the other being the new dispensation witness from God, comprising the revelations given in this new dispensation, one witness for each dispensation making two 6th Have the two testaments turned waters to blood, and breathed out fire, etc.? Not literally, for they are only symbolic witnesses. They have predicted various scenes of bloodshed, and fiery judgments, and though they were clad in "sackcloth," those that "hurt them" experienced these judgments, "as oft as they" denounced them.

7th. Have the two testaments "finished their testimony"? Their testimony in a sackcloth state was finished A D. 1793, then they were slain, remained in this condition three and a half prophetic days, and then revived.

8th. If their testimony was finished as early as 1793, why are they now speaking in all tongues? Because their sackcloth and slaughtered condition is in the past, and they are now in their elevated state

9th. Did the spirit of life ever leave the two testaments? Certainly, in a figurative sense, otherwise they could not, as symbolic witnesses, been symbolically "killed."

10th. If this prophecy has been fulfilled, why do not all understand it alike? Answer Why are not all other symbolic prophecies understood alike by all, as for instance, the seals, the trumpets, the vials, the Dragon, the Leopard Beast with its heads and horns, the two-horned beast, the scarlet beast, etc.? Some speculate in trying to change symbols into literalities, and do not find the prophetic key. Thus they are confused, and also confuse others. WM. SHELDON.

For the World's Crisis.

RESPECT OF PERSONS.

"Then Peter opened his mouth and said, of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons."—ACTS 10: 34.

Fashionable society may close its doors to all but a favored few, but the LORD accepts not the person of a prince, any more than the person of the poor man "in vile raiment." Yet it seems evident that there is a class who are more highly favored than all others; but it is not on account of their standing, position, or influence among men. And probably they are not more wise or pure in their own eyes than other men. But the ground of their acceptance is their humility; for we read that He "hath respect unto the humble." Some poor souls are seeking for some saint or faithful one to pray for them. This is right and proper; but remember that you can get just as near to the LORD as any one else can. The blood of JESUS has opened a way for you, however weak or sinful you may have been, and you may come boldly to the throne of grace, and present all your desires in that all-prevailing NAME. All you have to do is to repent and forsake your sins, and you shall find mercy. You may not be a welcome guest in the mansions of the proud and wicked rich men of this world; but you may have a mansion as much better than theirs, as paradise is better than this cold world, cursed and desolated by sin. Our highest thoughts fall far short of the glorious reality of our future home.

What are all the joys of this vain world, in comparison to those in store for us? De- [illegible] poor outcasts, who have no home here, may come, and find an eternal home amid the bright bowers of Eden, and be accepted not only by all the dwellers in that blest land, but by the King also. This glorious prospect gives us joy. We are happy now in the enjoyment of the love of God and his people; and our happiness is increased a hundred fold by the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him, to sin no more and never again feel sorrow or pain.

Sutton, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

ITS FOUNDATION.

The following advertisement, by my order, appeared in the Springfield Republican of Feb. 3d:—

"Fifty dollars will be given for any one statement in the Bible that man is immortal, or one from which it is inferable."

I have so far received six, and answered five letters, all but one quoting some Scripture, which I propose to exhibit, that the household of faith may see what a foundation immortal-soulism stands on.

No. 1. "1 Tim. 6: 9. Rom. 2: 7. 1 Cor. 15: 53. 2 Tim. 1: 10. H. O. W."

No. 2. "1 Thess. 4: 16, 18. Should like to know whether you find the statement satisfactory. A plain text is 1 Cor. 15: 54."

No. 3. "I have therefore devoted a short time to the examination of a few passages, some of which I think speak definitely upon that point, from others of which it is only inferable. 1 Cor. 15: 51, 54. Rom. 2: 7. 2 Tim. 1: 10. From the rest it is only inferable. Heb. 5: 9 and 9: 12. 1 Pet. 5: 10 f. c. John 3: 15, and 10 28. 1 Tim. 6: 12. 1 John 2: 25. S. T. F."

No. 4. "If you are skeptical on the subject you cannot believe the Bible, and if so, why do you care for proof drawn from it? I send you several texts, any one of which must be positive proof to any rational and reasonable believer in the truth of the Bible that man is immortal. Dan. 12: 2. Matt. 25 46. 1 Cor. 15, 53, 54. L. S. H."

No. 5. "But one of two things is certain, you must admit that man is immortal, or you must disbelieve the Bible. I refer you to the whole of the 15th of 1 Corinthians, or from the 50th verse through; and if it does not show the immortality of man, I would ask you what it shows. C. H."

No 6 had no date or address, but was mailed at Chicopee, Mass, Feb. 3d "Can't you mind your business, and let the Bible alone? You haven't $50 in your pocket, and if you have you wont gain anything by what you call for. Fools taught any time 'gratis' W. Y. N."

I have no means of knowing who the last writer is. Fortunate for us that the days of the Inquisition are past!

DANIEL D. CHAFFEE.

South Wilbraham, Mass.

NEVER SCOLD.—A child or adult takes contradiction or advice much more cheerfully if kindly given, but if violently administered he resists, though it be well founded. Hearts, like flowers, are open to the softly-falling dew, but close up while the violent storm rages.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the World's Crisis.

ABOUT DARKNESS.

A WORD TO OUR LITTLE READERS.

Light cannot dwell with darkness,
They cannot be agreed."

Dark, little folks, dark? Well, suppose it is dark as Egypt, can't God see in the dark, even darkness that can be felt, see right through every nook and corner of your heart? To be sure he can, there is not a thought escapes his omniscient eye. He knows your inmost soul. What—sin in the dark, because it is dark? Dare you, little folks or great folks? You may escape the eye of man, but God's eye never. His eyes go to and fro everywhere with lightning flash!

Sin anywhere, on your bed, in the secret chamber,—sin where you will,—little sins or great sins, sins of the flesh or the spirit, thought, word or deed be sure they find you out. Some little folks, and some great folks, sin in the dark, under cover of night, "loving darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." "The murderer rising with the light, killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as the thief."

Hark again: "The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying, no eye shall see me—and disguiseth his face." "In darkness they dig through houses which they have marked for themselves, in the daytime: they know not the light." "Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their council from the Lord, and their works are in the dark. . . . for they say, the Lord seeth us not." Remember, friends, there is not a word in our tongue but that the Lord knows it altogether. Says the Psalmist: "Whither shall I go from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea: even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, surely the darkness shall cover me: even the night shall be light about me: Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee, but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to thee." See Psalm 130. Oh! what a fearful thing to sin against such a God.

Furthermore remember, aside from the shame, guilt, and wretchedness here, on account of our sins, there's a fearful judgment awaiting every sinner. Every one, great and small, must soon stand before the judgment seat of Christ; where every one must give account to God for the deeds done in the body, whether good or evil. There, at the great day, all our secret sins,—sins of the deepest dye, even the works of darkness of which it is a shame to speak,—will be spread out to the open gaze of an assembled universe.

"Could we, on morning's swiftest wings,
Fly through the trackless air,
Or dive beneath deep ocean's springs,
Thy presence would be there.
In vain may guilt attempt to fly,
Concealed by darkest night,
One glance from thy all-piercing eye,
Can bring it all to light.
Search thou our hearts, and there destroy
[illegible]
And fit us for those realms of joy,
[illegible]"

D. F. NEWTON.

AGAINST CALLING PEOPLE "OLD."

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE, AND OTHERS WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

"The old man," "the old woman," "old Wilson," "old Robson,"—that is the way in which many people choose to speak of those who are no longer young. Again, men will call their wives, and newly married men, their young wives, "my old woman." Boys, too, are addicted to calling their fathers and mothers, "our old man," and "the old woman." Now this is all very wrong, and what neither children nor upgrown people will be guilty of, who are well taught and well disposed.

Children, to begin with, owe other treatment to their parents than that of speaking of them in a contemptuous manner. "Honor thy father and thy mother." Calling them old, even if they are three score years and ten, is not honoring them; it is speaking of them as if you did not think much about them, thought lightly of them, did not much care about them—old and worthless; whereas, you are likely very much in their debt, for their kindness to you, and care, ever since you were born. It shows a want of thought, a want of feeling, a hardness of heart, which promises anything but good for you as you grow up. If you, while young, can be in the receipt of blessings from your parents—which no money could buy—and you have not the feeling to make you speak of them with love and reverence; nor the sense, nor the shame to try to make you hide your want of good feeling, you are surely in the way which is broad, and leadeth downward to misery.

And even if your parents are not so good as they might be, that is a matter for you to hide, and be sorry for in secret, rather than to seem as if you were willing that everybody should know it, by your calling them "old."

When one hears a young man, newly married, calling his young wife, "my old woman," it is not a good sign. If your wife is a good one, you ought not to speak of her so, hardly in jest, even. You ought to call her by her name, as "Mrs. Wilson," or Mrs Robinson;" or, if you feel as though that sounded rather too fine, say, "my wife," or "my Mary." You ought to be considerate and tender of your wife's feelings, for she is worth it; and it will be sure to pay you in the long run.

There are some men—not a few, indeed—who seem as though they were ashamed to speak of their wives as if they respected and loved them. Now, these feelings of love and esteem are not a matter to make a parade of in the market place, yet to respect and love a good wife, is one of the most fitting and proper things in the world, and you need not be ashamed who knows it. You may safely venture to speak of your wife as if you really thought a great deal of her, and nobody, whose good opinion is worth anything, will think worse of you for it.

And if your wife is not a good one, or only a sort of a second or third rate one, calling her "old" will not help to mend her. Call her "old," and keep at it, and she will be in great danger of coming to feel "old." "Yes, I'm old, and good for nothing; it's no use for me trying to be any thing." That is how she will feel, and your calling her "old," will help to kill out, if possible, whatever good may be in her, and she may get old and good for nothing sure enough, much quicker than will be good for either you or your children.

And then to be letting everybody know that you are such a simpleton as to have got a bad wife, or one that is not a very good one, by always speaking lightly of her, as "my old woman," is not for your own credit. It would be better to hide it, say nothing about it, and set to work and see if you can not make your wife better by kind treatment Who knows but that you might so improve her, that you might, at length, with propriety, speak of her to others in a respectful manner

And then as to those people who cannot find it in their hearts to speak of any body scarcely, without calling them "old," you ought to learn better. If you knew how well all such talk is understood by well-informed and well-behaved people, you would be more sparing of it. It is a mark of ill-breeding—a way which low-bred people take of speaking of their betters, under the notion, that by speaking contemptuously of others they give themselves a lift, and that there is something about it rather smart; but it is a mistake. You cannot lift yourselves up into respectability in any such way; neither is it smart, or clever. It is bad manners; and bad manners means a badly furnished head, and not a very good heart.

Those people who are old, have no need to be thus reminded of it; nor yet those who are approaching old age. Let them feel young as long as they can. If the feeling of oldness and worthlessness never comes upon them, it will be all the better. "Grey hairs are a crown of glory, if found in the way of righteousness." And if not found in the way of righteousness," yet, if the owners of those grey hairs are so much the care of the great and good God, as to be still living with us, that alone is enough to entitle them to kind and respectful treatment.—Brantford Expositor.

KEEP THEM OUT.—"I don't want to hear naughty words," said a little boy.

"It's no matter," said another boy, "what Joe Town says; it is in one ear, and out of the other."

"No," rejoined the little boy, "the worst of it is, when naughty words get in, they stick, so I mean to keep them out."

That is right; keep them out; for it is hard work to turn them out when they once get in.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance	$2 50 a year.
If not paid within six months.	$3 00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address	$5 60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address	$10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.

CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY AND PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE

Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM:

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS:

Payable always in advance.

[illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

WAVES OF SORROW.

"All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me."—Ps. 42: 7.

As mariners [illegible] when winds arise,
And roll her billows inland one by one,
So my sad soul, beneath the darkening skies,
And dashing waves of sorrow, weeps alone.

I thought my sea was calm, my favored bark
Seemed to be wafted by propitious gales,
But all at once my heavens grew strangely dark,
And storm's sure portents struck the expanded sails.

I trembled at its coming, and I prayed
My God to guide me on the heaving sea;
I know he will, I do not feel afraid,
Though all the surging billows break o'er me.

I saw a brother first drink in the waves
Of fell mortality, so dark and chill,
I've left him sleeping in the place of graves,
And high the storm is raging round me still.

Another form whose heart to mine united,
Took all its joy or sorrow as her own,
Is wasting, and the hands and hearts we plighted,
Must soon be severed, and I left alone.

Yet not alone, my Father's arms around me,
When earthly friends go down, are folded still;
His eye is on me, and he chooseth for me
The way that's best, albeit good or ill.

And after every storm there comes a calm,
And quiet havens border every sea;
So faith transcending every rude alarm,
Speaks quiet rest and peace at last for me.

Rest with the loved ones past this state of sadness,
Sorrow, pain, death and evil gone,
Peace where the hills shall smile in endless gladness,
Tinged with the light of the unchanging morn.

JAS. A. LIBBY.

My wife's sick room, West Poland, Me., March, 1866.

For the World's Crisis.

THE FREEDMEN'S MISSION.

LETTER FROM BRO. LESLIE.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Again in Tennessee, and now, perhaps, its most corrupt and wicked city (Memphis.)

We arrived here on Monday, the 5th inst., after a journey of six days and nights. We came by the way of St. Louis, and there, providentially, met Bro. Himes, on his way back from Memphis. We were truly glad to meet him and learn the prospects for our mission in Tennessee. It was our intention to stop a few days in St. Louis, and make a report of the mission there; but as we found Bro Himes on the ground and prepared to report the condition of things, we tarried but a few hours, taking the next steamer for Memphis, which started at 4 o'clock P. M., on Friday the 2nd inst.

Our passage down the Mississippi was not a very pleasant one, the weather being cool, and the wind blowing fresh and chilly all the way. This prevented us from going much on deck, confining us to the cabin most of the time. We therefore paid but little attention to the scenery (if so it may be called) along this king of rivers. I took a very severe cold on the passage down, which nearly resulted in an inflammation of the lungs; but, by God's blessing in the use of means, I am nearly well again.

Sr Martha S Butler, of Connecticut, who joined me at Bridgeport, was very much exhausted by the journey, but has nearly recovered, and is ready to enter upon the work here, as it may present itself. She will prove, I think, a true missionary, and one whom the Board will be glad they sent out.

We are now boarding in the family of Dr J. C. Bywater, who himself has been for many years a firm believer in the near coming of our Lord, and preached it faithfully until his health became impaired, and he was obliged to leave the work. He, however, still preaches whenever and wherever he can. Two of his daughters, Misses Carrie and Sarah, are teaching the colored school here, established by Bro. Himes. This school, although yet small, is steadily increasing in interest, and I trust may be continued. Its location, however, is not so favorable as I would like, the school being in the midst of or near other schools which have been longer established, and have therefore the advantage of being better known. The school was located here for the reason that no other house could then be found in which to hold it. Through the untiring efforts of these two faithful teachers, it has made headway in the midst of the surrounding schools; and, what is most satisfactory, it has called in and is educating those who did not attend any school.

In connection with the day school is an evening school, for both children and adults. It would gladden the hearts of our friends could they see the interest that is taken and the progress which is made by those who attend. Such earnestness to learn is truly inspiring to those who teach. I never witnessed more rapid progress in learning than is here made.

Connected with these schools is a Sabbath school, which, under God's care and by his blessing, will in a short time result in great good. The seed we sow here will not be lost. Teaching the members of the school, as we do, the pure word of God, and to live a new life, in view of the judgment at hand, our instructions will be blessed in the preparation of some for the kingdom of Christ when it appears. This people, young and old, want a knowledge of the Bible; especially those who are learning to read. It is the lack of a knowledge of the Bible which produces so much fanaticism and extreme physical excitement among them. Wherever ignorance of God's word exists among a religious people, there will be seen all that is found here. These demonstrations, thought by them to be religious, will become less, and disappear only when the people are well instructed in the Scriptures.

We have no place yet for public worship; the hall which we occupy for the school during the week being used on the Sabbath by the society that owns it. We, however, have it for our Sunday school in the morning at nine o'clock.

There is an open door and a wide field here, so far as it pertains to numbers, who need and desire instruction in all things relating to the present and future life. There is no doubt in regard to our gaining access to the people whom we came here to benefit; but it can be done only through a certain course, pursued with wisdom and patience on our part. "Wise as serpents and harmless as doves," is our motto, and it must be acted upon here. We must not be simply teachers; we must be missionaries, and that in the true sense of the word; going among and identifying ourselves with these poor ones for whom Christ died, and whose blood will be found upon our garments if we do not do something more than teach them to read. There are many teachers here in this dark land, but few missionaries. There are hundreds here teaching, who never get the confidence of the colored people, for the reason that they refuse to associate with them out of the school-room. The work of [illegible] is but a partial one, the most important portion being left undone. Our success, therefore, through the wisdom given us by God, must come from hard and continued labor, with his blessing added to all that we may do.

There are two sections of the city now unoccupied by any society or mission, either of which we can enter, with every prospect of doing all the good we desire; but the first thing to be obtained in either is a building, to be used as a Chapel for religious worship on the Sabbath, for Sunday schools and prayer meetings, and day and evening schools through the week. We are praying, hoping and laboring to obtain, in one or the other of these fields, a building of some kind for the above purposes. If we can secure such a place, we shall at once enter upon our work. But, if we fail to do this, we shall have to wait, until the friends of Christ at the North shall furnish the means with which to build a Chapel. This could be done very easily, if our brethren and sisters would set about it. Let each one give one dollar for this object, and enough will be furnished at once to secure here a place where the glorious truths which God has given us may be proclaimed to hundreds who would otherwise never hear them. May God put it into the hearts of those who are looking for the Savior thus to do, and God's blessing will rest upon them.

Pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, for we have here a hard field in which to labor. No harder one, it seems to us, has ever fallen to the lot of God's servants to occupy. Nearly all here are, in some manner, against us. Hatred and prejudice meet us on every hand, and all that Satan can do he will do to prevent us from accomplishing the work which God and you have sent us here to do. We depend much upon your prayers and assistance. What can we do here without them, helpless as we are, and in the midst of enemies? Do not forget us! Remember that we are laboring to publish here, in this unfriendly place, the same glad tidings which have gladdened your hearts, and which you love still so much to hear. We feel with you that time is short, and what we do here must be done quickly. We are anxious to do all we can, but we can do but little without your help and God's blessing. The latter we feel sure of, for we shall live so as to secure it. We have had it thus far, and it is still with us.

Sunday last, I spoke to a large congregation of colored people in one of the Methodist churches, on the work of redemption, from Gen. 3: 14, 15; Rev. 19: 1, 6, 9; showing, 1. That God's great work of redemption through Christ was not the work of a day or an age, nor a single act; but the work of ages, and a series of acts, with periods of time intervening. 2. That by no one of these great acts of redemption could man be saved, but by them all. 3. That the work of redemption was not yet finished, Christ being yet engaged in it as our great High Priest. 4. That we are near the closing up of this great work,—one more act remaining,—the laying aside of his priestly robes, and putting on his royal apparel, coming again the King of the whole earth, raising the dead, changing the living saints, destroying the kingdoms of the world, and giving the earth to those who are then redeemed by this last act in the great work of redemption.

The truth took effect, and many acknowledged that they had received much light. God bless it to them. A door will be opened to me here, I fully believe; and, as it is opened, I shall, in God's strength, enter.

In earnest, I. I. LESLIE.

Memphis, Tenn., Mar. 10th, 1866.

For the World's Crisis.

TRIP TO IOWA.

(Concluded.)

BRO GRANT:—My last hasty sketch left me at Boylan's Grove, in the midst of very unpleasant, rainy weather; but the people, though scattering, came out well, and listened attentively to the truth; but my heart was sad, as I gave them my last address. O how solemn I felt at parting, and how intensely did I pray that these dear people might meet me in the better land.

Friday, Jan. 12th. Eld. Jaynes and wife took me to Great Bend, a village on the Shell Rock river. I had an appointment out to preach that evening in Marble Rock village, which lies upon the other side of the Shell Rock river; but the late rains had swollen the river and broken up much of the ice on the margin, so that we could not cross it that night; and having done all I could do to get to my appointment, I resigned myself to circumstances, and settled down quietly for the night under the hospitable roof of Bro. and Sr. Smith. Our ride the past day had been a very unpleasant one, lying across a broad, open, unsettled prairie, and I thought, as I looked out on the wide expanse, bounded by the blue horizon, how dreadful to be lost on one of these wild prairies on a winter's night. But my friends were well acquainted with the route, and on we travelled, continually annoyed and chilled by a cold, unpleasant wind, and a number of times forced to ford the swollen waters, which to me, who was raised in an old settled country, a land of roads and bridges, is always an uncomfortable thing. I was both tired and sick this evening, and as I laid my weary head on the pillow for the night, sighed for home and its surroundings; but that, with its dear familiar faces, was many a weary mile away; many appointments must be filled, and a long reach of thinly settled country be traversed, before I could again enjoy its comforts and its rest. But I laid my cares all on Him who careth for us; and then, as ever, found him a present help in my need. Surely he is as springs in the desert, and as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

Next morning I bid farewell to Eld. Jaynes and wife, who were obliged to return. The Elder's health has been very poor, though now some better. He is faithfully laboring in this western country to win souls unto Christ. I went down this morning to the Shell Rock, hoping to be able, by some means, to cross it, and get to Floyd to my appointment this evening; but could not cross. The friends in Great Bend finding I had come, were peculiarly anxious that I should preach in that place; accordingly, I spoke there that evening to a good and attentive audience. The friends in Marble Rock, hearing I had come and was confined to the other side, procured lumber, and thereby connected the ice, which was firm in the middle of the river, with the main land, so they could cross to the meeting. I met this evening, for the first time, with Eld. Hiscox, who lives in Marble Rock. He assisted me in the exercises of the meeting. I had contracted a severe cold the previous day, and was extremely hoarse, so that I could speak but a little while, and was truly thankful, when I could proceed no further, that Eld. Hiscox was there and able to take up the thread of my discourse and complete it.

I thought it would be out of the question for me to think of speaking the next day, but the request was so urgent, I finally complied, and told them I would say what I could. Next morning being Lord's day, I spoke there again at half past ten, to a full house and an attentive audience. A wet compress, and other preparations, the night previous, had in some measure relieved my hoarseness, and I spoke to them about an hour on the query,—"Where is the promise of his coming?" Eld. Ioman, the Free-will Baptist minister of the place, was present and took part in the exercises. At the close of the meeting, he very kindly gave me some medicine to relieve my hoarseness. Eld. Cooley, the M. E. minister of Marble Rock, very courteously sent me word that he would give up his appointment that evening for me, and desired me to fill it, which was seconded by the people; accordingly, I crossed the river on the lumber and ice, and preached in Marble Rock that evening. The M. E. minister and the F. B. minister both took their seats on the stand, together with Eld. Hiscox, and took part in the exercises, while the Elder's wife sat with me. The house was crowded full of people, sitting and standing, while others left, being totally unable to get into the house. I had good liberty in speaking, and was followed by some able and pointed remarks by the Methodist minister, in favor of public speaking by females. I had, from some reason, obtained a very unfavorable opinion of Marble Rock, and almost dreaded to go there; but I must say that in no place was I more kindly received, or treated more courteously, than in this place. All this time I felt quite an anxiety about my appointments at Floyd, but, being completely bound here, consoled myself with the thought that Eld Deyo was there, and amply competent to keep up the meetings until I arrived.

Monday morning, Jan. 15th, opened upon us in the midst of quite a snow storm, but I had been delayed too long already, and must certainly be in Floyd to attend meeting that night. Accordingly, off we started in the midst of the falling snow,—Eld. Hiscox and wife with others,—quite a load of us, and struck out on the prairie for Floyd, and arrived at Father Hubbard's little before night. I suffered very much during this day's ride, but kept quiet, thinking the least said concerning that which can't be remedied is perhaps the best.

I found that the friends in Floyd had become quite alarmed concerning me, and had dispatched a fast team to Marble Rock, to see if I was there, was sick, or what was the trouble. We had taken a circuitous route, to avoid a slough, and they had taken a strait course, which resulted in our not meeting each other. I felt quite anxious about these young men, lest, blinded by the falling snow, they might get bewildered on the prairie, and be lost; but while we were eating supper they returned, having been clear through to Marble Rock, and there learning I had started, hastened back so as to be in time for the evening meeting. Then for the first time I had the pleasure of greeting Bros. Hubbard and Raymond, who had taken this unpleasant ride in the driving storm to learn the whereabouts of poor me. May God bless these young brothers of the church, and enable them to be chosen vessels,—yea, pillars in the house of God.

I had suffered considerable anxiety of mind for fear Eld Deyo might have been detained on his route as well as myself, and consequently, the appointment there not filled, and was truly thankful to God to learn that he was there, and had filled every appointment. I did not feel able to preach much that night, but talked a little, and then Elds. Hiscox and Deyo followed. I had not yet recovered from my severe cold and hoarseness, but said I would speak the next evening, whereupon the teacher said if I would speak in the morning, in the hall, school should be dismissed for that purpose. Others wanted me to speak in the evening, as some could attend then who could not in the morning. Thinking I ought not to speak but once the next day, I tried to arrange it to have one of the elders speak in the morning, while I spoke in the evening; whereupon I learned the hall could not be had in the morning, only on the condition that I spoke. I immediately told the friends to pray for me, and I would try and speak twice, which I did, thus suiting both classes, and also again on Wednesday evening, to a crowded house, at which time, after my discourse, Eld. Deyo spoke very feelingly to the audience, and made a request, when five came forward; two to be identified with the church, others to evince their determination and request prayers. Was very kindly cared for while at Floyd at the house of Bro. and Sr Lamphire.

Wednesday, took dinner at the house of Bro. and Sr. Hubbard, who showed me a photograph of a little daughter they had recently lost, which seemed the most perfect embodiment of youth, beauty and innocence, I ever saw. How hard it is that we are in the land of the enemy, who gathers our richest and choicest household treasures, and covers them up from sight in the great charnel house. But, thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through the great life-giver Jesus Christ; who, having the keys of hell and of death, will soon unlock the great charnel house, and clothe our loved and lost with immortal beauty and undying vigor.

There was quite a cloud cast over the meeting while at Floyd, in consequence of the sickness of Bro. C. Burroughs, the deacon of the church, and one of its main supporters. May God preserve his valuable life to be a comfort to his dear wife, and a blessing to the church, is my prayer.

Thursday morning, I bade farewell to Bro. J. W. Burroughs and wife, where I had passed the night previous, and in company with Bro. Smith and wife and Eld. Deyo, started for Stacyville. Eld. Deyo organized this church at Floyd in 1859, and during a meeting of six weeks immersed from forty to fifty candidates, which were added to the church. I found, in visiting the churches in Western Iowa, a unanimous voice as to the ability and efficiency of Bro. Deyo as an evangelist; and since God has put it into his heart to visit Minnesota, my prayer is that his labors may be equally blessed in that state. In consequence of the storm, I was obliged to remain in Stacyville over Sunday, where Eld. Deyo preached twice, and I [illegible].

Monday, I went on to Capt. Bennett's, near Riceville, where we were very kindly entertained. We found the Captain to be a gentlemanly, intellectual man, and his wife not only a [illegible] woman, but a [illegible] in the second coming of Christ. I spoke at their school-house that evening for thirty minutes, after which Eld. Deyo addressed the congregation, and distributed tracts.

Tuesday, I had a very long, unpleasant ride to reach Elliots. What gratitude and thanksgiving filled my heart to find myself in my old pilgrim home, under the hospitable roof of Capt. Elliot and wife, while their words of welcome seemed like music in my ear. My first inquiry was for my husband, whom I expected to meet here, and I was at first shocked to think he had not come. But upon Sr. Elliot's explaining to me the state of the roads, the delay of the stage, etc., I felt that all was right, and thanked God I was once more among familiar faces, after my long and wearisome journey amid almost entire strangers.

Next day I had the unalloyed pleasure of meeting my husband, who had been prevented from getting through the previous day, in consequence of the badness of the roads. He was heartily glad to meet Eld. Deyo, with whom he had been previously acquainted, and declared it had relieved his mind from great anxiety in regard to me, in consequence of my letter informing him in regard to his accompanying me from Floyd to Minnesota. He at once decided that the Elder must accompany us to Winona, and commence a series of meetings in our vicinity.

Thursday evening, I preached in Highland. Friday night, Jan. 26th, we arrived safely at home, finding all well. And now, as I close, I must express my heartfelt thanks for the kindness of the friends where I have traveled, in ministering to my wants,—never putting me in the cold spare bed, but providing warm and suitable lodging, conveying me cheerfully to my different places of appointment, and helping me on after a godly sort; for which may God reward them an hundred-fold in this world, and grant them in the world to come eternal life. Without this kind care, I could not possibly have sustained this constant traveling and speaking in midwinter. Having in five weeks traveled nearly four hundred miles, visited seven churches, attended the Minnesota and Iowa quarterly meetings, and preached thirty times. While I have thus tried to proclaim the near coming of Christ, through much physical weakness, in the depths of winter, I have felt amply rewarded by the apparent impulse given to the cause, and the expressed determination of God's professed ones to be faithful to the end, while to the throne of grace I would still bear the case of those who said, Pray for me.

RUTH M. ROWELL.

Winona, Jan. 27th, 1866.

CHRISTMAS ON MONDAY, AN ANCIENT PROPHECY.

In regard to the day in which the festival falls this year, the following old prophecy is of interest:—

"If Christmas day on Monday be,
A great winter that year you'll see,
And full of winds both loud and shrill,
But in the summer, truth to tell,
Stern winds shall be and strong,
Full of tempest and lasting long.
While battles, they shall multiply,
'And great plenty of beasts shall die',
He shall be found that stealeth aught—
Though thou be sick thou diest not."

For the World's Crisis.

A SERMON.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25: 46.

We will say a few words more about the unquenchable fire, and then say a few words about the resurrection of the righteous and the wicked. Will the reader please turn to Jude 7, where we are informed that "Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them . . . are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." I do not see as it made those wicked inhabitants, or their cities, immortal; and I can find no proof that the cities, or the Sodomites, are yet burning. St. Peter, in 2 Pet. 2: 6, speaks of "Sodom and Gomorrah" being turned "into ashes," and "condemned . . . with an overthrow, making them an example unto those that should live ungodly." We know that the fire from God out of heaven, burning with brimstone, must be an eternal, or unquenchable fire, but the whole account plainly shows that the inhabitants and the cities were wholly destroyed, so far as relates to their existence as cities, or inhabitants; and this plainly proves to us that the wicked will be punished with a final destruction, soul and body.

We will now look at Ezek. 20: 45–48, where "the forest of the south field" was to be destroyed with fire, that should burn up the forests, and should "not be quenched." But this does not prove that the forests were immortal, or suffered endless misery, does it? Never refer to unquenchable fire as a proof of endless misery, when the fact in the case proves utter destruction of every thing which is thrown into the fire.

We will now refer to the resurrection. It matters not to us whether the resurrection of the wicked takes place at the same time with the saints, or not; but we know that there is as much proof of the resurrection of the wicked, as there is that they will be punished for their sins.

In John 5: 28, we are informed by our dear Savior that both classes, saints and sinners, "shall hear his voice, and shall come forth" to receive their rewards; also in Dan. 12: 2, we have the resurrection of saints and sinners clearly and positively brought to view.

King David says, Psa. 17: 15, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." King David, can you not be satisfied before that time, if your soul is immortal, and goes to heaven at death? must you remain dissatisfied because your body lies in the grave, when your soul is in the presence of God and the Lamb, singing in sweet strains of hallelujah to the great Deliverer? Kind reader, do you think that it would be necessary to raise the body of King David, or the old shell, or prison-house, or cage, that imprisoned the soul, and then call the soul out of heaven to enter the old body, before King David could be satisfied?

But where did the soul of King David go to if it left the body at death? Was it borne on angel's wings to that locality which is said to be "beyond the bounds of time and space?" Let us understand that King David means the whole man, that lies in the grave till the resurrection, and that the whole man shall awake in the likeness of Christ's glorious body; and then all is plain and easy to be understood. Then our dear Redeemer will have the full credit of his great mission on the earth; when he raises us up at the last day, and gives us eternal life, by clothing us with immortality.

In Job 14: 14, the good old patriarch says, "all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." Where will Job wait? It must be in the grave; for we are informed by inspiration that "we shall be changed" "in a moment, . . . at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible," or be made immortal. We would ask the candid reader if this change that Job refers to is not the change that will take place at the second coming of Christ, when we are to be fashioned like Christ's glorious body? and also the same event that Job refers to, when he is to stand on the earth and see God in his flesh? But Job does not tell us that his immortal soul would be called out of heaven, from the presence of God, and come down to enter the old prison-house, in order to see God in his flesh.

But will the wicked dead be raised to see the Judge of all the earth, before they receive their punishment of "second death"? We read in the good book that "every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him . . . shall wail because of him." What! those who have been dead hundreds of years wail because of him, and yet not be raised from the dead? How can that be?

More on this subject in our next, and also the saints' inheritance. B. PERHAM.

Vernon, Vt.

For the World's Crisis.

QUERIES CONCERNING THE TWO WITNESSES.

The advocates of two literal witnesses, or two men yet to arise, ask questions like the following:—

1st. Why is France "called Sodom and Egypt?" It is not in a literal sense, but it "IS SPIRITUALLY CALLED," not "that great city," but a "street" of it, or a department of it, because of its Sodom-like character and Egyptian darkness in a moral sense. But if the two witnesses are yet to appear, as two literal men, Jerusalem cannot be the place where they are to be slain, for that is the place "where our Lord was crucified" literally—not "spiritually."

2nd. Why is France called the city "where also our Lord was crucified"? It is not in a literal sense, but "spiritually" it is styled a street of "that great city," or one department of the vast Papal domain where Christ has been crucified, spiritually, in the persons of his saints.

3rd. If Christ was only figuratively crucified in France, has he not also been thus crucified in various localities? Yes, in the various streets of this "great city," of which France was only one "street."

4th. Is not Jerusalem called "Sodom and Egypt"? Figuratively it is once called Sodom, but never "Sodom and Egypt", but if it were, that would not prevent another corrupt power from being entitled to the same name, to set forth its character, any more than the Roman Dragon could be deprived of the name of Satan, to indicate its character (Rev. 12: 9), because that name had once been figuratively applied to Peter—"Get thee behind me, Satan."

5th. If the two witnesses symbolize the two testaments, why not a larger number, seeing they contain many books? One testament, or covenant, was given in the old dispensation, and the other was given in the new,—the one being the old dispensation witness from God, comprising all the revelations then given, and the other being the new dispensation witness from God, comprising the revelations given in this new dispensation, one witness for each dispensation making two.

6th. Have the two testaments turned waters to blood, and breathed out fire, etc.? Not literally, for they are only symbolic witnesses. They have predicted various scenes of bloodshed, and fiery judgments, and though they were clad in "sackcloth," those that "hurt them" experienced these judgments, "as oft as they" denounced them.

7th. Have the two testaments "finished their testimony"? Their testimony in a sackcloth state was finished A. D. 1793, then they were slain, remained in this condition three and a half prophetic days, and then revived.

8th. If their testimony was finished as early as 1793, why are they now speaking in all tongues? Because their sackcloth and slaughtered condition is in the past, and they are now in their elevated state.

9th. Did the spirit of life ever leave the two testaments? Certainly, in a figurative sense, otherwise they could not, as symbolic witnesses, been symbolically "killed."

10th. If this prophecy has been fulfilled, why do not all understand it alike? Answer. Why are not all other symbolic prophecies understood alike by all, as for instance, the seals, the trumpets, the vials, the Dragon, the Leopard Beast with its heads and horns, the two-horned beast, the scarlet beast, etc.? Some speculate in trying to change symbols into literalities, and do not find the prophetic key. Thus they are confused, and also confuse others. WM. SHELDON.

For the World's Crisis.

RESPECT OF PERSONS.

"Then Peter opened his mouth and said, of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons."—ACTS 10: 34.

Fashionable society may close its doors to all but a favored few, but the LORD accepts not the person of a prince, any more than the person of the poor man "in vile raiment." Yet it seems evident that there is a class who are more highly favored than all others; but it is not on account of their standing, position, or influence among men. And probably they are not more wise or pure in their own eyes than other men. But the ground of their acceptance is their humility; for we read that HE "hath respect unto the humble." Some poor souls are seeking for some saint or faithful one to pray for them. This is right and proper; but remember that you can get just as near to the LORD as any one else can. The blood of JESUS has opened a way for you, however weak or sinful you may have been, and you may come boldly to the throne of grace, and present all your desires in that all-prevailing NAME. All you have to do is to repent and forsake your sins, and you shall find mercy. You may not be a welcome guest in the mansions of the proud and wicked rich men of this world; but you may have a mansion as much better than theirs, as paradise is better than this cold world, cursed and desolated by sin. Our highest thoughts fall far short of the glorious reality of our future home.

What are all the joys of this vain world, in comparison to those in store for us? [illegible] poor outcasts, who has no home here, may come and find an eternal home amid the bright bowers of Eden, and be accepted not only by all the dwellers in that blest land, but by the KING also. This glorious prospect gives us joy. We are happy now in the enjoyment of the love of God and his people; and our happiness is increased a hundred fold by the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him, to sin no more and never again feel sorrow or pain.

Sutton, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

ITS FOUNDATION.

The following advertisement, by my order, appeared in the Springfield Republican of Feb. 3d:—

"Fifty dollars will be given for any one statement in the Bible that man is immortal, or one from which it is inferable."

I have so far received six, and answered five letters, all but one quoting some Scripture, which I propose to exhibit, that the household of faith may see what a foundation immortal-soulism stands on.

No. 1. "1 Tim. 6: 9. Rom. 2: 7. 1 Cor. 15: 53. 2 Tim. 1: 10. H. O. W."

No. 2. "1 Thess. 4: 16, 18. Should like to know whether you find the statement satisfactory. A plain text is 1 Cor. 15: 54."

No. 3. "I have therefore devoted a short time to the examination of a few passages, some of which I think speak definitely upon that point, from others of which it is only inferable. 1 Cor. 15: 51, 54. Rom. 2: 7. 2 Tim. 1: 10. From the rest it is only inferable. Heb. 5: 9 and 9: 12. 1 Pet. 5: 10 f. c. John 3; 15, and 10: 28. 1 Tim. 6: 12. 1 John 2: 25. S. T. F."

No. 4. "If you are skeptical on the subject you cannot believe the Bible, and if so, why do you care for proof drawn from it? I send you several texts, any one of which must be positive proof to any rational and reasonable believer in the truth of the Bible that man is immortal. Dan. 12: 2. Matt. 25: 46. 1 Cor. 15; 53, 54. L. S. H."

No. 5. "But one of two things is certain, you must admit that man is immortal, or you must disbelieve the Bible. I refer you to the whole of the 15th of 1 Corinthians, or from the 50th verse through; and if it does not show the immortality of man, I would ask you what it shows. C. H."

No. 6 had no date or address, but was mailed at Chicopee, Mass., Feb. 3d. "Can't you mind your business, and let the Bible alone? You haven't $50 in your pocket, and if you have you wont gain anything by what you call for. Fools taught any time 'gratis.' W. F. N."

I have no means of knowing who the last writer is. Fortunate for us that the days of the Inquisition are past!

DANIEL D. CHAFFEE.

South Wilbraham, Mass.

NEVER SCOLD.—A child or adult takes contradiction or advice much more cheerfully if kindly given; but if violently administered he resists, though it be well founded. Hearts, like flowers, are open to the softly-falling dew, but close up while the violent storm rages.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the World's Crisis.

ABOUT DARKNESS.

A WORD TO OUR LITTLE READERS.

"Light cannot dwell with darkness,
They cannot be agreed."

Dark, little folks, dark? Well, suppose it is dark as Egypt, can't God see in the dark, even darkness that can be felt, see right through every nook and corner of your heart? To be sure he can, there is not a thought escapes his omniscient eye. He knows your inmost soul. What—sin in the dark, because it is dark? Dare you, little folks or great folks? You may escape the eye of man, but God's eye never. His eyes go to and fro everywhere with lightning flash!

Sin anywhere, on your bed, in the secret chamber,—sin where you will,—little sins or great sins, sins of the flesh or the spirit, thought, word or deed: be sure they find you out. Some little folks, and some great folks, sin in the dark, under cover of night, "loving darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." "The murderer rising with the light, killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as the thief."

Hark again: "The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying, no eye shall see me—and disguiseth his face." "In darkness they dig through houses which they have marked for themselves, in the daytime: they know not the light." "Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their council from the Lord, and their works are in the dark. . . . for they say, the Lord seeth us not." Remember, friends, there is not a word in our tongue but that the Lord knows it altogether. Says the Psalmist: "Whither shall I go from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea: even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, surely the darkness shall cover me: even the night shall be light about me: Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee, but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to thee." See Psalm 139. Oh! what a fearful thing to sin against such a God.

Furthermore remember, aside from the shame, guilt, and wretchedness here, on account of our sins, there's a fearful judgment awaiting every sinner. Every one, great and small, must soon stand before the judgment seat of Christ; where every one must give account to God for the deeds done in the body, whether good or evil. There, at the great day, all our secret sins,—sins of the deepest dye, even the works of darkness of which it is a shame to speak,—will be spread out to the open gaze of an assembled universe.

"Could we, on morning's swiftest wings,
Fly through the trackless air,
Or dive beneath deep ocean's springs,
Thy presence would be there.

In vain may guilt attempt to fly,
Concealed by darkest night;
One glance from thy all-piercing eye,
Can bring it all to light.

Search thou our hearts, and there destroy
Each secret, [illegible]
And to us thy blest [illegible]
[illegible]"

D. F. NEWTON.

AGAINST CALLING PEOPLE "OLD."

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE, AND OTHERS WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

"The old man," "the old woman," "old Wilson," "old Robson,"—that is the way in which many people choose to speak of those who are no longer young. Again, men will call their wives, and newly married men, their young wives, "my old woman." Boys, too, are addicted to calling their fathers and mothers, "our old man," and "the old woman." Now this is all very wrong, and what neither children nor upgrown people will be guilty of, who are well taught and well disposed.

Children, to begin with, owe other treatment to their parents than that of speaking of them in a contemptuous manner. "Honor thy father and thy mother." Calling them old, even if they are three score years and ten, is not honoring them; it is speaking of them as if you did not think much about them, thought lightly of them, did not much care about them—old and worthless; whereas, you are likely very much in their debt, for their kindness to you, and care, ever since you were born. It shows a want of thought, a want of feeling, a hardness of heart, which promises anything but good for you as you grow up. If you, while young, can be in the receipt of blessings from your parents—which no money could buy—and you have not the feeling to make you speak of them with love and reverence; nor the sense, nor the shame to try to make you hide your want of good feeling, you are surely in the way which is broad, and leadeth downward to misery.

And even if your parents are not so good as they might be, that is a matter for you to hide, and be sorry for in secret, rather than to seem as if you were willing that everybody should know it, by your calling them "old."

When one hears a young man, newly married, calling his young wife, "my old woman," it is not a good sign. If your wife is a good one, you ought not to speak of her so, hardly in jest, even. You ought to call her by her name, as "Mrs. Wilson," or Mrs. Robinson;" or, if you feel as though that sounded rather too fine, say, "my wife," or "my Mary." You ought to be considerate and tender of your wife's feelings, for she is worth it; and it will be sure to pay you in the long run.

There are some men—not a few, indeed—who seem as though they were ashamed to speak of their wives as if they respected and loved them. Now, these feelings of love and esteem are not a matter to make a parade of in the market place, yet to respect and love a good wife, is one of the most fitting and proper things in the world, and you need not be ashamed who knows it. You may safely venture to speak of your wife as if you really thought a great deal of her, and no body, whose good opinion is worth anything, will think worse of you for it.

And if your wife is not a good one, or only a sort of a second or third rate one, calling her "old" will not help to mend her. Call her "old," and keep at it, and she will be in great danger of coming to feel "old." "Yes I'm old, and good for nothing; it's no use for me trying to be any thing." That is how she will feel, and your calling her "old," will help to kill out, if possible, whatever good may be in her; and she may get old and good for nothing sure enough, much quicker than will be good for either you or your children.

And then to be letting everybody know that you are such a simpleton as to have got a bad wife, or one that is not a very good one, by always speaking lightly of her, as "my old woman," is not for your own credit. It would be better to hide it, say nothing about it, and set to work and see if you cannot make your wife better by kind treatment. Who knows but that you might so improve her, that you might, at length, with propriety, speak of her to others in a respectful manner.

And then as to those people who cannot find it in their hearts to speak of any body scarcely, without calling them "old," you ought to learn better. If you knew how well all such talk is understood by well-informed and well-behaved people, you would be more sparing of it. It is a mark of ill-breeding—a way which low-bred people take of speaking of their betters, under the notion, that by speaking contemptuously of others they give themselves a lift, and that there is something about it rather smart; but it is a mistake. You cannot lift yourselves up into respectability in any such way; neither is it smart, or clever. It is bad manners; and bad manners means a badly furnished head, and not a very good heart.

Those people who are old, have no need to be thus reminded of it; nor yet those who are approaching old age. Let them feel young as long as they can. If the feeling of oldness and worthlessness never comes upon them, it will be all the better. "Grey hairs are a crown of glory, if found in the way of righteousness." And if not found in the way of righteousness," yet, if the owners of those grey hairs are so much the care of the great and good God, as to be still living with us, that alone is enough to entitle them to kind and respectful treatment.—Brantford Expositor.

KEEP THEM OUT.—"I don't want to hear naughty words," said a little boy.

"It's no matter," said another boy, "what Joe Town says; it is in one ear, and out of the other."

"No," rejoined the little boy, "the worst of it is, when naughty words get in, they stick, so I mean to keep them out."

That is right; keep them out; for it is hard work to turn them out when they once get in.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance . . . . . $2.50 a year.
If not paid within six months . . . . $3.00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address . . . . $5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address $10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.

CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.
Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed, and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to
MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE
Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM:

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS:

Payable always in advance.

[illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 549. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 4.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL, JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN, D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth, especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart, the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE.

TUNE.—"Tramp! tramp! tramp!"

All the righteous saints of yore
Soon will rise to fall no more;
What a mighty, mighty number there will be,
Those who died for God's own truth,
In old age and smiling youth,—
How they'll shout their great Deliverer to see.

CHORUS.

Shout! shout! shout! the day is coming,
Cheer up, pilgrims, it will come;
For the Savior of the world,
With his banner wide unfurled,
Comes to sit upon his everlasting throne.

From beneath the ocean's waves,
From the dark and dreary caves,
God's remembered ones will all be gathered home,
From the burning deserts' sand,
From the icy mountains cold,—
Hallelujah! see the sleeping martyrs come.

How the trumpet tones will ring
At the coming of our King,
With ten thousand of his angels in full view,
Hear them chant the heavenly strain,—
"Jesus now has come again!"
Oh, we long, we long to join the anthem too!

J. N. BERRY.

For the World's Crisis.

THE MILLENNIUM.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

(Concluded.)

Mr Barnes says, "A rapid view is taken of the scenes of earth's history, and the general results only are stated. There may be long intervening periods between the events thus thrown together in the final grouping. We are not to suppose, necessarily, that these events will succeed each other immediately, or that they will be of short duration. Between these events thus hastily sketched, there may be long intervals that are not described, and whose general character is scarcely ever glanced at.

"This may be illustrated by the view we have in looking at a landscape. When one is placed in a favorable situation he can mark distinctly the order of the objects in it—the succession—the grouping. He can tell what objects appear to be near to each other, and apparently in juxtaposition. But there are objects which, in such a vision, the eye cannot take in, and which would not be exhibited by any description which might be given of the view taken. Hills, in the distant view, may seem to rise just back of another, and to the eye they may seem to constitute parts of the same mountain, and yet between them there may be deep and fertile vales, smiling villages, running streams, beautiful gardens and waterfalls, which the eye cannot take in, and the extent of what it may be wholly impossible to conjecture, and a description of the whole scene, as it appears to the observer, would convey no idea of the actual extent of the intervals.

"So it is with the prophecies. Between the events which are to occur hereafter, as seen in vision, there may be long intervals, but the length of those intervals the prophet may have left us no means of determining."

Now apply this apt and truthful illustration to our present subject. A reign of Christ—peaceful, glorious, triumphant—has been predicted by the prophets. It is interspersed with various other prophecies, many of them having no connection with this subject. And so also with the prophecies of our Savior. "A rapid view is taken of the closing scenes of earth's history, and the general results only are stated." One event appears to be in juxtaposition with another, like the distant hills in the landscape, and yet between those events there may be long intervals, and various objects, of which we can discern nothing. So, when the resurrection is spoken of in a general manner, we might conclude that the resurrection of the just and the unjust, were in close proximity. But the 20th of Revelation reveals to us not only the fact of a Millennium, but it locates that Millennium between the two resurrections, and he who denies this fact ought, to be consistent, to deny also the thousand years' reign. But have we not more evidence to confirm the priority of the saints in the resurrection than this chapter? We have, as we shall now show.

In our Lord's reply to the Sadducees, touching the question asked respecting the woman who had seven husbands, as given by Matthew and Mark, we might suppose that all who were raised from the dead were as the angels of God in heaven. But Luke presents the matter more distinctly. "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection."

Now if all are raised together, what force is there in the language, "they that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection?" Here is a specific resurrection, in which worthy ones only will have a part; they are to obtain a world [illegible] no more, being children of THE resurrection, and are the children of God. This must certainly be the "first resurrection," spoken of in Revelation 20th, of whom it is said they are "blessed and holy," for on them the "second death" will have no power. It does have power on the "rest of the dead," for they are consigned to the lake of fire, there to have their part, which is the second death. Thus there is a harmony in this language of Christ and of the Revelator.

On another occasion Jesus told his disciples when they made a feast, to call in the poor, the maimed, the halt, and the blind, "for they," said he, "cannot recompense thee, but thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Here a specific resurrection is plainly alluded to.

In the argument of Paul touching the resurrection (1 Cor. 15), the priority of the resurrection of the saints is taught. After stating that as all die by Adam, so will all be made alive by Christ, he adds, "But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruit; afterward, they that are Christ's at his coming." If all are then to be raised, why speak of an "order" to the resurrection, and why say those that are Christ's will be raised at his coming? He goes on to describe the resurrection in language which cannot be applicable to any but the righteous dead. They are raised in power, glory and incorruption, bearing the image of the heavenly Adam, as they have formerly borne the image of the earthly—their vile bodies are fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body, such as was revealed to John on the isle.

Paul labored that "if by any means he might attain unto the resurrection from the dead." He had previously declared his faith before a council, in the resurrection of the just and the unjust, hence there was no effort needed to secure a resurrection, but there was a specific resurrection had in view—"If possible I may attain to the RESURRECTION from among the DEAD."—Emphatic Diaglott. He desired to have a precedence in the resurrection—to have part in the "first resurrection." In Heb. 11: 35 we are told of some who would not accept of deliverance from torture, because they desired "to obtain a better resurrection."

In view of the facts we have presented, derived from the plain testimony of Christ and his apostles, without metaphorical adorning, we cannot agree with Dr Barnes in the remark that "there is not elsewhere in the New Testament a hint or intimation that would lead us to suppose that the righteous are to be raised in this manner," i. e., before the rest of the dead.

We will now notice what he says respecting the "souls" who live and reign. "By no possible construction can the word translated souls, mean bodies." And yet men certainly as well versed in the original language as Dr Barnes, have rendered it "persons." Prof. Whiting, the Emphatic Diaglott, and Prof. Stuart, give it this rendering. Of Stuart he says, "To this account of the 'literalists,' in interpreting the passage before us, there should be added Prof. Stuart, who, in general, is as far as possible from sympathizing with this class of writers." We cannot then accuse him of being biased by his creed. Says Stuart, "There would seem to remain, therefore, only one meaning which can consistently be given to (they lived), viz., that they (the martyrs who renounced the beast) are now restored to life, viz., such life as implies the revivication of the body. Not to a union of the soul with a gross, material body, indeed, but with such an one as the saints in general will have at the final resurrection—a spiritual body. 1 Cor. 15: 44. In no other way can this resurrection be ranked as correlate with the second resurrection named in the sequel."

Again. "I do not see how, on the ground of exegesis, we can fairly avoid the conclusion that John has taught in the passage before us, that there will be a resurrection of the martyr-saints at the commencement of the period after Satan shall have been shut up in the dungeon of the great abyss." Dr. Barnes says, after quoting the above, "It is not a little remarkable that a scholar so accurate as Prof. Stuart is, and one, too, who has so little sympathy with the doctrines connected with a literal reign of Christ on the earth, should have put the sanction of his name to perhaps the most objectionable of all the dogmas connected with this view—the opinion that the bodies of the saints will be raised up at the beginning of the Millennial period." Wonderful, truly, that he should be candid and honest enough to make a confession of the truth, even though it might seem to countenance views with which he had no sympathy! Such men, no doubt, are rare. To our mind, however, it would seem "remarkable that a scholar so accurate as Prof. Stuart" should come to any other conclusion, for, as he says, there is but "one meaning which can be consistently given to the word translated 'they lived,' viz., that they were now restored to life, such life as implied the revivication of the body. In no other way can this resurrection be correlate with the second resurrection named in the sequel." The very language, "the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished," shows clearly that a part of the dead did live again at the commencement of the thousand years.

If Dr. Barnes will not accept Prof. Stuart's view of this, sustained, as he himself admits, "by Papias, Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Tertullian, and others among the christian fathers, and, it need not be said, is held by many modern expositors of the Bible, and by large numbers of christian ministers of high standing, and other christians," will he accept of the angel's testimony to Daniel, touching this matter of the resurrection? He testifies that when Michael stands up, the great Prince,—which nearly all expositors understand to be Jesus Christ [illegible] in the book of life are delivered, and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake."

Now Dr. Barnes does not believe that the souls of the martyrs sleep in the dust of the earth, hence he must admit that this is a literal resurrection of their bodies. It is true that the language seems to imply a general resurrection, but Prof. Bush, and other eminent critics, render it thus: "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; these to everlasting life, those unto shame and everlasting contempt,"—admitting that it teaches two resurrections. The illustration of Dr. Barnes respecting the distant hills seeming to be in juxtaposition, will apply here. The length of time intervening is not given.

The very fact that this is the first resurrection proves it to be a reliving of a class once dead—fallen down in death. "Resurrectio, resurgo; re and surgo, to rise. A rising again; chiefly the revival of the dead of the human race, and their return from the grave, particularly at the general judgment."—Webster. We confess that we are not ashamed to be found in the company of the early fathers and the eminent christian writers, ministers, and scholars of the present day, who have so understood this passage.

One other objection of Dr. Barnes we will notice, i. e., the literal reign of Christ on earth during this period. He adopts Prof. Stuart's language on this point; for while the Professor honestly translates the passage, and gives it its true sense, he does not believe that the raised saints will reign on the earth, but are taken up to heaven. He says "There is not a word of Christ's descent to the earth at the beginning of the Millennium." Neither is there a word of the saints being taken up to heaven, there to reign; yet, without this evidence, he believes it to be so. Now if we can produce testimony to show that they will reign on the earth, it ought to outweigh his unsustained opinion.

1. The angel comes down from heaven. This, we think, must be Michael, the archangel.

2. When Gog and Magog are gathered under Satan their leader to battle, they come up on the breadth of the earth, and encompass the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city, and fire comes down from heaven and devours them. Hence we may reasonably suppose that the saints and the city are on the earth. John saw the city come down from God out of heaven, and heard a voice say, "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men," etc. Thus Watts, if I mistake not, expresses it—

"From the third heaven, where God resides,
That happy, holy place,
The New Jerusalem comes down,
Adorned with shining grace."

3. By reference to Rev. 5: 10, we find the redeemed saying, "Thou hast made us kings and priests unto God, and we shall reign on the earth."

In Dan. 7: 27, we learn that "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the saints of the Most High." The stone cut out of the mountain does not roll through the earth, gradually subduing all things by its power; but when the metallic image is all complete, when the golden age has been succeeded by the silver, the silver by the brass, the brass by the iron, the iron by the mixed state of iron and clay, and out of this weakened condition ten toes have proceeded,—then in the days of these, the stone smites the image upon the feet, and then the gold, silver, brass, iron and clay are broken to pieces together, and the wind carries them away, so that no place is found for them. Then the stone becomes a great mountain, and fills the whole earth. Its interpretation is that the image symbolizes the four universal kingdoms of earth, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome. Rome, in its two divisions, eastern and western, are represented by the legs of iron. Its becoming weakened in the last stage of its rule, is represented by the iron and clay. Its last divisions into ten petty kingdoms, are represented by the toes. In the days of these kings (the ten), the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, a kingdom which shall not be left to another people (i. e., it shall not be succeeded by other kingdoms, as were those before it); but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever. Dan. 2.

Now this presents us in miniature all the kingdoms which were to have sway from Daniel's time to the establishment of the everlasting kingdom. Christ's kingdom, after demolishing all earthly kingdoms, is to fill the whole earth. They will not be converted, but consumed. "They (the angels) shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and they that do iniquity, and shall cast them into a furnace of fire." Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Then will the earth be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Then shall the whole earth be full of his glory, as declared unto Moses.

The curse removed, "instead of the thorn shall come up the fir-tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree"; "the wilderness shall be like Eden, and the desert like the garden of the Lord," or Paradise. "Violence shall no more be heard in the land; wasting nor destruction within its borders; but they shall call its walls Salvation, and its gates Praise. The sun shall no more be its light by day, nor for brightness shall the moon give her light; for the Lord God shall be its everlasting light and glory."—Isa. 60: 18. "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof."—Rev. 21: 22, 23.

What Isaiah saw in vision, far in the distant future, John beholds in vision as already realized. Says Isaiah, "Thy gates shall be [illegible] the forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought, for the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish. Thy people shall be all righteous, and they shall inherit the land forever." John sees the gates of the New Jerusalem open continually, for there is no night there, and the nations of them that are saved, with their kings, do bring their glory and honor into it, and there is nothing enters into it that is unholy, only those whose names are written in the book of life. "The Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign for ever and ever."—Rev. 21: 5. Then the beasts will be as when they first came forth from the hand of their Creator, and the little child shall lead them.

How glorious is the Millennium age! Christ will reign in person on David's throne at Mt. Zion, with glorified saints, on a regenerated earth, filled with knowledge and divine glory. The New Jerusalem is the capital, with its jasper walls, garnished with all manner of precious stones, its gates of pearl, its streets of gold, its trees of life, and water of life; and the glory of God and the Lamb its everlasting light. This is the heavenly country for which the patriarchs looked, the city with foundations, whose builder and maker is God. O, to be there with the redeemed for ever!

THE MEANING OF JOHN 2: 7.

"Many deceivers are gone forth into the world, they who do not confess Jesus Christ coming in the flesh. This is the DECEIVER AND THE ANTICHRIST."

It must be acknowledged by every Greek scholar that this is the natural and obvious translation of the original. Æcumenius, Bishop of Tricca, in Thrace, whose native tongue was Greek, and who wrote in Greek, thus explains it. "By the use," says he, "of the word erkomenon, and not elthonta, the Scripture plainly shows that it is speaking of those who set at nought the second coming of the Lord." This testimony is the more remarkable as Æcumenius lived during the emphatically dark ages; and if this translation and explanation is to be set aside, it must be for some good reason, and not merely by such contemptuous and dogmatic assertions as that of Dean Alford, who simply says of it that it is "beside the mark"! Let us investigate, then, all the possible meanings of the word erkomenon, and see if there is any other which will suit this passage. But, let us first observe, that any translation must necessarily be wrong which makes erkomenon equivalent to either elthonta or eleeluthota. This would be completely destroying all the rules of grammar and scholarship. Our authorized translation renders it "is come in the flesh", but this is only one of the numerous places in which it is seriously defective and deceptive; and I may say, by the way, that, undoubtedly excellent as it was for the time at which it was made, to allow it still to remain as it is at the present time with all its defects, excusable as they were at the time it was made, reflects the deepest discredit on those in authority, whose duty it is to give us as true a representation as possible of the original Scriptures. What, then, are all the possible meanings of the word erkomenon? It may mean,—1. In the act of coming. 2. In the habit of coming. 3. About to come—erkomai frequently having a future meaning like eimi, and if used with a verb in the past tense either expressed or implied, it may mean,—4. Who was in the act of coming. 5. Who was in the habit of coming. 6. Who was to come or about to come, or—7. It is maintained by Alford that without any express and particular reference to time, it may mean, who cometh, or whose characteristic is that He cometh, in a kind of adjective sense, losing its force as a present participle.

Let us now examine each of these meanings separately, and see which of them are admissible.

1. 'Who confess not Jesus Christ in the act of coming in the flesh,' would be plainly inadmissible at the time John was writing.

2. I may say the same of the meaning 'in the habit of coming.'

3. 'Who confess Jesus Christ about to come in the flesh,' both makes an excellent and perfectly intelligible meaning in itself, and is the usual sense of the word erkomenos. Thus, in the book of Revelation, written by this same apostle, we have Jesus described three times as ho on, kai ho een, kai ho erkomenos, in which passages there can be no doubt as to the future meaning of the word erkomenos, although it is too frequently understood to mean 'That shall be,' instead of 'That shall come.' Again Heb. 10: 37, ho erkomenos heexi, 'He that cometh shall come'; and again, in John 16: 13, we have ta erkomena anaggeli, 'He shall show you things to come'; and Luke 18: 30, ho aion ho erkomenos. But there is no occasion to multiply instances, as no one would deny that this is not only a possible, but is the obvious and natural translation.

As to meanings 4 and 5, 'Who was in the act of coming,' and 'Who was in the habit of coming,' I may dismiss them without observation. And as to 6, 'Who was to come,' I will only observe that we could only be justified in thus translating it by its being joined to some past tense, either expressed or implied.

Now suppose we thus take it, then we must translate the whole passage in a manner perhaps more grammatically correct, but which will not give quite so good an idea of its meaning to an English reader who often requires the Greek aorist to be translated by the English perfect, or perfect-present. It will then stand thus: 'Many deceivers went forth into the world, who did not confess Jesus Christ as one that was to come in the flesh.' The change of tense in the translation only has the effect of referring back the denial that he was to come in the flesh to the time of the deceivers going forth, the ultimate sense being precisely the same. We now come to the seventh meaning, advocated by Alford, that erkomenon is altogether timeless, and repre- [illegible] festation.' He is exceedingly unfortunate in the only passage he quotes to support his views, namely, 1 Cor. 15: 35,—'How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?' For there, erkontai is clearly used in a future sense; but we will not take advantage of this, but rather examine passages which he might have quoted in support of his views with more show of reason. First, then, we have all those places in which Jesus is described as erkomenos, as Matt. 11: 3, and Luke 7: 19, 20,—'Art thou he that should come?' Also Matt. 23: 39, and Luke 17: 35,—'Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.' So also in the words of John the Baptist, John 3: 31,—'He that cometh from heaven is above all.' John 6: 14,—'This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world.' John 6: 27,—'I have believed that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.'

Then there are such phrases as those in John 6: 35, 37,—'He that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out.'

But I think I will venture to assert that in none of these passages is erkomenos absolutely tenseless, but that in all cases it implies either the present or the future, always an act incomplete at the time referred to, a coming that either was in the act of being accomplished, or was to take place at a future time, that is, at a time future either to the time of which the person was speaking, or at which he was speaking. Thus—'Art thou he that should come?' means 'Art thou he of whom we believed that thou wast to come, and who art now in the act of accomplishing thy coming?' Nor do I believe that any instance could be formed of the use of erkomenos, as simply describing the characteristic of a past coming, without including also a coming present or future, in fact without intending to denote an action still incomplete. If the apostle had wished simply to express the idea, 'Who confess not Jesus as God and man, as God incarnate,' I do not believe he could or would have used the words erkomenon en sarki, when it was so very easy to express the idea otherwise and without ambiguity. If he had left out the word Jesus, and simply said, 'Who do not confess a Messiah, whose characteristic was that he was to come in the flesh,' then it would have been perhaps just possible, but to insert the word Jesus, the name of a well-known historical personage, and to add the words erkomenon en sarki in the simple sense of 'whose characteristic was that he was God incarnate,' seems to me to violate all the ordinary usage of language, and to be a thing grammatically impossible, unless undoubted instances were given of such a use. I know no instance in Greek of a present participle becoming merely the equivalent of an adjective, and entirely losing all sense of time, when used in speaking of an action already complete; and even if this were possible with some verbs, it by no means follows that it would be possible with the word erkomenos, the notion of which is so essentially connected with time. But, as I said, I do not believe that any instance can be produced where the present participle is used when speaking of an action already complete. I think, then, we may fairly conclude that one of the great characteristics of THE DECEIVER AND THE ANTICHRIST is, that he denies that Jesus Christ is coming in the flesh.

But, it may be said, 'Will Jesus Christ come in the flesh?' I answer that when he rose, he rose in the flesh, for he commanded Thomas to thrust his hand into his side; and the saints who shall rise in his likeness shall rise in the flesh, for, 'though after death worms destroy this body, yet in our flesh shall we see God.'

And did not Christ himself say, 'Handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have'? And to show the reality of his flesh, did he not take a piece of broiled fish and of an honey-comb, and take it and eat before them? We know, indeed, from John's first epistle, that another characteristic of the Antichrist is to deny 'Jesus Christ come in the flesh.' But these two characteristics are not inconsistent, but quite consistent with each other; for what and who is Antichrist? It is not and cannot be from the etymology of the word, and the analogy of all other words similarly formed, 'An enemy of Christ,' but either 'A deputy of Christ,' or 'A Christ, the rival of the true Christ,' or both. Now, if by denying that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh be meant the denying it in so many words, we certainly have had no 'vice-Christ,' or 'rival-Christ,' who has done so, unless we look on Barchochebas, or other Jewish impostors as the Antichrist, though I am by no means sure that there may not be many calling themselves christians who would deny that Jesus Christ is coming in the flesh; but, if by 'denying' we mean only virtually and practically denying, as in the phrases 'if any man provide not for his own, he has denied the faith,' and 'let a man deny himself,' and 'men denying the Lord who bought them,' then we have had Antichrist revealed very fully, and the spirit of Antichrist pervading the world and the church for many ages. For what is the doctrine of Jesus, the Christ? Is it not 'I am come in the flesh, partaking of flesh and blood that I might be a faithful, and merciful, and sympathetic Priest and Savior, and Friend, and Shepherd? I forgive all sins, which my own blood cleanses; I, by my Spirit, the unction and chrism given through me, the Anointed One, the Christ, guide unto all truth; I have the keys of Hades and of death; I shall come in the flesh to reign on the earth, to restore all things to a more than paradise state, to break in pieces the powers of the earth like a potter's vessel; I am the betrothed, and shall be the husband of my Church, which is bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh; I shall be the ruler of the kings of the earth.' And what does antichrist say? [illegible] on earth; I am infallible, and guide into all truth; without communion with me there is no salvation; I can forgive sins; nay, I can delegate the power to forgive sins; I can give plenary absolution, in articulo mortis; I can, by the laying on of hands, confer the Holy Ghost, and my bishops can do the same; I can release from purgatory; I am wedded to my spouse, the Church; I am ruler of the kings of the earth; I am the rock on which the church is built; to me all judgment is given to condemn and kill whom I will. This is the glorious millennium that all nations should serve and obey me." There shall be no coming of Christ, except as a Judge to condemn all my enemies.'

And in order to show that the apostle, when he speaks of those who deny Jesus Christ either come or coming, in the flesh, does not mean denying it in so many words, but only virtually and in their practice, let us take the converse statements where he says that 'every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God; and again, 'Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God abideth in him, and he in God." Here he cannot mean simple confession in words and with the mouth; for else every wicked man who repeats the Apostles' Creed (so called) abideth in God, and God in him. But he means really and practically confessing this truth and acting it out in its consequences. And so here the confession or non-confession spoken of Christ come and coming in the flesh, is not with the lips, but practically in the heart and conduct.

I confess, for my own part, I can scarcely conceive it possible that the character of Antichrist can be more fully developed in all its phases than it has been in the Popes, that the character at once of vice-Christ and rival-Christ, virtually denying Jesus Christ come and coming in the flesh can be more perfectly fulfilled; though all churchism, all sacerdotalism, all sacramentalism, all secularism, by which I mean the hoping to regenerate the earth by social, and political, and educational reform, are essentially part of the spirit of Antichrist. Every spirit that puts any human teacher, any human institution, any human power, any human reformation in the place of Christ, soon to come personally as King and Judge is essentially Anti-christian. Every spirit that leads us to set our hopes in anything except a Christ come, and a Christ coming, in the flesh, is a spirit, is the spirit of Antichrist. I confess I think that not only has Antichrist come, several but that he has been consumed—that is, wasted away—now for centuries by the spirit of the Lord's mouth, through the preaching of Protestant Reformers, and that he shall soon be utterly destroyed by the bright 'Epiphany of His presence,' and that no prophecy yet remains to be fulfilled before the coming of the Lord. I may be wrong; another Antichrist may yet have to be revealed, but my belief has at any rate this advantage, that I can look and watch daily for the coming Redeemer.—H. H.—The Rainbow.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SANCTIFIED AND THE UNSANCTIFIED.

THE VAST DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE TWO.

"He who bears the truth and places
Its high promptings under ban,
Loud may boast of all that's manly,
But can never be a man."

Glance a moment at the difference:

First. Mark those in the higher walks, wholly given up to God's service; are they not always ready to every good word and work, ready for prayer, praise, testimony? When called on to pray, they pray; to sing, they sing; to speak, they speak, as God gives utterance; to do this or that duty, in the house of God and out of it, at home or abroad, there are no flinchings, hesitatings, or misgivings. They are on the spot with armor girt and burnished, hearts duly prepared. Their weapons are not carnal, but spiritual; "mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds."

They endure hardness as good soldiers, stand boldly in the battle's front, meet Satan's hottest cannonading, the fiery darts of the enemy. Never, never does the sanctified soul, one on the ROCK Christ Jesus, rooted and grounded in love, full of faith and the Holy Spirit, shrink from duty the most arduous, difficult, self-denying, soul-trying. "Go forward," is his motto; "Go forward;" "Stand for Jesus," is his motto; "Stand for Jesus;" fight, fight, conquest or death. The constant, uplifted voice is, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Here I am, send me." It's meat, it's drink to the sanctified soul to do God's will, and only God's will, cheerfully, heartily, peacefully, joyfully, without a murmuring, disbelieving thought. The eye is single to God's glory—every motive pure.

Secondly. Is it thus with the unsanctified, the disbelieving, the doubting, the hesitating, the man-fearing? How frequently do we hear excuses from professing christians, when called upon to speak, pray, testify, or give thanks, to open their lips for God and his cause, give alms, do this duty or that! what haltings, fearings, doubtings, complainings, misgivings, apologizings!

"I did not come prepared to take part in religious exercises this evening. I left my notes and prayer-book behind."

"My health is feeble; I have a severe cold, a troublesome cough; please excuse me."

"The children of Ephraim, being armed and carrying bows, turned back in the day of battle." Psa. 78: 9.

How greatly is God dishonored in thus bringing an evil report concerning the goodly land; think of the spies in the days of Moses and Joshua. Unbelief is the greatest of sins, the most God-dishonoring, soul-destroying.

Again, what cowardly shrinking from du[illegible] bowing and scraping to a popular, man-fearing, time-serving policy!

What's the matter, the cause, the difficulty, the purport, the special reason for this keeping back part of the price, withholding God's full counsel, this not coming up to the help of the Lord against the mighty? Why these haltings, stumblings, perpetual back-slidings, and God-dishonorings? May not the whole be summed up in one word: the lack of the tongue of fire, the baptism pentecostal, the inner life, "holiness to the Lord?" Right hands are not severed, right eyes are not plucked; God is not obeyed, in coming out from the world, in presenting the body a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God. All the tithes are not brought into the storehouse, all is not on the altar Christ Jesus; the promise of full, overflowing salvation is not claimed; the great and precious promises, by which we are made partakers of the divine nature, are not believed. Here lies the difference between the sanctified and the unsanctified; the entirely consecrated and those not entirely consecrated; between those who serve God wholly and heartily, and those who serve him hap-hazardly, endeavoring to carry the world in one hand and religion in the other.

The difference between these two classes of professed disciples is clear as the noonday sun. And yet this blessed Bible doctrine, sanctification or perfect love, is opposed, resisted, ridiculed, and often denounced as an error, unscriptural. And this denunciation, moreover, not unfrequently proceeds from unsanctified lips, the man-fearing and time-serving; from those living in doubt, unbelief, conforming more or less to the world, having a name to live while dead; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. Reader, is this you? Beware, lest that come upon you which is spoken of in the prophets: "Behold, ye despiser, and wonder and perish: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you." Acts 13: 40, 41. "He that saveth his life shall lose it." What! have power with God, a spirit of prevailing prayer, and bow the knee to reputation, popular-seeking? Have power with God, and hash reforms, wink at iniquity, cover sin, keep back part of the price, shuffle duty, cry "Peace, peace," when there is no peace? Have power with God, a soul on fire, the fire of holy love, and receive honor one of another, and seek not that honor which cometh from God only? Have power with God, enjoy the baptism pentecostal, and not lay all on God's altar, and not bring all the tithes into the store-house? Friend, is it any marvel you are barren as a barren figtree, lean as the leanest of Pharoah's kine? Is it at all strange your soul is not kindled with a holy flame, burning with zeal unutterable for God's glory? Need you wonder that your prayers are formal, powerless, soulless—your testimonies and communications?

How can it be otherwise? Beloved, repent, confess your sins of omission; go to God weepingly; come out from the world; be separated; touch not the unclean thing.

"Cry aloud; spare not." "Wash you; make you clean; put away the evil of your doing; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment; relieve the oppressed; judge the fatherless; plead for the widows;"—what now? "Come, let us reason together, saith the Lord." See Isa. 1: 16, 17, 18.

"Dare forsake what you deem wrong;
Dare to walk in wisdom's way;
Do with willing mind and heart,
Do your duty and be blest."

D. F. NEWTON, Author of Home Thrusts.

For the World's Crisis.

LOVERS OF PLEASURE.

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves . . . lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof."

BRO. GRANT:—I send you the following extracts, taken from the Sentinel, the weekly secular paper published in this village. I will make no comment.

Says the editor of the Sentinel of Feb. 21st, "The following is from the Albany Journal: 'In our advertising columns on the second page of this issue can be found the advertisement of the theatrical exhibition, that will take place at the Congregational church on Friday, Feb. 23d, 1866. The pieces selected are such that all will be pleased to see and hear. As the proceeds are to go for a good object (the repairing of the church), every one of our citizens ought to take a lively interest in it, and encourage it by being present on the evening above named.'"

In the Sentinel of the same date is the following advertisement:—

"Festival at the Universalist church. Everybody come! Music, supper, toasts and responses, and a good time generally."

"The ladies of the Universalist Society will give a festival in the vestry of the church, Thursday evening, the 22nd inst., to which all are invited. A supper will be provided, after which there will be toasts, sentiments, and responses from a number of our citizens. Single tickets 50 cents. Supper at eight o'clock. By order of committee."

The same paper of 28th inst., in giving an account of the affair, says: "After supper the occasion was enlivened by good music, toasts, and responses. These latter exercises frequently brought down the house in rapturous applause. Truly, it was good to be there. We learn that the society cleared about $110.00 from the proceeds of the festival."

Yours waiting and watching,
Monroe, Wis. GEO. THOMSON.

THOUGHT.—Thought engenders thought. Place one idea upon paper, another will follow it, and still another, until you have written a page. You cannot fathom your mind. There is a well of thought there which has no bottom. The more you draw from it, the more clear and fruitful it will be. If you neglect to think yourselves, and use other people's thoughts, you will never know what you are capable of. At first, your ideas may come out in lumps, homely and shapeless; but no [illegible] and polish them. Learn to think, and you will [illegible]

PRAY FOR THE MISSIONS!

Our Missions to the Freedmen: they need your prayers. Your missionaries and teachers are in the midst of enemies and surrounded with perils. They have gone forth, like Joshua of old, to fight the battles of the Lord and defeat the hosts of Amalek. Ye ministers of Christ, who stand, like Moses, on the hill-top, gazing on the conflict and waiting anxiously the result, raise your hands to heaven in prayer; and, ye Aarons and Hurs, stay them up till the sun goes down, and Israel prevails. God will be inquired of. He will be importuned. He will hear and answer prayer. God help the missionaries, and give them victory over Amalek and all of Satan's hosts. We are marching into the promised land.

W. B. H.

Post Office Address.

The address of Bro. I. I. Leslie is Box 684 Memphis, Tenn. Sr. Martha S. Butler's address is the same. They would be glad to have the brethren and sisters generally write to them. Words of sympathy and encouragement from the dear friends at home will be always thankfully received, and give them much cheer and comfort in their labors and trials.

Bro. H. K. Flagg's address for the present is St. Louis, Mo. Sr Francelia F. Curtis, teacher of the school there, may be addressed at No. 149 North Sixth Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Write to them, brethren, with words of cheer and help. W. B. H.

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

Bro. Herbon:—I am much pleased with the management and tone of the Young Pilgrim since it has been under your supervision. I find the little folks where I travel are perfectly delighted with it.

Let all who can, seek to swell its list of subscribers. Let each try and get one new subscriber, if no more. May God continue to bless you in its editorial charge.

Your Bro. in Christ, A. W. Sibley.

The Young Pilgrim for April 15th.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

The Coming Kingdom. The Resurrection (cnt.) Like Jesus. A New Creature. Be Humble. Mind the Door. What is the Tongue for? Never tell a lie. God Hears. Bad Books—Burn them! Can you Forgive? Two kinds of Advice. "I go to Sunday School." Children's Work. The Savior's Sympathy. Words of a Dying Child. Good Resolutions. "Of course there is a God!" "I'll do it to-morrow." The Stones of Solomon's Temple A Lighthouse (cnt.) Letter from St. Louis. Young Pilgrim Letters, from Clara, Emily, Carrie, Sarah, and Clarence. Bible Questions and Riddles.

Now is the time to get subscribers and form clubs for the Young Pilgrim. For terms see last page.

For the World's Crisis.

"ANGELS" AND THE DORCAS MISSION.

Beloved of God in Christ.—It is my purpose, in concert with a brother here, to whom I am indebted to some extent in getting out my work on the "Angels," to give $15 worth of that work in aid of the "Dorcas Mission" of Philadelphia. Now, from this consideration, will you not send for the work at once, and thereby accomplish three things: 1. Procure a little work treating upon a highly interesting subject, and which has been commended by all, so far as we learn, who have perused it; and which, by the blessing of God, may do you good. 2. Enable me to help pay for it, and also to contribute to the mission. 3. Indirectly contribute to the mission yourself, and thereby feed the hungry, clothe the naked, carrying in some measure "good cheer" to many depressed spirits, to many sad hearts.

Is not this being found engaged in a good work? and will not Jesus commend and reward such in the day of his coming? He most assuredly will observe, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, . . . ye have done it unto me." Hence the invitation, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him," sitting "upon the throne of his glory."—"Come, ye blessed of my Father," etc. Matt 25: 30–46.

Now what is done must be done quickly. Send in your orders without delay, that the money may be forwarded at once to Bro. Burbank. Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

Your Bro. in Christ,
William Shepherd.

Address William Shepherd, Newark, New Jersey. Price, single copies 20 cents.

For the World's Crisis.

ONE DAY IN THE WOODS.

After four weeks in cities among the rattling of carriages and bustle of business, and attending two meetings a day, I took a trip back upon the mountains, to hold a meeting. I witnessed nature and grace, and found a natural family, living in the only house in sight, where two generations had lived and died. No improvement had been made; all was as nature formed it. It was the roughest place I ever saw people try to get a living on by tilling the land; but there were other advantages. I noticed nature formed their sled track and thills, and other things grew the right shape for their use. They raised their own flax and wool, and manufactured it into cloth. They made their own sugar and molasses; raised their own pork, and eat it; and did their own doctoring. Although they had a large family, they had had no death. They had no disputes; all seemed satisfied with their lot. Not one of the nine ever saw a vessel, nor the salt water.

A sound of a wagon would attract the attention of the whole family. They had but six weeks winter school, and went one mile and a half to get to that; and yet all were mannerly, graceful, and received the truth in the love of it. How easy I could preach; how good I did sleep; how still the air was. It was retirement indeed, almost away from trouble and the wickedness of this age. Pride was not discovered in the meeting. There was no affectation in speaking in meeting. There was nothing to disturb one's peace in the neighborhood, for all loved the coming of the Lord, except two or three.

Some came thirty miles to hear; many five to eighteen. The Lord blessed the gathering with a good meal in the wilderness, and graced the meeting with some twenty testimonies after preaching. We intend to go there again.

Hiram Munroe.

Bro. A. N. Seymour writes:—"I am having glorious times some five miles west of Toledo, Ohio. Hundreds are being most deeply impressed with the gospel of our soon coming Lord. Prejudice is breaking away wonderfully, and many are listening with unfeigned interest to what I am proclaiming. To God belongs all praise. Bless His holy name forever."

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, April 11, 1866.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable in advance, at the rate of $2.00 a year; but if delayed six months beyond the time of payment, the price is $2.50 a year. Thus 50 cents a year is saved by paying in advance.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MEETINGS IN BOSTON.

The meetings at the corner of Lowell and Causeway streets, Boston, still continue to be seasons of great refreshing to the saints, and afford an open pool where sinners are being cleansed from their sins through the love and kindness of Jesus. It was said by one of our brethren who has attended meetings in Boston for some twenty-five years or more, that those now being held are the best he has ever enjoyed.

One very important feature in these meetings, by which they are specially characterized, is the absence of a sectarian spirit, which always hedges up the progress of pure christianity, instead of advancing it. Members of the various churches come in and take an active part, and feel just as free, and, as they express themselves, even more so than they do in their own meetings. We believe this is one special reason why the Lord is bestowing such rich blessings upon us. If one happens to say something which others think is not in harmony with all their views of the Bible, they do not rise up to combat him, and thus destroy all the good influence of the meeting; but endeavor to show the kind and loving spirit of Jesus, and thus win the people to the light and truth, instead of driving them away.

It is lamentable to see how many have been pushed away from the narrow path that leads to life, in consequence of seeing an unkind spirit manifested by some professors of religion. We can never succeed in leading sinners to Christ, unless we approach them as christian friends. When they see professors of religion wrangling and disputing with one another, they at once turn away in disgust. We shall not all think alike in this world, hence the need of forbearance and long-suffering. If we expect to be ready for the coming of the Son of man, we must "love one another." Without this qualification all is vain.

The feeling manifested in the Lowell street meetings is just such as we expect to see exhibited by the true bride of the Lamb at the time of his second coming. All the christians from the different churches,—rich and poor, white and black, learned or ignorant, appear to love the appearing of Jesus; hence his speedy coming is a common theme in all meetings. No one seems to be opposed to this important doctrine. This is but another evidence that our Savior is soon coming.

Our meetings on Fast day, April 5th, were blessed seasons. It was a feast day in the Lord, and will be remembered with great pleasure by those who were privileged to be present. Bro J. G. Hook will continue at the meetings afternoons and evenings for the present, as the Lord may direct.

DISCUSSION AT LOWELL.

Our discussion at Lowell, Mass., was one of much interest and profit to the lovers of truth, the friends of Jesus and his holy religion; and we trust it did much damage to the cause of Satan. It commenced on Monday evening, Mar. 26th, in Lee St. meeting-house, and continued five evenings before a large, orderly, and very attentive audience. Many had their eyes open, as never before, to see that Spiritualism is most directly opposed to a pure christianity. We never heard a man talk worse against the Bible, the God of the Bible, and Jesus, than did our opponent. We thought he talked badly enough at Springfield, when he said:—"The Bible is not calculated to elevate mankind." "It is an abominable doctrine to believe that the Bible contains the word of God to men." "There is no God above ourselves," etc. But his remarks at Lowell were still more blasphemous, if possible. In every speech, he made efforts to impeach the Bible, which only made the good book appear more precious; just as pure gold shines brighter for being rubbed. He said the God of the Bible was only a human spirit, and charged him with being guilty of lust, and other base passions. He did not bring a single passage of Scripture to prove his points; hence we conclude that he is satisfied the Bible does not teach the immortality of man. At Providence and Worcester he attempted to prove that it did; at Philadelphia he made a faint effort to sustain his position by the Bible; at Springfield he cited two passages only, but none at Lowell. His best proof, as he admitted, was the testimony of the spirits themselves; but we found they were lying spirits, hence his doctrine was established only by lying demons.

He claimed that Spiritualism is the same as ancient christianity; but on examination, it was found to be only heathenism revived; hence the choice is between christianity and heathenism, or, more properly, Spiritualism, as it is now called.

He said he had just as much confidence in the Hindoo account of Khrishna, as in the Bible account of Christ, and should even give his preference for the former.

He freely and publicly admitted that he was "a lost man" if our position is correct. He said "the heathen gods were as good, or better than ours"; that the God whom Paul preached to the Athenians was only a human spirit. We asked him to tell us what human spirit it was which "made the world, and all things therein," who "is Lord of heaven and earth," who "giveth to all life and breath," which is what Paul says of the God whom he made known to the Athenians? We obtained no answer to our inquiry. He said he would believe the heathen record about the god Jupiter, before he would the Bible account of our Savior; and yet claimed that "Jesus was a good man"!!

After hearing all our opponent, as an accomplished Spiritualist, had to say, we think no point could be made plainer than that Spiritualism is nothing but heathenism revived, and is most truly and emphatically anti-christian in all its tendencies.

The meetings on the Lord's day following the discussion were seasons of special interest to the friends of Jesus. The love-feast in the morning was a feast indeed. The common expression was, "I never loved my Bible as I do this morning." After hearing it defamed as they had during the discussion, it looked firmer, more reliable and precious than ever before. The discussion has awakened a new interest in Lowell. Many could not find even standing room in the house, and were obliged to go away. Some who have been in sympathy with the Spiritualists, do not wish to follow them any further on the road to perdition. But few, excepting those who have been as it were behind the curtain, had but a faint idea of the demoniacal character of Spiritualism. They are now satisfied that in it is embodied all that is really anti-Bible, anti-God, and anti-Christ. May the Lord help us to flee from it as did Lot from Sodom.

IS SPIRITUALISM CHRISTIANITY?

We think no system of religion can be further removed from it. It utterly repudiates the whole plan of salvation as taught in the Bible by Jesus and his apostles. It denies that Jesus was begotten by the Holy Spirit; that he was the Son of God as taught in the Scriptures; that his death had any more to do with our salvation than that of any martyr; that he was raised from the dead; that he will ever come again to this planet personally; or that he forgives sin. It also denies the existence of God, except as a "principle" in all matter; that the God of the Bible created the earth, or man; that "he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness"; it teaches that there is "no sin", that all will be saved; and yet it has not led one to the Savior, but many thousands away from him, with fair promises of something better, just as the wily seducer leads the innocent from a happy home to the dens of iniquity, and final ruin.

Is it not the duty of those who see and know these things to sound the alarm? If he who sees the blind man about to step off a precipice is guilty when he refuses to tell him of his danger, how much more so is he who remains silent when he sees his fellow beings about to take a road that leads to eternal destruction. How can the Lord say, "Well done, good and faithful servant," to him who has looked on quietly, while men and women have been seduced away from the road to life, by those whom he knows to be demons transformed into angels of light?

Such considerations as these have urged us to say what we have on this subject. We have none but kind feelings towards all who have been so unfortunate as to be seduced by the demons. We have spoken plainly because we feel friendly. We do not wish to wound the feelings of one who believes in Spiritualism; but we do wish to expose the wicked spirits who are laying plans to ruin our race if possible.

We have hardly begun to open the deep iniquity of this demoniacal system. But we hope these few words, by the blessing of God, may be the means of assisting the reader to arm himself against this awful delusion, causing him to cling closer to Jesus and the Bible, and be ready for the coming kingdom.

"A CRY FOR NEW LIGHT."

In another column our readers will find an interesting article with the above heading, taken from the "Rainbow," an able monthly printed in London, Eng., and edited by Dr. William Leask. It is very evident that many church members begin to feel the want of light upon the prophecies. For some twenty years they have been almost entirely neglected by popular preachers; consequently, their congregations are in comparative darkness on the very subjects which are now of the most thrilling importance to the followers of Jesus. We hope they will be willing to receive light from a humble source, and be prepared for coming events.

DAYS OF BLOOD.

This is emphatically an age of crime. The wicked are having their jubilee. The blackest deeds are multiplying in rapid succession all over the world. He who says the world, as a whole, is growing better, is as far from the truth as he would have been had he asserted the same thing a short time before the flood. The Bible would not be true if the world was not approaching a state of wickedness like that in Sodom and in the days of the antediluvians. We must be prepared to hear of things as bad as it is in the power of men and demons to accomplish. This is the time for all the followers of Jesus to be clothed with "the whole armor of God."

The following is from one of our exchanges:—

"Some weeks, or perhaps months ago, there was executed in Kentucky, in pursuance of the sentence of a military court, a brute named Champ Ferguson. He confessed to something over fifty deliberate murders, and his victims included helpless old men, women, and negroes; for the wilful shooting of one of the latter, he gave as a reason that 'a nigger had no business to be a soldier,' and so he shot him. This man came to the scaffold defiant and unrepentant, stating that he would repeat the same course if he had the life to live over again, and he rather gloried in his deeds of evil."

INQUIRY FOR TRUTH.

Bro. Grant:—In 1 Sam. 28th chapter, do you understand that the witch of Endor really raised Samuel? or was Saul deceived? Or is it not a piece of the same web we are having in these last days from spirit manifestations? Please answer in Crisis.

For the brethren, Jesse S. Moulton.

We are satisfied that the woman at Endor had no power to raise the dead; but that her "familiar spirit" represented Samuel to her just as a mesmerizer would. In either case it is a deception. No real person is present, but exists only in the brain of the operator. The demon forms a mental likeness of the individual called for, and that mental picture, in the demon's mind, becomes a real object to the medium, when she can describe it, as in the case of Samuel. We consider the account a record of a spiritual manifestation, like those at the present day.

PEACE PROCLAMATION.

On the 2d of April President Johnson issued a peace proclamation; and after giving his reasons for so doing, he concludes as follows:—

"Therefore I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare that the insurrection which heretofore existed in the States of Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi and Florida at an end, and henceforth to be so regarded.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, the 2d day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninetieth.

By the President, Andrew Johnson.
Wm. H. Seward, Sec. of State."

GENUINENESS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

In these days of infidelity, when thousands, by the aid of demons, are making great efforts to destroy the confidence of men in the Bible, it is well to look at the ground of our confidence in the holy Scriptures, that we may stand firmly against all the assaults of the enemy, and be able to give a good reason for the hope within us that we prize so highly. In order to do this, we only need to be posted in the well-known evidences of the Christian faith, and the stoutest scoffer will be obliged to quail before the light.

There is a work by S. P. Tregelles, entitled, "New Testament Historic Evidence," published by Samuel Bagster and Sons, 15 Paternoster Row, London, that is well calculated to strengthen the faith of those who love the Bible. The following is an extract from the work, found on pp. 108—113.

"There are certain consequences resulting from the proved authorship of the books of the New Testament, which may be briefly indicated. They may be regarded as plain corollaries to the points already demonstrated.

Since, then, we possess in the New Testament genuine historic monuments of contemporary writers, who were perfectly competent to bear testimony to the facts of which they were cognizant, we must give their evidence its full weight as assuring us of the truth of those facts. And, further, as the books of the New Testament were not, when written, laid up in secret, but were from the first widely circulated amongst a body of persons, who were themselves possessed of a competent knowledge of the facts, it is plain that this body of persons, the christian community of the first century, consisting of believing Jews and believing Gentiles, are corroborative witnesses to the truth of the historic monuments.

We possess, therefore, every conceivable ground of certainty in regard to the New Testament as giving to us a narrative of real historical occurrences, presented to us by a body of such witnesses, that if we reject their evidence, we must also say that all testimony is unworthy of credit. These witnesses, moreover, so lived and acted, and (in many cases) so laid down their lives, as to give, if needful, a yet further confirmation of their testimony.

It follows, therefore, that christianity, as based on the facts of the incarnation, death, and resurrection of the Son of God—whatever be its doctrines or its duties—must be true. Its truth is a proved historical fact.

We must bear in mind that the nature of the fact proved makes no difference whatever; it may be a thing wholly void of importance, or it may involve considerations of the most solemn moment. If the historic proof be sufficient, no after-considerations can be admitted to counterbalance such proof. The case before us is not merely one of historic probability, but one of demonstrated reality; we need not, then, raise the question as to any balance of probabilities, as must be done in many cases.

We have no occasion, therefore, to consider the antecedent probability, or the contrary, of the facts to which the New Testament bears testimony: no such considerations can affect the force of the absolute evidence which we possess. How continually do we find that we are obliged to admit the reality of facts which, in themselves, seem most improbable! We know the origin of the Book of Mormon,—how it was originally written by Solomon Spaulding, as a kind of romance: we know how Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon interpolated it, and then gave it forth as a divine Revelation; we find, besides, in the book itself, the most contemptible absurdities; so that on the antecedent mode of argumentation, we should, of course, conclude, that the Book of Mormon was regarded by all as simply the production of Spaulding's idle hours, and that Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon were universally looked on as impostors so low as not even to possess the talent of invention. Therefore, it might be concluded that Mormonism, as a system, could not exist,—that it does not exist,—and we who maintain that there are or ever have been such a body of persons, are assuming a ground wholly untenable. And yet, look at what occurred in the states of Missouri and Illinois; look at what now exists in the Utah territory; or, let attention be paid to the labors of Mormonite missionaries in this very town. We have proof sufficient that we must admit facts on evidence, irrespective of our antecedent thoughts.

Difficulties are not unfrequently raised by objectors on the ground of supposed discrepancies or contradictions of the New Testament writers. We may, however, inquire whether the alleged discrepancies are such as would invalidate the historic authority of other writers; if not, then they must be allowed no weight [illegible]. But, [illegible] may ask objections, were [illegible] the New Testament writings [illegible] wholly destitute of the [illegible], when they received [illegible] as to form our collection, incapable of perceiving the difficulties which some would regard as so formidable? Is it not certain that [illegible] who were best acquainted with the facts, held and transmitted our four Gospels as the histories of those facts? Who, then, can say that they, having done this in spite of any supposed difficulties, are not in a manner the guarantees to us that none of the alleged difficulties are really inexplicable?

Perhaps no historical difficulty, connected with the Gospels, has been so much relied on as that relating to the taxing, in Luke 2nd. "And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria." This taxing, then, is said by St. Luke to be anterior to the birth of Christ, and yet Cyrenius was not governor of Syria till about twelve years later. What a contradiction! an objector might say. But let us apply to this difficulty the circumstances of historic transmission, and then let us see whether they do not rebut the force of the difficulty. We have seen that we have good grounds of evidence for acquiescing in the common belief, which assigns the authorship of our third Gospel, and the Acts of the Apostles, to Luke, the companion of St. Paul. The Gospel was, therefore, written about sixty years after the events which are described in the opening chapters. The taxing was an event peculiarly well known to all the Jews, as it was the incident which affixed the actual mark of subjection to Rome on them as a nation, and which sealed the transfer of Judæa to those Western rulers. Now, it was impossible for those at large, for whom Luke wrote, not to be acquainted with these things; and, therefore, their reception of this Gospel, as an authentic history, is a proof that they did not see anything insurmountable in what the Evangelist had stated. If any one were now to write about the events of the French revolution, 1789—93, he might so take for granted that his readers knew the leading events, that he would not be afraid of having his meaning misconceived, even though his words were capable of a construction opposed to open and notorious facts: if any one were to object either to the veracity or accuracy of such a writer, who is there that would not see that the objection was utterly futile? The public notoriety of leading facts must often be our guide in understanding what is written about them. We must not look merely from the present day at ancient writings and events, but we must make our point of view the actual time when we prove that the books, which we examine, were written, and from that we must look at the events described. We must then inquire whether what we suppose to be discrepancies were really such to the first readers, and whether their having transmitted the books as authentic, in spite of such difficulties, does not in itself remove the greater part of their alleged force, and whether the difficulties do not afford some proof of the truth, honesty, and absence of all imposition in the whole matter.

We need not undervalue the pains which have been taken to discuss each particular difficulty, and to show that each is really groundless: but in doing this we must not forget the antecedent vantage-ground which we possess in the evidence of historic transmission; this meets many a difficulty; this enables us to say (whether we can explain the objection or not,) the contemporaries of the writer received the record such as it is, and they have thus transmitted it as authentic to us; they had all the facts before them, and they are authorities to us that the difficulties are no impeachment to the authenticity. Thus will evidence of historic transmission from them remove objections even before explaining them.

But from the proved historical fact of christianity, as recorded in the New Testament, other consequences result. Christianity must be a revelation from God, authoritatively confirmed to us by Him. The whole of the miraculous impress which the New Testament history bears is a proof of this,—a proof which can only be avoided by denying that the New Testament presents to us historic realities. If the according testimony of competent witnesses be not a sufficient proof of the reality of the New Testament miracles, then is no conceivable degree of evidence sufficient to persuade men that God has thus confirmed a revelation of His will, intended to teach the way of forgiveness and salvation.

But the character of the facts does not really affect the evidence; if it be good in so far as it testifies that Jesus Christ was crucified, it is equally good in its attestation that he rose from the dead: if it be good in its testimony that Jesus was a teacher, then it is just as valid in declaring that, in proof of his mission, he did such works as no other man did. And further, the living multitude of christians, when the New Testament books were written, were themselves witnesses to the signs and wonders wrought by the Apostles, in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth.

Thus did the writers of the New Testament claim the place of authoritative teachers of the revelation which God had given, and thus fully did they substantiate that claim. The New Testament professes an authority, that though written by men, yet that it contains not the mere words of men, but the words of God himself. The apostles claim nothing short of this: the promises of Christ to this effect are recorded in the Gospels, and in all their authoritative teaching they show that they claimed inspiration. This may be briefly described as being such an operation of the Holy Ghost on them, that they wrote not as mere men, but as those whom he qualified and endowed for the writing of Scripture; so that, without their individuality having been at all destroyed, they wrote those things which God saw fit that they should write, and in such a way as he was pleased to appoint.

Inspiration may or may not be accompanied with a communication of new truth: in the former case there would be revelation; but inspiration is as much needed to write authoritatively known facts as it is to communicate new truth; else why should such and such facts be selected, and others be passed by? To record precepts and doctrines authoritatively, inspiration was as necessary as it was to declare things before unknown to man: and this inspiration the New Testament writers claim; this inspiration was confirmed by the miracles which they wrought; this inspiration was promised by our Lord when he unfolded to his apostles the relation in which the Holy Ghost should stand to them; and this inspiration was owned by contemporaries as attaching to our New Testament books, inasmuch as they received them, making as they do such exalted claims."

For the World's Crisis.

A TENT.

Bro. Grant:—I am still in the work, and doing a good business. Have had a discussion at Strawberry Point, and had a happy result. Praise the Lord. I am raising means to buy a tent for mission work. I have obligated myself to pay $250. I still lack $50, and I have received the following pledges to raise the $50.

[illegible]

$1000 TRACT FUND.

For the Free Distribution of Tracts.

Previous acknowledgments	[illegible]
[illegible]	.50
[illegible]	1.00
[illegible]	2.50
[illegible]	1.00

POOR FUND DONATIONS.

To send the Crisis to the Poor.

Whole number sent free, 500. Ann'l Expense, $1000.00

Previous acknowledgments	$373.15
L. F. Bacon, Vt.	.50

Cannot do without it.

A subscriber writes:—"I paid for M. M.'s paper last year in advance, so as to get him interested in it, and in the truths we love; and now he sends through me $2.50 for another year himself, saying he cannot do without it."

The American Advent Mission Society.

All communications relating to the business of the Society, and all applications for situations as teachers or missionaries, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, William B. Herbon, "Crisis" Office, Boston.

All donations of money, or clothing, or other supplies for the Freedmen, should be sent to the Treasurer, George T. Adams, 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

In sending supplies, enclose in a letter to the same address a notice and list of the articles sent.

FREEDMEN'S MISSION FUND.

Previous acknowledgments	1800.67
A friend of the slave, Chicopee, Mass.	20 00
Sidney Hall, Ct., (pledge paid)	31.25
Y. P. Fund	2.81

YOUNG PILGRIM POOR FUND.

To send the Young Pilgrim to the Poor.

200 copies are sent free to Mission Schools and elsewhere.

Previous acknowledgments	$58.53
Andrew S. Fabrick, Clinton, Mich	1.00
W. S. C., Rutland, Vt.	2.00

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$421.36
J. S. W	1.00
M. A. C., Middle Creek, Kansas	10.00

For the World's Crisis.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

This is a very corrupt and wicked city; probably the most so of any in the State, if not in the South, or country. I am told by those here who have lived in most of the other large cities in the South, that this is fully equal to any in its moral degradation and crime. It can truly be said that wickedness here abounds, and violence fills the city. Sin stalks abroad unblushingly at noonday, and in the darkness it is rampant. There is no real security here after nightfall for any out upon the street, anywhere in the city. Many, white and black, go armed. The police, or many of them, are little better than highwaymen, either accessory to crimes, or bribed to shelter those who commit them. Good and honest men are the last to be appointed to defend the innocent and bring to justice the murderer and robber. On the other hand, to the most unprincipled men are confided the peace and security of the city. Like the "cities of the plain," this is sunk in sin and debauchery. But there are Lots here, as there are in all other places, who preserve from destruction the wicked around them, until their iniquity is full, and the time comes for the good to be taken away. Then will come the destruction of these modern cities of the plain, fire from heaven consuming them all.

I have said there is no real security for the traveler here anywhere. Especially is there none for the stranger, who comes here without friends to warn him of the dangers that on every hand surround him. Many come here who never are heard from by their friends afterwards. They fall by the hand of the assassin and robber, and in most cases the act comes not to the light. A stranger, especially one who is supposed to come from the North, is looked upon with hatred and disgust by every rebel southern man and woman; and nothing is too bad to wish him. He is often watched when he little suspects it; and if by word or act he gives offence to these hot-blooded sons and daughters of our nation, the danger to life and the pursuit of happiness is greatly increased, and he may never feel himself safe here afterwards.

The government is trying to keep a firm grasp upon all disloyal and rebellious persons, but this does not change their minds towards it, or make them less rebellious at heart; consequently the city is not really more virtuous and moral. If it were true that there are fewer crimes committed here now than months ago, it would not follow that there was less disposition to commit them. If robberies and murders have become less frequent, it is not because the people are better, but for the reason that more stringent orders have been issued by the government. No one here doubts that if the government should withdraw, but for one week, its protection to Union men and the poor blacks, a scene of bloodshed and carnage would be presented to the world. There is hatred enough in thousands of hearts here towards us to prompt them to the worst deeds recorded in the annals of history.

If we have come here, and are now teaching these poor, down-trodden ones to read the word of God and instructing them in all that they need to know, pertaining to this life and that which is to come, it is not because the professed christian people of the South desire us here, or wish us to do it. On the contrary, if they were not controled by the strong arm of the government, which gives us all the earthly protection we have, we should be at once exterminated; not even be permitted to return to our homes and families. Under God, the government gives us all the privileges of doing good that we here enjoy. There is no credit to be given to the white people of the South for the liberty we have here of teaching the benighted, clothing the naked, visiting the sick, and those in prison, and preaching the gospel to the poor. All this they would prevent if they could, and kill those who are now doing it. I am speaking of the mass of Southern men and women. There are some noble exceptions.

There are some here who have learned Christ really and truly, and are following him, loving as he did all that bear the image of God, let the skin be of what color it may. But these exceptions are few, so few that they are like Lots in Sodom. There are some here, I must believe, who will rejoice at the coming of Christ. But how few must be that number, judging from the people's present state of feeling and living,—their feeling towards God and the poor blacks, whom they have so wronged,—their lives so marked by [illegible] intemperance, and other worldly lusts. How can they be ready for that day who daily [illegible] violate the golden rule of Christ—"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you"? Love for Christ cannot exist where love for all men does not. He that loves God will love his brother also. Who loves his brother here in the sense and to the extent taught in the divine word? He that would enslave me, does not love me. If he loved me, he would wish me to have all that he himself desired; and if I lacked, he would, if in his power to do so, supply me with that which I needed, or with whatever would benefit me. This is the love of which God speaks. This is the spirit of Christ, and none can be raised from the dead at the first resurrection, or be changed from mortal to immortal, when he appears, who have not this spirit and love abiding in them. I care not how high the profession or standing of a man in the church is, if he does not love with this love his brother whom he hath seen, he does not love God whom he hath not seen, and therefore can never see him. The pure, loving, unselfish heart, only can see God. God will never show himself to the hater of any of his creatures. God is love, and he only who dwells in love will dwell with God hereafter. The slaveholder in heart cannot dwell with God. He does not love his brother—he does not love God.

The love of slavery is the strongest love which the slaveholder possesses. This has been proved by his readiness to sacrifice all for it,—even to lay down his life for its perpetuation. Sad, indeed, is this fact, and terribly sad is the condition of mind in which they are left who risked all for slavery and lost what they loved most and fought hardest to keep. They loved slavery, and love it still. Did they no longer love it, there would be hope of their repentance and acceptance by God. But they love that which God hates, and has wrested from them. How can they repent? how can they love him? how can they be ready for the reign of Christ, and be saved at his appearing and kingdom?

Had it not been that they loved this monster which has ruined them, the gospel of the kingdom might have been preached and received here as readily as in other parts of the country and world; and a people been made ready here for the Lord. Now there is little hope of this portion of the nation becoming enlightened upon this most glorious and saving truth. Besides the fact that their love of oppression and power would prevent them from desiring and believing in the personal reign of Christ at hand (overthrowing, as it would, all their idolatry of slavery), they would not receive the evidence of its coming and nearness from those who alone would be willing to present it to them. They know that they who preach the speedy coming of Christ, and are ready for his appearing, hate slavery, which they love, and are praying that it may remain dead, or become more and more extinct. With this chasm between us, how could they condescend to be taught by those who they feel have been the cause of all the loss which they have sustained? If we would take them by the hand, we cannot; certainly not unless we ignore the colored people, and become identified with those who hate them or neglect them.

No minister of Christ can come here from the North and get access to the white people of the South, who manifest any interest in the poor freedmen. The least sympathy for them, on his part, if expressed, will close all doors against him.

These things are sad to contemplate, but they exist. It is lamentable to think that one half of this nation have shut out the light of heaven from their hearts and dwellings by their love of the spirit of oppression. O, that they knew, even in this their day, what belongs to their peace! But it is hidden from their eyes.

O, cursed slavery! O, monster of the pit! When I consider what its nature is, and its effect upon the heart, how it has cursed, blighted, and been an eternal hindrance to the everlasting life and joy of millions, I am lost for language by which to execrate and condemn it. I abhor it! I loathe it! I spurn it! But if I, vile as I am, feel thus towards it, how does God, who is holy, regard it? Let me not love what God hates. I. I. Leslie.

A BUNDLE OF OLD, OLD LETTERS,

ON THEMES OF DEEPEST MOMENT.

Quintus Calpurnius, Captain of Augustus' Band, to his beloved wife, Cornelia, greeting.

In my last letter from Joppa, I wrote you of our voyage from the harbor of Berytus, where an infant colony has just been established down the coast, to Joppa. At Joppa we stayed but a few days. It is a miserable place at best, and gives one a very bad impression on entering this land of Judæa. The roadstead is very much exposed, and unsafe for anchorage. Orders were awaiting us to come straightway to Jerusalem, the metropolis of this country; for an enrolment of the inhabitants of this province has never actually been made, although the province itself had been annexed to our empire some time ago. The decree of the Senate was first issued about three years ago, but has not been enforced until this present year, A. U. C. 753. Disturbances are expected during this polling, for these people are an intractable race, and obstinately tenacious in their patriotism.

Jerusalem is one of the oldest cities in the whole world. Looked at from a soldier's point of view, I like it extremely. It is admirably defended by nature. Steep precipices to the east, and south, and west, where it is almost impregnable; on the north also it can easily be defended by the ramparts. It has stood upon these hills for more than two thousand years, so that in comparison our own Rome is quite a modern city. It is even said that it is by no means the oldest city in the country. The histories of this people are remarkably interesting. The early chronicles, especially, are full of grand martial exploits, and the country is filled with memorials of battle scenes. There is a most faithful Greek translation of these chronicles, and through the kindness of a venerable old Israelite, I have the loan of a roll from the library of the Temple. So beautifully, yet so simply are they written, that you might well imagine that they were inspired by the gods themselves.

I find my knowledge of the Aramaic dialect, acquired whilst we were quartered in Syria, extremely valuable; for although it is not so pure as the Hebrew spoken here, yet I can converse without any difficulty with these grand old Israelites. They are very gracious to me.

There is one venerable old Hebrew, the patriarch of his race, with snow-white beard flowing down to his breast; he is quite a model for a sculptor. He is constantly visiting the great Temple, and as he passes our

PRAY FOR THE MISSIONS!

Our Missions to the Freedmen: they need your prayers. Your missionaries and teachers are in the midst of enemies and surrounded with perils. They have gone forth, like Joshua of old, to fight the battles of the Lord and defeat the hosts of Amalek. Ye ministers of Christ, who stand, like Moses, on the hill-top, gazing on the conflict and waiting anxiously the result, raise your hands to heaven in prayer; and, ye Aarons and Hurs, stay them up till the sun goes down, and Israel prevails. God will be inquired of. He will be importuned. He will hear and answer prayer. God help the missionaries, and give them victory over Amalek and all of Satan's hosts. We are marching into the promised land.

W. B. H.

Post Office Address.

The address of Bro. I. I. LESLIE is Box 634 Memphis, Tenn. Sr. MARTHA S. BUTLER's address is the same. They would be glad to have the brethren and sisters generally write to them. Words of sympathy and encouragement from the dear friends at home will be always thankfully received, and give them much cheer and comfort in their labors and trials.

Bro. H. K. FLAGG's address for the present is St. Louis, Mo. Sr. FRANCELIA F. CURTIS, teacher of the school there, may be addressed at No. 149 North Sixth Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Write to them, brethren, with words of cheer and help. W. B. H.

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

BRO. HERRON:—I am much pleased with the management and tone of the Young Pilgrim since it has been under your supervision. I find the little folks where I travel are perfectly delighted with it.

Let all who can, seek to swell its list of subscribers. Let each try and get one new subscriber, if no more. May God continue to bless you in its editorial charge.

Your Bro. in Christ, A. W. SIBLEY.

The Young Pilgrim for April 15th.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

The Coming Kingdom. The Resurrection (cut.) Like Jesus. A New Creature. Be Humble. Mind the Door. What is the Tongue for? Never tell a lie. God Hears. Bad Books—Burn them! Can you Forgive? Two kinds of Advice. "I go to Sunday School." Children's Work. The Savior's Sympathy. Words of a Dying Child. Good Resolutions. "Of course there is a God!" "I'll do it to-morrow." The Stones of Solomon's Temple. A Lighthouse (cut.) Letter from St. Louis. Young Pilgrim Letters, from Clara, Emily, Carrie, Sarah, and Clarence. Bible Questions and Riddles.

Now is the time to get subscribers and form clubs for the Young Pilgrim. For terms see last page.

For the World's Crisis.

"ANGELS" AND THE DORCAS MISSION.

Beloved of God in Christ:—It is my purpose, in concert with a brother here, to whom I am indebted to some extent in getting out my work on the "Angels," to give $15 worth of that work in aid of the "Dorcas Mission" of Philadelphia. Now, from this consideration, will you not send for the work at once, and thereby accomplish three things: 1. Procure a little work treating upon a highly interesting subject, and which has been commended by all, so far as we learn, who have perused it; and which, by the blessing of God, may do you good. 2. Enable me to help pay for it, and also to contribute to the mission. 3. Indirectly contribute to the mission yourself, and thereby feed the hungry, clothe the naked, carrying in some measure "good cheer" to many depressed spirits, to many sad hearts.

Is not this being found engaged in a good work? and will not Jesus commend and reward such in the day of his coming? He most assuredly will observe, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ...ye have done it unto me." Hence the invitation, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him," sitting "upon the throne of his glory,"—"Come, ye blessed of my Father," etc. Matt. 25: 30-46.

Now what is done must be done quickly. Send in your orders without delay, that the money may be forwarded at once to Bro. Burbank. Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

Your Bro. in Christ,
WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

Address William Shepherd, Newark, New Jersey. Price, single copies 20 cents.

For the World's Crisis.

ONE DAY IN THE WOODS.

After four weeks in cities among the rattling of carriages and bustle of business, and attending two meetings a day, I took a trip back upon the mountains, to hold a meeting. I witnessed nature and grace, and found a natural family, living in the only house in sight, where two generations had lived and died. No improvement had been made; all was as nature formed it. It was the roughest place I ever saw people try to get a living on by tilling the land; but there were other advantages. I noticed nature formed their sled track and thills, and other things grew the right shape for their use. They raised their own flax and wool, and manufactured it into cloth. They made their own sugar and molasses; raised their own pork, and eat it; and did their own doctoring. Although they had a large family, they had had no death. They had no disputes; all seemed satisfied with their lot. Not one of the nine ever saw a vessel, nor the salt water.

A sound of a wagon would attract the attention of the whole family. They had but six weeks winter school, and went one mile and a half to get to that; and yet all were mannerly, graceful, and received the truth in the love of it. How easy I could preach; how good I did sleep; how still the air was. It was retirement indeed, almost away from trouble and the wickedness of this age. Pride was not discovered in the meeting. There was no affectation in speaking in meeting. There was nothing to disturb one's peace in the neighborhood, for all loved the coming of the Lord, except two or three.

Some came thirty miles to hear; many five to eighteen. The Lord blessed the gathering with a good meal in the wilderness, and graced the meeting with some twenty testimonies after preaching. We intend to go there again.

HIRAM MUNGER.

BRO. A. N. SEYMOUR writes:—"I am having glorious times some five miles west of Toledo, Ohio. Hundreds are being most deeply impressed with the gospel of our soon coming Lord. Prejudice is breaking away wonderfully, and many are listening with untold interest to what I am proclaiming. To God belongs all praise. Bless his holy name forever."

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, April 11, 1866.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year; but if delayed six months beyond the time of payment, the price is $3.00 a year. Thus 50 cents a year is saved by paying in advance.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MEETINGS IN BOSTON.

The meetings at the corner of Lowell and Causeway streets, Boston, still continue to be seasons of great refreshing to the saints, and afford an open pool where sinners are being cleansed from their sins through the love and kindness of Jesus. It was said by one of our brethren who has attended meetings in Boston for some twenty-five years or more, that those now being held are the best he has ever enjoyed.

One very important feature in these meetings, by which they are specially characterized, is the absence of a sectarian spirit, which always hedges up the progress of pure christianity, instead of advancing it. Members of the various churches come in and take an active part, and feel just as free, and, as they express themselves, even more so than they do in their own meetings. We believe this is one special reason why the Lord is bestowing such rich blessings upon us. If one happens to say something which others think is not in harmony with all their views of the Bible, they do not rise up to combat him, and thus destroy all the good influence of the meeting; but endeavor to show the kind and loving spirit of Jesus, and thus win the people to the light and truth, instead of driving them away.

It is lamentable to see how many have been pushed away from the narrow path that leads to life, in consequence of seeing an unkind spirit manifested by some professors of religion. We can never succeed in leading sinners to Christ, unless we approach them as christian friends. When they see professors of religion wrangling and disputing with one another, they at once turn away in disgust. We shall not all think alike in this world, hence the need of forbearance and long-suffering. If we expect to be ready for the coming of the Son of man, we must "love one another." Without this qualification all is vain.

The feeling manifested in the Lowell street meetings is just such as we expect to see exhibited by the true bride of the Lamb at the time of his second coming. All the christians from the different churches,—rich and poor, white and black, learned or ignorant, appear to love the appearing of Jesus; hence his speedy coming is a common theme in all meetings. No one seems to be opposed to this important doctrine. This is but another evidence that our Savior is soon coming.

Our meetings on Fast day, April 5th, were blessed seasons. It was a feast day in the Lord, and will be remembered with great pleasure by those who were privileged to be present. Bro. J. G. Hook will continue at the meetings afternoons and evenings for the present, as the Lord may direct.

DISCUSSION AT LOWELL.

Our discussion at Lowell, Mass., was one of much interest and profit to the lovers of truth, the friends of Jesus and his holy religion; and we trust it did much damage to the cause of Satan. It commenced on Monday evening, Mar. 26th, in Lee St. meeting-house, and continued five evenings before a large, orderly, and very attentive audience. Many had their eyes open, as never before, to see that Spiritualism is most directly opposed to a pure christianity. We never heard a man talk worse against the Bible, the God of the Bible, and Jesus, than did our opponent. We thought he talked badly enough at Springfield, when he said:—"The Bible is not calculated to elevate mankind." "It is an abominable doctrine to believe that the Bible contains the word of God to men." "There is no God above ourselves," etc. But his remarks at Lowell were still more blasphemous, if possible. In every speech, he made efforts to impeach the Bible, which only made the good book appear more precious; just as pure gold shines brighter for being rubbed. He said the God of the Bible was only a human spirit, and charged him with being guilty of lust, and other base passions. He did not bring a single passage of Scripture to prove his points; hence we conclude that he is satisfied the Bible does not teach the immortality of man. At Providence and Worcester he attempted to prove that it did; at Philadelphia he made a faint effort to sustain his position by the Bible; at Springfield he cited two passages only, but none at Lowell. His best proof, as he admitted, was the testimony of the spirits themselves; but we found they were lying spirits, hence his doctrine was established only by lying demons.

He claimed that Spiritualism is the same as ancient christianity; but on examination, it was found to be only heathenism revived; hence the choice is between christianity and heathenism, or, more properly, Spiritualism, as it is now called.

He said he had just as much confidence in the Hindoo account of Khrishna, as in the Bible account of Christ, and should even give his preference for the former.

He freely and publicly admitted that he was "a lost man" if our position is correct. He said "the heathen gods were as good, or better than ours"; that the God whom Paul preached to the Athenians was only a human spirit. We asked him to tell us what human spirit it was which "made the world, and all things therein," who "is Lord of heaven and earth;" who "giveth to all life and breath," which is what Paul says of the God whom he made known to the Athenians? We obtained no answer to our inquiry. He said he would believe the heathen record about the god Jupiter, before he would the Bible account of our Savior; and yet claimed that "Jesus was a good man"!!

After hearing all our opponent, as an accomplished Spiritualist, had to say, we think no point could be made plainer than that Spiritualism is nothing but heathenism revived, and is most truly and emphatically anti-christian in all its tendencies.

The meetings on the Lord's day following the discussion were seasons of special interest to the friends of Jesus. The love-feast in the morning was a feast indeed. The common expression was, "I never loved my Bible as I do this morning." After hearing it defamed as they had during the discussion, it looked firmer, more reliable and precious than ever before. The discussion has awakened a new interest in Lowell. Many could not find even standing room in the house, and were obliged to go away. Some who have been in sympathy with the Spiritualists, do not wish to follow them any further on the road to perdition. But few, excepting those who have been as it were behind the curtain, had but a faint idea of the demoniacal character of Spiritualism. They are now satisfied that in it is embodied all that is really anti-Bible, anti-God, and anti-Christ. May the Lord help us to flee from it as did Lot from Sodom.

IS SPIRITUALISM CHRISTIANITY?

We think no system of religion can be further removed from it. It utterly repudiates the whole plan of salvation as taught in the Bible by Jesus and his apostles. It denies that Jesus was begotten by the Holy Spirit; that he was the Son of God as taught in the Scriptures; that his death had any more to do with our salvation than that of any martyr; that he was raised from the dead; that he will ever come again to this planet personally; or that he forgives sin. It also denies the existence of God, except as a "principle" in all matter; that the God of the Bible created the earth, or man; that "he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness"; it teaches that there is "no sin"; that all will be saved; and yet it has not led one to the Savior, but many thousands away from him, with fair promises of something better; just as the wily seducer leads the innocent from a happy home to the dens of iniquity, and final ruin.

Is it not the duty of those who see and know these things to sound the alarm? If he who sees the blind man about to step off a precipice is guilty when he refuses to tell him of his danger; how much more so is he who remains silent when he sees his fellow beings about to take a road that leads to eternal destruction. How can the Lord say, "Well done, good and faithful servant," to him who has looked on quietly, while men and women have been seduced away from the road to life, by those whom he knows to be demons transformed into angels of light?

Such considerations as these have urged us to say what we have on this subject. We have none but kind feelings towards all who have been so unfortunate as to be seduced by the demons. We have spoken plainly because we feel friendly. We do not wish to wound the feelings of one who believes in Spiritualism; but we do wish to expose the wicked spirits who are laying plans to ruin our race if possible.

We have hardly begun to open the deep iniquity of this demoniacal system. But we hope these few words, by the blessing of God, may be the means of assisting the reader to arm himself against this awful delusion; causing him to cling closer to Jesus and the Bible, and be ready for the coming kingdom.

"A CRY FOR NEW LIGHT."

In another column our readers will find an interesting article with the above heading, taken from the "Rainbow," an able monthly printed in London, Eng., and edited by Dr. William Leask. It is very evident that many church members begin to feel the want of light upon the prophecies. For some twenty years they have been almost entirely neglected by popular preachers; consequently, their congregations are in comparative darkness on the very subjects which are now of the most thrilling importance to the followers of Jesus. We hope they will be willing to receive light from a humble source, and be prepared for coming events.

DAYS OF BLOOD.

This is emphatically an age of crime. The wicked are having their jubilee. The blackest deeds are multiplying in rapid succession all over the world. He who says the world, as a whole, is growing better, is as far from the truth as he would have been had he asserted the same thing a short time before the flood. The Bible would not be true if the world was not approaching a state of wickedness like that in Sodom and in the days of the antediluvians. We must be prepared to hear of things as bad as it is in the power of men and demons to accomplish. This is the time for all the followers of Jesus to be clothed with "the whole armor of God."

The following is from one of our exchanges:—

"Some weeks, or perhaps months ago, there was executed in Kentucky, in pursuance of the sentence of a military court, a brute named Champ Ferguson. He confessed to something over fifty deliberate murders, and his victims included helpless old men, women, and negroes; for the wilful shooting of one of the latter, he gave as a reason 'that a nigger had no business to be a soldier,' and so he shot him. This man came to the scaffold defiant and unrepenting, stating that he would repeat the same acts if he had his life to live over again, and he rather gloried in his deeds of evil."

INQUIRY FOR TRUTH.

BRO. GRANT:—In 1 Sam. 28th chapter, do you understand that the witch of Endor literally raised Samuel? or was Saul deceived? Or is it not a piece of the same web we are having in these last days from spirit manifestations? Please answer in Crisis.

For the brethren, JOHN S. MOULTON.

We are satisfied that the woman at Endor had no power to raise the dead; but that her "familiar spirit" represented Samuel to her just as a mesmerizer would. In either case it is a deception. No real person is present, but exists only in the brain of the operator. The demon forms a mental likeness of the individual called for, and that mental picture, in the demon's mind, becomes a real object to the medium, when she can describe it, as in the case of Samuel. We consider the account a record of a spiritual manifestation, like those at the present day.

PEACE PROCLAMATION.

On the 2d of April President Johnson issued a peace proclamation; and after giving his reasons for so doing, he concludes as follows:—

"Therefore I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare that the insurrection which heretofore existed in the States of Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi and Florida at an end, and henceforth to be so regarded.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, the 2d day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninetieth.

By the President, ANDREW JOHNSON.
WM. H. SEWARD, Sec. of State."

GENUINENESS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

In these days of infidelity, when thousands, by the aid of demons, are making great efforts to destroy the confidence of men in the Bible, it is well to look at the ground of our confidence in the holy Scriptures, that we may stand firmly against all the assaults of the enemy, and be able to give a good reason for the hope within us that we prize so highly. In order to do this, we only need to be posted in the well-known evidences of the Christian faith, and the stoutest scoffer will be obliged to quail before the light.

There is a work by S. P. Tregelles, entitled, "New Testament Historic Evidence," published by Samuel Bagster and Sons, 15 Paternoster Row, London, that is well calculated to strengthen the faith of those who love the Bible. The following is an extract from the work, found on pp. 108—113.

"There are certain consequences resulting from the proved authorship of the books of the New Testament, which may be briefly indicated. They may be regarded as plain corollaries to the points already demonstrated.

Since, then, we possess in the New Testament genuine historic monuments of contemporary writers, who were perfectly competent to bear testimony to the facts of which they were cognizant, we must give their evidence its full weight as assuring us of the truth of those facts. And, further, as the books of the New Testament were not, when written, laid up in secret, but were from the first widely circulated amongst a body of persons, who were themselves possessed of a competent knowledge of the facts, it is plain that this body of persons, the christian community of the first century, consisting of believing Jews and believing Gentiles, are corroborative witnesses to the truth of the historic monuments.

We possess, therefore, every conceivable ground of certainty in regard to the New Testament as giving to us a narrative of real historical occurrences, presented to us by a body of such witnesses, that if we reject their evidence, we must also say that all testimony is unworthy of credit. These witnesses, moreover, so lived and acted, and (in many cases) so laid down their lives, as to give, if needful, a yet further confirmation of their testimony.

It follows, therefore, that christianity, as based on the facts of the incarnation, death, and resurrection of the Son of God—whatever be its doctrines or its duties—must be true. Its truth is a proved historical fact.

We must bear in mind that the nature of the fact proved makes no difference whatever; it may be a thing wholly void of importance, or it may involve considerations of the most solemn moment. If the historic proof be sufficient, no after-considerations can be admitted to counterbalance such proof. The case before us is not merely one of historic probability, but one of demonstrated reality; we need not, then, raise the question as to any balance of probabilities, as must be done in many cases.

We have no occasion, therefore, to consider the antecedent probability, or the contrary, of the facts to which the New Testament bears testimony: no such considerations can affect the force of the absolute evidence which we possess. How continually do we find that we are obliged to admit the reality of facts which, in themselves, seem most improbable! We know the origin of the Book of Mormon,—how it was originally written by Solomon Spaulding, as a kind of romance: we know how Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon interpolated it, and then gave it forth as a divine Revelation; we find, besides, in the book itself, the most contemptible absurdities; so that on the antecedent mode of argumentation, we should, of course, conclude, that the Book of Mormon was regarded by all as simply the production of Spaulding's idle hours, and that Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon were universally looked on as impostors so low as not even to possess the talent of invention. Therefore, it might be concluded that Mormonism, as a system, could not exist,—that it does not exist,—and all who maintain that there are or ever have been such a body of persons, are assuming a ground wholly untenable. And yet, look at what occurred in the states of Missouri and Illinois; look at what now exists in the Utah territory; or, let attention be paid to the labors of Mormonite missionaries in this very town. We have proof sufficient that we must admit facts on evidence, irrespective of our antecedent thoughts.

Difficulties are not unfrequently raised by objectors on the ground of supposed discrepancies or contradictions of the New Testament writers. We may, however inquire whether the alleged discrepancies are such as would invalidate the historic authority of other writers; if not, then they must be allowed no more weight when they are objected against Apostles and Evangelists. But, again, are the discrepancies real or only seeming? Are they such as admit of no explanation or reconciliation? Perhaps we may not perceive the true mode of explanation, but can we be sure that none is possible? Unless we must give an unfavorable answer to these inquiries, we may safely dismiss them as not being of such a character as ought to trouble us in the least.

But, further, we may ask objectors, were those, to whom the New Testament writings were first addressed, wholly destitute of discrimination? Were they, when they received the Gospels, and added them one to another, so as to form our collection, incapable of perceiving the difficulties which some would regard as so formidable? Is it not certain that those who were best acquainted with the facts, held and transmitted our four Gospels as the histories of those facts? Who, then, can say that they, having done this in spite of any supposed difficulties, are not in a manner the guarantees to us that none of the alleged difficulties are really inexplicable?

Perhaps no historical difficulty, connected with the Gospels, has been so much relied on as that relating to the taxing, in Luke 2nd. "And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria." This taxing, then, is said by St. Luke to be anterior to the birth of Christ, and yet Cyrenius was not governor of Syria till about twelve years later. What a contradiction! an objector might say. But let us apply to this difficulty the circumstances of historic transmission, and then let us see whether they do not rebut the force of the difficulty. We have seen that we have good grounds of evidence for acquiescing in the common belief, which assigns the authorship of our third Gospel, and the Acts of the Apostles, to Luke, the companion of St. Paul. The Gospel was, therefore, written about sixty years after the events which are described in the opening chapters. The taxing was an event peculiarly well known to all the Jews, as it was the incident which affixed the actual mark of subjection to Rome on them as a nation, and which sealed the transfer of Judæa to those Western rulers. Now, it was impossible for those at large, for whom Luke wrote, not to be acquainted with these things; and, therefore, their reception of this Gospel, as an authentic history, is a proof that they did not see anything insurmountable in what the Evangelist had stated. If any one were now to write about the events of the French revolution, 1789—93, he might so take for granted that his readers knew the leading events, that he would not be afraid of having his meaning misconceived, even though his words were capable of a construction opposed to open and notorious facts. If any one were to object either to the veracity or accuracy of such a writer, who is there that would not see that the objection was utterly futile? The public notoriety of leading facts must often be our guide in understanding what is written about them. We must not look merely from the present day at ancient writings and events, but we must make our point of view the actual time when we prove that the books, which we examine, were written, and from that we must look at the events described. We must then inquire whether what we suppose to be discrepancies were really such to the first readers, and whether their having transmitted the books as authentic, in spite of such difficulties, does not in itself remove the greater part of their alleged force, and whether the difficulties do not afford some proof of the truth, honesty, and absence of all imposition in the whole matter.

We need not undervalue the pains which have been taken to discuss each particular difficulty, and to show that each is really groundless. but in doing this we must not forget the antecedent vantage-ground which we possess in the evidence of historic transmission; this meets many a difficulty; this enables us to say (whether we can explain the objection or not,) the contemporaries of the writer received the record such as it is, and they have thus transmitted it as authentic to us, they had all the facts before them, and they are authorities to us that the difficulties are no impeachment to the authenticity. Thus will evidence of historic transmission from them remove objections even before explaining them.

But from the proved historical fact of christianity, as recorded in the New Testament, other consequences result. Christianity must be a revelation from God, authoritatively confirmed to us by Him. The whole of the miraculous impress which the New Testament history bears is a proof of this,—a proof which can only be avoided by denying that the New Testament presents to us historic realities. If the according testimony of competent witnesses be not a sufficient proof of the reality of the New Testament miracles, then is no conceivable degree of evidence sufficient to persuade men that God has thus confirmed a revelation of His will, intended to teach the way of forgiveness and salvation.

But the character of the facts does not really affect the evidence, if it be good in so far as it testifies that Jesus Christ was crucified, it is equally good in its attestation that he rose from the dead: if it be good in its testimony that Jesus was a teacher, then it is just as valid in declaring that, in proof of his mission, he did such works as no other man did. And further, the living multitude of christians, when the New Testament books were written, were themselves witnesses to the signs and wonders wrought by the Apostles, in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth.

Thus did the writers of the New Testament claim the place of authoritative teachers of the revelation which God had given, and thus fully did they substantiate that claim. The New Testament professes an authority, that though written by men, yet that it contains not the mere words of men, but the words of God himself. The apostles claim nothing short of this. the promises of Christ to this effect are recorded in the Gospels, and in all their authoritative teaching they show that they claimed inspiration. This may be briefly described as being such an operation of the Holy Ghost on them, that they wrote not as mere men, but as those whom he qualified and endowed for the writing of Scripture; so that, without their individuality having been at all destroyed, they wrote those things which God saw fit that they should write, and in such a way as he was pleased to appoint.

Inspiration may or may not be accompanied with a communication of new truth: in the former case there would be revelation; but inspiration is as much needed to write authoritatively known facts as it is to communicate new truth; else why should such and such facts be selected, and others be passed by? To record precepts and doctrines authoritatively, inspiration was as necessary as it was to declare things before unknown to man: and this inspiration the New Testament writers claim; this inspiration was confirmed by the miracles which they wrought; this inspiration was promised by our Lord when he unfolded to his apostles the relation in which the Holy Ghost should stand to them; and this inspiration was owned by contemporaries as attaching to our New Testament books, inasmuch as they received them, making as they do such exalted claims."

For the World's Crisis.

A TENT.

BRO. GRANT:—I am still in the work; and doing a good business. Have had a discussion at Strawberry Point, and had a happy result. Praise the Lord. I am raising means to buy a tent for mission work. I have obligated myself to pay $250. I still lack $50, and I have received the following pledges to raise the $50.

A. Gilbert	$5.00
L. Conley	2.00
Job Gildersleeve	5.00
H. Deyo	5.00
Marion Newcomb	1.00

Strawberry Point. P. S. W. DEYO.

☞ Nothing overcomes passion more than silence.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

For the Free Distribution of Tracts.

Previous acknowledgments	[illegible]
L. N. Johnson	.50
M. A. Perrin	1.00
J. W. Trumbull	2.50
C. Lewis	1.00

POOR FUND DONATIONS.

To send the Crisis to the Poor.

Whole number sent free, 500. Ann'l Expense, $1400,00.

Previous acknowledgments	$272.15
L. F. Bacon, Vt.	.50

Cannot do without it.

A subscriber writes:—"I paid for M. M.'s paper last year in advance, so as to get him interested in it, and in the truths we love; and now he sends through me $2.50 for another year himself, saying he cannot do without it."

The American Advent Mission Society.

All communications relating to the business of the Society, and all applications for situations as teachers or missionaries, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, WILLIAM B. HERRON, "Crisis" Office, Boston.

All donations of money, or clothing, or other supplies for the Freedmen, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEORGE T. ADAMS, 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

In sending supplies, enclose in a letter to the same address a notice and list of the articles sent.

FREEDMEN'S MISSION FUND.

Previous acknowledgments	1860.67
A friend of the slave, Chicopee, Mass.	20 00
Sidney Hall, Ct., (pledge paid)	31.25
Y. P. Fund	2.81

YOUNG PILGRIM POOR FUND.

To send the Young Pilgrim to the Poor.

300 copies are sent free to Mission Schools and elsewhere.

Previous acknowledgments	$58.83
Andrew B. Fabrick, Clinton, Mich	1.00
W. S. C., Rutland, Vt.	2.00

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$421.35
J. S. W.	1.00
M. A. C., Middle Creek, Kansas	10.00

For the World's Crisis.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

This is a very corrupt and wicked city; probably the most so of any in the State, if not in the South, or country. I am told by those here who have lived in most of the other large cities in the South, that this is fully equal to any in its moral degradation and crime. It can truly be said that wickedness here abounds, and violence fills the city. Sin stalks abroad unblushingly at noonday, and in the darkness it is rampant. There is no real security here after nightfall for any out upon the street, anywhere in the city. Many, white and black, go armed. The police, or many of them, are little better than highwaymen, either accessory to crimes, or bribed to shelter those who commit them. Good and honest men are the last to be appointed to defend the innocent and bring to justice the murderer and robber. On the other hand, to the most unprincipled men are confided the peace and security of the city. Like the "cities of the plain," this is sunk in sin and debauchery. But there are Lots here, as there are in all other places, who preserve from destruction the wicked around them, until their iniquity is full, and the time comes for the good to be taken away. Then will come the destruction of these modern cities of the plain, fire from heaven consuming them all.

I have said there is no real security for the traveler here anywhere. Especially is there none for the stranger, who comes here without friends to warn him of the dangers that on every hand surround him. Many come here who never are heard from by their friends afterwards. They fall by the hand of the assassin and robber, and in most cases the act comes not to the light. A stranger, especially one who is supposed to come from the North, is looked upon with hatred and disgust by every rebel southern man and woman; and nothing is too bad to wish him. He is often watched when he little suspects it, and if by word or act he gives offence to these hot-blooded sons and daughters of our nation, the danger to life and the pursuit of happiness is greatly increased, and he may never feel himself safe here afterwards.

The government is trying to keep a firm grasp upon all disloyal and rebellious persons, but this does not change their minds towards it, or make them less rebellious at heart; consequently the city is not really more virtuous and moral. If it were true that there are fewer crimes committed here now than months ago, it would not follow that there was less disposition to commit them. If robberies and murders have become less frequent, it is not because the people are better, but for the reason that more stringent orders have been issued by the government. No one here doubts that if the government should withdraw, but for one week, its protection to Union men and the poor blacks, a scene of bloodshed and carnage would be presented to the world. There is hatred enough in thousands of hearts here towards us to prompt them to the worst deeds recorded in the annals of history.

If we have come here, and are now teaching these poor, down-trodden ones to read the word of God and instructing them in all that they need to know, pertaining to this life and that which is to come, it is not because the professed christian people of the South desire us here, or wish us to do it. On the contrary, if they were not controled by the strong arm of the government, which gives us all the earthly protection we have, we should be at once exterminated; not even be permitted to return to our homes and families. Under God, the government gives us all the privileges of doing good that we here enjoy. There is no credit to be given to the white people of the South for the liberty we have here of teaching the benighted, clothing the naked, visiting the sick, and those in prison, and preaching the gospel to the poor. All this they would prevent if they could, and kill those who are now doing it. I am speaking of the mass of Southern men and women. There are some noble exceptions.

There are some here who have learned Christ really and truly, and are following him, loving as he did all that bear the image of God, let the skin be of what color it may. But these exceptions are few, so few that they are like Lots in Sodom. There are some here, I must believe, who will rejoice at the coming of Christ. But how few must be that number, judging from the people's present state of feeling and living,—their feeling towards us and the poor blacks, whom they have so wronged,—their lives so marked by pride, intemperance, and other worldly lusts. How can they be ready for that day who deny and continually violate the golden rule of Christ—"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you"? Love for Christ cannot exist where love for all men does not. He that loves God will love his brother also. Who loves his brother here in the sense and to the extent taught in the divine word? He that would enslave me, does not love me. If he loved me, he would wish me to have all that he himself desired; and if I lacked, he would, if in his power to do so, supply me with that which I needed, or with whatever would benefit me. This is the love of which God speaks. This is the spirit of Christ, and none can be raised from the dead at the first resurrection, or be changed from mortal to immortal, when he appears, who have not this spirit and love abiding in them. I care not how high the profession or standing of a man in the church is, if he does not love with this love his brother whom he hath seen, he does not love God whom he hath not seen, and therefore can never see him. The pure, loving, unselfish heart, only can see God. God will never show himself to the hater of any of his creatures. God is love, and he only who dwells in love will dwell with God hereafter. The slaveholder in heart cannot dwell with God. He does not love his brother—he does not love God.

The love of slavery is the strongest love which the slaveholder possesses. This has been proved by his readiness to sacrifice all for it,—even to lay down his life for its perpetuation. Sad, indeed, is this fact, and terribly sad is the condition of mind in which they are left who risked all for slavery and lost what they loved most and fought hardest to keep. They loved slavery, and love it still. Did they no longer love it, there would be hope of their repentance and acceptance by God. But they love that which God hates, and has wrested from them. How can they repent? how can they love him? how can they be ready for the reign of Christ, and be saved at his appearing and kingdom?

Had it not been that they loved this monster which has ruined them, the gospel of the kingdom might have been preached and received here as readily as in other parts of the country and world; and a people been made ready here for the Lord. Now there is little hope of this portion of the nation becoming enlightened upon this most glorious and saving truth. Besides the fact that their love of oppression and power would prevent them from desiring and believing in the personal reign of Christ at hand (overthrowing, as it would, all their idolatry of slavery), they would not receive the evidence of its coming and nearness from those who alone would be willing to present it to them. They know that they who preach the speedy coming of Christ, and are ready for his appearing, hate slavery, which they love, and are praying that it may remain dead, or become more and more extinct. With this chasm between us, how could they condescend to be taught by those who they feel have been the cause of all the loss which they have sustained? If we would take them by the hand, we cannot, certainly not unless we ignore the colored people, and become identified with those who hate them or neglect them.

No minister of Christ can come here from the North and get access to the white people of the South, who manifest any interest in the poor freedmen. The least sympathy for them, on his part, if expressed, will close all doors against him.

These things are sad to contemplate, but they exist. It is lamentable to think that one half of this nation have shut out the light of heaven from their hearts and dwellings by their love of the spirit of oppression. O, that they knew, even in this their day, what belongs to their peace! But it is hidden from their eyes.

O, cursed slavery! O, monster of the pit! When I consider what its nature is, and its effect upon the heart, how it has cursed, blighted, and been an eternal hindrance to the everlasting life and joy of millions, I am lost for language by which to execrate and condemn it. I abhor it! I loathe it! I spurn it! But if I, vile as I am, feel thus towards it, how does God, who is holy, regard it? Let me not love what God hates. I. I. LESLIE.

A BUNDLE OF OLD, OLD LETTERS,

ON THEMES OF DEEPEST MOMENT.

Quintus Calpurnius, Captain of Augustus' Band, to his beloved wife, Cornelia, greeting.

In my last letter from Joppa, I wrote you of our voyage from the harbor of Berytus, where an infant colony has just been established down the coast, to Joppa. At Joppa we stayed but a few days. It is a miserable place at best, and gives one a very bad impression on entering this land of Judæa. The roadstead is very much exposed, and unsafe for anchorage. Orders were awaiting us to come straightway to Jerusalem, the metropolis of this country; for an enrolment of the inhabitants of this province has never actually been made, although the province itself had been annexed to our empire some time ago. The decree of the Senate was first issued about three years ago, but has not been enforced until this present year, A. U. C. 753. Disturbances are expected during this polling, for these people are an intractable race, and obstinately tenacious in their patriotism.

Jerusalem is one of the oldest cities in the whole world. Looked at from a soldier's point of view, I like it extremely. It is admirably defended by nature. Steep precipices to the east, and south, and west, where it is almost impregnable; on the north also it can easily be defended by the ramparts. It has stood upon these hills for more than two thousand years, so that in comparison our own Rome is quite a modern city. It is even said that it is by no means the oldest city in the country. The histories of this people are remarkably interesting. The early chronicles, especially, are full of grand martial exploits, and the country is filled with memorials of battle scenes. There is a most faithful Greek translation of these chronicles, and through the kindness of a venerable old Israelite, I have the loan of a roll from the library of the Temple. So beautifully, yet so simply are they written, that you might well imagine that they were inspired by the gods themselves.

I find my knowledge of the Aramaic dialect, acquired whilst we were quartered in Syria, extremely valuable; for although it is not so pure as the Hebrew spoken here, yet I can converse without any difficulty with these grand old Israelites. They are very gracious to me.

There is one venerable old Hebrew, the patriarch of his race, with snow-white beard flowing down to his breast; he is quite a model for a sculptor. He is constantly visiting the great Temple, and as he passes our Castle of Antonio, he delights to talk with us Romans about his grand old country.

I shall have much to tell you about this good old Simeon. He is virtue itself. In fact, I very much question whether it is possible for us Romans, under the teachings of our philosophy, to live as virtuously and as free from guile as this loving old man. He ever wears a smile, which gives such a lustre to his countenance, you would say that one of the best of our deities was looking down upon you, and talking with you the while. Our Castle of Antonio, where we are quartered, is close to the Temple, and I have already had many walks with him in the porch that is called, after one of their old kings, Solomon's.

You can form but a faint conception of the grandeur of the Temple here. There is only one in the whole country, for the Jews only worship one Deity. It is the third structure that has stood on the same site. The first was the grandest of all. Old Simeon translated me the other day an account of its altar of gold, its columns of burnished gold, its vessels of gold, silver, brass, the screen of costliest workmanship, which was only lifted once a year: its outer stones of vast size. And then the sumptuousness of the sacrifices, the splendid and most costly vestments of the officiating priesthood. The grandeur of the present edifice is excessive too. The Viceroy, Herod, is sparing no expense over its buildings and decorations. He is most unpopular as a governor, and deservedly so, for he is a capricious tyrant, a monster of cruelty, and is of a nation or tribe that has been at deadly enmity with the Jews during the whole course of their history, even for fourteen hundred years. I marvel that our Senate should permit such a monster to be their Viceroy. It is said that he has paid large sums into the Imperial Exchequer. To ingratiate himself as much as possible with the Jews, Herod is laying out most extravagant sums of money upon the Temple. It has been thirteen or fourteen years already in course of improvement, and notwithstanding, is likely to be as many more before it is completed. There are huge blocks of most beautifully polished marble, of such marvellous bulk that even we are amazed who are accustomed to the grandeur of Rome. But the work that astonishes me most of all is the Beautiful Gate, on the eastern side leading on to the terrace which I have named Solomon's Portico. Well may this gate bear this name: 'tis one of the marvels even of this age of progress; the like to which I ne'er shall see again. Its folding-leaves are composed of that most precious metal, Corinthian brass. When our general destroyed the luxurious city of Corinth, about 150 years ago, all the costly treasures of untold value were given to the flames; gold, silver, copper, iron, tin, lead, were all fused together, and when the molten stream became cool, it formed one of the most brilliant, and as you may suppose, the most costly of precious metals, because not able to be imitated or reproduced. But there is one thing that disgusts one who has any pretensions to refined tastes. On this covered terrace, on the brink of a most precipitous valley, the opposite side of which rises to a still more imposing height, and is covered with most luxuriant olive-yards—on this glorious promenade, I say, are placed lame, blind, paralytic beggars, in all their unwashed and unkempt misery, and your sensitive feelings are deeply wounded by such scenes, and by the clamors for alms in so lovely a spot. The notion is that the Jew worshiper, on visiting his Temple, will there be more disposed to pity and relieve.

The time of worship is at the third and the ninth hour. And as there is no Temple of Mars here, or of Jupiter Stator, I pay my vows in the Court of the Gentiles to this mysterious Deity of the Jews. All who can possibly get up to the Temple itself, worship there, for they imagine that they pray more acceptably in its courts. When the cloud of the smoke of the burnt-offering is seen rising from the open courts of the golden altar, then all business is suspended for a short space, and wherever the worshiper may be—in the street, the mart, or on the housetop, he falls prostrate in adoration. We have received instructions never to interfere with this remarkable people in all matters touching their religion. But even if we had not, there is something so simple, so sacred, so imposing, that I am quite won towards their mode of religious worship, and I am constantly in the court of the strangers at the hour of prayer.

It is this that has gained me the hearty affection of the holy Simeon. He has not failed to observe the Roman centurion as he passed through the hall of the Gentiles to that of his own people; and now, from mere acquaintances, we are becoming closely attached friends.

I have also made the acquaintance of another most remarkable personage, a very aged widow. She is in her hundred-and-tenth year, and must be the very oldest person in the whole world. She has been a widow eighty-four years, and was married seven years. What changes has she seen in her long career! She told me this morning that she was not to die until she had witnessed the birth of One who should be the deliverer of his people, the Jews. She has predicted so many things that have actually transpired, that we cannot doubt her words. I thought at first she alluded to some civil revolution that she saw to be impending; but she spoke of this coming One as the Desire of all nations. So you see, my Cornelia, that not amongst ourselves at Rome, but here also, is there a sure and certain hope of a Mighty One, who is to bring back the golden age of liberty, of peace, of good will, yea, the universal brotherhood of man.

I have just spoken to Simeon about the words of the old prophetess, when he made me yet more astonished still; for he told me, in the most earnest tones of solemn assurance—the tones of one who believed every word he uttered—that he also was not to die until he had seen the Anointed One, who was to inaugurate our long wished-for age of gold.

Then he took from the folds of his dress a roll of his Scriptures, and, as he translated them, I started; for, lo! I was listening to much the same expressions as those of our favorite Virgil, in his "Pollio," which my Cornelia used to recite to me. I intend to make myself master of this glorious Hebrew language; my acquaintance with the Aramaic will help me considerably, and old Simeon has promised to introduce me to Eliezer, of Bethany, a Scribe, who will write out for me some of the choicest odes of prophecy. These Scribes get their livelihood by thus transcribing these sacred books. Thus, my Cornelia, when I can rejoin you at Baiæ, or at Puteoli, I may have the bliss of reading to you these lays of Judah's bards.

I must now tell you of another aged couple to whom Simeon has introduced me. They are of the tribe of Levi, a tribe set apart for exclusive ministration in the Temple. These Levites minister in courses, of which there are four-and twenty; and as they serve a week at a time, my new friends are only here twice in the year, besides the three great festivals, at which all attend. During the rest of the year my new friends live in the hill country of Judah, near to Hebron, the oldest city in the country, and perhaps in the whole world. I ought to tell that these Levites are distributed all over the country; they do not practise any handicraft, or follow any profession exactly, but are supported by tithes of the property, and spend their time in copying their Scriptures, or in instructing the children of their neighbors therein; they also write out portions of their laws upon parchments, which are attached to the wrists, or to the borders of their garments, and are worn as spells or charms, and hence are called phylacteries.

But, to return to my new Levite friends. The husband is called Zacharias; his wife's name is Elizabeth. Their lives are incomparable for virtue; you cannot be in their company without being influenced thereby. The devoutness of their lives, the suavity of their manners, the integrity of their morals, the wisdom of their words, take possession of your whole soul, and you feel that you are conversing with those who are entering the Elysian fields; or, as old Simeon would say, "they are not far from the kingdom of heaven." A fortnight ago they were here, for it was the old priest's turn of office. Simeon took me to their chambers once and again. They told me of their religion and their God.

They had with them a little babe, whom I supposed to be their great grand-child, or some orphan babe, whom they were bringing up with love and tenderness.

But what was my intense astonishment when the old man assured me with a beaming countenance, and yet with reverential awe, that this was the miraculous son of his old age—the son of his wife Elizabeth. Simeon, Anna, and scores besides, assured me that this was the fact. The rejoicing parents told me of the founder of their race, born in the old age of his parents likewise. I asked whether this miraculous child was to be the second founder of their race and name, even He for whom Simeon and Anna were lingering so long on earth; but, overpowered with strong emotion, the old man made reply, whilst the mother seemed to shrink with a holy horror from the bare idea, "Nay, verily! thou, child, shalt be the prophet of the Highest One, to go before his face, even as the herald messenger to prepare his way." They kissed their babe in exultation, looking for the day-spring from on high that is just about to dawn upon their highly-favored land. Surely, my Cornelia, we are on the eve of most eventful times.

The old man, Zacharias, told me that for nine long months he was stricken with dumbness because he refused to believe that his Elizabeth could become a mother in her sere old age. But now that his mouth is once more opened, he speaks as one of the lofty minstrels of our country, in strains of lofty song. Never shall I forget the ode of praise which the aged minstrel poured forth as a benediction over his dear babe! What wonders is this babe to witness! and what glorious ambassage is the man to proclaim!

Little will my Cornelia anticipate the tidings herein conveyed when she breaks the thread of this packet; and as little did I suppose, when I wrote you so lately from Joppa, on my arrival in this wondrous land, that I was to be shown such scenes of marvel.

The Feast of Tabernacles is close at hand; and, as it is a scene of peculiar joy, it has been deemed advisable to make most of the enrolment during that festive week, especially as the people will be moving up and down the country. The polling must last some time, as each family has to be enrolled to the place where its particular register is kept. Another courier will not leave for Italy until the enrolment is completed.

* * * * * *

May you live. Farewell!
A. U. C. 753. Ides of July.

Correspondence.

From Bro. T. B. Tamblyn.

BRO. GRANT.—Permit me to say, through the Crisis, that the Lord is at work once more in Concord. Sinners have been converted, backsliders reclaimed, and the people generally are being moved upon by the Spirit of God. Last Lord's day morning, at half past eight o'clock, we met at the water for the purpose of attending to the ordinance of baptism, and twelve willing souls were buried with Christ. We had a good time, thank the Lord.

Bro. H. Munger is laboring with us, and God is with him, and is blessing his labors abundantly. We believe Bro. M. to be one of God's faithful servants. May the Lord keep him in these last days.

In behalf of the church,
THOS. B. TAMBLYN.
Concord, N. H., April 2d.

From Bro. W. B. Perkins.

To the Church in Bath, of the faith of the gospel of Jesus Christ, greeting:—In obedience to the request made to me when I left you some three weeks ago, I take my pen to write you this short letter, to the end that ye may be established in every good work. I have not forgotten to make mention of you in my prayers; that he who has begun a good work among you may continue it unto his coming and kingdom. Ye yourselves know that when I was with you, I told you that in these last days men will not endure sound doctrine, but follow after doctrines of men. You know that after the children of Israel had said, "All that the Lord hath said will we do, and be obedient," how soon they were ready to make to themselves gods of wood and stone, and sacrifice their seed to the image of Moloch.

I have not time now to carry your mind along through the various changes which have taken place to the present time, and show you how sects, denominations, and churches, have come up through trials, difficulties, and opposition, and gained a name, prospered, left the first principles, become conformed to the world, ceased to be separate, and followed after covetousness and doctrines of heathen philosophers. This I will tell you when I come to you again; which will be soon, if the Lord will.

I wish now to call your attention to the multiplicity of doctrines taught at the present time; especially among those called after our name. There are some who would bring us into bondage; judging our liberty, which we have in the gospel. But "stand ye fast." Be not easily moved by every wind of doctrine. "Try the spirit, and see if it be of God." "Study to show thyself approved unto God." Be not carried away of false doctrines. "But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." "Behold I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown."
W. B. PERKINS.

Married.

In Concord, N. H., March 28th, by Rev. Dr. Flanders, Captain E. F. GORDON, late of the 12th N. H. Vols., and Miss EUNICE C. HOOK, daughter of Elder John G. Hook, of Concord.

In Danbury, N. H., March 25th, by Rev. J. H. Thing, Mr. GEORGE K. JEWETT and Miss LOVINA, daughter of Deacon Amos Smith, both of Danbury.

In Hatley, C. E., March 27th, by Zebina Young, Mr. CHARLES L. PECK, of Wolcott, Vt., and Miss PHEBE ROWELL, of Hatley. [Herald, please copy.

Obituaries.

BUSH. Died in Walker's Neck, Brown County, Ill., Oct. 6th, 1865, of typhoid fever, Bro. Joseph Bush, aged thirty-five years, three months, and eleven days.

Bro. Bush was a faithful and good man. He had been a deacon in the church since the year 1852. He loved the truth, and died in the expectation that the great Life-giver would soon come, and give him, with all the faithful, a crown of life.

The writer was called on to attend his funeral, and to administer words of comfort to his friends, which he did, from Dan. 12:13. The days are nearly ended, when Daniel and all the sleeping saints will rise and stand in their lot. May the grace of the Lord ever rest upon the mourners.
LARKIN SCOTT.

MCCORMICK. Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 23rd, 1866, Mary McCormick, wife of Charles McCormick, aged fifty-seven years.

The subject of this notice had enjoyed the christian religion for about forty years. She was a good wife and a kind and affectionate mother. The embassador of the cross always met with a kind and welcome reception at her house, regardless of sectarian names. She leaves a large circle of friends, who mourn her loss. She rests from her labors, and her works will follow her.

Brethren and sisters, pray for us, that we may be an unbroken family in the kingdom of God.
W. P. MCCORMICK.

WOOD. Died in Buckfield, Me., Dec. 23rd, 1865, Charles V. Wood, aged thirty-three years.

The subject of this notice had embraced the gospel hope. It enabled him to die in peace. He sleeps in Jesus, awaiting the resurrection of the just. He leaves a companion and four children to mourn thier loss, with a large circle of friends. May God's grace sustain them in their affliction.

"We shall greet him at home, we shall greet him,
Though now he is hid from our sight;
We think of the time we shall meet him,
And it oft fills our hearts with delight.
We have laid him away in deep sadness,
Yet not without hope in our breast;
For again he will join us with gladness,
And enter the heavenly rest."
E. M. HAGGETT.

PERKINS. Died in Meredith, N. H., March 11th, 1866, of lung fever, Sr. Sarah Perkins, aged eighty years.

Our sister embraced Christ over fifty years ago, and was baptized by Eld. Ebenezer Knowlton, and united with the Freewill Baptist church. In 1844 she united with the waiting church, looking for the return of the Nobleman, to establish his kingdom. She passed away without a struggle or a groan, saying her trust was in the Lord. She now rests on the hill, a few rods from the house, where repose a companion and her son Charles, whom the Lord called to preach this gospel of the kingdom. But now they sleep to awake when the trumpet sounds.

A discourse was delivered on the occasion by Eld. O. G. Smith, from Psa. 132:14.
J. G. SMITH.

CARR. Died in Ripley, Me., March 15th, 1866, Martin A. Carr, aged twenty years and seven months.

So many of his friends and relatives are readers of the Crisis, they were anxious to have his name mentioned in this paper. Mr. Carr's case presents one of the most interesting of death-bed conversions. The struggle was between himself alone and God. No one prayed with him, and but few spoke with him on the subject of religion. He died full of hope, peace, and holy joy.
TIMOTHY GOLDTHWAIT.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool, March 23d.

The Irish Times learns from reliable authority that the escape of Stephens is no longer a matter of doubt, as he arrived safe in Paris on Sunday morning, March 18th, when he immediately sent a telegram to his wife, who was staying at Cork, expecting every day instructions to embark for America. She and her sister forthwith set out for England, en route for Paris, to join her husband.

A Madrid telegram says the Spanish government has received important dispatches from its Minister at Washington, but upon what subject is not stated.

The London Star says Lord Grosvenor's resolution was drawn up by Mr. Disraeli, and if it should obtain a majority it will be followed immediately either by the resignation of the government or a dissolution of the House, but most probably a dissolution.

Alarming war rumors continued at Vienna, but the news is conflicting. Recruiting for the Austrian volunteers in Mexico was about to commence.

Liverpool, March 25th.

Affairs between Austria and Prussia look more threatening, so as to suggest an immediate tender of mediation by England, France and Russia. The Breslau papers publish letters from Vienna purporting to give information of warlike preparations in Austria. At Pruchna, on the Austro-Prussian frontier, space has been marked out for a military encampment. Four thousand laborers are to be employed in repairing and arming the fortifications of Cracow, for which work the sum of 1,000,000 florins will be applied.

From France we learn that Napoleon had received the address of the Corps Legislatif and made a speech, accepting the vote of the great majority as a continued indorsement of his policy, and spoke in favor of the extension of a liberty calculated to strengthen and enlighten government, not a liberty which may become an arm to undermine and overthrow it.

It is positively asserted that Head Centre Stephens is a guest of John Mitchell in Paris, and will leave Havre for New York shortly. He quitted Ireland in a sailing boat, via Galway.

Fenian affairs had received some attention in Parliament. The Attorney General for Ireland said, with respect to parties under arrest who had come from America, he was ready to give a favorable consideration to their applications for release on their promising to leave Ireland and return whence they came.

IMPUTED DESIGNS OF NAPOLEON.—A Paris letter says that it is by no means impossible that Napoleon is aiding and abetting Prussia in her alleged designs upon the Duchies, and in her desire still further to have Austria humbled. Napoleon might gain considerably by a war between Prussia and Austria. In exchange for his neutrality, or moral aid, and in exchange for the maritime advantages which she would gain by the annexation of the duchies, Prussia might be willing to give up to France the long coveted Rhenish provinces and make the Rhine the "natural boundary" of France. In the course of the conflict Italy might be able to seize Venetia, which, once in her hands, France would never permit to be restored to Austria; and in exchange for this the Italian government would doubtless be willing to abandon, finally and forever, the idea of making Rome the Capital, and even willing to guaranty to the Pope his temporal sovereignty.—Boston Journal.

DOMESTIC.

Fenian Manifesto.

Arrival of Stephens in Paris—Reasons for leaving Ireland—Intended Visit to this Country.

HEADQUARTERS FENIAN BROTHERHOOD,
NEW YORK, April 5th, 1866.

To the Fenian Brotherhood:

Brothers—It is my duty to announce to you the arrival in Paris of James Stephens, C. E. I. R., and to prepare you for his coming to the United States. Four days previous to his leaving Ireland he dispatched a special envoy to your Head Centre, with instructions to publish the following facts as soon as it became certain he had reached the French capital in safety.

First—He informs the American and Irish American public, through me, that he left the organization in Ireland in as good condition as it had been since the recent Fenian scandals begun in America and had cast a gloom over the hopes of all true lovers of freedom, and that he had placed the reins of his Government in the hands of competent, devoted and well tried leaders to direct it during his temporary absence.

Second—That he went to Paris on more important business connected with the present struggle for Irish nationality, and not because he has been forced thereto by the enemy.

Third—He is now coming to the United States for the purpose of restoring harmonious counsel and well concerted action among all true friends of Ireland on the American continent, to reconcile all discordant elements, and to make a last appeal for his suffering country to all liberty-loving men throughout the world. His stay will be but short in our midst. Let us receive his advent to these shores as his patriotic devotedness, his high talents and stern fidelity deserve. May dire discords and hateful jealousies vanish from among us at his approach. May they cease henceforth and forever to be the fell and constantly-recurring destroyers of our hopes for national resurrection.

I remain, in fraternity, your faithful servant,
JOHN O'MAHONY, H. C. F. B.

RELIGIOUS INTEREST IN CHELSEA.—A very powerful and remarkable religious interest is now existing in this city. For several weeks there has been considerable interest in some of the churches, which resulted in the Baptist church securing the services of Rev. A. B. Earle, an Evangelist to labor there. The other churches entered heartily into the work, and their labors have been abundantly blessed. On Sunday evening a meeting was held in the Chestnut street church, at which it was estimated that there were 1600 persons present. At the same time a meeting was held in the vestry which was filled, and it is estimated that a thousand persons went away, unable to gain admittance. It is believed that there were at least three hundred persons at these meetings who took the position publicly, either of those inquiring what they should do to be saved, or as rejoicing in having obtained peace through repentance and faith in Christ. The work embraces all classes in the community, and among the converts are members of the medical and legal professions—men of high standing and influence in the community, and men of over three score years, who have come with the simplicity of little children and given their hearts to Christ. The work is deepening in its influence and power, and it seems as if the whole community was moved by it. Meetings are held from 8 to 9 A. M., and from 3 to 5 P. M., and in the evening. There is no excitement, but a deep and impressive earnestness and solemnity.

METEORIC EXPLOSION.—The Charleston Courier of the 11th ult., says: "The inhabitants of Charleston were much surprised by an unusual phenomenon that occurred at about half-past eight o'clock the previous evening. The air at the time was still, and a slight shower was falling. Suddenly a vivid flash of light, considerably different in character from ordinary lightning, everywhere prevailed; and, after an interval of about one minute, came a heavy explosion, producing in many instances a jarring of windows, similar to an earthquake. A colored sentinel described the phenomenon as a falling star, and pointed to the southern heavens as the region from which he saw it descend."

New York, April 9. A Washington dispatch says it is generally expected that the President will, in a few days, release Jeff. Davis and Clement C. Clay on parole.

Halifax, March 9. It is reported that the steamer England has the cholera on board. She is in quarantine, and has 1200 passengers.

☞ A dispatch says the people of Vicksburg are much alarmed at the high water. The river is advancing steadily and already encroaching on Grove street, covering half an acre. The planters are in the greatest alarm, and there is every indication that the river will break the levee and overflow the country.

☞ A letter from Point Coupee, La., gives the particulars of a terrible hail storm, in which, in twenty minutes, hail, from the size of a quail egg to a chicken egg, fell in sufficient numbers to cover the ground seven inches deep, beating down fences, breaking trees and doing much damage in killing stock and poultry.

☞ A French official return shows that the Mexican expedition has cost France, up to the 31st of December, 1865, no less a sum than £27,000,000 sterling. The losses in the French forces, land and sea, have been 11,414 men, namely: Killed, 3319; died from wounds or effects of climate, etc., 4928; disabled for life, 3167; grand total, 11,414.

☞ According to the Cork Examiner upwards of four thousand persons left Ireland during the first week of the present month, going to the United States by way of Queenstown. It is estimated that two-thirds of the number were of the middle and farming class.

☞ A young American lady, brought up in the Christian faith, joined the Jewish Church at Chicago a few days ago.

☞ The Mobile Tribune says a genuine, unmistakable case of cholera has made its appearance in that city.

Notices.

Notice.

We shall commence a meeting in the Chapel, corner of London and Decatur streets, East Boston, Monday evening, April 9th, to continue as long as duty may demand.
JOHN G. HOOK.
C. GOODRICH.

P. S. The meetings will be continued at Lowell Street Chapel this week and next. I expect Bro. I. Damman to assist in the meetings both at Lowell Street and East Boston.
JOHN G. HOOK.

Notice.

What church in New Hampshire would like to have the next quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference held with them, which by vote is to commence on Thursday, previous to the first Sunday in June? Will you write me relative to it, and direct to East Boston, Mass., so that due notice may be given of the same?
A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Notice.

To the brethren in Connecticut, who have written me desiring my labors, I wish to say through the Crisis, I intended to have visited you ere this; but owing to the urgent necessities of other places, I have hitherto been hindered. But I will come as soon as I can, and will give you timely notice through the Crisis.
A. ROSS.

Notice.

A. Flavell has issued a tract containing evidences from the types on the year and season of the year for the coming of our Lord. It will be sent free of charge to all who send their address.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign.
WM. SHELDON.

Photographs.

Bro. T. E. Wood, of Portsmouth, N. H., will send the photographs of Elds. C. Goodrich and H. Munger (album size) on the receipt of 25 cents each. The large size, suitable for framing, 75 cents each.

He will also send the picture of Bro. M. B. Czechowski (album size) for 25 cents; the proceeds to be appropriated to the European mission.

☞ Address T. E. WOOD, Portsmouth, N. H., enclosing stamp to prepay postage.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N. Y.
CLINTON COLGROVE, Bap. Minister.

Notice.

Preaching brethren coming to Hoosick will please to correspond with George B. Keach, Hoosick Falls, N. Y. Box 2.

Maine Second Advent Tract Society.

WM. H. MITCHELL, R. R. YORK, S. K. PARTRIDGE, } Executive Board.

I. C. WELLCOME, Treasurer and Business Agent.

It is desired that all orders for tracts and books for distribution by this Society be addressed to the Agent, I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me., who will supply them as fast as the means are furnished.

All our ministers will receive subscriptions for the Tract Fund, and they purpose to raise $200, or more, for free distribution in Maine for 1866.
I. C. WELLCOME, Agent.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON.
J. G. Hook .... Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, April 15th, at [illegible] o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M.
WM. C. THURMAN.

Lawrence, Mass .... Sunday, April 15th
J. COUCH.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall), Lord's day, April 29th
B. P. MANNING.

Springfield, Mass., Barnes' Block), Lord's days, May 6th and 13th, and through the week intervening.
SAMUEL CURRY.

Worcester .... May 3d
Springfield .... May 4th
New Haven, Ct. .... May 6th
Hartford, Ct. .... May 13th
New Haven, Ct. .... May 20th
New Britain, Ct. .... May 27th
New Haven, Ct. .... June 3d
Hartford, Ct. .... June 10th
Warehouse Point .... June 17th
J. S. WHITE.

North Norway, Friday evening, April 13th, and over the following Sabbath as the brethren may appoint.
A. H. WALKER.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) .... May 6th
Rochester, N. H., (McDuffee District, where Bro. Smith may appoint) .... Sunday, April 15th
JOSEPH PINKHAM.

South Gardiner, Me., (Booker school-house), April 15th
Richmond .... April 16th
Brunswick .... April 18th
Bath .... April 21st over Sunday, and as long as the Lord will.
Will Bro. Booker meet me in Gardiner, Saturday, April 14th?
W. B. PERKINS.

CONCORD, N. H.
H. Munger .... until Friday, April 13th
Timothy Cole .... April 15th and 22d
Wm. Sutherland .... April 29th
John Couch .... Sunday, May 6th

Loudon Ridge .... Sunday, April 15th
H. MUNGER.

South Reading .... Sunday, April 29th
C. GOODRICH.

West Abington .... Sunday, April 15th
ABIGAIL MUSSEY.

Guilford, Ct .... Sunday, April 15th and through the week.
Salem, Mass. .... Sunday, May 6th
L. BOUTELL.

Northwood Narrows, N. H. .... April 13th
and over the following Sabbath.
Manchester, N. H. .... Sabbath April 22d
T. M. PREBLE.

Piermont, N. H., (Clay meeting-house) .... April 15th
Piermont, N. H., (Clark school-house) .... April 22d
Orford, Quinttown, N. H. .... April 29th
Pomfret, Vt., (as J. Herington may appoint), May 6th
L. C. GLAZIER.

Epsom, (where Bro. Marden may appoint—for baptism) April 22d.
Melvin Village (for baptism) .... April 29th
Parsonsfield, (where Bro. Moulton may appoint), May 6th.
Moultonborough .... May 13th
T. W. PIPER.

Lovely Street, Ct .... Sunday, April 22d
WILLIAM RIPLEY.

Guilford, Conn .... Sunday, April 15th
Bro. L. Boutell will be with me.
B. HITCHCOCK.

Dover, N. H. .... Sunday, April 15th
J. G. SMITH.

Clarktown .... Thursday, P. M., April 19th
Pittsfield .... Thursday evening, April 19th
Concord, (where Bro. Lord may appoint), Friday evening, April 20th.
North Sutton, (where Bro. Jesse Hagen may appoint), Saturday evening, April 21st, and Sunday 22d.
Danbury, (where the brethren may arrange), Thursday and Friday evenings, April 26th and 27th.
East Canaan .... Saturday evening, April 28th and Sunday 29th.
C. H. WILLEY.
J. H. F. VARNEY.

Summersworth, Great Falls, N. H., Wednesday evening, April 18th, through the week, and over the following Lord's day.
L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Enfield, (at Bro. Theodore Pease's house), Saturday evening, April 14th.
Scitico .... Sunday, April 15th
R. WILLIAMS.

Sangerville, (near Bro. Oren French's) .... April 22d
Exeter, (Chamberlain school-house) .... April 29th
Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) .... May 6th
Levant, (Emmerson's Mills) .... May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's) .... May 27th
I. K. LOMBARD.

East Bowdoinham, (with Bro. H. D. Reed), Thursday evening, April 12th, and over the following Sunday.
R. R. YORK.

Concord, N. H., (corner of Green and Center Streets), Sundays, April 22d and 29th.
W. W. SUTHERLAND.

Pine Tree School-house, North Salem, N. Y. (or as Bro. Bailey may appoint) .... Sundays, April 15th and 22d
Thomaston, Ct. .... Sunday, April 29th
Wrightville .... evening, May 4th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

West Barre .... April 15th
Brockport .... April 22d
Darien City, Genesee Co. (as Bro. Henry Sharrack may appoint), Sunday April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Baptist church, near Bro. B. C. Simonds, at 4 P. M. same day.
C. F. SWEET.

Newfield, Ct .... Sunday, April 15th
A. SIMPSON.

Warner, (Waterloo Village), N. H.) .... April 15th
SIMEON ROBY.

Freeport, (Swamp school-house) .... Sunday, April 15th
I. C. WELLCOME.

East Granville, Mass .... Saturday evening, April 14th and over the next Lord's day, April 15th, at Bro. S. Oatley's.
At Bro. Stephen Herrick's .... Tuesday eve, April 17th
East Hartland .... Wednesday eve, April 18th
Barkhamstead, (at the dwelling of Jason Case), Thursday evening, April 19th.
H. ROCKWELL.

AGAWAM, MASS.
H. Pratt .... Sunday, April 15th

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) .... Sunday, April 22d
J. G. SMITH.

Plainfield Pond .... April 22d
West Hoosic, (Advent Chapel) .... April 29th
WM. J. BLANCHARD.

Lee, N. H. .... April 15th
C. S. EMERSON.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall), Saturday evening, April 28th, and Sunday, 29th, day and evening.
L. E. OTIS.

Rutland, Vt. .... Lord's day, April 15th, and 22d with intervening evenings, if the brethren so arrange.
Champlain (Village), N. Y., A. M. .... April 29th
Massena, (as Bro. D. T. Taylor may arrange), May 6th
G. W. STETSON.

Abington, Ct. .... Sunday, April 15th
E. BELLOWS.

Abington, Ct .... Sunday, April 15th
H. F. CARPENTER.

WEST FALMOUTH, ME.
Clarkson Goud .... Sunday, April 15th

East Bowdoinham, (Lancaster school-house), Sunday, April 15th.
H. D. REED.

Cheshire Street, Ct. .... Sunday, April 15th
S. WOODRUFF.

Meredith, (where Bro. Calif may appoint), Sunday, April 15th.
NELSON HARRIMAN.

Manchester, N. H. .... Lord's day, April 15th
Biddeford, Mass. .... Lord's day, April 22d
C. C. STEVENS.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

B. Greene—There is a translation of the New Testament, with notes, by John Wesley. Price, $1.75.
Thos. Smith—It was.
T. B. Dustin—Credited to 597.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 549. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you owe.

For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—H S Barton 617, A T Hatch 514, C Colgrove 561, L S Sanborn 495, A. Kitterbush 600, L. M. Wood 573, J B Eastman 565, G. A. Webber 573, M J Pierce 609, W H Burtch 598, P Hatch 609, P Green 567.

$1.25 each—P B Hart 571, B W Tibbetts 583, W Shaw 571, C I Brown 573, J W Mowbray 594, A Bryant 576, A Ford 574, J Stretton 574, A Abbott 570, H Tripp 588, J B Richardson 597, D. Brown 572, I D Shaw 563, C. Willoughby 571, T. Bennett 573, D. S. Rocas 597, J. Bayley 588, I B Gardner 574, S Littlefield 574, S S Kimball 574, J R Kenyon 574, M Colby 574, S A Rand 574, S M Langley 594, T D Bailey 577, H Bruck 577, E Dean 574, A French 574, A G Batchelder 574, M Snow 574, H Morse 574, D C Ferry 600, J S Kerry 574, S R Shehan 574, H. Phillips 609, H. C. Freeman 574, W. Tenmore 574, W Patten 574, C P Coombs 574, A Swallow 572, I Kinney 572, J. H. Roberson 574, S. Howlett 574, E. A. Bradley 574, S M Fish 574, J H Edmonds 572.

$2.00 each—A. H. Robbins 569, J T Atwood 589, M Stuart 603, T Mills 492, W H Brown 582, W J Hoyt 555, C Hall 590, N Lewis 564, C Howard 593, G S Shepard 571, C S Hall 590, G Knowlton 600, S E Miner 568, W Lawrence 525.

$2.50 each—R Wilbur 600, J C Heath 600, M Chamberlin 617, G Goodwin 599, N J Langley 589, G Smith 675, B Smith 576, W Royo 579, F M Reynolds 595, C B Burroughs 612, E Davis 600, A Hutchins 600, J Jenness 600, L A Kent 600, E Ramsey 600, A Collins 600, L A Hitchcock 600, A Allen 599, A H Johnson 600, S. Robbins 572, A W Spooner 600, J Linard 537, H Kennedy 600, S M Wadlin 598, J W Berry 600, W P Willoughby 610, I C Jewell 600, H Metheny 600, B F Willoughby 610, C B Ricker 601, N Snell 589, L N Johnson 575, L E Saulpaugh 605, O Birge 595, E N Whitford 597, A Peacock 598, T P Vanderbeck 600, P W Kinsey 600, J Scott 600, J T Langley 584, H Wheeler 587, C Churchill 530, I Hartwell 563, L. E. Rand 600, B Weston 573, J. W. Trumbull 600, E. Eastman 537, T. Lovett 552, M. A. Kimball 616, G W Ricks 587, L G Hiscox 600, H. W. Farmer 563, S. Davis 600, P Corwin 600, H. R. Tryon 600, J Wells 600, M F Burnham 600, S H Cheever 600, A. Harris 589, N. Railsback 594, C. Railsback 594, P. Martin 600, E Treadwell 594, N. A. Purrington 592, M. Crowninshield 579, T G Dewey 640, P Johnson 600, H M Myers 600, J Bancroft 603, E Bryson 587, B Hinckley 598, J D Hinckley what P. O.? A Colton what P. O.? I Allen what P. O.? S Munroe 598, J. F. Bean 600, J. West 600, Z A Temple 613.

$3.00 each—L D Woodward 520, R T Walker 625, J. Degeer 546, E A Silver 579, C Lawson 589, E Lillie 520, H M Butters 603, W W Hall 610.

Various sums—D. Spaulding $1.50, 548; D. Loucks $5.00, 565; E Wolcott $16.00, 572; M A Hardy $1.50, 567; J. Staples 50c, 551; O. Crouse $1.50, 578; E. W. James $3.0[illegible], 646; E. Richards $15.00, 578; O. Davis $4.85, 574; J. S. Chickering $5.75, 572; J C Jones 63c, 557; J S Arnold $1.75, 567; C. Boynton $6.00, 578; S. Gould 63c, 561; N. O. Scott $1.37, 544; S. Simmons 63c, 561; M J Earnshaw 75c, 397; N W Wood 67c, 551; J H Messer 25c, 543; A Warren 50c, 561; G W Martin 50c, 599; J G Cook 50c, 555; R B Chesley $1.57, 587; L A Scoville 70c, 576; J S Mayberry $5.84, 649.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

L L Lord $2.00, P B Hart $1.25, R Wilbur 50c, J F Moore 85c, W N Pile $20.00, S K Gibson $3.65, E W Perry 25c, A Haskell 50c, H M Logan $1.00, M L Bassett 50c, C B Ricker 50c, J S Kenny $4.75, M B Stevens $1.00, T J B Harding $1.65, T G Dewey $1.00, M Dumay 83c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.—L. L. Lord, B. B. Hart, R. Wilbur, J. F. Moore, S K Gibson, T J B Harding, W H Fisher, M Dumay, A. Haskell.

BY EXPRESS—J V Himes, H Scott.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

I. Leslie, W. B. Perkins, L. Scott, J. T. Dixon, L. A. Thayer, M S Horne, L F Cole, H Munger, C Case, L D Bush, T B Tamblyn, S S Gregory, J Taylor, J C Wheeler, J W Taylor, J Blain, W C Thurman, F H Burbank, C F Sweet, H K Baldwin, B Perham, T W Piper, O D Gibson, H Munger.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Dr. I. I. Leslie—Box 664, Memphis, Tenn.
H. K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francetia F. Curtis—149 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
Eld. C. Goodrich—No. 66 Princeton Street, East Boston, Mass.
J. R. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—364 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. F. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
S. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 57 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. I. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion .... 12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make itself? .... 16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God? .... 16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible? .... 24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament? .... 16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable? .... 16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles? .... 16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy .... 32 pp., 5c.
9. Moses and the Prophets .... 28 pp., 5c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars .... 28 pp., 5c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise .... 36 pp., 5c.
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture .... 32 pp., 5c.
13. Science, or Faith? .... 32 pp., 5c.

For the SET, (making 304 pp.) .... 40c. postpaid.

FOR A GREATER QUANTITY.

By mail, 800 pp. .... $1.00.
By express, 1000 pp. .... $1.00.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home .... 16 pp.
2. Life Insurance .... 16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost! .... 8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet? .... 8 pp.
5. About God (for children) .... 4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing .... 4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ .... 4 pp.
8. Now .... 4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent postpaid—
One set (64 pp.) 6c
1300 pp. $1.00
1800 pp., (by express, not prepaid) $1.00

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE STUDENT'S LIBRARY.

IN FIVE VOLUMES (435 pp. each.)

[illegible]

I. Signs of the Times; or, a Glance at Christendom as it is. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

II. The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. [illegible] By D. T. Taylor.

III. Thessalonica, or The Model Church; a Sketch of Primitive Christianity; and REASONS FOR MY HOPE; SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D.

IV. The Great Controversy between God and Man; its Origin, Progress, and End. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

V. Future Punishment, as taught in the Scriptures. [illegible]

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 8c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.
REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.
THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 5c.
REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.
SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 20c.
THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.
THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c; by mail, 15c.
THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 5c.
THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.
THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 6c; by mail, 7c.
THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $5.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.
THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.
CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.
FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.
ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 29c.
RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.
PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.
GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.
IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c, by mail, 8c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.
THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. [illegible]; by mail, 4c.
SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.
REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c, by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS. A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.
THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.
CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.
DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.86.
CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.60; by mail, $1.70.
THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.
FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.
THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 29c.
CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid; $2.00 per dozen.
THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 19c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 3c. on every three copies.
SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.
AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c; by mail, 10c.
EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 80c; by mail, 88c.
HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.
COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.
PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.
WHY THE SHOE PINCHES. The Cause of Deformities in the feet, and how to avoid them, corns, etc. 20c. postpaid.
THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.
CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.
NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.
DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.
GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 3c. single; by mail, 5c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.
HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.
BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.
SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 30c; $3.00 per dozen. Paper 2c, $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.
CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.
RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of the "cities of the nations." By Wm. Shepherd. 10c., postpaid; 85c. a dozen.
THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Jolliffe. 5c; by mail, 7c.
OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the American Advent Mission Society, its Constitution, Officers, Addresses, etc. 5c.
EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a Slave for forty-three years. 15c.
BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 5c. postpaid.
THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

THE TURTLE DOVE.

Hark! don't you hear the turtle dove,
The token of redeeming love?
From hill to hill we hear the sound,
The neighboring valleys echo round.
O Zion! hear the turtle dove,
The token of your Savior's love;
He comes the barren land to cheer,
And welcome in the promised year.

The winter's past, the rain is o'er,
We feel the chilling winds no more;
The spring is come, and summer, too;
All things appear divinely new.
On Zion's Mount the watchmen cry,
The resurrection's drawing nigh;
Behold, the nations from abroad
Are flocking to the mount of God.

The trumpet sounds, both far and nigh;
Oh sinners, turn, why will you die?
How can you slight the gospel charms?
Enlist with Christ, gird on your arms;
These are the days that were foretold
In ancient times, by prophets old;
They longed to see the glorious light,
But all have died without the sight.

The latter day is verging on,
And fugitives are flocking home;
Behold them crowd the gospel road,
All pressing to the mount of God;
Oh yes! and I will join the band;
Now here's my heart, and here's my hand,
With Satan's band no more to be,
But fight for Christ and liberty.

His banner soon will be unfurled,
And he will come to judge the world;
On Zion's Mount we then shall stand,
Surrounded by fair Canaan's band.
The sun and moon will darkened be,
And flames consume the land and sea;
When worlds on worlds together blaze,
We'll shout the great Redeemer's praise.

[This hymn was sung more than thirty years ago.—Ed.

A CRY FOR NEW LIGHT.

In a recent number of the Bibliotheca Sacra, there is an article entitled, "Is Theology an Improvable Science?" from which we quote the following significant paragraph: "Though the evidences of religion is a hackneyed subject, yet on this theme the church seems to be calling for new light. Particularly the prophecies are in a very confused state. The argument from the fulfillment of the prophecies is presented in a very uncritical and unsatisfactory manner, much more calculated to justify infidels, than confirm christians. When do the apostles quote the Old Testament strictly, and when loosely? How much chronology is intended in the definite numbers of their fervid strains? Let us reflect that infidels have been blamed for not accepting constructions which afterwards the most learned orthodox interpreters have upset. Recollect the four kingdoms in the second and ninth chapters of Daniel, and Professor Stuart's interpretation of them. The fact is, all our books on the subject are behind the age. Then the interpretation of the prophecies in the New Testament lie in the greatest confusion. We have either the neological temerity or the pious dogmatism of the Adventist, and each unworthy of our confidence. Oh, for some sanctified erudition to clear up the subject. Oh, that Christ would verify his promise, and give to some selected student in Andover, or some other seminary, the morning star to beam on our darkness."

This cry for some wonderfully gifted genius—some superhuman man, who shall solve all our problems, remove all our difficulties, and tell us whereabouts we are, and whither we are drifting, is several times repeated, in various forms, in the elaborate paper from which we have quoted. But the great revealer and harmonist, who is to disentangle prophecy from the sorrowful confusion into which interpreters have thrown it, whether he be raised up in the theological seminary at Andover, or in same other more highly favored college, must not be an "Adventist." That is settled. Whatever a man's qualifications otherwise, if he be an "Adventist," he is "unworthy of our confidence." Let it be distinctly understood that this point is settled once for all. Yet, associated with this sentence of disqualification is the cry, "Oh, that Christ would verify his promise, and give to some selected student . . . the morning star to beam on our darkness."

Now, as we are painfully conscious of the perplexities of the church, and the heavy cloud of darkness through which she is groping, we are anxious to ascertain the promise of Christ referred to in this earnest aspiration. Our only guide is the phraseology of the learned writer, There are three passages of Scripture to either or all of which he may allude. The first is 2 Pet. 1: 19,—"We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts." The second is Rev. 2: 28,—"And I will give him the morning star." And the third is Rev. 22: 16,—"I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star."

The first of these Scriptures assures us that we do well to take heed to prophecy, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, which is the very thing the rejected "Adventist" does, and for which the writer rejects him as "unworthy of confidence." The second is the crowning promise in a list of honors to be bestowed on those who "hold fast" amidst tribulations, heresies, and apostasies, until Christ come. But neither can this Scripture be alluded to, for the second coming of Christ is the very point of the passage, and the "Adventist," who has been turned out of the witness-box, is the only man that rightly understands it; and the third scripture is a glorious description of our Lord, in a paragragh whose last words, as spoken by himself, are, "Surely, I come quickly." But this is the doctrine which the disqualified witness proclaims, so that the aspiration of the essayist can have no reference to it. It comes then to this, that the prayer for a selected student who is to scatter the bewildering mists from the eye of the perplexed church, cannot be answered according to "Christ's promise." His promise, in the only passages of his own book to which the mourning essayist can allude, distinctly refers to his personal return to our world as the predetermined remedy, the divine catholicon, for the manifold diseases and sorrows of his church; but, as the teachers of that sublime and soul-animating reality are unworthy of confidence, which is the same thing as to say that their doctrine is unworthy of belief, it follows clearly that our brother's bewilderment is not likely to terminate by the uprising of any prodigy of genius in Andover, or any other seminary. The prayed-for prophet may have every qualification that the petitioner can desire, but if he is destitute of that one which the Scriptures make essential to a well-instructed scribe, what will he do for us? Just pass before our aching eyes a few more meteoric lights, and tell us that the Lord is not coming.

Great, indeed, is the work cut out for this imaginary embodiment of "sanctified erudition"! He has to place the evidences of religion in a new and clear light, which shall flash confusion on all sceptics; to disentangle the argument respecting prophecy from its state of confusion; to verify, or correct, the apostles, as the case may require, when they quote from the Old Testament; to tell us when we are to accept their chronology literally, and when to set it down to the poetry of their fervid strains. The immensity of the toil thus sketched for the paragon that is to be, is enough to damp the ardor of the most enthusiastic aspirant for immortality. Where will he begin? How will he proceed in his gigantic enterprise? We foresee the stern difficulties of his task, and give him our deepest sympathy beforehand. Let him begin with the "Evidences;" and when he has placed them in a new and clear light, commanding the consent and admiration of christendom, let him proceed to disentangle the argument respecting "Prophecy" from its chaotic condition; and if he can do this without sliding into the prohibited region of Adventism, he will indeed dim the lustre of the seers of both Testaments, and earn the eternal gratitude of all the post-millennialists in the world. But here a question faces us which presses vehemently for an answer. Will the work of this mighty mind be the fulfillment of any "promise" of Christ? That is the question upon the very ground taken by the Bibliotheca Sacra itself. And our answer distinctly and emphatically is—No! Our Lord has given no promise which requires as a condition of its accomplishment disbelief of the doctrine of his pre-millennial advent. The coming of the Lord is the "blessed hope" set before believers by the Holy Ghost. To reject this, therefore, is to launch ourselves on a dark sea of difficulties, across which no pilotage of "erudition" will ever carry us. If the polar star be despised, you are likely to dash against rocks, or sink in quicksands, however brilliant the comet you have selected as your lamp.

But so it is. The doctrine of looking and waiting for the Lord, so precious to the early christians, is not believed by the moderns. Great men, profound thinkers, intellectual giants—so called—are sought after and admired, but the determination is to keep the Savior himself in a far country still "Up" make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him" It is significant, however, that we have elaborate essays and loud complaints concerning the doctrinal perplexities and practical difficulties of the church, by the very men who look with sovereign contempt upon the so-called "pious dogmatism" of those who are looking for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. Such lamentations over the distracted state of christendom would, if made by us, be instantly seized upon as a libellous intimation that christianity had failed; but when made by those who give point to their deplorable outcries by a sneer at the weaklings who believe that the return of the Lord himself is the decreed solvent of all difficulties, they are full of most instructive meaning.

The teaching of "Millenarianism" is characterized, in not a few of our pulpits, as "positively wicked," and its teachers as "babblers." Of course we do not see the wickedness of a doctrine which teaches saints to look for the fulfillment of the promise of their blessed Lord; and, as to being babblers, the teachers of this scriptural faith feel it no dishonor to find themselves in the company of Paul, who was thus contemptuously designated by certain Grecian philosophers, when he preached Jesus and the resurrection. That babbler taught the Athenians that God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by the risen Savior, which is precisely the doctrine we teach on apostolic authority

We really think that brethren, who are looking in all directions but one for the succor to the church, amidst the rising tide of heresies, should be thankful to those who remind them that the return of the Lord may be the divine succor in the day of distress. What have we here? "For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. And I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore mine own arm brought salvation to me, and my fury it upheld me." We are not afraid of the swelling tide of heresy which so alarms those who scorn our faith, for we have been taught to expect it, and we have some idea—faint, doubtless, but better than none—how it will be met, and how it will issue. At all events, if it is too much to expect gratitude, their compatriots in the besieged city should at least listen patiently to Millenarians when they suggest a reading of a certain clause of the General Orders, which is fitted to inspire the hope not merely of successful resistance, but of positive victory. Surely our interest in the safety and honor of the church of Christ is equal to that of our brethren. Why not give us credit for a consciousness of this fact, and a consequent desire to know what is actually revealed regarding the future of that church? Beyond this we do not go a hair's breadth; but our brethren have gone far beyond that which is revealed, and sketched out a plan of operations for God which is destitute of the sanction of his authority, and which is, therefore, of course, altogether illusory. We have, in brotherly affection, suggested this, and they are angry; yet that which justifies our suggestion is the remarkable fact that, side by side with their words of anger, we find a lamentable cry for more light.—The Rainbow.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER III.—THE WORDS IN ITALICS.

Let an observant reader take up an English Bible, and he will notice in it some words printed in italic letters. Being accustomed to find such words in other books emphatic, or of special importance, he attempts to give them their usual stress; but perceives he can not do it and make sense. He feels that he must now learn some new rule for the use of italics; and he can not help thinking, Why should there be an established rule for using italicized words in other books, and a different or contrary rule for their use in that one Book, which God gave for all to read and try to understand?

To this inquiry, we would reply: In God's book, as he gave it to men, are no such italicized words. But in translating that book into English, in order to give its full meaning it was thought necessary to use some words in the English, where no corresponding words are found in the inspired Hebrew and Greek. Such words were printed with a different style of type, and are now found in italics. These italicized words in the Common Version, however, besides being unemphatic, often render a sentence less concise and forcible, and sometimes they manifestly encumber it. See Matt. 1: 6; 3: 15; 4: 25; 5: 20; 13: 17; 16: 2, 3.

If any word is necessary in English to give the full and exact meaning of the Hebrew or Greek original, that word is in reality a part of the translation, and should be printed with the same kind of letters as the rest of the translation. And if any word is not necessary to give the sense of the original, it should not have a place in the translation. These are now acknowledged principles; and their application to the New Testament by the learned revisers, has swept entirely away the anomalous and cumbersome words in italics. See, in the Revised Testament, the passages last referred to.

Yet in a few instances, it may be desirable to indicate, to the ordinary reader of the Scriptures, a meaning which the scholar clearly sees is implied in the original, although not fully expressed in the written words. In such a case, the reader might be embarrassed, or might overlook the implied meaning, and in consequence misapprehend the passage. In the Revised Testament, such a meaning, occurring in some twenty-six passages, is indicated by one or more inclosed in brackets [ ]. See John 7: 39. Rom. 9: 31, 32; 12: 6, 7, 8, 19. 1 Cor. 11: 10. 2 Cor. 12: 18. Gal. 2: 5.

Brackets are also used to inclose passages that are wanting in most of the oldest and best manuscripts See John 7: 53, 8: 11. Rom. 11: 6. 1 Pet. 4: 14.

C. W. WATERHOUSE.

For the World's Crisis.

A SERMON.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25: 46.

Let me ask a few more questions about the resurrection of the wicked, and then go to another part of the subject First, how can Christ deny the wicked before his Father and holy angels, if they never rise from the dead, and come before him at the judgment? for thousands are dead, who have denied Christ before men

Second Are there not many now dead, who have preached the gospel, and have labored in the name of Christ, and yet died in their sins, or errors, at last, who will plead before Christ, at the great judgment day, saying, "Lord! Lord! have we not prophesied in thy name? . . and in thy name done many wonderful works?" But how can this be, if they do not rise from the dead?

Thirdly. How will many say, "Lord! Lord! open unto us," if they are not there, in the great day of accounts?

Fourthly. How can Christ divide the great multitude, small and great, who stand before the judgment throne, if none of the wicked are raised up to be there, and all the wicked are destroyed in flaming fire, who were alive when he comes?

Fifthly How can the murderers of Jesus look on him, if they are not alive before the judgment seat of Christ?

In all the Scripture that we have brought forward to prove the resurrection of saint and sinner, we have found no account of an immortal soul coming back from heaven and joining the body at the resurrection, and yet there are many who deny the literal resurrection, rather than give up the heathen dogma of the immortality of the soul.

We will now come to the saints' inheritance, where they will reign with Christ to all eternity First, we firmly declare that it will be on this earth, renewed. We think the holy book will sustain us in the declaartion. Please turn to Psalm 115: 16: "The heavens, even the heavens, are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men." And in Matt 25: 34, the Savior says, "Come, ye blessed, . . . inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Can we ever find proof of any kingdom that was prepared for God's people, from the foundation of the world, but this earth? no, indeed! not a word of it in the Bible. When our dear Savior was about to leave this world, he said to his disciples that they could not come to him, but he would come to them, and there is plenty of Scripture to show us that when Christ comes after his saints, he will then raise the dead, destroy the wicked, and destroy death and the devil, and the dominion "under the whole heaven shall be given to the saints of the Most High."

Please look at Gen. 1. 28, where we are informed that the dominion over all the living creatures was given to Adam and his posterity. This must be "the first dominion" that should come to the "tower of the flock."—Micah 4: 8. We also read in Isaiah 9. 6, 7, where the prophet was speaking of the Messiah, and says, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder; . . . of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment, and with justice forever." We are also informed that the Great Supreme has declared that he will perform this; then it will surely take place; and if Jesus is to reign on the throne of David forever with his saints, under the whole heavens, then it certainly will be on this earth, when it is renewed, or regenerated, and not in that place that the ministers tell us about, which they say is "Beyond the bounds of time and space."

Now please turn and read the following passages of Scripture, and see how plain the Bible proves the inheritance of the saints to be on this earth: Ps. 37: 9, 11, 18, 29, 34; Prov. 10: 30; 11: 31; Dan. 7: 27; Matt. 5: 5; Rev. 5: 9, 10; 11: 15, and Isa. 65: 17, 18, 19. Kind reader, do not let any one lead you to spiritualize these passages all away, and thus change the word of God into a lie, while they try to make you believe the doctrines and commandments of men. Here I would ask the reader, do you think the God of heaven would inspire holy men of old to write the Scriptures in such a blind manner that we could not understand them, and then require us to call upon the ministers to come to us and spiritualize all these passages to correspond to the heathen philosophy? If you think our heavenly Father is a God of truth, be sure to take his word as it reads; and believe God means just what he says, and says what he means. Then we must come to the conclusion that when Christ comes in judgment, he will destroy the wicked, and sweep away the refuge of lies, and set up his everlasting kingdom on this earth renewed, and reign with his saints forever; which coming is now close at hand.

In our next, and last articles, we shall bring forward the three great objections to our theory, which are often alluded to by our opponents. The first will be the rich man and Lazarus; the second, the thief on the cross; and thirdly, we shall speak of the souls under the altar; and then close this long subject by a few remarks on Revelation, about their being tormented day and night for ever and ever, and the smoke of their torment ascending up forever and ever. B. PERHAM.

Vernon, Vt.

WORDS THAT BURN.

Anything to succeed must be positive, must be intense. Tameness and dullness and half-heartedness are among the things that were. A man, to succeed now, must be a live man: he must be restlessly active, all absorbed in his object, and pursue it to the extreme. And especially the churches must awake, or a tide of death such as we have never known will set in upon us. The national mind and heart has been so stirred, that, to meet its wants as it changes its object, the church must provide an element as intense, as absorbing, or the world will fill the vacuum, and death to spirituality will be the result.

For the last twenty years, the world has been assimilating the church to itself. Instead of its being the salt that preserved, the world's putrefaction has overspread the church. Instead of christians stamping the world, it has placed its satanic mark upon them. Instead of the church making successful aggressive movements upon our enemies, they have stealthily taken possession of our forts and arsenals. This is seen in our modes of worship, our sleepily uttered prayers and proxy praises, and sentimental, metaphysical, moonstruck theorizings from the pulpit. Our weakness and imbecility are fearfully apparent. Who pretends that the singing of the sanctuaries of the land is worship? Who avows that essays without much of reference to christianity, save a text for a motto, is preaching Christ? Who will claim that prayers, having in them none of the elements of sincere confession, supplication, and intercession, are ever wafted to the mercy seat? They are all a mockery, and weary Jehovah with their insincerity and foolishness.

And, as a result, the lives of church members proclaim a gospel robbed of power. They are weak like other men, and live like others. This is terrible, and yet it is terribly true! Now, what can such a christianity do in such an emergency? It is like sending out weak and puling invalids to take Richmond, or bombarding Sebastopol with snowballs. This may be called croaking Would God it were! but the dreadfulness of it is that it is truth,—truth that should send us to our closets in deepest grief.

Every denomination is involved in this responsibility. None can say, "Stand by, I am holier than thou". All have catered to the world; all have presented a mutilated christianity, a sugar-coated gospel, all have adjusted Bible truths and Bible precepts to the practice of the time-serving and the world-loving Our prayers and praises have been regulated to suit velvet ears and refined tastes. The terrible denunciations against sin have been hidden behind flowery wreaths and gilded scabbards. Sinai has ceased to thunder, and Calvary to groan, and Parnassus has reared its tiny height, and we gaped and stared at its wonderful magnitude and seeming power.

Christ, a risen, living Christ, is seldom seen He is entombed. The stone at the door of his sepulchre is very great. Even those who have known his resurrection power, many of them have gone from him so far as not to know whether it is the risen Christ, or the gardener Others have seen his tomb, and the linen clothes folded, and have heard the angel say, "He is not here, but is risen," and they have gone and proclaimed the glorious news, but how few of these even have seen him! how few ate and talked with him, received him into their houses, and felt his risen power! And of those who have journeyed with him to Emmaus, and listened to his wonderful converse, and whose hearts have burned within them, how few have obeyed his words, and tarried in Jerusalem until endued with power from on high!

But, thank God, there is a little lifting to the cloud at this evening-time there is light. This is seen in the rising feeling that something must be done to meet the demands of the times. I note in the reports of associations, conventions, and the like, of all denominations, an agitation of the subject; and, what is glorious, there seems to be but one voice as to the need of the baptism of the Holy Ghost on the churches, and that this alone can meet the exigency. In the Vermont State Baptist Convention, met here the past week, there were honest confessions of failure, and they were frank to expose the weakened and tinselled paraphernalia of the church's adoption as a great source of spiritual death. Thank God, blinded eyes are being opened!

Now, it seems to me we are on the eve of a wide spread, thorough, scriptural revival. I some way feel that God is about to wipe off the reproach of his cause; to prove there is power in the gospel; that it is adapted in all its strictness and purity to these times; that he is about to draw the line of distinction between him that serves God and him who serves him not. I believe that the god's education and talent, at whose shrine the church has worshipped, and to whom it has called with loud, clamorous voice, will be measurably dethroned, and piety have a hearing from our pulpits. Parnassus must sink, and let Calvary rise again in sight of all the people. I believe the tide will turn, and our people again demand a gospel ministry; that talent and education will take their subordinate position, and piety be an essential; that men of God will be in demand, full grown men of might and valor. O! when the priests shall themselves believe; when they that minister at the altar shall have clean hands and pure hearts,—we may look for such a rising of the church, such a changing of her garments, growing whiter and whiter until she shall be worthy to be presented to the Lamb without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing! Shall we not rejoice in hope? If we will labor in our churches just as freely, just as simply, with the only motive of saving souls, looking for immediate fruit, we shall realize the onrush of the tide of salvation in such power as to sweep formalism and death before its resistless tide. God grant we may learn wisdom, and be taught of the Spirit!—The Guide to Holiness.

For the World's Crisis.

TWO NATURES.

Is man in possession of two natures, as portrayed in the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That the soul of man is immortal, and as a consequence cannot die."

If immortality means continuing to live, what part of man fell? It does not seem right to say that mortality fell from mortality. If the immortal part was the cause of action, then that which fell must have had immortality. It cannot be a part of God. If it be claimed that this immortal nature is of God, then the negative asks at what time in the period of man's life is it given? If this is a special, personal gift of God to man at any time in the period of early youth, could we expect, then, that all children would have this nature given to them?

If given in advanced age, through a belief in Jesus Christ, or when "this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality," then we do not object. When we get continued life from the dead, do we not get the victory? 1 Cor. 15: 57,—"But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." There is a glory in the thought of being a victor over death, by the gift of eternal life through Christ. H. L. SALISBURY.

BEAUTIFUL ZION.

Beautiful Zion, built above,
Beautiful city that I love,
Beautiful gates of pearly white;
Beautiful temple—God its light;
He who was slain on Calvary,
Opens those pearly gates to me.

Beautiful heaven, where all is light,
Beautiful angels clothed in white,
Beautiful strains that never tire,
Beautiful harps through all the choir;
There shall I join the chorus sweet,
Worshiping at the Savior's feet.

Beautiful crowns on every brow,
Beautiful palms the conquerors show,
Beautiful robes the ransomed wear,
Beautiful all who enter there
Thither I press with eager feet,
There shall my rest be long and sweet.

Beautiful throne of Christ our King,
Beautiful songs the angels sing,
Beautiful rest, all wand'rings cease,
Beautiful home of perfect peace,
There shall my eyes the Savior see,
Haste to this heavenly home with me

[Published by request.

For the World's Crisis.

"THEY STILL LIVE."

In a recent number of the Christian Witness, I find an article with the above heading, containing some statements to which a reply might be beneficial, as white will show to the best advantage when held in contrast with black.

1. "Of all the millions who have lived upon this world, it is a solemn reflection that they still live. Immortality is not a mere accident of man's being—a something dependent upon his character, upon what he does or does not do; but it is an essential part of his nature, which he can no more destroy than he can destroy the existence of God himself. That active, thinking, feeling, intelligent part of the men of the generations of the past, is active, thinking, feeling, suffering or enjoying still, and will be doing so for ever and ever."

Who affirms that "they still live?" The Bible asserts that they have "DIED," and certainly death and life are not synonymous terms; and if God means life when he says death, why may he not mean death when he says life? If immortality does not depend upon what a man "does," or what kind of a "character" he sustains, why should the apostle Paul recommend us to "SEEK for glory, honor, IMMORTALITY!" If man by "nature" possesses immortality, and can no more be destroyed than God himself, he is just as independent as Jehovah as far as life is concerned; and Jesus must have been inconsiderate in saying, "ye will not come unto me that ye might have life," and also in saying "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3: 16) Why all this pains to secure for man that which he already possesses by nature? David tells us that when man dies his "thoughts perish" (Isa. 146: 4.) and the wise man adds, "Also their love, their hatred and their envy is now perished" Shall we believe these inspired declarations, or the statement that they are "thinking still?"

2. "There is a form of error that has attained to some prominence of late, that which asserts the annihilation of the wicked." This so-called error has attained too much prominence to be frowned down, or to be driven out of the field by bold assertions, without proof.

3. "Now this is just semi-Universalism, an attempt to get rid of the plain doctrine of Scripture that God is a God of justice as well as of mercy, who will certainly punish the wicked. Universalism denies the Bible doctrine of future rewards and punishments by taking all, whatever their character, into heaven; this doctrine does the same by shutting the wicked up forever in the quietness and forgetfulness of the grave. They both arise from the same source, an unwillingness to acknowledge that God is going to punish any one in the future world."

A queer kind of "semi-Universalism," that denies salvation to every sinner, and destroys the very foundation of Universalism! The God of mercy offers the sinner eternal life, and after the offer has been refused, the God of justice decides he shall not have it, since he has spurned the conditions upon which it might have been secured; so we believe in a God of justice and mercy; and we also believe that God is going to punish the wicked, but we claim the right to inquire concerning the nature of that punishment.

4. It would be absurd to call annihilation punishment. How could an unconscious thing be punished? Do we ever talk of punishing a stone or block of wood? And yet the Bible always speaks of the state of the wicked after death as being a state of punishment. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment." (Matt. 25: 46."

If "an unconscious thing" could not be punished, would it be no punishment to be reduced to an unconscious thing? Would it be no punishment to be reduced to "a stone or block of wood?" Yes. Then to be utterly destroyed would certainly be a "punishment." The everlasting punishment," instead of being everlasting misery, is everlasting death,—the "second death,"—for Paul asserts that they "shall be punished with everlasting destruction." This "everlasting punishment" and "everlasting destruction," instead of being a present state, is after the coming of Christ, after the future future day of separation. So they do not "still live" in a realm of punishment, for they have not yet reached the day of reckoning, and punishment is beyond that, let its nature and duration be what it may.

WM. SHELDON.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.—No. 1.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

Since the fall of man, death has ever been the subject of dread. When he would enjoy himself with his earthly comforts, some fear of death forces itself unbidden into his mind; so that, whether contemplating the comforts surrounding him, or the joys in store for the good man in the future; he is fearful that very soon both will be for ever separated from him by the common enemy of mankind. Death is the penalty for sin; and as sin is so closely associated with all our thoughts and actions, so the penalty is ever before us to mar our happiness. Not only are we aware that our natural lives are but a bubble, but violent causes of death are ever lurking around us, and we know not how soon we may be attacked, and our existence blotted out. Now that the sword has been sheathed in our land, and bloodshed has for a time ceased, we are threatened from across the briny deep with a hideous monster that bids fair to eat down thousands of our fellows, and throw a pall of mourning over the whole country.

Epidemic, or Asiatic, Cholera will probably visit us again ere we see another winter. Those who have seen an epidemic of this disease, need not be told of its fearful character; how it nearly depopulates whole villages and desolates the country. Though we have just passed through a bloody war, yet it seems that we are to be still further scourged by a visitation of this disease. With this prospect before us, it behooves us to be prepared to meet it with all the weapons which the skill of the country can invent. The great fatality by which this terrible scourge of the human family has hitherto been characterized, demands at our hands a thorough investigation of its nature and cause, and the different modes of treatment which have been employed at different times, and that which is best calculated to check the disease or mitigate its violence.

It will be proper to commence the consideration of this disease with a brief glance at its history. Although unknown in this country until 1832, it existed in Asia as early certainly as 1774. It prevailed there at different times and places until 1817, when it broke out with terrible severity in Bengal, and committed great devastation in the British army, stationed in the north-eastern district of India. From Bengal it spread in various directions, so that by successive advances, during the years 1818–19–20, it spread in all parts of Hindostan, traversed the Burman Empire, Siam, and the peninsula of Malacca in the south-east, and extended to China and Chinese Tartary in the north-east. Within the same time, it also visited Ceylon, Sumatra, Borneo, the Philippine islands, Mauritius and Bourbon islands

Its progress to the north-west, beyond the boundary of India, was not at first so rapid nor as steady as in other directions It does not, indeed, appear to have passed the Indus until 1821, in which year it made its appearance in Persia, and on the Arabian shore of the Persian Gulf. Ascending the Tigris and Euphrates, it was stayed by the approach of winter, but in the spring of 1822 broke out on the eastern border of the desert which separates Syria from Mesopotamia. It did not cross the desert until November, when it broke out in Aleppo. It again subsided during the winter, and reappeared in the spring of 1823, ravaging, in the course of the summer, the Syrian towns and Mediterranean coast. In this year also, having traversed the Persian Empire, it broke out at Astrachan, a Russian city at the mouth of the Volga, and at other places on the Caspian shore

Having now reached the north-western border of Asia, it made no further progress in this direction until 1828, when it appeared at Oreuburg, on the confines of Russia, in Europe, but it still seemed to hesitate until 1830, when it entered Europe, appeared on the borders of the Black Sea, penetrated the centre of Russia, and, guided by the channels of the Volga, the Dan, and their tributaries, reached Moscow, where it prevailed during the winter, and in 1831 attacked St. Petersburg During the same year, it also extended to Poland, Prussia, the German States, and Hamburg, on the western coast of Europe; crossed the North Sea; appeared, in October, at Sunderland, on the north-east coast of England, and at Edinburgh, in Scotland, in January, 1832 Rapidly as the Epidemic had extended during the previous year, its progress was still more rapid in 1832. In this year, it broke out in London, and many other places in England, extended to France and Spain, crossed the Atlantic, and appeared in June at Quebec, then at Montreal, and pursuing the course of the St. Lawrence and the Lakes, reached the valley of the Mississippi.

But the mouth of the St. Lawrence was not the only avenue through which this invading foe gained access to our country. It appeared in New York almost simultaneously with its attack on the Canadian cities. From New York it passed up the Hudson to Albany, and southwardly to the waters of the Delaware and Chesapeake, reaching Philadelphia on the 5th of July, and Baltimore within the same period. It appeared on an island off Charleston, South Carolina, in November. In February, 1833, it broke out at Havana, in Cuba, and before the close of this year had extended to Mexico. On the 30th of September, 1832, it made its appearance at Cincinnati, thence down the Ohio, visiting Madison, Louisville, St. Louis, and so on, all the important towns in the United States.

Thus within the first year after its access to our shores, this epidemic spread to nearly every portion of North America. It subsided, especially in the Northern States, during the winter; but repeated its ravages during the spring and summer of 1833, and appeared again to some extent in 1834.

The intensity of the morbific influence was by no means uniform. Where the disease prevailed in a district, one or more points were generally selected in which the epidemic force seemed to be especially concentrated; while the inhabitants of the adjacent territory suffered from irregular, predatory visits, as if from scouting parties detached from the main body. It usually attacked cities and large towns, though mild cases occasionally occurred in the country. During the prevalence of cholera in the cities, the country suffered from cholera morbus and other bowel diseases, as diarrhea, dysentery, etc.

In 1847, having, as we may suppose, recruited its exhausted forces by a truce of thirteen years, it again took up its line of march, intent on foreign conquests; but not finding much new territory worth invading, it chose to pursue its former course, and triumph again on the field of its former victories. Its progress in this second invasion did not differ essentially from the first; and although its violence was less severe, its type and habits were the same.

From this brief sketch of its history, we derive the following facts:

1st. That it is endemic in India, but occasionally becomes epidemic, radiating from that central point in every direction to greater or less distances.

2nd. That its course is more in a westerly direction; that its progress, though vacillating at times, is generally marked by increasing rapidity.

3d. That natural objects, such as deserts, mountains, and oceans, though they may temporarily check, can interpose no impassible barrier to its progress.

4th. That winter usually checks it temporarily, except where the weather is mild, or where a kind of artificial summer is maintained, as in the cellar-like habitations of the peasantry of Russia.

5th. That it generally prefers natural channels, such as rivers or other public thoroughfares, in its advances; and that it usually selects, as points of attack, low, filthy, and crowded localities.

6th. That its prevalence in any place seems to be dependent upon some unseen influence, not usually existing there, and capable, according to some law by which it is governed, of more intense concentration in particular localities, than in others in the immediate vicinity.

From the above facts, relative to two epidemics with which we have been visited, we conclude that we shall again be visited by an epidemic of this disease, probably the coming summer. That it will be attended by less severity than characterized the first appearance of the malady. That seaport cities, and those situated in low, marshy localities, will be first visited, and will suffer most That previous to the appearance of cholera, people will suffer from various bowel diseases to an uncommon extent; that this will be the case in the country, while cholera is ravaging larger towns and cities.

Bristolville, Ohio.

For the World's Crisis.

MY TOBACCO EXPERIENCE.

BRO GRANT:—I wish to say a few words through our most excellent paper, to my dear brothers and sisters, upon a subject which appears to me is of vital importance to every lover of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ I have long felt it to be my duty to publish, for the encouragement of others, and the glory of the Lord, my experience in the use of the vile weed tobacco. I acquired the habit of chewing and smoking when quite young, and I used it almost constantly for twenty-five years, attempting occasionally to quit it, but could not, for several reasons. There would a sort of a stupor come over me in a short time, which would disqualify me for any kind of business; and my nervous system would be so affected that I could scarcely contain myself, and if I did not yield, my teeth would set to grumbling, and thus Satan would continue to torment me until he would finally drive me to the use of the filthy stuff again when, soon as I gave up, all was quiet again And so I went on from bad to worse, and every time I commenced anew, it was with a stronger appetite.

I never once thought that it was Satan that was all the while driving me on to destruction, until one year ago last fall, at our camp-meeting in the town of Okee, Dane Co., Wis., Bro. Grant gave us a discourse, in which (among other things) he told us of the evils attending the use of tobacco, and also of the Great Physician, who would, on application, remove or prevent all those difficulties which seemed to present themselves whenever we attempted to break off the filthy habit. I saw the remedy, I believed, and gave Bro Grant my box of tobacco, which he buried with others under the stand. I applied immediately to the Lord for help; he heard my prayer, granted my request, and the work was done Praise the Lord, from that day to this I have never wanted tobacco, nor anything as a substitute My teeth have not grumbled in the least. I am now the Lord's free man. I never felt so sensibly the force of Christ's words—"If the Son therefore shall make you free, you shall be free indeed."

And now, my brethren and sisters in the Lord, who eat tobacco, suffer a word of exhortation from one who "has been tempted in all points like as you are," and has finally come off conqueror through Christ, who loves us all. Be persuaded to cleanse your mouth from all filthiness. Is it not a part of the body? Do not say you cannot leave it off do not acknowledge yourself a slave to Satan, but assert your liberty in the fear and strength of the Lord. Go to Jesus with all your troubles; ask him to help you to resist the devil, and be assured that he will turn none of his faithful followers away empty.

How good it is to trust in Him who is willing and able to heal us of all our maladies now, as when on the earth. Then let us honor him with our utmost confidence in all things, and he will soon come and heal us of mortality and receive us to himself. Hoping that he may find you and me all cleansed from the filthiness of the flesh,—all ready for our change and translation, I am your brother, expecting soon to see him as he is, and be like him

Baraboo, Wis. OTIS RYDER.

☞ Mental exercise is favorable to long life

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance............$2.50 a year.
If not paid within six months....$3.00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address........$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address........$10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.
Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word, PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications, and remittances, should be plainly directed to
MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

THE TURTLE DOVE.

Hark! don't you hear the turtle dove,
The token of redeeming love?
From hill to hill we hear the sound,
The neighboring valleys echo round.
O Zion! hear the turtle dove,
The token of your Savior's love;
He comes the barren land to cheer,
And welcome in the promised year.

The winter's past, the rain is o'er,
We feel the chilling winds no more;
The spring is come, and summer, too;
All things appear divinely new.
On Zion's Mount the watchmen cry,
The resurrection's drawing nigh;
Behold, the nations from abroad
Are flocking to the mount of God.

The trumpet sounds, both far and nigh;
Oh sinners, turn, why will you die?
How can you slight the gospel charms?
Enlist with Christ, gird on your arms;
These are the days that were foretold
In ancient times, by prophets old;
They longed to see the glorious light,
But all have died without the sight.

The latter day is verging on,
And fugitives are flocking home;
Behold them crowd the gospel road,
All pressing to the mount of God;
Oh yes! and I will join the band;
Now here's my heart, and here's my hand,
With Satan's band no more to be,
But fight for Christ and liberty.

His banner soon will be unfurled,
And he will come to judge the world;
On Zion's Mount we then shall stand,
Surrounded by fair Canaan's band.
The sun and moon will darkened be,
And flames consume the land and sea;
When worlds on worlds together blaze,
We'll shout the great Redeemer's praise.

[This hymn was sung more than thirty years ago.—ED.

A CRY FOR NEW LIGHT.

In a recent number of the Bibliotheca Sacra, there is an article entitled, "Is Theology an Improvable Science?" from which we quote the following significant paragraph: "Though the evidences of religion is a hackneyed subject, yet on this theme the church seems to be calling for new light. Particularly the prophecies are in a very confused state. The argument from the fulfillment of the prophecies is presented in a very uncritical and unsatisfactory manner, much more calculated to justify infidels, than confirm christians. When do the apostles quote the Old Testament strictly, and when loosely? How much chronology is intended in the definite numbers of their fervid strains? Let us reflect that infidels have been blamed for not accepting constructions which afterwards the most learned orthodox interpreters have upset. Recollect the four kingdoms in the second and ninth chapters of Daniel, and Professor Stuart's interpretation of them. The fact is, all our books on the subject are behind the age. Then the interpretation of the prophecies in the New Testament lie in the greatest confusion. We have either the neological temerity or the pious dogmatism of the Adventist, and each unworthy of our confidence. Oh, for some sanctified erudition to clear up the subject. Oh, that Christ would verify his promise, and give to some selected student in Andover, or some other seminary, the morning star to beam on our darkness."

This cry for some wonderfully gifted genius—some superhuman man, who shall solve all our problems, remove all our difficulties, and tell us whereabouts we are, and whither we are drifting, is several times repeated, in various forms, in the elaborate paper from which we have quoted. But the great revealer and harmonist, who is to disentangle prophecy from the sorrowful confusion into which interpreters have thrown it, whether he be raised up in the theological seminary at Andover, or in same other more highly favored college, must not be an "Adventist." That is settled. Whatever a man's qualifications otherwise, if he be an "Adventist," he is "unworthy of our confidence." Let it be distinctly understood that this point is settled once for all. Yet, associated with this sentence of disqualification is the cry, "Oh, that Christ would verify his promise, and give to some selected student . . . the morning star to beam on our darkness."

Now, as we are painfully conscious of the perplexities of the church, and the heavy cloud of darkness through which she is groping, we are anxious to ascertain the promise of Christ referred to in this earnest aspiration. Our only guide is the phraseology of the learned writer. There are three passages of Scripture to either or all of which he may allude. The first is 2 Pet. 1 : 19,—"We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts." The second is Rev. 2 : 28,—"And I will give him the morning star." And the third is Rev. 22 : 16,—"I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star."

The first of these Scriptures assures us that we do well to take heed to prophecy, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, which is the very thing the rejected "Adventist" does, and for which the writer rejects him as "unworthy of confidence." The second is the crowning promise in a list of honors to be bestowed on those who "hold fast" amidst tribulations, heresies, and apostasies, until Christ come. But neither can this Scripture be alluded to, for the second coming of Christ is the very point of the passage, and the "Adventist," who has been turned out of the witness-box, is the only man that rightly understands it; and the third scripture is a glorious description of our Lord, in a paragraph whose last words, as spoken by himself, are, "Surely, I come quickly." But this is the doctrine which the disqualified witness proclaims, so that the aspiration of the essayist can have no reference to it. It comes then to this, that the prayer for a selected student who is to scatter the bewildering mists from the eye of the perplexed church, cannot be answered according to "Christ's promise." His promise, in the only passages of his own book to which the mourning essayist can allude, distinctly refers to his personal return to our world as the predetermined remedy, the divine catholicon, for the manifold diseases and sorrows of his church; but, as the teachers of that sublime and soul-animating reality are unworthy of confidence, which is the same thing as to say that their doctrine is unworthy of belief, it follows clearly that our brother's bewilderment is not likely to terminate by the uprising of any prodigy of genius in Andover, or any other seminary. The prayed-for prophet may have every qualification that the petitioner can desire, but if he is destitute of that one which the Scriptures make essential to a well-instructed scribe, what will he do for us? Just pass before our aching eyes a few more meteoric lights, and tell us that the Lord is not coming.

Great, indeed, is the work cut out for this imaginary embodiment of "sanctified erudition"! He has to place the evidences of religion in a new and clear light, which shall flash confusion on all sceptics; to disentangle the argument respecting prophecy from its state of confusion; to verify, or correct, the apostles, as the case may require, when they quote from the Old Testament; to tell us when we are to accept their chronology literally, and when to set it down to the poetry of their fervid strains. The immensity of the toil thus sketched for the paragon that is to be, is enough to damp the ardor of the most enthusiastic aspirant for immortality. Where will he begin? How will he proceed in his gigantic enterprise? We foresee the stern difficulties of his task, and give him our deepest sympathy beforehand. Let him begin with the "Evidences;" and when he has placed them in a new and clear light, commanding the consent and admiration of christendom, let him proceed to disentangle the argument respecting "Prophecy" from its chaotic condition; and if he can do this without sliding into the prohibited region of Adventism, he will indeed dim the lustre of the seers of both Testaments, and earn the eternal gratitude of all the post-millennialists in the world. But here a question faces us which presses vehemently for an answer. Will the work of this mighty mind be the fulfillment of any "promise" of Christ? That is the question upon the very ground taken by the Bibliotheca Sacra itself. And our answer distinctly and emphatically is—No! Our Lord has given no promise which requires as a condition of its accomplishment disbelief of the doctrine of his pre-millennial advent. The coming of the Lord is the "blessed hope" set before believers by the Holy Ghost. To reject this, therefore, is to launch ourselves on a dark sea of difficulties, across which no pilotage of "erudition" will ever carry us. If the polar star be despised, you are likely to dash against rocks, or sink in quicksands, however brilliant the comet you have selected as your lamp.

But so it is. The doctrine of looking and waiting for the Lord, so precious to the early christians, is not believed by the moderns Great men, profound thinkers, intellectual giants—so called—are sought after and admired, but the determination is to keep the Savior himself in a far country still "Up! make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him." It is significant, however, that we have elaborate essays and loud complaints concerning the doctrinal perplexities and practical difficulties of the church, by the very men who look with sovereign contempt upon the so-called "pious dogmatism" of those who are looking for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ Such lamentations over the distracted state of christendom would, if made by us, be instantly seized upon as a libellous intimation that christianity had failed; but when made by those who give point to their deplorable outcries by a sneer at the weaklings who believe that the return of the Lord himself is the decreed solvent of all difficulties, they are full of most instructive meaning

The teaching of "Millenarianism" is characterized, in not a few of our pulpits, as "positively wicked," and its teachers as "babblers." Of course we do not see the wickedness of a doctrine which teaches saints to look for the fulfillment of the promise of their blessed Lord; and, as to being babblers, the teachers of this scriptural faith feel it no dishonor to find themselves in the company of Paul, who was thus contemptuously designated by certain Grecian philosophers, when he preached Jesus and the resurrection That babbler taught the Athenians that God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by the risen Savior, which is precisely the doctrine we teach on apostolic authority.

We really think that brethren, who are looking in all directions but one for the succor to the church, amidst the rising tide of heresies, should be thankful to those who remind them that the return of the Lord may be the divine succor in the day of distress What have we here? "For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. And I looked, and there was none to help, and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore mine own arm brought salvation to me, and my fury it upheld me." We are not afraid of the swelling tide of heresy which so alarms those who scorn our faith, for we have been taught to expect it, and we have some idea—faint, doubtless, but better than none—how it will be met, and how it will issue At all events, if it is too much to expect gratitude, their compatriots in the besieged city should at least listen patiently to Millenarians when they suggest a reading of a certain clause of the General Orders, which is fitted to inspire the hope not merely of successful resistance, but of positive victory. Surely our interest in the safety and honor of the church of Christ is equal to that of our brethren. Why not give us credit for a consciousness of this fact, and a consequent desire to know what is actually revealed regarding the future of that church? Beyond this we do not go a hair's breadth; but our brethren have gone far beyond that which is revealed, and sketched out a plan of operations for God which is destitute of the sanction of his authority, and which is, therefore, of course, altogether illusory. We have, in brotherly affection, suggested this, and they are angry; yet that which justifies our suggestion is the remarkable fact that, side by side with their words of anger, we find a lamentable cry for more light.—The Rainbow.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER III.—THE WORDS IN ITALICS.

Let an observant reader take up an English Bible, and he will notice in it some words printed in italic letters. Being accustomed to find such words in other books emphatic, or of special importance, he attempts to give them their usual stress; but perceives he cannot do it and make sense. He feels that he must now learn some new rule for the use of italics; and he can not help thinking, Why should there be an established rule for using italicized words in other books, and a different or contrary rule for their use in that one Book, which God gave for all to read and try to understand?

To this inquiry we would reply: In God's book, as he gave it to men, are no such italicized words. But in translating that book into English, in order to give its full meaning it was thought necessary to use some words in the English, where no corresponding words are found in the inspired Hebrew and Greek. Such words were printed with a different style of type, and are now found in italics. These italicized words in the Common Version, however, besides being unemphatic, often render a sentence less concise and forcible, and sometimes they manifestly encumber it. See Matt. 1: 6; 3: 15; 4: 25; 5: 20; 12: 17; 18: 2, 3.

If any word is necessary in English to give the full and exact meaning of the Hebrew or Greek original, that word is in reality a part of the translation, and should be printed with the same kind of letters as the rest of the translation. And if any word is not necessary to give the sense of the original, it should not have a place in the translation. These are now acknowledged principles; and their application to the New Testament by the learned revisers, has swept entirely away the anomalous and cumbersome words in italics. See, in the Revised Testament, the passages last referred to.

Yet in a few instances, it may be desirable to indicate, to the ordinary reader of the Scriptures, a meaning which the scholar clearly sees is implied in the original, although not fully expressed in the written words. In such a case, the reader might be embarrassed, or might overlook the implied meaning, and in consequence misapprehend the passage. In the Revised Testament, such a meaning, occurring in some twenty-six passages, is indicated by one or more inclosed in brackets [ ]. See John 7: 39. Rom. 9: 31, 32; 12: 6, 7, 8, 19. 1 Cor. 11: 10. 2 Cor. 12: 18. Gal. 2: 5.

Brackets are also used to inclose passages that are wanting in most of the oldest and best manuscripts. See John 7: 53, 8: 11. Rom. 11: 6. 1 Pet. 4: 14.

C. W. WATERHOUSE.

For the World's Crisis.

A SERMON.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25: 46.

Let me ask a few more questions about the resurrection of the wicked, and then go to another part of the subject. First, how can Christ deny the wicked before his Father and holy angels, if they never rise from the dead, and come before him at the judgment? for thousands are dead, who have denied Christ before men.

Second Are there not many now dead, who have preached the gospel, and have labored in the name of Christ, and yet died in their sins, or errors, at last, who will plead before Christ, at the great judgment day, saying, "Lord! Lord! have we not prophesied in thy name? . . and in thy name done many wonderful works?" But how can this be, if they do not rise from the dead?

Thirdly How will many say, "Lord! Lord! open unto us," if they are not there, in the great day of accounts?

Fourthly. How can Christ divide the great multitude, small and great, who stand before the judgment throne, if none of the wicked are raised up to be there; and all the wicked are destroyed in flaming fire, who were alive when he comes?

Fifthly How can the murderers of Jesus look on him, if they are not alive before the judgment seat of Christ?

In all the Scripture that we have brought forward to prove the resurrection of saint and sinner, we have found no account of an immortal soul coming back from heaven and joining the body at the resurrection, and yet there are many who deny the literal resurrection, rather than give up the heathen dogma of the immortality of the soul.

We will now come to the saints' inheritance; where they will reign with Christ to all eternity First, we firmly declare that it will be on this earth, renewed. We think the holy book will sustain us in the declaration. Please turn to Psalm 115: 16: "The heavens, even the heavens, are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men." And in Matt. 25 34, the Savior says, "Come, ye blessed, . . inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world" Can we ever find proof of any kingdom that was prepared for God's people, from the foundation of the world, but this earth? no, indeed! not a word of it in the Bible. When our dear Savior was about to leave this world, he said to his disciples that they could not come to him, but he would come to them, and there is plenty of Scripture to show us that when Christ comes after his saints, he will then raise the dead, destroy the wicked, and destroy death and the devil, and the dominion "under the whole heaven shall be given to the . . saints of the Most High."

Please look at Gen 1: 28, where we are informed that the dominion over all the living creatures was given to Adam and his posterity. This must be "the first dominion" that should come to the "tower of the flock."—Micah 4: 8. We also read in Isaiah 9: 6, 7, where the prophet was speaking of the Messiah, and says, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder; . . . of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment, and with justice forever." We are also informed that the Great Supreme has declared that he will perform this; then it will surely take place; and if Jesus is to reign on the throne of David forever with his saints, under the whole heavens, then it certainly will be on this earth, when it is renewed, or regenerated, and not in that place that the ministers tell us about, which they say is "Beyond the bounds of time and space."

Now please turn and read the following passages of Scripture, and see how plain the Bible proves the inheritance of the saints to be on this earth: Ps. 37: 9, 11, 18, 29, 34; Prov. 10: 30; 11: 31; Dan. 7: 27; Matt. 5: 5; Rev. 5: 9, 10; 11: 15, and Isa. 65: 17, 18, 19. Kind reader, do not let any one lead you to spiritualize these passages all away, and thus change the word of God into a lie, while they try to make you believe the doctrines and commandments of men. Here I would ask the reader, do you think the God of heaven would inspire holy men of old to write the Scriptures in such a blind manner that we could not understand them, and then require us to call upon the ministers to come to us and spiritualize all these passages to correspond to the heathen philosophy? If you think our heavenly Father is a God of truth, be sure to take his word as it reads; and believe God means just what he says, and says what he means. Then we must come to the conclusion that when Christ comes in judgment, he will destroy the wicked, and sweep away the refuge of lies, and set up his everlasting kingdom on this earth renewed, and reign with his saints forever; which [illegible] is now close at hand.

In our next, and last articles, we shall bring forward the three great objections to our theory, which are often alluded to by our opponents. The first will be the rich man and Lazarus; the second, the thief on the cross; and thirdly, we shall speak of the souls under the altar; and then close this long subject by a few remarks on Revelation, about their being tormented day and night for ever and ever, and the smoke of their torment ascending up forever and ever.

B. PERHAM.

Vernon, Vt.

WORDS THAT BURN.

Anything to succeed must be positive, must be intense. Tameness and dullness and half-heartedness are among the things that were. A man, to succeed now, must be a live man; he must be restlessly active, all absorbed in his object, and pursue it to the extreme. And especially the churches must awake, or a tide of death such as we have never known will set in upon us. The national mind and heart has been so stirred, that, to meet its wants as it changes its object, the church must provide an element as intense, as absorbing, or the world will fill the vacuum, and death to spirituality will be the result.

For the last twenty years, the world has been assimilating the church to itself. Instead of its being the salt that preserved, the world's putrefaction has overspread the church. Instead of christians stamping the world, it has placed its satanic mark upon them. Instead of the church making successful aggressive movements upon our enemies, they have stealthily taken possession of our forts and arsenals. This is seen in our modes of worship, our sleepily uttered prayers and proxy praises, and sentimental, metaphysical, moonstruck theorizings from the pulpit. Our weakness and imbecility are fearfully apparent. Who pretends that the singing of the sanctuaries of the land is worship? Who avows that essays without much of reference to christianity, save a text for a motto, is preaching Christ? Who will claim that prayers, having in them none of the elements of sincere confession, supplication, and intercession, are ever wafted to the mercy seat? They are all a mockery, and weary Jehovah with their insincerity and foolishness.

And, as a result, the lives of church members proclaim a gospel robbed of power. They are weak like other men, and live like others. This is terrible, and yet it is terribly true! Now, what can such a christianity do in such an emergency? It is like sending out weak and puling invalids to take Richmond, or bombarding Sebastopol with snowballs. This may be called croaking. Would God it were! but the dreadfulness of it is that it is truth,—truth that should send us to our closets in deepest grief.

Every denomination is involved in this responsibility. None can say, "Stand by, I am holier than thou". All have catered to the world; all have presented a mutilated christianity, a sugar-coated gospel; all have adjusted Bible truths and Bible precepts to the practice of the time-serving and the world-loving. Our prayers and praises have been regulated to suit velvet ears and refined tastes. The terrible denunciations against sin have been hidden behind flowery wreaths and gilded scabbards. Sinai has ceased to thunder, and Calvary to groan, and Parnassus has reared its tiny height, and we gaped and stared at its wonderful magnitude and seeming power.

Christ, a risen, living Christ, is seldom seen He is entombed The stone at the door of his sepulchre is very great. Even those who have known his resurrection power, many of them have gone from him so far as not to know whether it is the risen Christ, or the gardener. Others have seen his tomb, and the linen clothes folded, and have heard the angel say, "He is not here, but is risen," and they have gone and proclaimed the glorious news; but how few of these even have seen him! how few ate and talked with him, received him into their houses, and felt his risen power! And of those who have journeyed with him to Emmaus, and listened to his wonderful converse, and whose hearts have burned within them, how few have obeyed his words, and tarried in Jerusalem until endued with power from on high!

But, thank God, there is a little lifting to the cloud at this evening-time there is light. This is seen in the rising feeling that something must be done to meet the demands of the times. I note in the reports of associations, conventions, and the like, of all denominations, an agitation of the subject, and, what is glorious, there seems to be but one voice as to the need of the baptism of the Holy Ghost on the churches, and that this alone can meet the exigency. In the Vermont State Baptist Convention, met here the past week, there were honest confessions of failure, and they were frank to expose the weakened and tinselled paraphernalia of the church's adoption as a great source of spiritual death. Thank God, blinded eyes are being opened!

Now, it seems to me we are on the eve of a wide spread, thorough, scriptural revival. I some way feel that God is about to wipe off the reproach of his cause; to prove there is power in the gospel; that it is adapted in all its strictness and purity to these times; that he is about to draw the line of distinction between him that serves God and him who serves him not. I believe that the god's education and talent, at whose shrine the church has worshipped, and to whom it has called with loud, clamorous voice, will be measurably dethroned, and piety have a bearing from our pulpits. Parnassus must sink, and let Calvary rise again in sight of all the people. I believe the tide will turn, and our people again demand a gospel ministry; that talent and education will take their subordinate position, and piety be an essential; that men of God will be in demand, full grown men of might and valor. O! when the priests shall themselves believe; when they that minister at the altar shall have clean hands and pure hearts,—we may look for such a rising of the church, such a changing of her garments, growing whiter and whiter until she shall be worthy to be presented to the Lamb without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing! Shall we not rejoice in hope? . . If we will labor in our churches just as freely, just as simply, with the only motive of saving souls, looking for immediate fruit, we shall realize the onrush of the tide of salvation in such power as to sweep formalism and death before its resistless tide. God grant we may learn wisdom, and be taught of the Spirit!—The Guide to Holiness.

For the World's Crisis.

TWO NATURES.

Is man in possession of two natures, as portrayed in the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That the soul of man is immortal, and as a consequence cannot die."

If immortality means continuing to live, what part of man fell? It does not seem right to say that mortality fell from mortality. If the immortal part was the cause of action, then that which fell must have had immortality. It cannot be a part of God. If it be claimed that this immortal nature is of God, then the negative asks at what time in the period of man's life is it given? If this is a special, personal gift of God to man at any time in the period of early youth, could we expect, then, that all children would have this nature given to them?

If given in advanced age, through a belief in Jesus Christ, or when "this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality," then we do not object. When we get continued life from the dead, do we not get the victory? 1 Cor. 15: 57,—"But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." There is a glory in the thought of being a victor over death, by the gift of eternal life through Christ.

H. L. SALISBURY.

BEAUTIFUL ZION.

Beautiful Zion, built above,
Beautiful city that I love,
Beautiful gates of pearly white;
Beautiful temple—God its light;
He who was slain on Calvary,
Opens those pearly gates to me.

Beautiful heaven, where all is light,
Beautiful angels clothed in white,
Beautiful strains that never tire,
Beautiful harps through all the choir,
There shall I join the chorus sweet,
Worshiping at the Savior's feet.

Beautiful crowns on every brow,
Beautiful palms the conquerors show,
Beautiful robes the ransomed wear,
Beautiful all who enter there
Thither I press with eager feet,
There shall my rest be long and sweet.

Beautiful throne of Christ our King,
Beautiful songs the angels sing,
Beautiful rest, all wand'rings cease,
Beautiful home of perfect peace,
There shall my eyes the Savior see,
Haste to this heavenly home with me

[Published by request

For the World's Crisis.

"THEY STILL LIVE."

In a recent number of the Christian Witness, I find an article with the above heading, containing some statements to which a reply might be beneficial, as white will show to the best advantage when held in contrast with black.

1. "Of all the millions who have lived upon this world, it is a solemn reflection that they still live. Immortality is not a mere accident of man's being—a something dependent upon his character, upon what he does or does not do, but it is an essential part of his nature, which he can no more destroy than he can destroy the existence of God himself That active, thinking, feeling, intelligent part of the men of the generations of the past, is active, thinking, feeling, suffering or enjoying still, and will be doing so for ever and ever."

Who affirms that "they still live?" The Bible asserts that they have "DIED," and certainly death and life are not synonymous terms, and if God means life when he says death, why may he not mean death when he says life? If immortality does not depend upon what a man "does," or what kind of a "character" he sustains, why should the apostle Paul recommend us to "SEEK for glory, honor, IMMORTALITY?" If man by "nature" possesses immortality, and can no more be destroyed than God himself, he is just as independent as Jehovah as far as life is concerned; and Jesus must have been inconsiderate in saying, "ye will not come unto me that ye might have life," and also in saying "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3 16) Why all this pains to secure for man that which he already possesses by nature? David tells us that when man dies his "thoughts perish" (Isa. 146 4.) and the wise man adds, "Also their love, their hatred and their envy is now perished." Shall we believe these inspired declarations, or the statement that they are "thinking still?"

2 "There is a form of error that has attained to some prominence of late, that which asserts the annihilation of the wicked." This so-called error has attained too much prominence to be frowned down, or to be driven out of the field by bold assertions, without proof.

3. "Now this is just semi-Universalism, an attempt to get rid of the plain doctrine of Scripture that God is a God of justice as well as of mercy, who will certainly punish the wicked. Universalism denies the Bible doctrine of future rewards and punishments by taking all, whatever their character, into heaven; this doctrine does the same by shutting the wicked up forever in the quietness and forgetfulness of the grave. They both arise from the same source, an unwillingness to acknowledge that God is going to punish any one in the future world."

A queer kind of "semi-Universalism," that denies salvation to every sinner, and destroys the very foundation of Universalism! The God of mercy offers the sinner eternal life, and after the offer has been refused, the God of justice decides he shall not have it, since he has spurned the conditions upon which it might have been secured; so we believe in a God of justice and mercy; and we also believe that God is going to punish the wicked, but we claim the right to inquire concerning the nature of that punishment.

4. It would be absurd to call annihilation punishment. How could an unconscious thing be punished? Do we ever talk of punishing a stone or block of wood? And yet the Bible always speaks of the state of the wicked after death as being a state of punishment. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment." (Matt. 25: 46."

If "an unconscious thing" could not be punished, would it be no punishment to be reduced to an unconscious thing? Would it be no punishment to be reduced to "a stone or block of wood?" Yes. Then to be utterly destroyed would certainly be a "punishment." The everlasting punishment," instead of being everlasting misery, is everlasting death,—the "second death,"—for Paul asserts that they "shall be punished with everlasting destruction." This "everlasting punishment" and "everlasting destruction," instead of being a present state, is after the coming of Christ, after the future future day of separation. So they do not "still live" in a realm of punishment, for they have not yet reached the day of reckoning, and punishment is beyond that, let its nature and duration be what it may.

WM. SHELDON.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.—No. 1.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

Since the fall of man, death has ever been the subject of dread. When he would enjoy himself with his earthly comforts, some fear of death forces itself unbidden into his mind; so that, whether contemplating the comforts surrounding him, or the joys in store for the good man in the future; he is fearful that very soon both will be for ever separated from him by the common enemy of mankind. Death is the penalty for sin; and as sin is so closely associated with all our thoughts and actions, so the penalty is ever before us to mar our happiness. Not only are we aware that our natural lives are but a bubble, but violent causes of death are ever lurking around us, and we know not how soon we may be attacked, and our existence blotted out. Now that the sword has been sheathed in our land, and bloodshed has for a time ceased, we are threatened from across the briny deep with a hideous monster that bids fair to cut down thousands of our fellows, and throw a pall of mourning over the whole country.

Epidemic, or Asiatic, Cholera will probably visit us again ere we see another winter. Those who have seen an epidemic of this disease, need not be told of its fearful character; how it nearly depopulates whole villages and desolates the country. Though we have just passed through a bloody war, yet it seems that we are to be still further scourged by a visitation of this disease. With this prospect before us, it behooves us to be prepared to meet it with all the weapons which the skill of the country can invent. The great fatality by which this terrible scourge of the human family has hitherto been characterized, demands at our hands a thorough investigation of its nature and cause, and the different modes of treatment which have been employed at different times, and that which is best calculated to check the disease or mitigate its violence.

It will be proper to commence the consideration of this disease with a brief glance at its history. Although unknown in this country until 1832, it existed in Asia as early certainly as 1774 It prevailed there at different times and places until 1817, when it broke out with terrible severity in Bengal, and committed great devastation in the British army, stationed in the north eastern district of India From Bengal it spread in various directions, so that by successive advances, during the years 1818–19–20, it spread in all parts of Hindostan, traversed the Burman Empire, Siam, and the peninsula of Malacca in the south-east, and extended to China and Chinese Tartary in the north-east Within the same time, it also visited Ceylon, Sumatra, Borneo, the Phillippine islands, Mauritius and Bourbon islands

Its progress to the north-west, beyond the boundary of India, was not at first so rapid nor as steady as in other directions It does not, indeed, appear to have passed the Indus until 1821, in which year it made its appearance in Persia, and on the Arabian shore of the Persian Gulf. Ascending the Tigris and Euphrates, it was stayed by the approach of winter; but in the spring of 1822 broke out on the eastern border of the desert which separates Syria from Mesopotamia. It did not cross the desert until November, when it broke out in Aleppo. It again subsided during the winter, and reappeared in the spring of 1823, ravaging, in the course of the summer, the Syrian towns and Mediterranean coast In this year also, having traversed the Persian Empire, it broke out at Astrachan, a Russian city at the mouth of the Volga, and at other places on the Caspian shore.

Having now reached the north-western border of Asia, it made no further progress in this direction until 1828, when it appeared at Orenburg, on the confines of Russia, in Europe, but it still seemed to hesitate until 1830, when it entered Europe, appeared on the borders of the Black Sea, penetrated the centre of Russia, and, guided by the channels of the Volga, the Don, and their tributaries, reached Moscow, where it prevailed during the winter, and in 1831 attacked St. Petersburg During the same year, it also extended to Poland, Prussia, the German States, and Hamburg, on the western coast of Europe; crossed the North Sea, appeared, in October, at Sunderland, on the north-east coast of England, and at Edinburgh, in Scotland, in January, 1832 Rapidly as the Epidemic had extended during the previous year, its progress was still more rapid in 1832 In this year, it broke out in London, and many other places in England, extended to France and Spain, crossed the Atlantic, and appeared in June at Quebec, then at Montreal, and pursuing the course of the St. Lawrence and the Lakes, reached the valley of the Mississippi.

But the mouth of the St. Lawrence was not the only avenue through which this invading foe gained access to our country. It appeared in New York almost simultaneously with its attack on the Canadian cities. From New York it passed up the Hudson to Albany, and southwardly to the waters of the Delaware and Chesapeake, reaching Philadelphia on the 5th of July, and Baltimore within the same period. It appeared on an island off Charleston, South Carolina, in November. In February, 1833, it broke out at Havana, in Cuba, and before the close of this year had extended to Mexico. On the 30th of September, 1832, it made its appearance at Cincinnati, thence down the Ohio, visiting Madison, Louisville, St. Louis, and so on, all the important towns in the United States.

Thus within the first year after its access to our shores, this epidemic spread to nearly every portion of North America. It subsided, especially in the Northern States, during the winter; but repeated its ravages during the spring and summer of 1833, and appeared again to some extent in 1834.

The intensity of the morbific influence was by no means uniform. Where the disease prevailed in a district, one or more points were generally selected in which the epidemic force seemed to be especially concentrated; while the inhabitants of the adjacent territory suffered from irregular, predatory visits, as if from scouting parties detached from the main body. It usually attacked cities and large towns, though mild cases occasionally occurred in the country. During the prevalence of cholera in the cities, the country suffered from cholera morbus and other bowel diseases, as diarrhea, dysentery, etc.

In 1847, having, as we may suppose, recruited its exhausted forces by a truce of thirteen years, it again took up its line of march, intent on foreign conquests; but not finding much new territory worth invading, it chose to pursue its former course, and triumph again on the field of its former victories. Its progress in this second invasion did not differ essentially from the first; and although its violence was less severe, its type and habits were the same.

From this brief sketch of its history, we derive the following facts:

1st. That it is endemic in India, but occasionally becomes epidemic, radiating from that central point in every direction to greater or less distances.

2nd. That its course is more in a westerly direction; that its progress, though vascillating at times, is generally marked by increasing rapidity.

3d. That natural objects, such as deserts, mountains, and oceans, though they may temporarily check, can interpose no impassible barrier to its progress.

4th. That winter usually checks it temporarily, except where the weather is mild, or where a kind of artificial summer is maintained, as in the cellar-like habitations of the peasantry of Russia.

5th. That it generally prefers natural channels, such as rivers or other public thoroughfares, in its advances; and that it usually selects, as points of attack, low, filthy, and crowded localities.

6th. That its prevalence in any place seems to be dependent upon some unseen influence, not usually existing there, and capable, according to some law by which it is governed, of more intense concentration in particular localities, than in others in the immediate vicinity.

From the above facts, relative to two epidemics with which we have been visited, we conclude that we shall again be visited by an epidemic of this disease, probably the coming summer. That it will be attended by less severity than characterized the first appearance of the malady. That seaport cities, and those situated in low, marshy localities, will be first visited, and will suffer most That previous to the appearance of cholera, people will suffer from various bowel diseases to an uncommon extent, that this will be the case in the country, while cholera is ravaging larger towns and cities.

Bristolville, Ohio.

For the World's Crisis.

MY TOBACCO EXPERIENCE.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say a few words through our most excellent paper, to my dear brothers and sisters, upon a subject which appears to me is of vital importance to every lover of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ I have long felt it to be my duty to publish, for the encouragement of others, and the glory of the Lord, my experience in the use of the vile weed tobacco. I acquired the habit of chewing and smoking when quite young and I used it almost constantly for twenty-five years attempting occasionally to quit it, but could not, for several reasons. There would a sort of a stupor come over me in a short time, which would disqualify me for any kind of business; and my nervous system would be so affected that I could scarcely contain myself, and if I did not yield, my teeth would set to grumbling, and thus Satan would continue to torment me until he would finally drive me to the use of the filthy stuff again, when, soon as I gave up, all was quiet again And so I went on from bad to worse, and every time I commenced anew, it was with a stronger appetite.

I never once thought that it was Satan that was all the while driving me on to destruction, until one year ago last fall, at our camp meeting in the town of Okee, Dane Co., Wis Bro Grant gave us a discourse, in which (among other things) he told us of the evils attending the use of tobacco, and also of the Great Physician, who would, on application, remove or prevent all those difficulties which seemed to present themselves whenever we attempted to break off the filthy habit. I saw the remedy, I believed, and gave Bro. Grant my box of tobacco, which he buried with others under the stand I applied immediately to the Lord for help; he heard my prayer, granted my request, and the work was done Praise the Lord, from that day to this I have never wanted tobacco, nor anything as a substitute. My teeth have not grumbled in the least. I am now the Lord's free man. I never felt so sensibly the force of Christ's words—"If the Son therefore shall make you free, you shall be free indeed."

And now, my brethren and sisters in the Lord, who eat tobacco, suffer a word of exhortation from one who "has been tempted in all points like as you are," and has finally come off conqueror through Christ, who loves us all. Be persuaded to cleanse your mouth from all filthiness. Is it not a part of the body? Do not say you cannot leave it off, do not acknowledge yourself a slave to Satan, but assert your liberty in the fear and strength of the Lord. Go to Jesus with all your troubles, ask him to help you to resist the devil, and be assured that he will turn none of his faithful followers away empty

How good it is to trust in Him who is willing and able to heal us of all our maladies now, as when on the earth. Then let us honor him with our utmost confidence in all things, and he will soon come and heal us of mortality and receive us to himself. Hoping that he may find you and me all cleansed from the filthiness of the flesh,—all ready for our change and translation, I am your brother, expecting soon to see him as he is, and be like him

Baraboo, Wis. OTIS RYDER

☞ Mental exercise is favorable to long life.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:
If paid in advance . . . . $1.50 a year
If not paid within six months . . . . $2.00 a year
Five copies, six months, to one address . . . $5.60
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address . . . $10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.
RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.
Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word, PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
All Persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to
MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

THE TURTLE DOVE.

Hark! don't you hear the turtle dove,
The token of redeeming love?
From hill to hill we hear the sound,
The neighboring valleys echo round.
O Zion! hear the turtle dove,
The token of your Savior's love;
He comes the barren land to cheer,
And welcome in the promised year.

The winter's past, the rain is o'er,
We feel the chilling winds no more;
The spring is come, and summer, too;
All things appear divinely new.
On Zion's Mount the watchmen cry,
The resurrection's drawing nigh;
Behold, the nations from abroad
Are flocking to the mount of God.

The trumpet sounds, both far and nigh;
Oh sinners, turn, why will you die?
How can you slight the gospel charms?
Enlist with Christ, gird on your arms;
These are the days that were foretold
In ancient times, by prophets old;
They longed to see the glorious light,
But all have died without the sight.

The latter day is verging on,
And fugitives are flocking home;
Behold them crowd the gospel road,
All pressing to the mount of God;
Oh yes! and I will join the band;
Now here's my heart, and here's my hand,
With Satan's band no more to be,
But fight for Christ and liberty.

His banner soon will be unfurled,
And he will come to judge the world;
On Zion's Mount we then shall stand,
Surrounded by fair Canaan's band.
The sun and moon will darkened be,
And flames consume the land and sea;
When worlds on worlds together blaze,
We'll shout the great Redeemer's praise.

[This hymn was sung more than thirty years ago.—Ed.

A CRY FOR NEW LIGHT.

In a recent number of the Bibliotheca Sacra, there is an article entitled, "Is Theology an Improvable Science?" from which we quote the following significant paragraph: "Though the evidences of religion is a hackneyed subject, yet on this theme the church seems to be calling for new light. Particularly the prophecies are in a very confused state. The argument from the fulfillment of the prophecies is presented in a very uncritical and unsatisfactory manner, much more calculated to justify infidels, than confirm christians. When do the apostles quote the Old Testament strictly, and when loosely? How much chronology is intended in the definite numbers of their fervid strains? Let us reflect that infidels have been blamed for not accepting constructions which afterwards the most learned orthodox interpreters have upset. Recollect the four kingdoms in the second and ninth chapters of Daniel, and Professor Stuart's interpretation of them. The fact is, all our books on the subject are behind the age. Then the interpretation of the prophecies in the New Testament lie in the greatest confusion. We have either the neological temerity or the pious dogmatism of the Adventist, and each unworthy of our confidence. Oh, for some sanctified erudition to clear up the subject. Oh, that Christ would verify his promise, and give to some selected student in Andover, or some other seminary, the morning star to beam on our darkness."

This cry for some wonderfully gifted genius—some superhuman man, who shall solve all our problems, remove all our difficulties, and tell us whereabouts we are, and whither we are drifting, is several times repeated, in various forms, in the elaborate paper from which we have quoted. But the great revealer and harmonist, who is to disentangle prophecy from the sorrowful confusion into which interpreters have thrown it, whether he be raised up in the theological seminary at Andover, or in same other more highly favored college, must not be an "Adventist." That is settled. Whatever a man's qualifications otherwise, if he be an "Adventist," he is "unworthy of our confidence." Let it be distinctly understood that this point is settled once for all. Yet, associated with this sentence of disqualification is the cry, "Oh, that Christ would verify his promise, and give to some selected student . . . the morning star to beam on our darkness."

Now, as we are painfully conscious of the perplexities of the church, and the heavy cloud of darkness through which she is groping, we are anxious to ascertain the promise of Christ referred to in this earnest aspiration. Our only guide is the phraseology of the learned writer. There are three passages of Scripture to either or all of which he may allude. The first is 2 Pet. 1: 19,—"We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts." The second is Rev. 2: 28,—"And I will give him the morning star." And the third is Rev. 22: 16,—"I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star."

The first of these Scriptures assures us that we do well to take heed to prophecy, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, which is the very thing the rejected "Adventist" does, and for which the writer rejects him as "unworthy of confidence." The second is the crowning promise in a list of honors to be bestowed on those who "hold fast" amidst tribulations, heresies, and apostasies, until Christ come. But neither can this Scripture be alluded to, for the second coming of Christ is the very point of the passage, and the "Adventist," who has been turned out of the witness-box, is the only man that rightly understands it; and the third scripture is a glorious description of our Lord, in a paragraph whose last words, as spoken by himself, are, "Surely, I come quickly." But this is the doctrine which the disqualified witness proclaims, so that the aspiration of the essayist can have no reference to it. It comes then to this, that the prayer for a selected student who is to scatter the bewildering mists from the eye of the perplexed church, cannot be answered according to "Christ's promise." His promise, in the only passages of his own book to which the mourning essayist can allude, distinctly refers to his personal return to our world as the predetermined remedy, the divine catholicon, for the manifold diseases and sorrows of his church; but, as the teachers of that sublime and soul-animating reality are unworthy of confidence, which is the same thing as to say that their doctrine is unworthy of belief, it follows clearly that our brother's bewilderment is not likely to terminate by the uprising of any prodigy of genius in Andover, or any other seminary. The prayed-for prophet may have every qualification that the petitioner can desire, but if he is destitute of that one which the Scriptures make essential to a well-instructed scribe, what will he do for us? Just pass before our aching eyes a few more meteoric lights, and tell us that the Lord is not coming.

Great, indeed, is the work cut out for this imaginary embodiment of "sanctified erudition"! He has to place the evidences of religion in a new and clear light, which shall dash confusion on all sceptics; to disentangle the argument respecting prophecy from its state of confusion; to verify, or correct, the apostles, as the case may require, when they quote from the Old Testament; to tell us when we are to accept their chronology literally, and when to set it down to the poetry of their fervid strains. The immensity of the toil thus sketched for the paragon that is to be, is enough to damp the ardor of the most enthusiastic aspirant for immortality. Where will he begin? How will he proceed in his gigantic enterprise? We foresee the stern difficulties of his task, and give him our deepest sympathy beforehand. Let him begin with the "Evidences;" and when he has placed them in a new and clear light, commanding the consent and admiration of christendom, let him proceed to disentangle the argument respecting "Prophecy" from its chaotic condition; and if he can do this without sliding into the prohibited region of Adventism, he will indeed dim the lustre of the seers of both Testaments, and earn the eternal gratitude of all the post-millennialists in the world. But here a question faces us which presses vehemently for an answer. Will the work of this mighty mind be the fulfillment of any "promise" of Christ? That is the question upon the very ground taken by the Bibliotheca Sacra itself. And our answer distinctly and emphatically is—No! Our Lord has given no promise which requires as a condition of its accomplishment disbelief of the doctrine of his pre-millennial advent. The coming of the Lord is the "blessed hope" set before believers by the Holy Ghost. To reject this, therefore, is to launch ourselves on a dark sea of difficulties, across which no pilotage of "erudition" will ever carry us. If the polar star be despised, you are likely to dash against rocks, or sink in quicksands, however brilliant the comet you have selected as your lamp.

But so it is. The doctrine of looking and waiting for the Lord, so precious to the early christians, is not believed by the moderns. Great men, profound thinkers, intellectual giants—so called—are sought after and admired, but the determination is to keep the Savior himself in a far country still. "Up! make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him." It is significant, however, that we have elaborate essays and loud complaints concerning the doctrinal perplexities and practical difficulties of the church, by the very men who look with sovereign contempt upon the so-called "pious dogmatism" of those who are looking for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. Such lamentations over the distracted state of christendom would, if made by us, be instantly seized upon as a libellous intimation that christianity had failed; but when made by those who give point to their deplorable outcries by a sneer at the weaklings who believe that the return of the Lord himself is the decreed solvent of all difficulties, they are full of most instructive meaning.

The teaching of "Millenarianism" is characterized, in not a few of our pulpits, as "positively wicked," and its teachers as "babblers." Of course we do not see the wickedness of a doctrine which teaches saints to look for the fulfillment of the promise of their blessed Lord; and, as to being babblers, the teachers of this scriptural faith feel it no dishonor to find themselves in the company of Paul, who was thus contemptuously designated by certain Grecian philosophers, when he preached Jesus and the resurrection. That babbler taught the Athenians that God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by the risen Savior, which is precisely the doctrine we teach on apostolic authority.

We really think that brethren, who are looking in all directions but one for the succor to the church, amidst the rising tide of heresies, should be thankful to those who remind them that the return of the Lord may be the divine succor in the day of distress. What have we here? "For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. And I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore mine own arm brought salvation to me, and my fury it upheld me." We are not afraid of the swelling tide of heresy which so alarms those who scorn our faith, for we have been taught to expect it, and we have some idea—faint, doubtless, but better than none—how it will be met, and how it will issue. At all events, if it is too much to expect gratitude, their compatriots in the besieged city should at least listen patiently to Millenarians when they suggest a reading of a certain clause of the General Orders, which is fitted to inspire the hope not merely of successful resistance, but of positive victory. Surely our interest in the safety and honor of the church of Christ is equal to that of our brethren. Why not give us credit for a consciousness of this fact, and a consequent desire to know what is actually revealed regarding the future of that church? Beyond this we do not go a hair's breadth; but our brethren have gone far beyond that which is revealed, and sketched out a plan of operations for God which is destitute of the sanction of his authority, and which is, therefore, of course, altogether illusory. We have, in brotherly affection, suggested this, and they are angry; yet that which justifies our suggestion is the remarkable fact that, side by side with their words of anger, we find a lamentable cry for more light.—The Rainbow.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER III.—THE WORDS IN ITALICS.

Let an observant reader take up an English Bible, and he will notice in it some words printed in italic letters. Being accustomed to find such words in other books emphatic, or of special importance, he attempts to give them their usual stress; but perceives he can not do it and make sense. He feels that he must now learn some new rule for the use of italics; and he can not help thinking, Why should there be an established rule for using italicized words in other books, and a different or contrary rule for their use in that one Book, which God gave for all to read and try to understand?

To this inquiry we would reply: In God's book, as he gave it to man, are no such italicised words. But in translating that book into English, in order to give its full meaning it was thought necessary to use some words in the English, where no corresponding words are found in the inspired Hebrew and Greek. Such words were printed with a different style of type, and are now found in italics. These italicised words in the Common Version, however, besides being unemphatic, often render a sentence less concise and forcible, and sometimes they manifestly encumber it. See Matt. 4: 6; 3: 15; 4: 25; 5: 20; 13: 17; 18: 2, 8.

If any word is necessary in English to give the full and exact meaning of the Hebrew or Greek original, that word is in reality a part of the translation, and should be printed with the same kind of letters as the rest of the translation. And if any word is not necessary to give the sense of the original, it should not have a place in the translation. These are now acknowledged principles; and their application to the New Testament by the learned revisers, has swept entirely away the anomalous and cumbersome words in italics. See, in the Revised Testament, the passages last referred to.

Yet in a few instances, it may be desirable to indicate, to the ordinary reader of the Scriptures, a meaning which the scholar clearly sees is implied in the original, although not fully expressed in the written words. In such a case, the reader might be embarrassed, or might overlook the implied meaning, and in consequence misapprehend the passage. In the Revised Testament, such a meaning, occurring in some twenty-six passages, is indicated by one or more inclosed in brackets [ ]. See John 7: 39. Rom. 9: 31, 32; 12: 6, 7, 8, 19. 1 Cor. 11: 10. 2 Cor. 12: 18. Gal. 2: 5.

Brackets are also used to inclose passages that are wanting in most of the oldest and best manuscripts. See John 7: 53, 8: 11. Rom. 11: 6. 1 Pet. 4: 14.

C. W. WATERHOUSE.

For the World's Crisis.

A SERMON.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25: 46.

Let me ask a few more questions about the resurrection of the wicked, and then go to another part of the subject. First, how can Christ deny the wicked before his Father and holy angels, if they never rise from the dead, and come before him at the judgment? for thousands are dead, who have denied Christ before men.

Second. Are there not many now dead, who have preached the gospel, and have labored in the name of Christ, and yet died in their sins, or errors, at last, who will plead before Christ, at the great judgment day, saying, "Lord! Lord! have we not prophesied in thy name? . . . and in thy name done many wonderful works?" But how can this be, if they do not rise from the dead?

Thirdly. How will many say, "Lord! Lord! open unto us," if they are not there, in the great day of accounts?

Fourthly. How can Christ divide the great multitude, small and great, who stand before the judgment throne, if none of the wicked are raised up to be there; and all the wicked are destroyed in flaming fire, who were alive when he comes?

Fifthly. How can the murderers of Jesus look on him, if they are not alive before the judgment seat of Christ?

In all the Scripture that we have brought forward to prove the resurrection of saint and sinner, we have found no account of an immortal soul coming back from heaven and joining the body at the resurrection, and yet there are many who deny the literal resurrection, rather than give up the heathen dogma of the immortality of the soul.

We will now come to the saints' inheritance; where they will reign with Christ to all eternity. First, we firmly declare that it will be on this earth, renewed. We think the holy book will sustain us in the declaration. Please turn to Psalm 115: 16: "The heavens, even the heavens, are the Lord's; but the earth hath he given to the children of men." And in Matt. 25: 34, the Savior says, "Come, ye blessed, . . . inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Can we ever find proof of any kingdom that was prepared for God's people, from the foundation of the world, but this earth? no, indeed! not a word of it in the Bible. When our dear Savior was about to leave this world, he said to his disciples that they could not come to him, but he would come to them, and there is plenty of Scripture to show us that when Christ comes after his saints, he will then raise the dead, destroy the wicked, and destroy death and the devil, and the dominion "under the whole heaven shall be given to the . . . saints of the Most High."

Please look at Gen. 1: 28, where we are informed that the dominion over all the living creatures was given to Adam and his posterity. This must be "the first dominion" that should come to the "tower of the flock."—Micah 4: 8. We also read in Isaiah 9: 6, 7, where the prophet was speaking of the Messiah, and says, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder; . . . of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment, and with justice forever." We are also informed that the Great Supreme has declared that he will perform this; then it will surely take place; and if Jesus is to reign on the throne of David forever with his saints, under the whole heavens, then it certainly will be on this earth, when it is renewed, or regenerated, and not in that place that the ministers tell us about, which they say is "Beyond the bounds of time and space."

Now please turn and read the following passages of Scripture, and see how plain the Bible proves the inheritance of the saints to be on this earth: Ps. 37: 9, 11, 18, 29, 34; Prov. 10: 30; 11: 31; Dan. 7: 27; Matt. 5: 5; Rev. 5: 9, 10; 11: 15, and Isa. 65: 17, 18, 19. Kind reader, do not let any one lead you to spiritualize these passages all away, and thus change the word of God into a lie, while they try to make you believe the doctrines and commandments of men. Here I would ask the reader, do you think the God of heaven would inspire holy men of old to write the Scriptures in such a blind manner that we could not understand them, and then require us to call upon the ministers to come to us and spiritualize all these passages to correspond to the heathen philosophy? If you think our heavenly Father is a God of truth, be sure to take his word as it reads; and believe God means just what he says, and says what he means. Then we must come to the conclusion that when Christ comes in judgment, he will destroy the wicked, and sweep away the refuge of lies, and set up his everlasting kingdom on this earth renewed, and reign with his saints forever; which coming is now close at hand.

In our next, and last article, we shall bring forward the three great objections to our theory, which are often alluded to by our opponents. The first will be the rich man and Lazarus; the second, the thief on the cross; and thirdly, we shall speak of the souls under the altar; and then close this long subject by a few remarks on Revelation, about their being tormented day and night for ever and ever, and the smoke of their torment ascending up forever and ever.

B. PERHAM.

Vernon, Vt.

WORDS THAT BURN.

Anything to succeed must be positive, must be intense. Tameness and dullness and half-heartedness are among the things that were. A man, to succeed now, must be a live man: he must be restlessly active, all absorbed in his object, and pursue it to the extreme. And especially the churches must awake, or a tide of death such as we have never known will set in upon us. The national mind and heart has been so stirred, that, to meet its wants as it changes its object, the church must provide an element as intense, as absorbing, or the world will fill the vacuum, and death to spirituality will be the result.

For the last twenty years, the world has been assimilating the church to itself. Instead of its being the salt that preserved, the world's putrefaction has overspread the church. Instead of christians stamping the world, it has placed its satanic mark upon them. Instead of the church making successful aggressive movements upon our enemies, they have stealthily taken possession of our forts and arsenals. This is seen in our modes of worship, our sleepily uttered prayers and proxy praises, and sentimental, metaphysical, moonstruck theorizings from the pulpit. Our weakness and imbecility are fearfully apparent. Who pretends that the singing of the sanctuaries of the land is worship? Who avows that essays without much of reference to christianity, save a text for a motto, is preaching Christ? Who will claim that prayers, having in them none of the elements of sincere confession, supplication, and intercession, are ever wafted to the mercy seat? They are all a mockery, and weary Jehovah with their insincerity and foolishness.

And, as a result, the lives of church members proclaim a gospel robbed of power. They are weak like other men, and live like others. This is terrible, and yet it is terribly true! Now, what can such a christianity do in such an emergency? It is like sending out weak and puling invalids to take Richmond, or bombarding Sebastopol with snowballs. This may be called croaking. Would God it were! but the dreadfulness of it is that it is truth,—truth that should send us to our closets in deepest grief.

Every denomination is involved in this responsibility. None can say, "Stand by, I am holier than thou." All have catered to the world; all have presented a mutilated christianity, a sugar-coated gospel; all have adjusted Bible truths and Bible precepts to the practice of the time-serving and the world-loving. Our prayers and praises have been regulated to suit velvet ears and refined tastes. The terrible denunciations against sin have been hidden behind flowery wreaths and gilded scabbards. Sinai has ceased to thunder, and Calvary to groan, and Parnassus has reared its tiny height, and we gaped and stared at its wonderful magnitude and seeming power.

Christ, a risen, living Christ, is seldom seen. He is entombed. The stone at the door of his sepulchre is very great. Even those who have known his resurrection power, many of them have gone from him so far as not to know whether it is the risen Christ, or the gardener. Others have seen his tomb, and the linen clothes folded, and have heard the angel say, "He is not here, but is risen," and they have gone and proclaimed the glorious news; but how few of these even have seen him! how few ate and talked with him, received him into their houses, and felt his risen power! And of those who have journeyed with him to Emmaus, and listened to his wonderful converse, and whose hearts have burned within them, how few have obeyed his words, and tarried in Jerusalem until endued with power from on high!

But, thank God, there is a little lifting to the cloud: at this evening-time there is light. This is seen in the rising feeling that something must be done to meet the demands of the times. I note in the reports of associations, conventions, and the like, of all denominations, an agitation of the subject, and, what is glorious, there seems to be but one voice as to the need of the baptism of the Holy Ghost on the churches, and that this alone can meet the exigency. In the Vermont State Baptist Convention, met here the past week, there were honest confessions of failure, and they were frank to expose the weakened and tinselled paraphernalia of the church's adoption as a great source of spiritual death. Thank God, blinded eyes are being opened!

Now, it seems to me we are on the eve of a wide spread, thorough, scriptural revival. I some way feel that God is about to wipe off the reproach of his cause; to prove there is power in the gospel; that it is adapted in all its strictness and purity to these times; that he is about to draw the line of distinction between him that serves God and him who serves him not. I believe that the god's education and talent, at whose shrine the church has worshipped, and to whom it has called with loud, clamorous voice, will be measurably dethroned, and piety have a hearing from our pulpits. Parnassus must sink, and let Calvary rise again in sight of all the people. I believe the tide will turn, and our people again demand a gospel ministry; that talent and education will take their subordinate position, and piety be an essential; that men of God will be in demand, full grown men of might and valor. O! when the priests shall themselves believe; when they that minister at the altar shall have clean hands and pure hearts,—we may look for such a rising of the church, such a changing of her garments, growing whiter and whiter until she shall be worthy to be presented to the Lamb without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing! Shall we not rejoice in hope? . . . If we will labor in our churches just as freely, just as simply, with the only motive of saving souls, looking for immediate fruit, we shall realize the onrush of the tide of salvation in such power as to sweep formalism and death before its resistless tide. God grant we may learn wisdom, and be taught of the Spirit!—The Guide to Holiness.

For the World's Crisis.

TWO NATURES.

Is man in possession of two natures, as portrayed in the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That the soul of man is immortal, and as a consequence cannot die."

If immortality means continuing to live, what part of man fell? It does not seem right to say that mortality fell from mortality. If the immortal part was the cause of action, then that which fell must have had immortality. It cannot be a part of God. If it be claimed that this immortal nature is of God, then the negative asks at what time in the period of man's life is it given? If this is a special, personal gift of God to man at any time in the period of early youth, could we expect, then, that all children would have this nature given to them?

If given in advanced age, through a belief in Jesus Christ, or when "this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality," then we do not object. When we get continued life from the dead, do we not get the victory? 1 Cor. 15: 57,—"But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." There is a glory in the thought of being a victor over death, by the gift of eternal life through Christ.

H. L. SALISBURY.

BEAUTIFUL ZION.

Beautiful Zion, built above,
Beautiful city that I love,
Beautiful gates of pearly white;
Beautiful temple—God its light;
He who was slain on Calvary,
Opens those pearly gates to me.

Beautiful heaven, where all is light,
Beautiful angels clothed in white,
Beautiful strains that never tire,
Beautiful harps through all the choir;
There shall I join the chorus sweet,
Worshiping at the Savior's feet.

Beautiful crowns on every brow,
Beautiful palms the conquerors show,
Beautiful robes the ransomed wear,
Beautiful all who enter there
Thither I press with eager feet,
There shall my rest be long and sweet.

Beautiful throne of Christ our King,
Beautiful songs the angels sing,
Beautiful rest, all wand'rings cease,
Beautiful home of perfect peace,
There shall my eyes the Savior see,
Haste to this heavenly home with me.

[Published by request.

For the World's Crisis.

"THEY STILL LIVE."

In a recent number of the Christian Witness, I find an article with the above heading, containing some statements to which a reply might be beneficial, as white will show to the best advantage when held in contrast with black.

1. "Of all the millions who have lived upon this world, it is a solemn reflection that they still live. Immortality is not a mere accident of man's being—a something dependent upon his character, upon what he does or does not do, but it is an essential part of his nature, which he can no more destroy than he can destroy the existence of God himself. That active, thinking, feeling, intelligent part of the men of the generations of the past, is active, thinking, feeling, suffering or enjoying still, and will be doing so for ever and ever."

Who affirms that "they still live?" The Bible asserts that they have "DIED," and certainly death and life are not synonymous terms, and if God means life when he says death, why may he not mean death when he says life? If immortality does not depend upon what a man "does," or what kind of a "character" he sustains, why should the apostle Paul recommend us to "SEEK for glory, honor, IMMORTALITY?" If man by "nature" possesses immortality, and can no more be destroyed than God himself, he is just as independent as Jehovah as far as life is concerned; and Jesus must have been inconsiderate in saying, "ye will not come unto me that ye might have life," and also in saying "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3: 16) Why all this pains to secure for man that which he already possesses by nature? David tells us that when man dies his "thoughts perish" (Isa. 146: 4.) and the wise man adds, "Also their love, their hatred and their envy is now perished." Shall we believe these inspired declarations, or the statement that they are "thinking still?"

2. "There is a form of error that has attained to some prominence of late, that which asserts the annihilation of the wicked." This so-called error has attained too much prominence to be frowned down, or to be driven out of the field by bold assertions, without proof.

3. "Now this is just semi-Universalism, an attempt to get rid of the plain doctrine of Scripture that God is a God of justice as well as of mercy, who will certainly punish the wicked. Universalism denies the Bible doctrine of future rewards and punishments by taking all, whatever their character, into heaven; this doctrine does the same by shutting the wicked up forever in the quietness and forgetfulness of the grave. They both arise from the same source, an unwillingness to acknowledge that God is going to punish any one in the future world."

A queer kind of "semi-Universalism," that denies salvation to every sinner, and destroys the very foundation of Universalism! The God of mercy offers the sinner eternal life, and after the offer has been refused, the God of justice decides he shall not have it, since he has spurned the conditions upon which it might have been secured; so we believe in a God of justice and mercy; and we also believe that God is going to punish the wicked, but we claim the right to inquire concerning the nature of that punishment.

4. It would be absurd to call annihilation punishment. How could an unconscious thing be punished? Do we ever talk of punishing a stone or block of wood? And yet the Bible always speaks of the state of the wicked after death as being a state of punishment. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment." (Matt. 25: 46."

If "an unconscious thing" could not be punished, would it be no punishment to be reduced to an unconscious thing? Would it be no punishment to be reduced to "a stone or block of wood?" Yes. Then to be utterly destroyed would certainly be a "punishment." The everlasting punishment," instead of being everlasting misery, is everlasting death,—the "second death,"—for Paul asserts that they "shall be punished with everlasting destruction." This "everlasting punishment" and "everlasting destruction," instead of being a present state, is after the coming of Christ, after the future future day of separation. So they do not "still live" in a realm of punishment, for they have not yet reached the day of reckoning, and punishment is beyond that, let its nature and duration be what it may.

WM. SHELDON.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.—No. 1.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

Since the fall of man, death has ever been the subject of dread. When he would enjoy himself with his earthly comforts, some fear of death forces itself unbidden into his mind; so that, whether contemplating the comforts surrounding him, or the joys in store for the good man in the future, he is fearful that very soon both will be for ever separated from him by the common enemy of mankind. Death is the penalty for sin; and as sin is so closely associated with all our thoughts and actions, so the penalty is ever before us to mar our happiness. Not only are we aware that our natural lives are but a bubble, but violent causes of death are ever lurking around us, and we know not how soon we may be attacked, and our existence blotted out. Now that the sword has been sheathed in our land, and bloodshed has for a time ceased, we are threatened from across the briny deep with a hideous monster that bids fair to cut down thousands of our fellows, and throw a pall of mourning over the whole country.

Epidemic, or Asiatic, Cholera will probably visit us again ere we see another winter. Those who have seen an epidemic of this disease, need not be told of its fearful character; how it nearly depopulates whole villages and desolates the country. Though we have just passed through a bloody war, yet it seems that we are to be still further scourged by a visitation of this disease. With this prospect before us, it behooves us to be prepared to meet it with all the weapons which the skill of the country can invent. The great fatality by which this terrible scourge of the human family has hitherto been characterized, demands at our hands a thorough investigation of its nature and cause, and the different modes of treatment which have been employed at different times, and that which is best calculated to check the disease or mitigate its violence.

It will be proper to commence the consideration of this disease with a brief glance at its history. Although unknown in this country until 1832, it existed in Asia as early certainly as 1774. It prevailed there at different times and places until 1817, when it broke out with terrible severity in Bengal, and committed great devastation in the British army, stationed in the north-eastern district of India. From Bengal it spread in various directions, so that by successive advances, during the years 1818–19–20, it spread to all parts of Hindostan, traversed the Burman Empire, Siam, and the peninsula of Malacca in the south-east, and extended to China and Chinese Tartary in the north-east. Within the same time, it also visited Ceylon, Sumatra, Borneo, the Phillippine islands, Mauritius and Bourbon islands.

Its progress to the north-west, beyond the boundary of India, was not at first so rapid nor as steady as in other directions. It does not, indeed, appear to have passed the Indus until 1821, in which year it made its appearance in Persia, and on the Arabian shore of the Persian Gulf. Ascending the Tigris and Euphrates, it was stayed by the approach of winter; but in the spring of 1822 broke out on the eastern border of the desert which separates Syria from Mesopotamia. It did not cross the desert until November, when it broke out in Aleppo. It again subsided during the winter, and reappeared in the spring of 1823, ravaging, in the course of the summer, the Syrian towns and Mediterranean coast. In this year also, having traversed the Persian Empire, it broke out at Astrachan, a Russian city at the mouth of the Volga, and at other places on the Caspian shore.

Having now reached the north-western border of Asia, it made no further progress in this direction until 1828, when it appeared at Orenburg, on the confines of Russia, in Europe; but it still seemed to hesitate until 1830, when it entered Europe, appeared on the borders of the Black Sea, penetrated the centre of Russia, and, guided by the channels of the Volga, the Dan, and their tributaries, reached Moscow, where it prevailed during the winter, and in 1831 attacked St. Petersburg. During the same year, it also extended to Poland, Prussia, the German States, and Hamburg, on the western coast of Europe; crossed the North Sea; appeared, in October, at Sunderland, on the north-east coast of England, and at Edinburgh, in Scotland, in January, 1832. Rapidly as the Epidemic had extended during the previous year, its progress was still more rapid in 1832. In this year, it broke out in London, and many other places in England, extended to France and Spain, crossed the Atlantic, and appeared in June at Quebec, then at Montreal, and pursuing the course of the St. Lawrence and the Lakes, reached the valley of the Mississippi.

But the mouth of the St. Lawrence was not the only avenue through which this invading foe gained access to our country. It appeared in New York almost simultaneously with its attack on the Canadian cities. From New York it passed up the Hudson to Albany, and southwardly to the waters of the Delaware and Chesapeake, reaching Philadelphia on the 5th of July, and Baltimore within the same period. It appeared on an island off Charleston, South Carolina, in November. In February, 1833, it broke out at Havana, in Cuba, and before the close of this year had extended to Mexico. On the 30th of September, 1832, it made its appearance at Cincinnati, thence down the Ohio, visiting Madison, Louisville, St. Louis, and so on, all the important towns in the United States.

Thus within the first year after its access to our shores, this epidemic spread to nearly every portion of North America. It subsided, especially in the Northern States, during the winter; but repeated its ravages during the spring and summer of 1833, and appeared again to some extent in 1834.

The intensity of the morbific influence was by no means uniform. Where the disease prevailed in a district, one or more points were generally selected in which the epidemic force seemed to be especially concentrated; while the inhabitants of the adjacent territory suffered from irregular, predatory visits, as if from scouting parties detached from the main body. It usually attacked cities and large towns, though mild cases occasionally occurred in the country. During the prevalence of cholera in the cities, the country suffered from cholera morbus and other bowel diseases, as diarrhea, dysentery, etc.

In 1847, having, as we may suppose, recruited its exhausted forces by a truce of thirteen years, it again took up its line of march, intent on foreign conquests; but not finding much new territory worth invading, it chose to pursue its former course, and triumph again on the field of its former victories. Its progress in this second invasion did not differ essentially from the first; and although its violence was less severe, its type and habits were the same.

From this brief sketch of its history, we derive the following facts:

1st. That it is endemic in India, but occasionally becomes epidemic, radiating from that central point in every direction to greater or less distances.

2nd. That its course is more in a westerly direction; that its progress, though vacillating at times, is generally marked by increasing rapidity.

3d. That natural objects, such as deserts, mountains, and oceans, though they may temporarily check, can interpose no impassable barrier to its progress.

4th. That winter usually checks it temporarily, except where the weather is mild, or where a kind of artificial summer is maintained, as in the cellar-like habitations of the peasantry of Russia.

5th. That it generally prefers natural channels, such as rivers or other public thoroughfares, in its advances; and that it usually selects, as points of attack, low, filthy, and crowded localities.

6th. That its prevalence in any place seems to be dependent upon some unseen influence, not usually existing there, and capable, according to some law by which it is governed, of more intense concentration in particular localities, than in others in the immediate vicinity.

From the above facts, relative to two epidemics with which we have been visited, we conclude that we shall again be visited by an epidemic of this disease, probably the coming summer. That it will be attended by less severity than characterized the first appearance of the malady. That seaport cities, and those situated in low, marshy localities, will be first visited, and will suffer most. That previous to the appearance of cholera, people will suffer from various bowel diseases to an uncommon extent; that this will be the case in the country, while cholera is ravaging larger towns and cities.

Bristolville, Ohio.

For the World's Crisis.

MY TOBACCO EXPERIENCE.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say a few words through our most excellent paper, to my dear brothers and sisters, upon a subject which appears to me is of vital importance to every lover of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I have long felt it to be my duty to publish, for the encouragement of others, and the glory of the Lord, my experience in the use of the vile weed tobacco. I acquired the habit of chewing and smoking when quite young, and I used it almost constantly for twenty-five years, attempting occasionally to quit it, but could not, for several reasons. There would a sort of a stupor come over me in a short time, which would disqualify me for any kind of business; and my nervous system would be so affected that I could scarcely contain myself; and if I did not yield, my teeth would set to grumbling, and thus Satan would continue to torment me until he would finally drive me to the use of the filthy stuff again, when, soon as I gave up, all was quiet again. And so I went on from bad to worse, and every time I commenced anew, it was with a stronger appetite.

I never once thought that it was Satan that was all the while driving me on to destruction, until one year ago last fall, at our camp-meeting in the town of Okee, Dane Co., Wis. Bro. Grant gave us a discourse, in which (among other things) he told us of the evils attending the use of tobacco, and also of the Great Physician, who would, on application, remove or prevent all those difficulties which seemed to present themselves whenever we attempted to break off the filthy habit. I saw the remedy, I believed, and gave Bro. Grant my box of tobacco, which he buried with others under the stand. I applied immediately to the Lord for help; he heard my prayer, granted my request, and the work was done. Praise the Lord, from that day to this I have never wanted tobacco, nor anything as a substitute. My teeth have not grumbled in the least. I am now the Lord's free man. I never felt so sensibly the force of Christ's words—"If the Son therefore shall make you free, you shall be free indeed."

And now, my brethren and sisters in the Lord, who eat tobacco, suffer a word of exhortation from one who "has been tempted in all points like as you are," and has finally come off conqueror through Christ, who loves us all. Be persuaded to cleanse your mouth from all filthiness. Is it not a part of the body? Do not say you cannot leave it off; do not acknowledge yourself a slave to Satan; but assert your liberty in the fear and strength of the Lord. Go to Jesus with all your troubles; ask him to help you to resist the devil, and be assured that he will turn none of his faithful followers away empty.

How good it is to trust in Him who is willing and able to heal us of all our maladies now, as when on the earth. Then let us honor him with our utmost confidence in all things, and he will soon come and heal us of mortality and receive us to himself. Hoping that he may find you and me all cleansed from the filthiness of the flesh,—all ready for our change and translation, I am your brother, expecting soon to see him as he is, and be like him.

Baraboo, Wis. OTIS RYDER.

☞ Mental exercise is favorable to long life.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance..............$2.50 a year
If not paid within six months....$3.00 a year
Five copies, six months, to one address.. $5.60
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address...... $10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word, PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 550. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 20.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
I. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL, JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN, D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth, especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart, the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

"COME UNTO ME."

Savior, I come with my burden weary,
For thou alone hast power to make it light;
If by faith I only view thee near me,
I shall be strong in thy great arm of might.
Oh! Savior, help me come in earnest now,
And ease my load, while I before thee bow.

Oh! how welcome is the invitation—
It found me fainting, drooping by the way;
Long in vain sought I for consolation,
Until these words I heard my Savior say,—
Come unto me, all ye that are unblest,
And learn of me, for I will give you rest.

With the promise, great the condescension,
Teaching the lesson how I may obey;
While I strive quicken my apprehension,
As "learn of me" I daily hear thee say
I seek from thee a meek and quiet heart,
And thine own rest, that thou would'st now impart.

Nought here but disappointed hopes I find,
And He who turned my eyes from blank despair,
Shows me the beauty, and my heart inclined
To his own rest—to lay on Him my care.
Lo! Jesus invites—every one and all—
Oh! weary one! come and obey the call.

The rest of Jesus! how it soothes each care,
Though its perfection is not reached while here;
Not here is a full rest e'er found, but there,
And faith beholds the blessed prospect near.
Come to the Savior, weary one, and find
Rest for the aching heart and troubled mind.

M. C. Allen.

INFIDELITY AND PROPHECY.

Is the Bible the Book of God? Is it a record of divine revelations? Does God speak to man through its pages? Has it supreme authority?

These questions are important. If the Bible is a record of the divine will, the fact must be susceptible of proof, and it should be proved. If it is a miserable cheat, concocted by designing priests, or a mass of old wives' fables, imposed upon the weakness of credulous fools, that fact can be proved, and should be proved, and the sooner the better, for the subject is of moment, and the necessity for its discussion is urgent.

I know men say that if the Bible is not true yet it is best to let the imposition pass unquestioned, because it exercises a wholesome moral influence upon rascals generally, who are kept from actual mischief in this world by fear of fancied punishments in the next. But the main question cannot be settled by such evasions. Ignorance is not the parent of true devotion, nor are lies, or pious frauds, the seeds of righteousness.

It is sometimes said that the Bible is an inspired book, and so is the Koran, so are the Shasters, so are Shakspeare's Plays, so are Plato's Dialogues, and so are books generally,—all are inspired, all have truth, all have error, but all are behind the times, and need to be improved by the addition of whatever new revelations may present themselves; and when all are completed, we are then to believe and obey just as much and just as little of any or all of them as we please.

But this position does not quite satisfy me. Various modern authors offer me theories, fancies, opinions, and arguments. I take them for what they seem to be worth. But the writers in the Bible do not usually offer their opinions. They relate facts which they profess to have seen; they profess to reject fables and traditions, and they, over and over again, preface their sayings with the words, "Thus saith the Lord."

Shakspeare does not say that, nor Plato, nor Socrates, nor any of the poets or sages of ancient or modern times. Now, if the Almighty really speaks to us, we ought to listen and give heed. But if he does not speak, then we cannot accept these statements as either true, or wise, or profitable for men to believe.

It is sometimes suggested that the writers of the Bible were a pack of credulous fools, quickly imposed upon, and easily deceived. But at this I demur. A fool never wrote Moses' Laws, Job Discourses, David's Psalms, Solomon's Proverbs, Isaiah's Poetry, Daniel's Visions, Ezekiel's Prophecies, Paul's Epistles, or John's Revelations. The man who thinks fools could write such books, might well afford to try his own hand at it, and see.

Now these writers in general, though intelligent and of acknowledged ability, do not profess to offer speculations, or opinions, but they base their whole system upon alleged facts. If they had been fools they might have been imposed upon somewhat; but in general the facts were of such a nature that they could not be mistaken about them. And they either tell the positive truth, or else they were most outrageous and infamous liars.

The Israelites either went through the Red Sea dry shod, or the man who wrote the story about it lied. Either the Jordan was divided before them, or the record of it is a falsehood. Christ either healed the sick, cleansed the lepers, cast out demons, and raised the dead, or Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, were impudent, lying knaves.

Jesus of Nazareth, whom Jews, Gentiles, and Christians all agree was crucified, either did really, truly, personally, and bodily rise from the dead, and ascend to heaven, or the men who, at the loss of their reputation, at the expense of every personal comfort, and even unto the suffering of violent deaths, bore testimony that they saw him, heard him, handled him, walked with him, talked with him, ate with him, and knew him "by many infallible proofs," and finally beheld him ascending heavenward, till a cloud received him out of their sight, were base hypocrites, arrant knaves, vile impostors, and persistent and determined liars.

There is no middle ground to stand on here. They saw what they said they did, or they lied. The Almighty spoke to the prophets, or they told falsehoods in the name of the God of truth. Either they bring to us the actual verities of divine revelation, or else the whole tribe of them, in all their generations, for hundreds and hundreds of years, were deceivers and prating knaves, who lied about the hell which they asserted that all liars should have part in, and deceived about the very words in which they declared damnation on all deceivers.

We cannot blink this proposition out of sight. The question must be met here and settled. Honest men do not wish to be deceived, and in these days men want facts, not fables; truths, not "raw head and bloody bones stories," by which to direct their lives.

I know the Bible is said to be the best of all the pretended sacred books in the world. But that argument amounts to nothing. If it is not true, it is false. If the Koran, the Shasters, or the Spirit communications are true, then let us believe them, and turn Turks, Hindoos, or Spirit rappers. Or, if there is no revelation of the future, then let us make the most of the present—"let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die."

But let us not cling to a lie because it is better than a dozen other lies. If indeed the Bible is better than they are, that is no reason why it should be received if it be false. For it is not a mere harmless humbug, a collection of the writings of well-meaning but misguided idiots. It is either the word of the everlasting Deity, or else it is a cheat so outrageous and shameful that compared with it the Koran is sacred, the Arabian Nights reasonable, and the Book of Mormon worthy of sincere respect.

The Bible is everything, or it is worse than nothing. It is the best book or the worst one in the world. It contains eternal truth, or the deepest error. It is pure gold, or base counterfeit. Which is it?

We must not prejudge this question. The christian says he knows the Bible to be true, because he feels it is. The infidel says he rejects it because he has no such feeling. Both may be prejudiced. Either may be mistaken. A more conclusive style of argument than this must be introduced to decide this important question.

The question is not whether the English Bible is entirely, in all its jots and tittles, the word of God, for all agree that there may be in that mis-prints, mis-translations, and possible inaccuracies. And even in the Hebrew and Greek originals, there are errors of transcribers, and some slight variations of readings in different manuscript copies. And then there are recorded in it, not only the words of God, but also of men and of devils; and some of these words all admit to be false. But the question is, whether God, men, or devils said the words and did the things there related of them. Is the account correct? Is the record true?

We need not inquire whether the Bible is a modern book, or an ancient one. Here there is no room for dispute. It is older than the art of printing, for it was the first book printed. It is older than the dark ages, for copies of it exist which were written long before. And about the year 176, Celsus, a heathen, or infidel philosopher, in writing the first book ever published against christianity, entitled "The Word of Truth," quotes or refers to about EIGHTY PASSAGES which can now be found in the New Testament. He speaks of the histories of Jesus written by his disciples, refers to all the leading facts narrated in the gospels, and says, "It is but RECENTLY, as it were, yesterday, since we punished Christ." "It is but a few years since he delivered this doctrine, who is reckoned by the Christians to be the Son of God."

And Porphyry, another heathen writer, about the year 270, wrote against the Book of Daniel, which he allowed was written as early as the days of Antiochus, or about one hundred and fifty years before the Christian Era. A book cannot be quoted or refuted before it is written. Hence, as Celsus quotes the New Testament, it was written before A. D. 176, and as the New Testament quotes the prophets, they were written previous to it, and as the prophets quote the Law that was written before the prophets wrote, and as the Law refers to Genesis, and Genesis refers to no preceding book, it seems to stand at the head as the oldest of all. We shall not need then to discuss this question of age, as we can prove by Jews, Christians, and infidels, that the books which are called the Bible are very ancient works. But another question; namely, concerning the inspiration, the divine origin, and the authority of the Bible, is the one before us.

We know and admit that there is a God in nature, for there are things done before our eyes which no man has power to do. And the source of that almighty power, that ceaseless energy that rules and upholds and guides the universe, is what we call Deity. And so when power is displayed beyond all human might, we refer that display back to God as to its only author.

But what power do we find in the Bible? It is a book; men have written it; do they give proof of divine assistance in their work?
—The Christian.

☞ Do as you would be done by, if you wish to be done by as you would.

BUILDING ON THE SAND.

It is a sad sight to see the labors of a lifetime swept away in a few hours. In March, 1865, the city of Rochester, N. Y., was visited by a great flood. The Genesee river, on each side of which the city is built, rose to an unprecedented height. In some of the streets the water was fifteen or twenty feet deep. The current was so rapid that no boatman durst venture in it—a horse-car standing on the bridge was swept down the street and over the falls—a heavy iron safe was carried quite a distance, and terribly bruised and battered—many buildings were greatly damaged, and some entirely demolished. Among the latter was a large, four-story building on the west bank of the river occupied as a hardware store. The owner of the store had met with heavy losses from fire, but by unceasing industry he was again doing a flourishing business. But the flood came, and the water found a way under the foundation, and the immense building, which stood apparently so secure, was utterly swept away. Our Savior tells us it shall be thus at the last day. Many will be most grievously disappointed. Some, who thought themselves certain of heaven, will wake up to the terrible reality that they are irrevocably lost. We are all liable to self-deception. It becomes us to try ourselves by every test laid down in the Bible. We should have the spirit of the disciples, who, when told by their Lord that one of them should betray him, cried out each for himself, "Lord, is it I?" Did you ever weigh those heavy words of our Savior at the conclusion of his Sermon on the Mount? They are enough to make the greatest saints tremble.

"Every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell: and great was the fall of it."

1. Observe the stress that our Savior here lays upon our DOING as he directs. He insists upon obedience with as much earnestness as modern pulpits do upon faith. He gives no countenance to the sentiment of the popular hymn,

"Nothing, either great or small,
Remains for me to do;
Jesus died and paid it all,
All the debt I owe."

This hymn, so great a favorite in modern revivals, teaches a very bad theology. Indeed, we fear that much of the instruction given in churches calling themselves orthodox, has a direct tendency to lead souls astray. It confirms many in their fancied security, who are on their way to sure destruction. To every one who would be a christian, faith is of the utmost importance. Without it no one can please God. The misunderstanding, so general and so ruinous, relates, not to its importance, but to its office. Faith was never designed, as many seem to suppose, to supply the place of a heartfelt and cordial obedience to all the requirements of God. Its function is, to render such obedience possible and easy—to supply the motive, and the power to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling. It does not discharge us from the christian warfare, but inspires us with courage to go out upon the battle-field, and supplies us with a shield whereby we are able to quench all the fiery darts of the Wicked One. It does not supercede the necessity of striving that we may obtain eternal life, but it puts us upon the course and makes our feet swift to run in the way of God's commandments. Therefore we both labor, and suffer reproach, BECAUSE WE TRUST in the living God. Faith is the cause why labor is performed, and persecution endured; and not a substitute for them. A faith in Christ that is dead and inoperative, that does not lead to a renunciation of the world, and to a life of self-denial, is no better than the faith of a Mohammedan or a heathen. "He that doeth righteousness is righteous."

2. Great sacrifices in the cause of Christ will not answer in the place of obedience to all his requirements. To build a house upon the sand takes time and money. The house that falls before the wind and the rain, may be more finely finished, and more imposing in its appearance, than the one that abides the tempest. The building we referred to, that was destroyed by the flood, was well-built and of good materials; the defect was in but a single point, but that proved the overthrow of the whole. So there are many that, on great occasions, are eminent christians. They show to advantage before the world. They give liberally for benevolent enterprises, and especially in instances where their generosity will be widely heralded abroad. They pay large sums for costly churches from which the poor are excluded, and where the fashionable congregate and mutually display and admire their various styles of "purple and fine linen." It cannot be said that their religion costs nothing, and yet it is worth nothing. It cost the South a great deal of money to raise and equip their armies; they fought with desperation, and yet completely failed of accomplishing their object. So we may make great sacrifices on account of religion, and yet, for the want of entire devotion to God, the whole may prove a failure. The soul may be lost at last.

3. Partial obedience will not answer. A man may observe a thousand laws of the commonwealth, and yet if he is convicted of forgery, or theft, his general good conduct will not save him from a felon's doom. This principle is well understood. It is daily acted upon in the administration of civil justice. Yet how few apply this principle to themselves in judging of their religious character. They do some of their duties, but not all. Comparatively but few study their Bible to ascertain what God requires of them. The greater portion of even professing christians lead about the course of life that is commonly led by their associates. No matter how plain any command of the Bible may be, if it is continually disregarded they [illegible] it. But this course will never answer for those who are in earnest to gain heaven. "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven."

Beloved, you who are actively engaged in the discharge of religious duties, are you building upon the rock, or upon the sand? Do not let partiality towards self dictate the answer. We shall soon stand before a tribunal [illegible] that will decide upon our cases with rigorous impartiality. Of all the foolish work that men do, that of deceiving themselves to their eternal undoing exceeds in folly. A dreadful storm is coming, and many a stately edifice that has long challenged admiration will lie low in the dust.

If you would know whether the religious profession you are building up with so much care will avail you in the day when all our works shall be tried by fire, examine yourself carefully by our Lord's sermon on the Mount. Begin with the beginning, and as you read each verse ask yourself the question, "Am I such a person as is here implied? Am I constantly doing, under all circumstances, as this requires?" Take this course, and you will not proceed far before you are brought upon your knees before God. If you find your hopes cut off, do not let Satan discourage you. With God there is a fulness of grace, and one of the promises of our blessed Lord is, "Ask, and ye shall receive."

Never complain of close preaching. You have never heard a sermon so close as this Sermon on the Mount. And no one can pretend that this part of the Holy Bible has been repealed. Even infidels treat the sayings of Jesus with a certain degree of respect. And shall not all who call themselves by his blessed name endeavor earnestly to conform to his instructions? Are you willing to risk your eternal all upon a bare approval of the sayings of Jesus, without doing the things he has commanded? Examine yourselves by this unerring standard, and then tell us, are you building upon the rock, or upon the sand?—Earnest Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS.

NUMBER ONE.

This remark is of frequent occurrence in the Scriptures, and in the conversations of christians. But few of those who read it, or repeat it, have ever studied to learn fully and properly how much, or how little, is meant by it. They take in the general idea that we are to obey God. This is correct. But what are the commandments which God has given to us to obey? Is it to come out from our father's house, remove from the country we are in to some other, as Abram was called to do? is it to flee from the city, as was the duty of Lot? to prepare an ark, as was Noah's duty? to circumcise our children? offer our sheep, oxen, and doves, give a tenth of our substance in tithes, etc., etc., as the Lord commanded the Hebrews to do? The reply to these questions, from christians, will universally be, "No, no. These commandments are of a limited character, and all belong to former ages. We do not attempt to keep them." Yet these were the commandments of God, and were given to be obeyed. Certainly, they were limited to certain individuals, and a certain nation, under a former code of law.

"But," say the multitudes, "we are to keep the ten commandments written on the tables of stone," and add, "don't you believe we should keep them?" I reply, that the same objections brought against our keeping the others seem good against these. If these are yet binding, so are the others. These are the commandments of God, and were limited to the Jewish nation, and to those who should join themselves to them. This is clearly shown in Deut. 5 : 1–3,—"The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day." Read the whole chapter, and the sixth also. The ten commandments was the constitution of the Jewish nation, while all the other rules and ceremonies added were laws growing out of, or pursuant of this constitution, and one depended on and continued as long as the other,—throughout their civil existence, "their generations forever." See Ex. 27 ; 21 ; 30 : 21. Moses was its minister. The Aaronic priesthood officiated under this covenant, or constitution, while it was in force.

I DO NOT KEEP THOSE TEN COMMANDMENTS. I am often asked if I do not believe we should keep them. I reply, no. I have no more to do with them than with the commandment to Noah to build an ark, or to Lot to flee from Sodom. This assertion greatly surprises some christians, and they wonder how one can be a christian and not keep the law of God. Yet they do not attempt to keep some portions of it themselves.

Let us hear Paul: "But that no man is justified by the law, in the sight of God, it is evident, for the just shall live by faith . . . . Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions (How long?) till the seed should come to whom the promise was made. . . Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster, to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster." Gal. 3 : 11, 25. Has the seed come? Is faith revealed? Hear Paul again. In 2 Cor. 3 : 7, 9, 11, he tells us that that old testament, or covenant, which was "graven in stones," is done away, abolished, etc. Why, then should we keep it?

Again. In Rom. 7 : 4, Paul tells us, "Ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead." The seventh verse shows that it was the LAW of ten commandments, for it quotes one of them.

Once more. Heb. 7 : 12,—"For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law."

But say some, who do not discriminate, "CHRIST ENJOINED THE TEN COMMANDMENTS." Yes, and also the offering of sacrifices according to the Levitical law. See Luke 5 : 14. Why not obey that, as well as the other? Christ did reply to the young man (Matt. 19 : 17, 19), "Keep the commandments." The man asked, "Which"? Jesus quoted five of the ten, written on stone, and added one not found there, viz., "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." This last is found in Lev. 19 : 18, but not among the ten, nor of the ten.

It should be remembered that Jesus lived under the law as a loyal Jew. Although it is said the "law and the prophets were until John;" yet it is shown that the law dispensation closed up at the cross (Col. 2 : 14), although he had begun to teach the principles of the new covenant, which was to be in force after his death.

This is seen in his sermon on the Mount. Also in his quotation to the lawyer, Matt. 22 ; 36, 37. Here he quotes the two "greatest commandments" of all; neither of them is found on the tables of stone, but in the law of faith. See Deut. 6 : 5 ; 30 : 12 ; Rom. 10 : 6, 10, also, Rom. 3 : 27, 28. If we obey Christ's law of the new covenant, it will be well with us.

I. C. Wellcome.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TONGUE OF FIRE.

"He shall baptise you with the Holy Ghost and with fire."—Matt. 3 : 11.

"Oh, for the living flame,
From His own altar brought,
To touch our lips, our souls inspire,
And wing to heaven our thought."

What the effects of this fire from heaven? What did the Holy Ghost do for the apostles and early disciples, when it was poured out on the day of Pentecost? Look and see.

1. It opened their understanding to understand the Scriptures in a new light, to behold wondrous things out of the law and gospel.

2. It strengthened and invigorated their memories, brought home vividly and forcibly to their recollection "things new and old." Passages from the old Testament Scriptures came before the mind's eye with renewed and special clearness and power. This is evident from the many quotations of Stephen, Peter, Paul, James and John, in their appeals to the people after they had this holy unction, this new spiritual impulse, the tongue of fire.

3. The Holy Spirit now took of the things of Christ and showed them unto them. They saw the way of salvation through the mediation of Christ, his sufferings, death, resurrection and intercessions, and that there was "none other name given under heaven, among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4 : 12. They saw with new eyes and heard with new ears these glowing truths, this "new and living way" of mercy, the redemption of all sin through the blood of the new and everlasting covenant, and rejoiced with joy unspeakable and full of glory. It was plain to their delighted vision that all the law and the prophets were fulfilled in this one atoning sacrifice.

4. Their grovelling ideas of an earthly or temporal kingdom vanished forever. They saw now, clearly, that Christ's kingdom was not of this world, but a spiritual kingdom, as much above all earthly grandeur and glory as the heavens are higher than the earth.

5. Their faith and hopes are increased powerfully, which, previously to this, had been weak, wavering, God-dishonoring.

6. This glorious, pentecostal baptism removed entirely and for ever their remaining selfishness and pride of emulation, their former spirit of rivalship and ambition, and preconceived notions about who should be greatest. They were now willing to sit at the feet of Jesus like little children, take the lowest seat, and learn lessons of humility, meekness and love.

7. This pentecostal shower increased their moral courage and holy boldness. Previously to the reception of this renovating, sanctifying process, they were timorous, fearful, man-fearing. They shrank from danger, from facing the enemy, and standing boldly for Jesus. This is manifest from their behavior: when Jesus was taken by the multitude, with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders, with the traitor, Judas, at their head, "all the disciples forsook him and fled." This fear of man, and lack of holy boldness, is still more discernible in Peter's denying his Lord, when confronted by a damsel or maid-servant. Mark the change in Peter after receiving the tongue of fire; standing before the multitude, many of whom were the sworn enemies of Jesus, and preaching with such power from heaven that three thousand were converted under this one sermon. Glory to God for this unspeakable gift! O for this virtue, this holy boldness, this fire pentecostal, in the ministry of the nineteenth century, constraining them to "cry aloud and spare not." What a shaking there would be among the dry bones in all the churches.

8. This baptismal power destroyed, or killed out, the fear of man that bringeth a snare, a time-serving disposition to bow to popular, conservative views,—the doctrine of expediency so prevalent in our day, and which has always proved a curse to the church and the world. It took away also the fear of death. Henceforth they counted not their lives dear unto themselves. "They died daily"; "they were counted as sheep for the slaughter." They were crucified to the world, and the world to them.

9. Another glorious thing was accomplished by this overpowering influence upon the souls of the early disciples. It killed out and destroyed entirely every wish, desire or disposition for that serpent of all serpents—schism, party spirit, sectarianism; this saying, "I am of Paul, I of Apollos, I of Cephas," which has been a stumbling-block to the world from time immemorial. Behold the blessed effects of christian union: "And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking of bread from house to house, did eat their bread with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." Acts 2 : 46, 47. And so it would have been to the end of time, had not Satan been permitted to come in, with his infernal stratagems, and mar the peace of Jerusalem, split up God's people into shreds and parties, till our world is well-nigh an Aceldama—a field of blood! "Woe to the world because of offences, and woe to that man by whom the offence cometh."

"Let party names no more
The christian world o'erspread,
For Jew and Gentile, bond and free,
Are one in Christ, their head."

10. Again, this baptism destroyed all love of the world, and the things of the world, all desire for filthy lucre, the spirit of hoarding. The all-absorbing idea now was to lay up treasure in heaven, to glorify God in the salvation of souls. "They sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men as every man had need."—Acts 2 : 45. They laid all upon the altar—Christ Jesus, brought all the tithes into the store-house. "Holiness to the Lord" was written upon their foreheads, on their door-posts, and on their gates.

11. Finally, look at the effects of this super-abounding grace touching their labors at home and abroad. They went every where preaching the word, equipped for the battle-field. In a very little space, they turned the world upside down, caused Satan to fall as lightning, mountains to flow down "as when the melting fire burneth." Turn to the Acts of the Apostles. How readest thou?

We draw no practical inferences from the foregoing. A word to the wise is sufficient.

"O, Spirit of the living God,
Give tongues of fire and hearts of love,
To preach the reconciled word,
Give power and unction from above,
Where'er the joyful sound is heard."

D. F. Newton, Author of Home Thrusts.

ESSENTIAL TRUTH.

"What is truth?" This is a question of vast importance, and to every candid, earnest seeker, a faithful answer should be given. And in these times of peril, and strife, and division, it would seem more desirable and needful than ever, that this question should be answered. The great truth, the most important truth, is the fact that "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners." All preaching, or writing on religious subjects, should have this for beginning and end. Paul said, "I determined to know nothing among you, but Christ and him crucified." Leave out this great, essential truth, and the life and power of religion is gone, and you have in its place a form without life, utterly powerless to save the soul from impending destruction. It is true that "sin entered the world, and death by sin." It is true that "it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment." It is true that "every one of us must give an account of himself to God." And it is also true that the "only Name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved," is the Name that is above every name, even the sacred and ever glorious Name of Jesus Christ.

A momentous question arises here. It is, "For whom is this salvation provided?" What is the answer? He "came into the world to save sinners."

All men are sinners, but it does not follow that because all are sinners that all will be saved. Because a door is open, it is not proved that all will enter in by that door. But the question of all questions is this:—"Can I be saved?" Are you a sinner? Yes. Then a way is open for you to be saved. "But I have been a very great sinner." Well, what have you done? Have you been a liar? or a profane swearer? or a murderer? And have you read that "all liars shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone?" And have you read that the "Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain?" And also "that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him?" Have you read all this, and do you say there is no hope for you because you have done these things? Perhaps you say that you have broken every commandment times without number, and now you are ruined for eternity. Ah! this is a terrible thought. You are exposed to the wrath of God, whose vengeance will "devour the adversaries." But what are you? You say you are a sinner; and "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners." We do not read that he came to save little sinners, but we read that "WHOSOEVER believeth in him shall be saved." Does not whosoever include you? It is certain that at least one thief was saved, for he received the assurance from the lips of the Redeemer himself, while he was hanging on the cross. And we do not doubt but David, that King of Israel, was saved, and he was guilty of at least one murder, under extremely aggravated circumstances.

Do you need any further encouragement to hope for mercy? If you will "break off your sins by righteousness, and your iniquities by turning to the Lord" you will find all the encouragement you can ask. "Though your sins have been as scarlet they shall be white as wool; though they be red like crimson, they shall be white as snow." If you are not saved, it is not because of what you have done, but on account of what you now refuse to do. It is simply because you will not accept the pardon freely offered to you. If you will give your vile, wretched, miserable, lost and ruined self entirely up to Jesus, and henceforth live for him only, and consent to be led always, at all times and in all places, by the Holy Spirit, no power on earth can prevent your being saved with an everlasting salvation.—Bruised Reed.

For the World's Crisis.

TIME.

The following items I extract from "The Time of the End." They are of interest, as showing the opinions of others for years that have passed away, in regard to the "Time," which so many dispute about from time to time.

I. N. B.

"When Daniel inquired respecting the wonders that extended to the resurrection, he was told (Dan. 12 : 9), that 'the words are closed up, and sealed till the time of the end.' . . . It implies that at that time the obscurity would be penetrated, and the mystery unsealed. . . . That which was to be understood, was that which had been sealed up till the time of understanding should arrive. . . 'Time' may be understood as a period of 360 years, commencing not unlikely with the Protestant Reformation. . . . If the date of the Reformation be 1517, a 'time'—or 360 years, carries us to 1877, a period within which the mystery of God should be finished.—Rev. Ed. Bickersteth's Guide to the Prophecies." . . . "The early christian fathers expected the advent at the end of 6000 years."

"One of the first to terminate the prophetic periods at a specific time was David Pareus, D. D., who, in 1608, reckoned the 1260 years from A. D. 606, when Boniface's grant of the title of universal Bishop was given to the Roman Pope. The 1260 years end in 1866."

"The calculations of most of those who have tried to penetrate the Prophetic Periods terminate between 1830 and 1880." "David Chytræus, D. D., in 1571, wrote, . . . 'The end may be expected in 1866.' Aretius, who died in 1574, advanced the same idea. Rev. Wm. Whiston, in 1706, advocated the same. Also, Archbishop Laud. Rev. Thomas Scott, D. D., the commentator, born in England in 1747, says the beginning of the 1260 years cannot well be fixed sooner than A. D. 606, or later than A. D. 756. 1260 years from the first date end in 1866. Rev. Wm. Cogswell, D. D., Secretary Amer. Ed. Society, in a manual published in 1836, makes 1866 the probable time for . . . the latter day glory of the church; and says it is agreeable to the most learned and modern writers on the prophecies. Rev. Alfred Bryant of Michigan says, . . . 'One of the most prominent periods fixed for the termination of the 1260 yrs. is 1866.'"

Rev. G. S. Faber, B. D., says, in "Dissertation on the Prophecies," . . . "The prophetic period of 1260 years ends in 1866."

Rev. R. C. Shimeal published in 1842 his "Age of the World," and ends the dates in 1868. Rev. Ed. Bickersteth in 1836 said of the 1260 years, "If we take their rise in 533, it ends in 1693, when Popery began to fall. If we take its fuller establishment (Rev. 11 ; 2, 13 : 8) in 608, to its final fall, it reaches to 1868." He says of the 2300 years: "If taken from Nehemiah's completed cleansing of the sanctuary in 433–4 B. C., it will bring us to 1867–8." Of the 1290 and 1335 years, Dan. 12 : 11, 12, he says: "From 533 [when Popery arose] 1290 years reach to 1822, when Greece separated from Turkey, the sixth vial was poured out, and the Second Advent preached. From 533, the 1335 years bring us to 1868, or the commencement of the full blessedness of the earth." Of Rev. 13 : 18, he says of the number 666: "Three words seem set before us . . . having Greek letters that make 666. 1st. The king who gave name to the Latin empire. 2nd. The character of the power ruling it. 3d. The only Greek name of an empire out of thousands that has the number 666. . . . If taken as a time of both rise and fall [of Popery], in its rise, from 533 666 brings us to 1198–9, when Popery was at its height. . . . From 1198–9, 666 brings us to 1864, just before Daniel's time of blessedness, leaving only . . . half a week, Dan. 9 ; 27, for the Infidel persecution."

J. A. Brown, in his "Eventide," published in London in 1823, commences the 2300 years at the second visit of Nehemiah to Jerusalem B. C. 428, from which reckoning they end in 1873: he also begins the Mohammedan Hegira of 1270 years at the same date. Rev. Wm. Hales, D. D., the distinguished chronologer, ends the 2300 years in 1880, commencing them B. C. 420, when the commandment to restore and rebuild Jerusalem was given. The 1260 years of Daniel and John he commences in A. D. 620, and terminates them in 1880. Mr. Bickersteth and Mr. Birks mark the limit of our world's age to 1877 or 1882. Rev. E. B. Elliott says the 1260 years of Antichrist's dominion end in 1866. Dr. Cumming says, "Most prophetic interpreters place the . . . latest time of the first resurrection in 1385."

Here we see many of the most learned christians bring the time of the final event of all things near at hand. And while many of our good brethren claim he will come in this year—1866, and others equally as good think not till 1867–8, and others further off still; yet let us not look too much at "time," but rather, for what "time" will bring to our waiting eyes, remembering that "He that is to come" said, "Watch, for ye know not when the time is"; and, also, that when certain events had taken place, we might know he was "nigh, even at the doors." And seeing these long foretold events transpiring before our eyes, and knowing that many have passed away, we know that the day of peace is nigh. And while looking over the world, from land to land, in every clime, and seeing nought but turmoil, trouble, anxiety, sorrow and sickness, death and mourning every day, everywhere; and knowing that when the King comes in his beauty, all the days of our mourning will be ended; we can say, while all nature seems saying in awakening tones to every ear, "He is coming quickly." "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus."

J. N. Berry.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 550. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1866. | VOL. XXIII.—NO. [20]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL, JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN, D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

"COME UNTO ME."

Savior, I come with my burden weary,
For thou alone hast power to make it light;
If by faith I only view thee near me,
I shall be strong in thy great arm of might.
Oh! Savior, help me come in earnest now,
And ease my load, while I before thee bow.

Oh! how welcome is the invitation—
It found me fainting, drooping by the way;
Long in vain sought I for consolation,
Until these words I heard my Savior say,—
Come unto me, all ye that are unblest,
And learn of me, for I will give you rest.

With the promise, great the condescension,
Teaching the lesson how I may obey;
While I strive quicken my apprehension,
As "learn of me" I daily hear thee say.
I seek from thee a meek and quiet heart,
And thine own rest, that thou would'st now impart.

Nought here but disappointed hopes I find,
And He who turned my eyes from blank despair,
Shows me the beauty, and my heart inclined
To his own rest—to lay on Him my care.
List! Jesus invites—every one and all—
Oh! weary one! come and obey the call.

The rest of Jesus! how it soothes each care,
Though its perfection is not reached while here;
Not here is a full rest e'er found, but there,
And faith beholds the blessed prospect near.
Come to the Savior, weary one, and find
Rest for the aching heart and troubled mind.

M. C. ALLEN.

INFIDELITY AND PROPHECY.

Is the Bible the Book of God? Is it a record of divine revelations? Does God speak to man through its pages? Has it supreme authority?

These questions are important. If the Bible is a record of the divine will, the fact must be susceptible of proof, and it should be proved. If it is a miserable cheat, concocted by designing priests, or a mass of old wives' fables, imposed upon the weakness of credulous fools, that fact can be proved, and should be proved, and the sooner the better, for the subject is of moment, and the necessity for its discussion is urgent.

I know men say that if the Bible is not true yet it is best to let the imposition pass unquestioned, because it exercises a wholesome moral influence upon rascals generally, who are kept from actual mischief in this world by fear of fancied punishments in the next. But the main question cannot be settled by such evasions. Ignorance is not the parent of true devotion, nor are lies, or pious frauds, the seeds of righteousness.

It is sometimes said that the Bible is an inspired book, and so is the Koran, so are the Shasters, so are Shakspeare's Plays, so are Plato's Dialogues, and so are books generally,—all are inspired, all have truth, all have error, but all are behind the times, and need to be improved by the addition of whatever new revelations may present themselves; and when all are completed, we are then to believe and obey just as much and just as little of any or all of them as we please.

But this position does not quite satisfy me. Various modern authors offer me theories, fancies, opinions, and arguments. I take them for what they seem to be worth. But the writers in the Bible do not usually offer their opinions. They relate facts which they profess to have seen; they profess to reject fables and traditions, and they, over and over again, preface their sayings with the words, "THUS SAITH THE LORD."

Shakspeare does not say that, nor Plato, nor Socrates, nor any of the poets or sages of ancient or modern times. Now, if the Almighty really speaks to us, we ought to listen and give heed. But if he does not speak, then we cannot accept these statements as either true, or wise, or profitable for men to believe.

It is sometimes suggested that the writers of the Bible were a pack of credulous fools, quickly imposed upon, and easily deceived. But at this I demur. A fool never wrote Moses' Laws, Job Discourses, David's Psalms, Solomon's Proverbs, Isaiah's Poetry, Daniel's Visions, Ezekiel's Prophecies, Paul's Epistles, or John's Revelations. The man who thinks fools could write such books, might well afford to try his own hand at it, and see.

Now these writers in general, though intelligent and of acknowledged ability, do not profess to offer speculations, or opinions, but they base their whole system upon alleged facts. If they had been fools they might have been imposed upon somewhat; but in general the facts were of such a nature that they could not be mistaken about them. And they either tell the positive truth, or else they were most outrageous and infamous liars.

The Israelites either went through the Red Sea dry shod, or the man who wrote the story about it lied. Either the Jordan was divided before them, or the record of it is a falsehood. Christ either healed the sick, cleansed the lepers, cast out demons, and raised the dead, or Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, were impudent, lying knaves.

Jesus of Nazareth, whom Jews, Gentiles, and Christians all agree was crucified, either did really, truly, personally, and bodily rise from the dead, and ascend to heaven, or the men who, at the loss of their reputation, at the expense of every personal comfort, and even unto the suffering of violent deaths, bore testimony that they saw him, heard him, handled him, walked with him, talked with him, ate with him, and knew him "by many infallible proofs," and finally beheld him ascending heavenward, till a cloud received him out of their sight, were base hypocrites, arrant knaves, vile impostors, and persistent and determined liars.

There is no middle ground to stand on here. They saw what they said they did, or they lied. The Almighty spoke to the prophets, or they told falsehoods in the name of the God of truth. Either they bring to us the actual verities of divine revelation, or else the whole tribe of them, in all their generations, for hundreds and hundreds of years, were deceivers and prating knaves, who lied about the hell which they asserted that all liars should have part in, and deceived about the very words in which they declared damnation on all deceivers.

We cannot blink this proposition out of sight. The question must be met here and settled. Honest men do not wish to be deceived, and in these days men want facts, not fables; truths, not "raw head and bloody bones stories," by which to direct their lives.

I know the Bible is said to be the best of all the pretended sacred books in the world. But that argument amounts to nothing. If it is not true, it is false. If the Koran, the Shasters, or the Spirit communications are true, then let us believe them, and turn Turks, Hindoos, or Spirit rappers. Or, if there is no revelation of the future, then let us make the most of the present—"let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die."

But let us not cling to a lie because it is better than a dozen other lies. If indeed the Bible is better than they are, that is no reason why it should be received if it be false. For it is not a mere harmless humbug, a collection of the writings of well-meaning but misguided idiots. It is either the word of the everlasting Deity, or else it is a cheat so outrageous and shameful that compared with it the Koran is sacred, the Arabian Nights reasonable, and the Book of Mormon worthy of sincere respect.

The Bible is everything, or it is worse than nothing. It is the best book or the worst one in the world. It contains eternal truth, or the deepest error. It is pure gold, or base counterfeit. Which is it?

We must not prejudge this question. The christian says he knows the Bible to be true, because he feels it is. The infidel says he rejects it because he has no such feeling. Both may be prejudiced. Either may be mistaken. A more conclusive style of argument than this must be introduced to decide this important question.

The question is not whether the English Bible is entirely, in all its jots and tittles, the word of God, for all agree that there may be in that mis-prints, mis-translations, and possible inaccuracies. And even in the Hebrew and Greek originals, there are errors of transcribers, and some slight variations of readings in different manuscript copies. And then there are recorded in it, not only the words of God, but also of men and of devils; and some of these words all admit to be false. But the question is, whether God, men, or devils said the words and did the things there related of them. Is the account correct? Is the record true?

We need not inquire whether the Bible is a modern book, or an ancient one. Here there is no room for dispute. It is older than the art of printing, for it was the first book printed. It is older than the dark ages, for copies of it exist which were written long before. And about the year 176, Celsus, a heathen, or infidel philosopher, in writing the first book ever published against christianity, entitled "The Word of Truth," quotes or refers to about EIGHTY PASSAGES which can now be found in the New Testament. He speaks of the histories of Jesus written by his disciples, refers to all the leading facts narrated in the gospels, and says, "It is but RECENTLY, as it were, yesterday, since we punished Christ." "It is but a few years since he delivered this doctrine, who is reckoned by the Christians to be the Son of God."

And Porphyry, another heathen writer, about the year 270, wrote against the Book of Daniel, which he allowed was written as early as the days of Antiochus, or about one hundred and fifty years before the Christian Era. A book cannot be quoted or refuted before it is written. Hence, as Celsus quotes the New Testament, it was written before A. D. 176, and as the New Testament quotes the prophets, they were written previous to it, and as the prophets quote the Law that was written before the prophets wrote, and as the Law refers to Genesis, and Genesis refers to no preceding book, it seems to stand at the head as the oldest of all. We shall not need then to discuss this question of age, as we can prove by Jews, Christians, and infidels, that the books which are called the Bible are very ancient works. But another question, namely, concerning the inspiration, the divine origin, and the authority of the Bible, is the one before us.

We know and admit that there is a God in nature, for there are things done before our eyes which no man has power to do. And the source of that almighty power, that ceaseless energy that rules and upholds and guides the universe, is what we call Deity. And so when power is displayed beyond all human might, we refer that display back to God as to its only author.

But what power do we find in the Bible? It is a book; men have written it; do they give proof of divine assistance in their work?—The Christian.

☞ Do as you would be done by, if you wish to be done by as you would.

BUILDING ON THE SAND.

It is a sad sight to see the labors of a lifetime swept away in a few hours. In March, 1865, the city of Rochester, N. Y., was visited by a great flood. The Genesee river, on each side of which the city is built, rose to an unprecedented height. In some of the streets the water was fifteen or twenty feet deep. The current was so rapid that no boatman durst venture in it—a horse-car standing on the bridge was swept down the street and over the falls—a heavy iron safe was carried quite a distance, and terribly bruised and battered—many buildings were greatly damaged, and some entirely demolished. Among the latter was a large, four-story building on the west bank of the river occupied as a hardware store. The owner of the store had met with heavy losses from fire, but by unceasing industry he was again doing a flourishing business. But the flood came, and the water found a way under the foundation, and the immense building, which stood apparently so secure, was utterly swept away. Our Savior tells us it shall be thus at the last day. Many will be most grievously disappointed. Some, who thought themselves certain of heaven, will wake up to the terrible reality that they are irrevocably lost. We are all liable to self-deception. It becomes us to try ourselves by every test laid down in the Bible. We should have the spirit of the disciples, who, when told by their Lord that one of them should betray him, cried out each for himself, "Lord, is it I?" Did you ever weigh those heavy words of our Savior at the conclusion of his Sermon on the Mount? They are enough to make the greatest saints tremble.

"Every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell: and great was the fall of it."

1. Observe the stress that our Savior here lays upon our DOING as he directs. He insists upon obedience with as much earnestness as modern pulpits do upon faith. He gives no countenance to the sentiment of the popular hymn,

"Nothing, either great or small,
Remains for me to do;
Jesus died and paid it all,
All the debt I owe."

This hymn, so great a favorite in modern revivals, teaches a very bad theology. Indeed, we fear that much of the instruction given in churches calling themselves orthodox, has a direct tendency to lead souls astray. It confirms many in their fancied security, who are on their way to sure destruction. To every one who would be a christian, faith is of the utmost importance. Without it no one can please God. The misunderstanding, so general and so ruinous, relates, not to its importance, but to its office. Faith was never designed, as many seem to suppose, to supply the place of a heartfelt and cordial obedience to all the requirements of God. Its function is, to render such obedience possible and easy—to supply the motive, and the power to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling. It does not discharge us from the christian warfare, but inspires us with courage to go out upon the battle-field; and supplies us with a shield whereby we are able to quench all the fiery darts of the Wicked One. It does not supersede the necessity of striving that we may obtain eternal life, but it puts us upon the course and makes our feet swift to run in the way of God's commandments. Therefore we both labor, and suffer reproach, BECAUSE WE TRUST in the living God. Faith is the cause why labor is performed, and persecution endured; and not a substitute for them. A faith in Christ that is dead and inoperative, that does not lead to a renunciation of the world, and to a life of self-denial, is no better than the faith of a Mohammedan or a heathen. "He that doeth righteousness is righteous."

2. Great sacrifices in the cause of Christ will not answer in the place of obedience to all his requirements. To build a house upon the sand takes time and money. The house that falls before the wind and the rain, may be more finely finished, and more imposing in its appearance, than the one that abides the tempest. The building we referred to, that was destroyed by the flood, was well-built and of good materials; the defect was in but a single point, but that proved the overthrow of the whole. So there are many that, on great occasions, are eminent christians. They show to advantage before the world. They give liberally for benevolent enterprises, and especially in instances where their generosity will be widely heralded abroad. They pay large sums for costly churches from which the poor are excluded, and where the fashionable congregate and mutually display and admire their various styles of "purple and fine linen." It cannot be said that their religion costs nothing, and yet it is worth nothing. It cost the South a great deal of money to raise and equip their armies; they fought with desperation, and yet completely failed of accomplishing their object. So we may make great sacrifices on account of religion, and yet, for the want of entire devotion to God, the whole may prove a failure. The soul may be lost at last.

3. Partial obedience will not answer. A man may observe a thousand laws of the commonwealth, and yet if he is convicted of forgery, or theft, his general good conduct will not save him from a felon's doom. This principle is well understood. It is daily acted upon in the administration of civil justice. Yet how few apply this principle to themselves in judging of their religious character. They do some of their duties, but not all. Comparatively but few study their Bible to ascertain what God requires of them. The greater portion of even professing christians lead about the course of life that is commonly led by their associates. No matter how plain any command of the Bible may be, if it is continually disregarded they disregard it. But this course will never answer for those who are in earnest to gain heaven. "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven."

Beloved, you who are actively engaged in the discharge of religious duties, are you building upon the rock, or upon the sand? Do not let partiality towards self dictate the answer. We shall soon stand before a tribunal that will decide upon our cases with rigorous impartiality. Of all the foolish work that men do, that of deceiving themselves to their eternal undoing exceeds in folly. A dreadful storm is coming, and many a stately edifice that has long challenged admiration will lie low in the dust.

If you would know whether the religious profession you are building up with so much care will avail you in the day when all our works shall be tried by fire, examine yourself carefully by our Lord's sermon on the Mount. Begin with the beginning, and as you read each verse ask yourself the question, "Am I such a person as is here implied? Am I constantly doing, under all circumstances, as this requires?" Take this course, and you will not proceed far before you are brought upon your knees before God. If you find your hopes cut off, do not let Satan discourage you. With God there is a fulness of grace, and one of the promises of our blessed Lord is, "Ask, and ye shall receive."

Never complain of close preaching. You have never heard a sermon so close as this Sermon on the Mount. And no one can pretend that this part of the Holy Bible has been repealed. Even infidels treat the sayings of Jesus with a certain degree of respect. And shall not all who call themselves by his blessed name endeavor earnestly to conform to his instructions? Are you willing to risk your eternal all upon a bare approval of the sayings of Jesus, without doing the things he has commanded? Examine yourselves by this unerring standard, and then tell us, are you building upon the rock, or upon the sand?—Earnest Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS.

NUMBER ONE.

This remark is of frequent occurrence in the Scriptures, and in the conversations of christians. But few of those who read it, or repeat it, have ever studied to learn fully and properly how much, or how little, is meant by it. They take in the general idea that we are to obey God. This is correct. But what are the commandments which God has given to us to obey? Is it to come out from our father's house, remove from the country we are in to some other, as Abram was called to do? is it to flee from the city, as was the duty of Lot? to prepare an ark, as was Noah's duty? to circumcise our children? offer our sheep, oxen, and doves, give a tenth of our substance in tithes, etc., etc., as the Lord commanded the Hebrews to do? The reply to these questions, from christians, will universally be, "No, no. These commandments are of a limited character, and all belong to former ages. We do not attempt to keep them." Yet these were the commandments of God, and were given to be obeyed. Certainly, they were limited to certain individuals, and a certain nation, under a former code of law.

"But," say the multitudes, "we are to keep the ten commandments written on the tables of stone," and add, "don't you believe we should keep them?" I reply, that the same objections brought against our keeping the others seem good against these. If these are yet binding, so are the others. These are the commandments of God, and were limited to the Jewish nation, and to those who should join themselves to them. This is clearly shown in Deut. 5: 1–3,—"The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day." Read the whole chapter, and the sixth also. The ten commandments was the constitution of the Jewish nation, while all the other rules and ceremonies added were laws growing out of, or pursuant of this constitution, and one depended on and continued as long as the other,—throughout their civil existence, "their generations forever." See Ex. 27: 21; 30: 21. Moses was its minister. The Aaronic priesthood officiated under this covenant, or constitution, while it was in force.

I DO NOT KEEP THOSE TEN COMMANDMENTS. I am often asked if I do not believe we should keep them. I reply, no. I have no more to do with them than with the commandment to Noah to build an ark, or to Lot to flee from Sodom. This assertion greatly surprises some christians, and they wonder how one can be a christian and not keep the law of God. Yet they do not attempt to keep some portions of it themselves.

Let us hear Paul: "But that no man is justified by the law, in the sight of God, it is evident, for the just shall live by faith .... Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions (How long?) till the seed should come to whom the promise was made. . . Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster, to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster." Gal. 3: 11, 19, 24. Has the seed come? Is faith revealed? Hear Paul again. In 2 Cor. 3: 7, 9, 11, he tells us that that old testament, or covenant, which was "graven in stones," is done away, abolished, etc. Why, then, should we keep it?

Again. In Rom. 7: 4, Paul tells us, "Ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead." The seventh verse shows that it was the LAW of ten commandments, for it quotes one of them.

Once more. Heb. 7: 12,—"For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law."

But say some, who do not discriminate, "CHRIST ENJOINED THE TEN COMMANDMENTS." Yes, and also the offering of sacrifices according to the Levitical law. See Luke 5: 14. Why not obey that, as well as the other? Christ did reply to the young man (Matt. 19: 17, 19), "Keep the commandments." The man asked, "Which"? Jesus quoted five of the ten, written on stone, and added one not found there, viz., "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." This last is found in Lev. 19: 18, but not among the ten, nor of the ten.

It should be remembered that Jesus lived under the law as a loyal Jew. Although it is said the "law and the prophets were until John;" yet it is shown that the law dispensation closed up at the cross (Col. 2: 14), although he had begun to teach the principles of the new covenant, which was to be in force after his death.

This is seen in his sermon on the Mount. Also in his quotation to the lawyer, Matt. 22: 36, 37. Here he quotes the two "greatest commandments" of all; neither of them is found on the tables of stone, but in the law of faith. See Deut. 6: 5; 30: 12; Rom. 10: 6, 10; also, Rom. 3: 27, 28. If we obey Christ's law of the new covenant, it will be well with us.

I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TONGUE OF FIRE.

"He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire."—MATT. 3: 13.

"Oh, for the living flame,
From His own altar brought,
To touch our lips, our souls inspire,
And wing to heaven our thought."

What the effects of this fire from heaven? What did the Holy Ghost do for the apostles and early disciples, when it was poured out on the day of Pentecost? Look and see.

1. It opened their understanding to understand the Scriptures in a new light, to behold wondrous things out of the law and gospel.

2. It strengthened and invigorated their memories, brought home vividly and forcibly to their recollection "things new and old." Passages from the old Testament Scriptures came before the mind's eye with renewed and special clearness and power. This is evident from the many quotations of Stephen, Peter, Paul, James and John, in their appeals to the people after they had this holy unction, this new spiritual impulse, the tongue of fire.

3. The Holy Spirit now took of the things of Christ and showed them unto them. They saw the way of salvation through the mediation of Christ, his sufferings, death, resurrection and intercessions, and that there was "none other name given under heaven, among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4: 12. They saw with new eyes and heard with new ears these glowing truths, this "new and living way" of mercy, the redemption of all sin through the blood of the new and everlasting covenant, and rejoiced with joy unspeakable and full of glory. It was plain to their delighted vision that all the law and the prophets were fulfilled in this one atoning sacrifice.

4. Their grovelling ideas of an earthly or temporal kingdom vanished forever. They saw now, clearly, that Christ's kingdom was not of this world, but a spiritual kingdom, as much above all earthly grandeur and glory as the heavens are higher than the earth.

5. Their faith and hopes are increased powerfully, which, previously to this, had been weak, wavering, God-dishonoring.

6. This glorious, pentecostal baptism removed entirely and for ever their remaining selfishness and pride of emulation, their former spirit of rivalship and ambition, and preconceived notions about who should be greatest. They were now willing to sit at the feet of Jesus like little children, take the lowest seat, and learn lessons of humility, meekness and love.

7. This pentecostal shower increased their moral courage and holy boldness. Previously to the reception of this renovating, sanctifying process, they were timorous, fearful, man-fearing. They shrank from danger, from facing the enemy, and standing boldly for Jesus. This is manifest from their behavior: when Jesus was taken by the multitude, with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders, with the traitor, Judas, at their head, "all the disciples forsook him and fled." This fear of man, and lack of holy boldness, is still more discernible in Peter's denying his Lord, when confronted by a damsel or maid-servant. Mark the change in Peter after receiving the tongue of fire; standing before the multitude, many of whom were the sworn enemies of Jesus, and preaching with such power from heaven that three thousand were converted under this one sermon. Glory to God for this unspeakable gift! O for this virtue, this holy boldness, this fire pentecostal, in the ministry of the nineteenth century, constraining them to "cry aloud and spare not." What a shaking there would be among the dry bones in all the churches.

8. This baptismal power destroyed, or killed out, the fear of man that bringeth a snare, a time-serving disposition to bow to popular, conservative views,—the doctrine of expediency so prevalent in our day, and which has always proved a curse to the church and the world. It took away also the fear of death. Henceforth they counted not their lives dear unto themselves. "They died daily"; "they were counted as sheep for the slaughter." They were crucified to the world, and the world to them.

9. Another glorious thing was accomplished by this overpowering influence upon the souls of the early disciples. It killed out and destroyed entirely every wish, desire or disposition for that serpent of all serpents—schism, party spirit, sectarianism; this saying, "I am of Paul, I of Apollos, I of Cephas," which has been a stumbling-block to the world from time immemorial. Behold the blessed effects of christian union: "And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking of bread from house to house, did eat their bread with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." Acts 2: 46, 47. And so it would have been to the end of time, had not Satan been permitted to come in, with his infernal stratagems, and mar the peace of Jerusalem, split up God's people into shreds and parties, till our world is well-nigh an Aceldama—a field of blood! "Woe to the world because of offences, and woe to that man by whom the offence cometh."

"Let party names no more
The christian world o'erspread,
For Jew and Gentile, bond and free,
Are one in Christ, their head."

10. Again, this baptism destroyed all love of the world, and the things of the world, all desire for filthy lucre, the spirit of hoarding. The all-absorbing idea now was to lay up treasure in heaven, to glorify God in the salvation of souls. "They sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men as every man had need."—Acts 2: 45. They laid all upon the altar—Christ Jesus, brought all the tithes into the store-house. "Holiness to the Lord" was written upon their foreheads, on their door-posts, and on their gates.

11. Finally, look at the effects of this super-abounding grace touching their labors at home and abroad. They went every where preaching the word, equipped for the battle-field. In a very little space, they turned the world upside down, caused Satan to fall as lightning, mountains to flow down "as when the melting fire burneth." Turn to the Acts of the Apostles. How readest thou?

We draw no practical inferences from the foregoing. A word to the wise is sufficient.

"O, Spirit of the living God,
Give tongues of fire and hearts of love,
To preach the reconciled word,
Give power and unction from above,
Where'er the joyful sound is heard."

D. F. NEWTON, Author of Home Thrusts.

ESSENTIAL TRUTH.

"What is truth?" This is a question of vast importance, and to every candid, earnest seeker, a faithful answer should be given. And in these times of peril, and strife, and division, it would seem more desirable and needful than ever, that this question should be answered. The great truth, the most important truth, is the fact that "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners." All preaching, or writing on religious subjects, should have this for beginning and end. Paul said, "I determined to know nothing among you, but Christ and him crucified." Leave out this great, essential truth, and the life and power of religion is gone, and you have in its place a form without life, utterly powerless to save the soul from impending destruction. It is true that "sin entered the world, and death by sin." It is true that "it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment." It is true that "every one of us must give an account of himself to God." And it is also true that the "only Name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved," is the Name that is above every name, even the sacred and ever glorious Name of Jesus Christ.

A momentous question arises here. It is, "For whom is this salvation provided?" What is the answer? He "came into the world to save sinners."

All men are sinners, but it does not follow that because all are sinners that all will be saved. Because a door is open, it is not proved that all will enter in by that door. But the question of all questions is this:—"Can I be saved?" Are you a sinner? Yes. Then a way is open for you to be saved. "But I have been a very great sinner." Well, what have you done? Have you been a liar? or a profane swearer? or a murderer? And have you read that "all liars shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone?" And have you read that the "Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain?" And also "that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him?" Have you read all this, and do you say there is no hope for you because you have done these things? Perhaps you say that you have broken every commandment times without number, and now you are ruined for eternity. Ah! this is a terrible thought. You are exposed to the wrath of God, whose vengeance will "devour the adversaries." But what are you? You say you are a sinner; and "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners." We do not read that he came to save little sinners, but we read that "WHOSOEVER believeth in him shall be saved." Does not whosoever include you? It is certain that at least one thief was saved, for he received the assurance from the lips of the Redeemer himself, while he was hanging on the cross. And we do not doubt but David, that King of Israel, was saved, and he was guilty of at least one murder, under extremely aggravated circumstances.

Do you need any further encouragement to hope for mercy? If you will "break off your sins by righteousness, and your iniquities by turning to the Lord" you will find all the encouragement you can ask. "Though your sins have been as scarlet they shall be white as wool; though they be red like crimson, they shall be white as snow." If you are not saved, it is not because of what you have done, but on account of what you now refuse to do. It is simply because you will not accept the pardon freely offered to you. If you will give your vile, wretched, miserable, lost and ruined self entirely up to Jesus, and henceforth live for him only, and consent to be led always, at all times and in all places, by the Holy Spirit, no power on earth can prevent your being saved with an everlasting salvation.—Bruised Reed.

For the World's Crisis.

TIME.

The following items I extract from "The Time of the End." They are of interest, as showing the opinions of others for years that have passed away, in regard to the "Time," which so many dispute about from time to time. J. N. B.

"When Daniel inquired respecting the wonders that extended to the resurrection, he was told (Dan. 12: 9), that 'the words are closed up, and sealed till the time of the end.' . . . It implies that at that time the obscurity would be penetrated, and the mystery unsealed. . . . That which was to be understood, was that which had been sealed up till the time of understanding should arrive. . . 'Time' may be understood as a period of 360 years, commencing not unlikely with the Protestant Reformation. . . . If the date of the Reformation be 1517, a 'time'—or 360 years, carries us to 1877, a period within which the mystery of God should be finished.—Rev. Ed. Bickersteth's Guide to the Prophecies." . . . "The early christian fathers expected the advent at the end of 6000 years."

"One of the first to terminate the prophetic periods at a specific time was David Pareus, D. D., who, in 1608, reckoned the 1260 years from A. D. 606, when Boniface's grant of the title of universal Bishop was given to the Roman Pope. The 1260 years end in 1866."

"The calculations of most of those who have tried to penetrate the Prophetic Periods terminate between 1830 and 1880." "David Chytræus, D. D., in 1571, wrote, . . . 'The end may be expected in 1866.' Aretius, who died in 1574, advanced the same idea. Rev. Wm. Whiston, in 1706, advocated the same. Also, Archbishop Laud. Rev. Thomas Scott, D. D., the commentator, born in England in 1747, says the beginning of the 1260 years cannot well be fixed sooner than A. D. 606, or later than A. D. 756. 1260 years from the first date end in 1866. Rev. Wm. Cogswell, D. D., Secretary Amer. Ed. Society, in a manual published in 1836, makes 1866 the probable time for . . . the latter day glory of the church; and says it is agreeable to the most learned and modern writers on the prophecies. Rev. Alfred Bryant of Michigan says, . . . 'One of the most prominent periods fixed for the termination of the 1260 yrs. is 1866.'"

Rev. G. S. Faber. B. D., says, in "Dissertation on the Prophecies," . . . "The prophetic period of 1260 years ends in 1866."

Rev. R. C. Shimeal published in 1842 his "Age of the World," and ends the dates in 1868. Rev. Ed. Bickersteth in 1836 said of the 1260 years, "If we take their rise in 533, it ends in 1693, when Popery began to fall. If we take its fuller establishment (Rev. 11: 2; 13: 8) in 608, to its final fall, it reaches to 1868." He says of the 2300 years: "If taken from Nehemiah's completed cleansing of the sanctuary in 433–4 B. C., it will bring us to 1867–8." Of the 1290 and 1335 years, Dan. 12: 11, 12, he says: "From 533 [when Popery arose] 1290 years reach to 1822, when Greece separated from Turkey, the sixth vial was poured out, and the Second Advent preached. From 533, the 1335 years bring us to 1868, or the commencement of the full blessedness of the earth." Of Rev. 13: 18, he says of the number 666: "Three words seem set before us . . . having Greek letters that make 666. 1st. The king who gave name to the Latin empire. 2nd. The character of the power ruling it. 3d. The only Greek name of an empire out of thousands that has the number 666. . . . If taken as a time of both rise and fall [of Popery], in its rise, from 533 666 brings us to 1198–9, when Popery was at its height. . . . From 1198–9, 666 brings us to 1864, just before Daniel's time of blessedness, leaving only . . . half a week, Dan. 9: 27, for the Infidel persecution."

J. A. Brown, in his "Eventide," published in London in 1823, commences the 2300 years at the second visit of Nehemiah to Jerusalem B. C. 428, from which reckoning they end in 1873: he also begins the Mohammedan Hegira of 1270 years at the same date. Rev. Wm. Hales, D. D., the distinguished chronologer, ends the 2300 years in 1880, commencing them B. C. 420, when the commandment to restore and rebuild Jerusalem was given. The 1260 years of Daniel and John he commences in A. D. 620, and terminates them in 1880. Mr. Bickersteth and Mr. Birks mark the limit of our world's age to 1877 or 1882. Rev. E. B. Elliott says the 1260 years of Antichrist's dominion end in 1866. Dr. Cumming says, "Most prophetic interpreters place the . . . latest time of the first resurrection in 1385."

Here we see many of the most learned christians bring the time of the final event of all things near at hand. And while many of our good brethren claim he will come in this year—1866, and others equally as good think not till 1867–8, and others further off still; yet let us not look too much at "time," but rather for what "time" will bring to our waiting eyes, remembering that "He that is to come" said, "Watch, for ye know not when the time is"; and, also, that when certain events had taken place, we might know he was "nigh, even at the doors." And seeing these long foretold events transpiring before our eyes, and knowing that many have passed away, we know that the day of peace is nigh. And while looking over the world, from land to land, in every clime, and seeing nought but turmoil, trouble, anxiety, sorrow and sickness, death and mourning every day, everywhere; and knowing that when the King comes in his beauty, all the days of our mourning will be ended; we can say, while all nature seems saying in awakening tones to every ear, "He is coming quickly." "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus."

J. N. BERRY.

NAPOLEONISM.

It seems that the Emperor Napoleon and his friends are particularly fond of likening himself and his cause to the greatest religious characters whose administrations enter into the great system of human redemption. M. de Persigny, some years ago, said: "We claim exclusive possession of the Napoleonic idea, tortured and put to death on the rock of St. Helena. Napoleon (I.) died under the weight of his task, and his work was left unfinished. Like Charlemagne, he promulgated his law amid the lightning and thunder of battle; and he confessed it to his last hour, in the face of his executioners; thus embodying in himself the double characters of Moses and Jesus Christ."

In Mr. Greenwood's Life of the present Emperor, he quotes from him the following language: "Strong are the convictions which brought me to regard the cause of Napoleonism as the only national one in France, and the only civilizing agency in Europe. Proud of the nobility and purity of my intentions, I resolved to elevate the Imperial Eagle once again, or to fall the victim of my political faith. . . . I may be asked what induced me to abandon my happy existence, to run all the risks of an enterprise so hazardous? I reply, a secret voice led me on. . . . This is the inheritance of inspiration. It is the inspiration of an idea, which rests its system on principles of eternal justice, disciplines democracy, levels mountains, crosses seas, obliges all nations to be at peace,—an idea which has burst from the tomb of St. Helena, as the moral of the Evangelism has risen triumphantly, spite of all the torments of Calvary, which, springing out of the French Revolution, with a helmet on its head, fell to rise again, imitating the Divine example."

The Envoy Extraordinary of the Emperor of Mexico has opened negotiations with the government of Turkey for the securement of certain localities in Palestine, in order to refit and consecrate them with improvements for the veneration of the so-called faithful. The Emperor and Empress are said to be very urgent in the matter. Has this anything to do with Napoleon's schemes to take possession of the Holy Land?

The Paris Presse represents that France is at this time being moved toward the "natural frontier" question; that is, the extension of the boundaries of France to the Rhine. A pamphlet, by M. Dechamps, in Belgium, proclaims the coming annexation of his country to France. A protest from Drouyn de l'Huys has been reported over Europe against the division of the Danish Duchies in disregard of the will of peoples. And numerous symptomatic facts are referred to as indicating a supreme effort to revive the French territorial question.

The first instalments of the French army being withdrawn from Italy, have been safely landed in France. The places vacated by them are already in a state of disturbance from brigand organizations. The people of Rome, however, seem pleased with their departure, which is taken as equivalent to the overthrow of the Pope's temporal sovereignty. All are to be recalled in the course of the year.

A writer in one of the New York dailies, eulogizing Napoleon, refers to a paper prepared many years ago, during the imprisonment at Ham, and bearing Napoleon's signature, in which the prisoner promised, in the event of his elevation to the throne, the construction of a ship canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans through the American isthmus, with a bonus of seventy-five millions of francs. The same writer refers to his high estimate of Constantinople as a point of the greatest importance, the occupation of which may most powerfully influence the destinies of the African, European, and Asiatic countries.

The Napoleonic movement, in calling the great sanitary congress of representatives from the various nations, to discuss the question of the prevention of cholera visitations, is another significant feature. The government sanctions, under which the delegates are to act, is not the least noteworthy in the case. It is a semi-political conference, and with the subject for inquiry is linked the religion of Mahomet, its future, and that of the people who profess it. Hence Constantinople is the place of meeting. This politico-medical congress will doubtless find the pilgrimages to Mecca to be the source of this Asiatic scourge, and thus unlock the door of intervention in Mohammedan affairs, and for another congress with greater powers; all of which will be in the exact line of Napoleon's ambitious plans, and make for his exaltation as the savior of peoples, the prince of social progress, and the ruler of nations.

Napoleon and Eugenie have also lately nearly deified themselves in the eyes of some, in the visits which they voluntarily paid to the cholera patients in the hospitals of Paris, during the recent prevalence of that plague there. We have seen it referred to, even in English papers, as one of the most marvellous and noteworthy acts of condescension and calm courage to be found. Many, no doubt, are ready to accept it as a miracle, that they repeated these visits, hung over the patients' beds, and escaped unharmed.

It was the sacred prophet who said of the wilful king, that he shall honor the God of forces, a god whom his fathers knew not, with gold and with silver. Napoleon has recently caused to be placed in the Salon de Napoleon in the Louvre, a silver statue of his uncle.

Some time ago, he removed the military cap from the statue of his uncle in the Place Vendome, and supplied its place with the sacred wreath. The explanation given to the French people at the time was, that it was necessar for the apotheosis of the Emperor. Since then, all the French coinage has the head of Louis Napoleon stamped on each piece, with a similar wreath around his own temples. If it meant apotheosis for the uncle, what does it mean for the nephew?—Prophetic Times of January.

PROGRESS OF ROMANISM.—It is not generally known that there are more than four millions of Roman Catholics in the United States. Since 1808 there has been an increase from eighty to two thousand five hundred churches; from sixty-eight to twenty-three hundred priests; from two to forty-five bishops; and from one to forty-eight dioceses.

Besides these, the Catholics have 102 orphan asylums, where they educate some 7000 orphans, and have over 100 benevolent and charitable societies, and 28 hospitals. They have also 97 library institutes for young men; 212 female academies, and 803 free schools for 27,940 males, and 327 schools for 29,671 females.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, April 18, 1866.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year; but if delayed six months beyond the time of payment, the price is $3.00 a year. Thus 50 cents a year is saved by paying in advance.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ The No. on the first page of this paper should be No. 5 instead of No. 20.

DISCUSSION IN NORWAY.

Our discussion in North Norway, Me., was one of special interest. Our opponent, Mr. N. Gunnerson, was an able Universalist minister, who resides and preaches in Norway. He was formerly a lawyer. Our discussion was held in the Methodist meeting house, which was filled with a very orderly and attentive audience. The traveling was bad, but many came several miles. Our discussion began Tuesday forenoon, and closed Wednesday P. M. We urged our opponent to discuss two days more, but he refused. We spent the first day in discussing the following question:—

"Is the second coming of Christ to judge the world, to-day a future event?"

Mr. Gunnerson took the position that Christ came the second time at "the destruction of Jerusalem." We urged him very hard to tell how, or in what manner, Christ came at that time; but could get no explanation. We asked him to tell us how he gathered "together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other," when Jerusalem was destroyed? We received no answer. On the contrary, we found the Savior instructed his disciples, or the elect, that when they should "see Jerusalem compassed with armies, . . . then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains." We thought this was a strange way to express the gathering of the elect; and we presume the whole audience had the same opinion.

He then claimed that Josephus mentioned all the signs that were to take place before the second coming of Christ, as events which transpired before the destruction of Jerusalem; but said he had left the history at home; yet assured us that we should find it as he had stated. In our reply, we urged him to show that one sign which Jesus gave to indicate that his second coming was near, was mentioned by Josephus. This he did not do, only by assertion. At noon we succeeded in obtaining a copy of Josephus, which we delivered to our opponent, and asked him to prove his statement from the book; but he found no mention of the signs of which Jesus speaks, that were to show that his coming was near. It was hard to make error stand up boldly and look the truth full in the face. It was very evident that a wide difference exists between assertion and proof.

We found the Scriptures declaring that "when the Son of man shall come," it will be "in his glory, and all the holy angels with him; then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations. . . . Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Our opponent assumed that Christ came and set up his kingdom at the destruction of Jerusalem. We assured him that the only thing wanting to make his assertion good, was the PROOF; but that did not appear. Instead of setting up a kingdom at that time, we found one was pulled down; and instead of sending "his angels with a great sound of a trumpet" to "gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other," he scattered them at the destruction of Jerusalem.

Again, we found that in the Revelation, given to John twenty-six years after Jerusalem was overthrown, the coming of Christ was spoken of as a future event, that could not take place till "the seventh angel sounded," at which time "the kingdoms of this world" would "become the kingdoms of our Lord." Satan still rules among the kingdoms of the world, and will till Christ comes to "destroy them," and set up his kingdom, and "reign for ever and ever." We found the time set for the judgment was not till after "the seventh angel sounded"; then the time came to judge "the dead," and for the Lord to "give reward unto" his "servants the prophets, and to his saints, and them that fear" his "name small and great." As our opponent could not show proof that the seventh angel sounded before the destruction of Jerusalem, of course there was no evidence that the Savior came at that time.

We inquired of him why he administered the sacrament, if he believed that Jesus came in the year seventy, at the destruction of Jerusalem; for Paul says, "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."—1 Cor. 11: 26. We received no answer to our inquiry. We thought of the saying—"Consistency is a jewel."

In the absence of all proof that either the coming of Christ, the setting up of his kingdom, or that the judgment took place at the destruction of Jerusalem; we saw no reason to believe these great events are in the past; and to look for them there would be as great an error, as to call the shadow of a tree the tree itself; or to say the visions of John were the events themselves. It seemed strange to us that any one who has confidence in the Bible should believe that the second coming of Christ is a past event, accomplished in the year seventy, at the destruction of Jerusalem. After comparing truth and error together, it made the former look more precious than ever.

On Wednesday, Apr. 11th, we took up the second question which read as follows:—"Do reason and the Bible teach the immortality of man?"

We laid down by the side of the question the following from Job 4: 17:—"Shall mortal man be more just than God?" and asked our opponent to harmonize the two; but he refused to make an attempt. His principal effort was made from the stand-point of reason; but unfortunately for him, reason was all against him. Whoever attempts to sustain the natural immortality of man by reason, is much like one charging a rock for a blast, who should be so unfortunate as to have his charge go off prematurely, endangering his own life, and doing the rock no harm. [Bro. J. Porter, Danville, C. E., will understand this.] This will illustrate the success of our opponent while bringing forward reason to prove his position.

When he came to the Bible for evidence, it was found to be in harmony with reason and sound philosophy, affording no clear proof that man is now immortal; but instructing us to "seek for . . . immortality," "by patient continuance in well doing." He claimed that the body of man was only a "house" for the real man to live in while in this world. We reminded him that it must be the real man that did all the seeking after things; and as he was exhorted to "seek for . . . IMMORTALITY" (Rom. 2: 7), it was certain that the one who instructed Paul to write, did not believe man is immortal; but Paul was taught by the Spirit of the Lord, hence the point was for ever settled that man is mortal.

During the discussion, the truth had a glorious triumph and found a hearty welcome in some hearts where it had not been received before.

The exercises passed off very pleasantly, and we trust much good was accomplished.

In the evening after the close of the discussion, we preached on the resurrection of the dead, and had a very heart-cheering time. The conference meeting that followed was one of the best we ever enjoyed. We could truly say it was good to be there.

We had pleasant interviews with Brn. Jared Whitman, from Mechanic Falls, Me., and A. H. Walker, Lynn, Mass., faithful preachers, who were at the discussion.

We left the saints rejoicing in the Lord and in the blessed hope of seeing him soon. We think there are some at North Norway who will give him a hearty welcome when he comes to set up his kingdom.

IS THE HEART DRESSED?

When we see professors of religion very particular to have every article of their wearing apparel very carefully arranged, and spending a long time at the toilet table, in order to have everything arranged in the most tasty manner; we feel like inquiring is the heart dressed? Has that been as carefully examined before the Bible glass, as the outward person has been before the toilet mirror? When we see one so very precise about the exterior, we have fears that the inside is sadly neglected. Would it not be better to spend more time in heart examination than in decorating the person with the foolish ornaments that please the taste of a proud heart? Gold needs no ornaments to add to its beauty; neither does the pure christian religion. It looks best in plain, simple attire. It then appears to the best advantage; and looks the most inviting to all who wish to be the true followers of Jesus.

We recommend to all who dress for a visit, or to receive company, that they be specially careful to have their hearts well dressed with the beautiful, lovely ornaments of christianity; especially with meekness, patience and gentleness, which will make them look well in the sight of the Lord. Do not venture into company without these inward ornaments. Let them receive the first and chief attention.

MEETINGS IN ST. LOUIS.

Bro. H. K. Flagg informs us that he is having very interesting meetings in St. Louis, Mo. A large number have been converted, and there is a great stir among the people Some who have the spirit of the ancient Pharisees, are endeavoring to stop the work; but the more they try to stop it, the more earnestly the people take hold of it, and the more anxious they are to hear.

Bro. Flagg needs and deserves the prayers, sympathies, and material aid of all the friends of Jesus. The Lord is doing a great work through him in the city of St. Louis. We hope those who feel interested in a genuine missionary work, will send him aid at once, for it is needed. We say this without the consent of Bro. Flagg, but we feel it to be a duty that we owe to Christ.

Bro. F. feels it to be duty to remain in St. Louis for weeks to come. His P. O. address is H. K. Flagg, 149 No. Sixth St., St. Louis, Missouri.

THE MESSIANIC BANNER is a new monthly, "devoted to primitive christianity," edited by Dr. John T. Walsh, 540 Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md. Each number contains 32 octavo pp. Price $2.00 per year; $1.00 for six months; 20 cents per copy.

From a hasty glance at the work, we think it one that will be read with interest by those who love the Bible.

STRONG TALK.

A Spiritualist medium, by the name of Chadwell, in Springfield, Mass., said to Bro. G. W. Davis about 1863,—"If you live ten years, you will have to acknowledge Spiritualism, or have your head cut off." Better to lose the head, than to take "the mark of the beast."

BANNER INTELLIGENCE.

It is often quite profitable to know what others think and say of us. We were somewhat amused by the following, which we found as an editorial in the Gospel Banner, a Universalist paper, published in Augusta, Me., dated March 3d, 1866. We are sorry the editor was not present to hear the discussion; for had he been, he might have given us still more light on the subject. But perhaps the following may give the reader some new ideas concerning the "disputant:"—

"REV. MR. GRANT, THE DISPUTANT."

"In Dixfield, [Me.] Canton, and vicinity, and in some other parts of our State, this man, who hails from Boston to intensify his pretensions, has exhausted his ingenuity in endeavoring to pass himself off as a man of 'giant intellect,' of wonderful learning, and most remarkable philosophical attainments; and his friends, just as simple as himself, have been equally anxious, and have striven with equal zeal to make it appear that he is really an intellectual wonder. If he is truly 'the bright and shining light' he pretends, we do not understand how Boston can do without him so frequently, and for so many weeks in succession. And then, why does he spend his time in the interior of Oxford county, away down here in Maine, where the country is sparsely settled, when there are New York, Philadelphia, Washington, and all the popular cities of the west; the inhabitants of which are fools enough to believe in the immortality of man; and hence, where the light of his luminous intellect is so much needed? . . .

And as to Mr. Grant himself, it is time the facts were known and realized by the good people in Maine. First, that living in Boston, and hailing from that city, can convert no dwarf into a giant. Second, that no population in New England, of the same extent, contains a greater number of shallow pated, superficial pretenders and deceivers than that city. And third, from the best information we can obtain, the gentleman of whom we speak is not regarded by those who know him best as either educated or profound. Indeed, if any one wishes to see an exhibition of weakness of argument, and utter ignorance of the teachings of the simple truths of the New Testament, that are humiliating in the extreme, let him peruse the report of the Canton Discussion, in another column, by 'Hartford;' and notice the explanation offered by Mr. Grant, of certain passages of Scripture adduced by Mr. Johnson, in proof that the early apostles and disciples of Christ expected, when put to death by their enemies, to go immediately to the heavenly world. Any ordinary child of a dozen years of age would know better than to make such assertions."

WHY IS IT SO?

We are glad to learn that some members of other churches begin to see that the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead has been very sadly neglected in the preaching of these last days. Once this glorious truth was made prominent by the church; now it is scarcely mentioned even at funerals. Why is it?

The following, taken from Zion's Herald, the leading Methodist paper in New England, is worthy the consideration of all who have become indifferent about the resurrection of the dead:—

"Resurrection of the Body neglected as a Doctrine by the Modern Church.

Dr. A. Clarke, in his comments of 1 Cor. 15., says: 'One remark I cannot help making: the doctrine of the Resurrection appears to have been thought of much more consequence among the primitive christians than it is now!' The italics are his. He continues: 'How is this? The apostles were continually insisting on it, and exciting the followers of God to diligence, obedience and cheerfulness through it. And their successors in the present day seldom mention it! So apostles preached, and so primitive christians believed; so we preach, and so our hearers believe. There is not a doctrine in the gospel on which more stress is laid; and there is not a doctrine in the present system of preaching which is treated with more neglect!'

Well might the doctor raise the question, 'How is this?' But he attempted no answer. What was true in his day respecting this matter, is true to-day. And if the doctor was correct in his observation for his day, who can deny its applicability to these later days? If this great cardinal doctrine has thus lost the prominence it had with the early church, there must be some grave reason for it in the current ideas of the present church. It must have arisen from some logical process, some potent, though false premise, having obtruded itself, and thus led to a practical if not speculative denial of the resurrection of the body as plainly and variedly taught in the Sacred Record."

LUTHER'S OPINIONS.

In 1520, Luther published a defense of his forty-one propositions which had been condemned by Leo. X. In the twenty-seventh we find the following:

"I permit the Pope to make articles of faith for himself and his faithful, such as . . . the soul is the substantial form of the human body; the Pope is the Emperor of the world, and the king of heaven and God upon earth; THE SOUL IS IMMORTAL, with all those monstrous opinions to be found in the Roman dunghill of decretals."—Historical view of the controversy concerning an intermediate state." pp. 62, 63.

Mr. Blackburne says on page 64 of the same work, "Luther espoused the doctrine of the sleep of the soul, upon a scripture foundation, and he made use of it as a confutation of purgatory, and Saint-worship, and continued in that belief to the last moment of his life." Ibid p. 64.

Dr. Blackburne further says:—"Luther, in his commentary upon Ecclesiastes which was published in the year 1532, was clearly and indisputably on the side of those who maintain the sleep of the soul." Ibid. p. 65.

The following is on pp. 65–67 of the same work:

"In the year 1530, William Tyndall answered Sir Thomas More's Dialogue. More objected to Luther, that he held, 'that all souls lie and sleep till doom's day.' It is to be supposed that, if this was not Luther's doctrine, Tyndall would have denied it; or at least have said that it was not held by the Protestants in g neral. Instead of that, he acknowledges it for the doctrine of the Protestants, grounded on scripture, as appears by his answer; viz., 'And ye, in putting them [departed souls] in heaven, hell, and purgatory, destroy the arguments wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection. . . . The heathen philosophers denying that, did put, that the souls did ever live. And the Pope joineth the spiritual doctrine of Christ, and the fleshly minded Pope consenteth unto heathen doctrine, therefore he corrupteth the scripture to stablish it.' . . .

And again, 'If the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be? And then what cause is there of the resurrection?'

When speaking of the fact that Luther believed in this doctrine that we "feel neither good nor evil in body nor soul, until the day of doom,"—Tyndall says, "Christ and his apostles taught no other."

Tyndall [illegible] the resurrection, I [illegible] and our Savior Jesus Christ [illegible] the universal congregation [illegible] in him, that I believe according to the [illegible] and manifest scriptures and Catholic faith, that Christ is risen again in the flesh which he received of his mother, the blessed virgin Mary, and body, wherein he died. And that we shall all, both good and bad, rise both flesh and body, and appear together before the judgment seat of Christ, to receive every man according to his deeds. And that the bodies of all that believe, and continue in the true faith of Christ, shall be indued with like immortality and glory, as is the body of Christ."—Ibid. pp. 68–9.

Luther was asked whether Samuel really appeared to the woman at Endor, when consulted by Saul? He answered,

"No, 'twas a spectre, an evil spirit, assuming his form. What proves this is, that God, by the law of Moses, had forbidden man to question the dead; consequently, it must have been a demon which presented itself under the form of the man of God. In like manner an abbot of Spanheim, a sorcerer, exhibited to the emperor Maximilian all the emperors, his predecessors, and all the most celebrated heroes of past times, who defiled before him each in the costume of his time. Among them were Alexander the Great and Julius Cæsar. There was also the emperor's betrothed, whom Charles of France stole from him. But these apparitions were all the work of the demon."

LOWELL STREET.

The revival still continues. The Lord blesses the labors of Bro. Hook, and adds daily to the number of those who shall be saved in the day of his coming.

The baptism, Sunday, in the mill pond, Charlestown, was one of the most interesting seasons we have witnessed for a long time. The day was warm and bright, and the heavens smiled with joy upon the scene. Quite a crowd were assembled upon the banks. Eld. Ramsey made some very appropriate remarks upon the object and duty of baptism, and, by the hands of Eld. Hook, twelve happy souls were buried with Christ in the likeness of his death and resurrection. Eight of them were children and youth from nine to fifteen years of age. More are waiting to go forward.

It was a lovely sight, to see these young men and maidens, in the flower of their days, giving themselves away to Christ, and confessing themselves henceforth dead to the world, and alive to God, in the hope of a better life to come; and, as they went down into the liquid grave, and rose again with smiles of joy and shouts of "Glory to God!" many hearts were glad, and many eyes wet with tears. God keep them faithful till Jesus comes. The meetings will continue every evening this week.

Pray, brethren and sisters; pray for the revival at Lowell street. W. B. H.

THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE; with an Introduction on Biblical Interpretation, and an Appendix on the Great Want of the Age.

We have a few copies of this work, which we commend to the attention of ministers and Bible students.

For the World's Crisis.

WILL YOU DISCUSS WITH ME?

Any person, who may wish to discuss the following three questions with me,—

1. Has man an immortal soul, which lives as a separate entity from the dead body? 2. Is the punishment of the wicked, after the day of judgment, eternal life in misery? 3. Do the righteous and wicked receive their rewards immediately on the death of the body?—and will do it in a kind spirit, by writing letters to me, I will reply in a kind way.

I shall take the negative side of the three questions. B. PERHAM, Vernon, Vt.

For the World's Crisis.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

I will sell you sixty books from my library. Books on prophecy, on the Advent, on various subjects, ancient and modern. Do buy me out. Send one stamp and your post office, and I will send you free a printed catalogue of titles and prices. These books are needed by our people. Will you buy?

Rouses Point, N. Y. D. T. TAYLOR.

LIFE SKETCHES.

A new edition has just been issued, and those who have subscribed and paid will be supplied just as soon as it can be ascertained who have been supplied, and who have not. As some copies have been sent directly from Boston during Mrs. Mussey's absence, it may be difficult to tell the whole number who are yet unsupplied. Will not those who are expecting copies, whether paid for or not, please send their names immediately, and money if they have not already paid, and they shall receive the books by return mail. Price $1.00, postpaid.

Quite a number have received copies which are not yet paid for. Will they not send in the money immediately? Sr. Mussey needs every cent due her to pay for the present edition. Now who will send in their names and money, or the names of their friends, and thus enable Sr. M. to dispose of the whole edition at once, pay her bills, and pay her for her trouble in the past?

Those sending money now due, address Mrs. ABIGAIL MUSSEY, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Those who wish for books, address E. P. Woodward (Crisis Box), Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

THE CAUSE AT MELVIN VILLAGE.

BRO. GRANT:—For the last few weeks the Lord has been visiting Melvin Village and vicinity. At this place some forty have started anew, or for the first time, for the kingdom, under the labors of the different denominations, which united in the great work. Saturday, March 31st, was our Monthly Conference, when, although the mud was very deep, ninety-seven were present, and eighty-one exhortations given. A glorious season. The next day our house was too small for us; when at the close of the meeting I had the pleasure of burying seven young men and women in Melvin river. Many others will go soon.

For the last three weeks I have been laboring at Moultonborough, in one of the most blessed outpourings of God's Spirit that I ever witnessed, where from thirty to forty have started in good earnest. Last Saturday we had a conference, when nearly one hundred were present. Had a blessed season yesterday. I had the pleasure of planting six at M. in the likeness of Christ's death.

It seems that God is preparing a people for his coming. It looks like the last call the people will have. O sinner! heed the call, and be wise. T. W. PIPER.

Melvin Village, Apr. 9th, 1866.

[illegible] TRACT FUND.

For the Free Distribution of Tracts.

Previous acknowledgments	[illegible]
L. H. J[illegible]	[illegible]
M. A. Pe[illegible]	[illegible]
J. W. Trumbull	2.50
C. Lovis	1.00

POOR FUND DONATIONS.

To send the Crisis to the Poor.

Whole number sent free, 560. Ann'l Expense, $1400,00

Previous acknowledgments	$272.15
L. F. Bacon, Vt.	.50
Ann E. Hall, Mass.	2.50
J. P. Darling "	1.00
Mary Bellows	10.00
T. E. H., (for the poor widow)	2.50
Mrs. E. McOasl, Wis.	2.50

The American Advent Mission Society.

All communications relating to the business of the Society, and all applications for situations as teachers or missionaries, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, WILLIAM B. HERRON, "Crisis" Office, Boston.

All donations of money, or clothing, or other supplies for the Freedmen, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEORGE T. ADAMS, 157 Hanover Street, Boston.

In sending supplies, enclose in a letter to the same address a notice and list of the articles sent.

FREEDMEN'S MISSION FUND.

Previous acknowledgments	1914.77
A friend, Wolfboro	1.00
Friends in Camden	2.00
S. B. Munson, Tariffville	1.50
S. B. Munson (to help Bro. Leslie build a Mission House)	1.00
A Flagg (on pledge)	4.00
Y. P. Fund	.25

YOUNG PILGRIM POOR FUND.

To send the Young Pilgrim to the Poor.

200 copies are sent free to Mission Schools and elsewhere.

Previous acknowledgments	$56.83
Andrew B. Pabrick, Clinton, Mich	1.00
W. B. C., Rutland, Vt.	2.00

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$122.85
S. B. Munson, Tariffville, Ct.	2.50

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT THE LORD CAN DO.

When I first came to New York city to labor as a missionary, I visited one who had backslidden from the Lord, and, like all backsliders, was seven times worse than before. I soon found she was not only wicked, but loved to be wicked. Everybody was afraid of her. One day I visited her and talked very plain about her backslidden condition. I saw that it offended her, and her eyes sparkled with rage. After I left she told the people that the next time I came she would give me the greatest cursing that ever I had, for it was as natural for her to swear as it was for her to eat. On my way home I talked to the Lord about her, and felt she must be reclaimed. I promised the Lord if he would give me this one, I would serve him all the days of my life.

Time passed on. She became worse and worse. There was no wickedness she could think of but that she would be at it. I put her on the altar. The Spirit of conviction got hold of her. She was afraid to go to sleep at night for fear the devil would get her before morning. She could not sleep herself, and she was determined nobody else should. If she went to bed she would cover up her head, and if the light was out she would lie and tremble till daylight. I heard she was getting worse and more wicked. I did not know what to do. I thought she had sinned away her day of grace, and surely I was doing wrong by praying for her, and talking so much to her. Then a friend of mine came to assist me in my work, and I told her about it. She said, "Do not give her up. Keep her on the altar. The devil knows she is one of his best captives, and when she is converted she will be a terror to sinners." So we kept on praying for eighteen long months. Sometimes I was discouraged.

But in due time the Lord did answer prayer. He brought her to her knees. She began to pray for mercy. We had our meeting every day from two o'clock till twelve at night, and often she knelt down and prayed five and six hours without getting up. She sought the Lord a week, and I began to be afraid the Lord would not bless her. Others were blessed all around her, five and six every night, but she she could not find mercy. How she prayed; how she confessed her sins to Jesus. I never saw conviction take such hold of any one. She could not eat, drink, or sleep.

On the eleventh day she only had one prayer, and that was, "Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me!" And thus she continued till quarter past eleven o'clock at night, when she found pardon, her burden rolled off, and she rose to her feet without any crutches (she was a cripple), and shouted praises to God, saying, "He has washed me in the blood of the Lamb!" She was always opposed to a noise, but she made noise enough that night. Now she is one of our best workers in our protracted meetings. She takes charge of the Mission room, makes the fires, and has opened a little children's meeting, the best one I ever attended. She has them sing, and then they repeat verses from the Scriptures, some as many as forty verses at a time. Then they sing, and she talks to them, and tells them stories about good children, who have lived and died in the Lord, until there was a revival broke out among these little children. One of them, a blind girl, was converted, and many of them want to be christians.

The revival has reached the adults, and many are crying for mercy. We have meetings every night at our mission rooms. Not half the people can get in, and when we are in we scarcely have room to labor with the mourners. Every night somebody is converted. Husbands and wives seek the Lord side by side. Praise the Lord for what he is doing for us. All this came from a little child's prayer-meeting, and that led by one whom God had brought from among the wickedest of the wicked. What hath God wrought! The Lord is pouring out his Spirit everywhere. This is the last call for mercy. The highway and hedge call.

Our revival is still going on at Nyack, and another at Haverstraw, among the mountains. I was with them from Thursday till Monday, when I came home sick. May the Lord give us all strength to labor till Jesus comes, which must be very soon.

Your sister rejoicing in his near coming,
ANNA E. SMITH.
No. 128 East 27th Street, New York City.

SR. PLUMA EATON, Warner, N. H., writes: "I love the Crisis, I love our Bible, the lamp of life; and our mutual communications thro' the Crisis help all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, to keep our lamps trimmed and burning with knowledge, love and hope. I am a Baptist by membership, but I do love the blessed doctrine of the Second Advent."

For the World's Crisis.

CONCORD, N. H.

BRO. GRANT:—The battle waxes hot here. The whole place is stirred. The interest is on the increase. We have held two meetings daily, and four on Sundays, besides baptizing the last two Sabbaths. Some seventy different ones have been forward for prayers, mostly heads of families. Quite a number of business men. Two have been baptized. Hundreds went away the last two Sundays for want of room to stand in the house. We urged other denominations to start meetings, which they did, and six came forward, but the people seemed determined to hear our doctrines. The more we urge them to go home to their own churches and go to work, the closer they stick and the earlier they come. It was suggested by outsiders to get a larger place, but I dare not move the ark. I have no one to help me except the Lord.

It is astonishing to see how God can bless such weak efforts. It is his present truth he owns. If plain, coarse preaching would drive them away, they have had it, and yet they come. Some of other denominations heard on baptism, have been convinced, and I buried them down deep last Sabbath, and they came out praising God. This seems to stir up the "sprinkling" elements to opposition; but it is of no use. God has commanded to plant the battery, gave the orders, and if we obey he will give the victory.

HIRAM MUNGER.

For the World's Crisis.

DISCUSSION.

BRO. GRANT:—Last evening I closed a discussion of three evenings with Sister N. M. Henry, of Bunker Hill, Ill. The first two evenings we spoke twice apiece, occupying twenty-five minutes in each speech. The third night we spoke each three times, each speech occupying one half hour. She invited me into the discussion; I accepted the invitation. After committing the case to the wisdom of that God who knows the end from the beginning, I went to make arrangements for the discussion. I presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Bible teaches the resurrection of the wicked dead to life, or conscious existence, for the purpose of being judged and rewarded for the deeds done here in the body.

This was willingly accepted, I occupying the affirmative, and she the negative of the position. Then she proposed to have a committee appointed in connection with the chairman to decide on the merits of the discussion at the close of the debate. I objected to this on account of the prejudice existing against me in the community on account of my sentiments. But she utterly refused to discuss the question unless she could have a committee. So I consented, and the whole congregation was made a committee. After listening three evenings attentively to the testimony and arguments drawn from the Scriptures of all truth, pro and con, the majority of the committee pronounced a decision in my favor, for which I extended my hearty thanks to them, saying I believed they had decided in harmony with the Bible.

At the commencement of the debate, I told the congregation that my mind was at rest on the subject, perfectly satisfied that there was not even one passage of scripture in the Bible that taught the doctrine of the non-resurrection of wicked dead men;—but if Sr. Henry should succeed in upsetting all my arguments, I would come out publicly and acknowledge my error and embrace the truth. But after the last speech, I arose and stated to the congregation that, as a man of God and minister of Jesus Christ, and in the presence of God, angels, and the congregation, I saw not the least cause to change my faith,—that no testimony or argument presented had produced the least conviction. I only received two new ideas from Sr H , and both were false. So I received no new light from this Sister.

O, my brother, how groundless is this non-resurrection scheme. How inconsistent and absurd. When the discussion closed, I could but remember the words of George Storrs, some years ago,—"The method of interpreting scripture on which this theory (of non-resurrection) depends, unsettles all faith in the Bible, and saps the foundation of christianity," "and one which we are clearly satisfied is opposed both to the spirit and letter of the Bible."

The night after the discussion closed, I dreamed that I was aboard of a train of cars traveling at the rate of about thirty miles an hour, very pleasantly indeed, when I espied another train coming up behind, under a powerful pressure of steam, but off from the track, twisting and turning in a serpentine manner with the engine and cars, trying to keep on the track, bounding over the ties and in mud half way to the axles. This dream is so expressive of the way I view their arguments, I submit it for publication. Your brother in Christ's hope, A. N. SEYMOUR.

For the World's Crisis.

A CHRISTIAN.

Am I a christian? What a thought! Can this title be applied to me? Must I answer this question? Must I stand before the Judge and give an account of my deeds, and hear my sentence passed, whether for life or death? Ah! it must be so; and it makes me tremble when I think how little I realize what it will be to stand at the bar of God.

What is it to be a christian? It is a great thing. We do not half realize the meaning of the word Christian. It is not merely the act of going to meeting, or talking in meeting, although if we are christians we shall love to do this. We may do all this and be lost at last. We must live Christ, as well as talk of him. What is talk, if it does not come from the heart, filled with the Spirit of God. We may get up in meeting and exhort the people in the most elegant language, and yet our hearts be cold and indifferent. Perhaps we may go home and make remarks about some poor humble believer in Jesus (who arose with his heart too full for utterance, and could only express in a few broken words that he loved the Savior), because he did not talk as well as some others. Remember, God does not look at the words, but at the heart. He receives that weak testimony (weak in words but strong in spirit) just as readily as one more polished.

Thank God, there is no respect of persons. Our christianity consists in our daily walk and conversation. We are to live humble at the foot of the cross, whatever that cross may be. We cannot get along by bearing one cross alone, and go around the rest. We must bear every one; there is no going around them. Jesus had more than one cross to bear. Many have an idea that the cross made of wood was the only one he bore. But it was not so; he had some cross laid upon him all the time while on the earth, but no one ever knew of him as trying to shun or to go around it. He was faithful to perform every duty which his Father required of him, and this is the way he overcame the world, and was permitted to sit on the throne with his Father.

Now we must follow his examples if we wish to overcome and sit with him on his throne. Are we trying to overcome the world, or are we letting the world overcome us? I fear many are inclined this way. Let us examine ourselves, and if we find that we are inclining a little, straighten up, and after we once get straight keep so. It may be a little hard to hold ourselves up, at first, after being bent over so long, but, thank the Lord, we have not to hold ourselves up; if we look to Jesus he will help us. He has said that his strength is sufficient for us.

It is a great thing to be a christian, and yet it is an easy thing if we go the right way to work. Look to Christ as our example and friend, and when we think that eternal life in the kingdom is to be our reward, we can look upon the trials and temptations we meet with here as but trifles compared with the joys that await us at the coming of Jesus. He is soon coming. Take courage, you have but a little while longer to face the storm. Take warning, sinners, you have but a little time longer to "prepare to meet thy God." If we are not whole-hearted christians, then sad will be our fate.

MRS. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

For the World's Crisis.

MEN THAT FEAR GOD, HELP THE NEEDY.

To the brethren and sisters, and faithful in the Lord Jesus Christ: Dear christian friends, I have just returned from a visit in Jefferson Co., and have learned the circumstances of Bro. C. H. Williams, who was ordained last fall at Dansville. I think, by the help of God, he is destined to make a useful man in the gospel ministry. But he is poor and needs help. The brethren in his section have helped him in part to a horse and harness, and will help him still to a support for his family; and also perhaps to finish paying for his horse, etc. But he needs a buggy. His field of labor is over a rough and hilly country. His horse and harness will be of little use if he can not obtain a buggy. He has NO MEANS to obtain one, only as he should involve himself in debt without knowing from whence the means would come to pay the same. Now, I have a buggy which I propose to send to him as soon as navigation opens, that is well worth forty dollars. I also propose to give him ten dollars, or one quarter of the whole value of the buggy myself; and then I ask of you, reader, to lay by your paper, and take up your pen, and write me a line, and direct the same to C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y., and be sure you enclose ten cents towards the balance of the value of the buggy. Do not say that that amount is too trifling for your notice, for it will surely succeed if all do their duty. I will not forbid any one giving more than ten cents if they wish to do so.

Reader, will you not give ten cents if I will give ten dollars? Well, if you will, then take pen in hand, and write me by the first mail, and direct as above, and we will send Bro. Williams the buggy as a present from the Lord by our hands. Brethren and sisters, readers of the Crisis, if you will respond promptly to this ten-cent call, we can send the present by the first of May. Shall we do it? If you intend to take one or more ten-cent shares in this GOOD DEED, do not delay, for he needs the buggy, and needs it now.

Mothers and sisters, I appeal to you. Just think how such a present will make Sr. Williams' heart leap for joy. Think that if she was your sister or daughter, how you would rejoice with her. Well, she is your sister by blood relation—even the blood of Jesus, and my sister also; and although I never saw her, yet hearing of her readiness to bear the ills of life in poverty, while her husband goes out to declare glad tidings to others, I sympathize with her. I know her trials and her lonely hours. She has now commenced to experience what my wife, with many others, have experienced in poverty and loneliness; and I do not wish to say, Be warmed and clothed, and give nothing. If any one thinks that ten dollars is not my portion of the buggy, just say so, and I will raise my bid; but if any one thinks it is more than my proportion, and wishes me to lessen it, he can inform me how much less he thinks he should make it. From whom shall I hear first? I will report in May what has been done. Now is the time to do a good deed to a poor, young, but talented preacher; and thus help him to be useful without realizing any individual sacrifice. Let us show our faith and love by our works of sympathy and kindness.

C. F. SWEET.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. M. Bryant.

BRO. GRANT:—God is pouring out his blessing here at Northwood Narrows. Bro. Sutherland has been laboring with us the past week, and the good Lord is blessing the work. Salvation flows freely. The youth are coming to the fountain. Strong young men are breaking down under the melting power of God. Backsliders are coming home weeping to Father's house. All around the people are troubled. Satan's kingdom is really shaken.

Last evening, there were twenty-five forward on the anxious seats. Some were set at liberty, finding him of whom Moses and the prophets wrote, and are to be buried today in the likeness of his death. Blessed be God, all the glory belongs to him. The work is not mere surface work, brought on by momentary excitement; but the deep work of God. With scarce an exception, they understand what the blessed hope is, and are going through to the kingdom of God,—looking for a city to come, is their testimony.

Our place of worship is crowded. Scores are under conviction. There seems to be a general feeling pervading the meetings. All that are moved upon really feel "'Tis the last call of mercy." Indeed, we all feel that its the last invitation to the perishing around us. Jesus is nigh, even at the door.

April 10th. Since writing the above, ten have been baptised. The meetings increase in interest, and the work continues to go on. Between thirty and forty were forward for prayers last evening. Such a work has not been witnessed in these parts since the early days of the Freewill Baptists, if indeed then. Praise the Lord. More are to be buried Thursday.

Bro. Sutherland goes from here to London Ridge, where he has been laboring in a revival. Something like forty started for the kingdom; some being reclaimed from a backslidden state, but the greater part being new ones. He goes there to baptize them. Bro. S. has also witnessed a good work under his labors at Pittsfield. Twelve were baptized there. Pray for him all ye children of the King, that God may keep him humble, and us blameless unto the coming of Christ.

April 13th. Bro. Sutherland leaves here to-day. He closed his series of meetings last evening, to attend other appointments. The meetings continued to increase in interest. Twelve were baptized yesterday (Thursday), making twenty-two during the week. Bro. Preble is to be with us this evening, to continue the meetings. Pray for us. Several arose for prayers last evening.

HENRY M. BRYANT.
Northwood Narrows, N. H.

From Bro. D. N. Chadsey.

BRO. GRANT:—For the last few weeks it has been my lot to visit the people of northern New Hampshire, where are some still looking for the Lord, whom they expect soon. We have visited several different places in our tour. We found the people kind and entertaining; have been kindly cared for by the brethren and sisters, and always feel at home among them. I pray the Lord in mercy to guide them by his council, and when Jesus comes we hope to meet them on the fair banks of deliverance. We are not only indebted to those of like precious faith, but we are happy to say, those who question our doctrine have also shared with us the good things of this life, and have been attentive to the good word of God. Bless our God, all ye his saints; glorify him who liveth forever. Our prayer is daily that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified.

We felt in our labors that the Lord would send a messenger to us with glad tidings, and after many weeks of labor, we were strengthened to read the appointments of Bro. Ross. Anxiously we waited for his arrival in Colebrook and vicinity, but we were sadly disappointed to learn of his return without having fulfilled the appointments according to expectation. But still we traveled on, satisfied if it is the Lord's will he will come this way some future time. Bro. C. C. Stevens, from Exeter, came in due time, notwithstanding the heavy fall of rain the day or two before. He came Subbath morning, Feb. 27th. He was cordially received by the brethren, though a stranger in the flesh; yet we saw in him a congenial spirit, whose heart beat in unison with ours, we all confessing to be pilgrims and strangers on the earth.

Feb. 27th we accompanied him to Canaan, Vt., where we were also gratified to listen to a discourse on the inheritance, after which he attended to the ordinance of ordination.—Wednesday morning our brother went on his journey to the regions beyond. We hope to see him again in this vale of tears, if not, we hope to meet him in the heavenly land. May the Lord bless him in the work of the ministry. Yours in hope of eternal life,

D. N. CHADSEY.
Colebrook, March 13th, 1866.

From Bro. I. Damman.

BRO. GRANT:—I would say to all my dear brethren in Christ, I am delightfully employed in the service of the Lord, and am now laboring in Boston and East Boston, with Bro. Hook and Goodrich. Souls are believing and being baptized. The interest is on the increase. Good is being done in the name of Christ. We have left home to spend the season as the way may be opened by the kind hand of God, hoping to reach the Western States some time this season, if health will admit. All those that wish to hold correspondence with us can direct their letters to Boston for ten days, in care of Geo. T. Adams, Boston; after that to New Bedford, Mass., until further directions are given. Your Bro. in Christ,

I. DAMMAN.

Obituaries.

RITCHIE. Died in Magog, C. E., March 16th, 1866, Bro. David Ritchie, in the forty-first year of his age.

I visited him several times during his sickness, and found him ever patient. He leaves a wife, three children, and one brother to mourn his loss. We hope they will prepare to meet him when the earth shall be restored to its Eden bloom. A discourse was delivered by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 55–57.

JOHN CHAPMAN.

SUTLEFFE. Died in Bolton, C. E., March 26th, 1866, Sister Ann Sutleffe, wife of Eld. Thomas Sutleffe, aged eighty-six years.

Like a shock fully ripe for the harvest, she has returned to her mother earth. Eld. Sutleffe died March 7th, 1845. Eld. S. and wife emigrated from Ireland to this country about thirty-seven years ago. They belonged to the Wesleyan Methodist for many years. They embraced the Advent faith in the year 1836. Their home was ever a pilgrim's home. They endeavored to show their faith by their works.

The writer endeavored to comfort the bereaved, from John 11: 25, 26.

JOHN CHAPMAN.

Voice of the West please copy.

WYMAN. Died in Friendship, Me., March 26th, of that dreadful disease, diphtheria, little Sarah, daughter of Bro. Isaac and Sr. Mary Wyman, aged nine years and six months.

Though heart broken ones weep over the grave of one so lovely, they have the blessed assurance that Sarah will have a home in the beautiful world to come. When asked by her father, if she was afraid to die, she meekly replied, "O no; Jesus will take care of me." "Meet me in the better land."

In our long looked for Eden, there'll be a sweet home
For our dear little Sarah, when Jesus shall come.

R. R. YORK.

METCALF. Died March the 17th, at Big Patch, Grant Co., Wis., after a painful illness of several months, James Metcalf, in the seventy-second year of his age.

We have lain thee, dear friend,
In silence to rest;
But, though sadly we miss thee,
Our Father knew best.
Though in the home circle
We meet thee no more,
We hope soon to greet thee
When life's storms are o'er.

SUSAN A. ISBELL.

STONE. Died in Brooklyn, Conn., March 27th, 1866, of consumption, Sr. Lucy Stone, daughter of Bro. Larkin and Sarah Stone, aged sixteen years and seven months.

She fell asleep sweetly in Jesus, and awaits a blest immortality. Let father, mother, and brother, strive to meet her in the undying state.

E. BELLOWS.

BORDEN. Died in Chattanooga, Tenn., April 30th, 1865, Thomas P. Borden, aged thirty-six years.

In Casco, Mich., August 6th, 1865, Lorina M. Borden, aged sixteen years.

☞ The French troops are to be withdrawn from Mexico in three detachments. The first next November, the second in March and the third in November, 1867.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool March 29th, Queenstown 30th.

The prospects of an Austro-Prussian war were increasing.

The Berlin Zeidlerische Correspondenz of March 29th publishes an article representing the present state of Austro-Prussian relations as serious. It considers the crisis far from diminishing, but, on the contrary, becoming more dangerous. The article points out that as soon as Austria had armed, her financial position would compel her to hasten the attack, a circumstance which the Prussian Government is taking into serious consideration.

The Independence Belge of the 29th has news that the King of Prussia has given his consent to certain military arrangements, which, though only preliminary, indicate that a war is almost inevitable.

The London Morning Post of the 29th says the position of affairs becomes every day more critical. In Berlin the language of the press, by the evident dictation of the Government, is warlike, and great military prepartions are being made everywhere throughout the kingdom. In Austria the Government is also taking measures in anticipation of the coming struggle.

The Berlin journals represent the Austrian armaments and preparations as very extensive, and some of them admit that in view of Austrian preparations orders may have been given by Prussia to take such military measures as may be indispensable.

Half a dozen war vessels were preparing for sea at Plymouth, and it is reported that they were to go to the St. Lawrence.

TWO DAYS LATER.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times writes that Prince Napoleon has left Paris for Italy, after having had several interviews with the Emperor. It is whispered that he is intrusted with a mission to Victor Emmanuel which could not be well confided to any inferior personage, and has reference to the state of affairs in Prussia and Austria. The correspondent adds: "I find that persons who, up to the present moment, have refused to believe that anything likely to disturb the peace of Europe would not come out of the quarrel are now far less incredulous. Their views of the future are gloomy enough, and they think a conflict between Austria and Prussia all but certain."

A Florence telegram says considerable armaments are stated to be in the course of preparation in Italy.

The New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Company have contracted with the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, London, for the manufacture and submersion this summer of two cables, one across the Gulf of St. Lawrence from Newfoundland to Cape Breton, and the other between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, and for the repair of the present cables, so as to have two cables for the prompt transmission of all messages between the Atlantic cable and New York.

THREE DAYS LATER.—Southampton, April 4th.

The anticipation of a war between Austria and Prussia has made a most unfavorable impression on commercial affairs throughout France. The anxiety, instead of being dispelled by an elaborate article in the Constitutionnel, and believed to have emanated from the foreign office, has increased the apprehension that, if these powers go to war, France cannot, even if she wishes, maintain neutrality.

A Prussian note to the minor German States says: "Austria, without any provocation on the part of Prussia, has ordered armaments of a threatening character, which compel Prussia to arm also. Prussia now seeks guaranties for her security, having vainly endeavored to obtain them in alliance with Austria. Bismarck asks the support of the minor States in the event of being attacked by Austria or being compelled to make war."

The Vienna journals speak of war as inevitable.

Brussels intelligence states that Bismarck's attempt to win over the middle States to Prussia has entirely failed.

Austria has recalled all her soldiers on furlough.

A Florence telegram announces the formation of a camp of 70,000 men at Bologna under Gen. Cialdini; that the principal Generals of the Italian army have been summoned to meet there on the 8th; that an Italian squadron is forming to cruise in the Adriatic, and that military preparations are going on in Venice. On the contrary, a Paris letter denies the rumors of an Italian loan and armaments, and also the rumor that an understanding has been agreed upon between Italy and Prussia.

Shanghae advices of March 9 state that the Imperial troops have gained a complete victory over the rebels in the north. Fifty thousand of the latter are said to have been slaughtered or captured.

A Vienna letter says such arrangements have been made that Austria could mobilise 480,000 troops within a fortnight. Austria has prohibited the exportation of horses.

DOMESTIC.

Portland, April 9. About 200 Fenians sailed for Eastport in the steamer New Brunswick this afternoon. The boat was unable to take the arms this trip, and a schooner was chartered for the purpose.

New York, April 10. A special dispatch from Eastport, Me., states a British gunboat has gone to St. Andrews. Prominent Fenians and the British Consul and United States Marshal are at the hotel. Communication between St. John and the Western towns was destroyed last night by the Fenians. The garrison at Campo Bello has been increased and earthworks thrown up. Inhabitants from the border are coming here, and the city is crowded with Fenians.

A Fenian convention is in session. There is bad feeling on both sides of the bay. Small arms and rockets are continually being fired, and there is a perfect panic. Two British gunboats are reported in the offing. A Fenian vessel with howitzers and other arms was prevented from leaving at midnight last night by the custom officers.

A Frederickton (New Brunswick) dispatch says the British authorities are placing the frontier in a defensive state. Two companies of volunteers have left for St. Andrews.

Toronto, C. W., April 10. Michael Murphy, President of the Hibernian Society, and five others, were arrested at Cornwall, on their way to Portland, on suspicion of being connected with the Fenian movements. Arms and ammunition were found. They were brought before a magistrate to-day.

New York, April 11. A Toronto (C. W.) dispatch says the only contraband of war found was four revolvers in Shea's house, and a rusty musket and two bayonets in Murphy's. The arrest of Shea is the only one made in this city. His arrest was caused by an intercepted telegram cautioning him to look out for himself and destroy a certain box, which diligent search did not discover.

The authorities now believe that no raid on New Brunswick is intended, but that under cover of this movement Sweeney or O'Mahony would make a desperate raid upon Canada, probably with the Chicago gunboats, and land his forces. An attack is daily looked for.

Passage of the Civil Rights Bill over the President's Veto.

Washington, April 9th, 1866. The anniversary of Lee's surrender has been made doubly glorious here to-day by the passage of the Civil Rights Bill in the House, over the President's veto.

The Bill and the Veto Message having been read after the expiration of the morning hour, Mr. Wilson of Iowa, Chairmam of the Judiciary Committee, moved the previous question on the passage of the bill, "the President's objections to the contrary notwithstanding."

The vote was then taken, and the crowds in the galleries and on the floor listened in almost breathless silence as the names were read.

At last the names had all been called and read. Mr. Speaker Colfax then took the tally list from the clerk, and announced in a clear, triumphant tone the result and the effect thereof, as follows:

"On the question, 'Shall this bill pass, notwithstanding the objections of the President?' the ayes are 122, and the nays are 41. Two-thirds of the House having upon this reconsideration agreed to its passage, and it being certified officially that a similar majority of the Senate, in which it originated, also agreed to its passage, I do therefore, by the authority of the Constitution of the United States, declare that this bill, entitled 'An Act to protect all persons in the United States in their Civil Rights, and furnish the means of their vindication,' has become a law."—Boston Journal.

DEPARTURE OF FENIANS. Within the past week quite a large number of Fenians have left their employers and homes in Cambridge, and departed from the city. Their destination is not known. A Fenian named Cole, an Englishman by birth, who has been employed by the city government, in preparing a list of the soldiers from Cambridge who served in the last war, sent in the list so far as completed yesterday, and left probably for the front.

Eastport, Me., April 11. The Fenians have hired the Town Hall for three days to hold meetings. There will be an open session to-night. Another large British steamer is off Campo Bello, with a large force of men ashore at work. A number of Fenians left on a sailing vessel last night secretly. A large steamer with the American flag and a private signal has just gone up the river to St. Andrews.

New York, April 11. A special dispatch from Washington states that the British Minister has information that the Fenians intend to strike at some point of the British Provinces, and that the President will soon issue a neutrality proclamation. The United States Marshals have been ordered to prevent any invasion.

A special dispatch from Eastport, Me., says: "Two large English war ships are here with steam up and port-holes open, and everything ready. The Americans are wild, and consider it a challenge. American veterans are joining the Fenians. Both of the English vessels are on the wrong track. Deserters from British troops are joining the Circles, and active recruiting of volunteers is going on."

April 12. Another Eastport dispatch says another English war ship—making three altogether—and a revenue cutter have arrived during the last twelve hours. Several hundred Fenians have quartered themselves at Calais and other places.

There has been a mysterious disappearance of several cannon brought here by unknown parties. Cartridges are being manufactured here.

There is tremendous excitement at St. Andrews, and volunteers are deserting, while numerous mysterious disappearances of numbers of Irishmen in frontier towns are rumored. They are supposed to have joined the Fenians.

Whole families are flying from the border.

April 16. An Eastport dispatch says nine armed Fenians captured the English revenue flag on Indian Island last night. They belonged to the crew of the Fenian privateer, from which they lowered a boat and proceeded with muffled oars to the spot, actually under the guns of the English war ship Pylades and within reach at any moment of the picket boats. The flag was surrendered without a shot being fired.

Eastport, Me., April 16. The United States steamer Winooski arrived here yesterday, for the purpose, it is supposed, of maintaining neutrality on the border. A party of five supposed Fenians went across to Indian Island on Saturday night, presented revolvers at the head of the Deputy Collector and demanded his flag (British) which he was compelled to give up.

Augusta, Me., April 16. The excitement on the Eastern frontier in regard to Fenian hostilities has not abated. Information has been received by the State authorities relating to Fenian movements, which indicate that a wide-spread alarm is prevailing in our border towns among our citizens.

THE CHOLERA AT HALIFAX. Halifax, N. S., April 9.—Capt. Grace, of the steamship England, reports that on Tuesday last a case of cholera occurred on board, since which time one hundred and sixty more cases have broken out, and fifty deaths occurred.

The England was ordered away by the Halifax authorities, but owing to the rapid spread of the disease, and her engineers being sick, it was found impossible for her to proceed. She now lies below the lighthouse. Part of her passengers will be placed on board a hospital ship, and shanties are being erected on the beach for the sick. There will be no communication with the ship.

The authorities are doing all in their power to relieve the unfortunate passengers. There are three doctors on board to look after the sick. She has twelve hundred and two passengers and one hundred crew. The passengers were principally Germans and Irish. The captain thinks the disease was brought on board by the German passengers.

THE MARSHALL HOUSE.—The proprietor of this establishment, No. 10 Marshall Street, Boston, offer to the public a house where there is no drinking, and the company is always respectable and orderly. On the ground floor there is a restaurant, kept on the European plan. The house contains fifty lodging rooms, and Mr. Wadsworth is a polite and obliging landlord, whose moderate charges are suited to the times.

ITEMS.

☞ By the raising of the sunken ships in the harbor of Sebastopol, Russia, thirty-six tons of copper, ninety tons of iron, twelve hundred cannon, four thousand balls, twelve thousand cast iron ballast pigs, one hundred chain cables and a large quantity of miscellaneous stores were recovered.

☞ Milk may be kept sweet by having it constantly in the presence of fresh water. In a milk room provided with tubs, in which the water is changed twice a day, milk will not be soured, even by lightning.

☞ The death of a Mormon bishop is thus announced in a Salt Lake paper: "He was thirty-seven years old, and leaves an interesting family of eleven wives and forty-seven small children to mourn his death."

☞ It is known that by far the largest purchases of material sold by the War department since the close of the war have been by one or the other branch of the Fenian executive. Twenty thousand army revolvers and seventeen thousand forage caps were sold to an agent of Gen. Sweeney last week.

Married.

In Chatham, Pa., April 6th, 1866, by Eld. J. W. Taylor, Mr. Z. P. ALLEN, of Chatham, and Mrs. JULIA SHORT, of Middlebury, Pa.

Notices.

Notice.

There will be a conference in Manchesser, N. H., in the Advent Hall, Merchant's Exchange, in connection with our yearly feast, to commence Thursdap evening, April 27th, and hold over the following Sabbath. The Lord's Supper will be eaten on Sunday evening, April 30th. All are invited.

S. W. BISHOP.

Notice.

What church in New Hampshire would like to have the next quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference held with them, which by vote is to commence on Thursday, previous to the first Sunday in June? Will you write me relative to it, and direct to East Boston, Mass., so that due notice may be given of the same?

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remmembered in the arrangement of the campaign.

WM. SHELDON.

Photographs.

Bro. T. E. Wood, of Portsmouth, N. H., will send the photographs of Elds. C. Goodrich and H. Munger (album size) on the receipt of 25 cents each. The large size, suitable for framing, 75 cents each.

He will also send the picture of Bro. M. B. Czechowski (album size) for 25 cents; the proceeds to be appropriated to the European mission.

☞ Address T. E. WOOD, Portsmouth, N. H., enclosing stamp to prepay postage.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N.Y.

CLINTON COLEGROVE, Bap. Minister.

Notice.

A. Flavell has issued a tract containing evidences from the types on the year and season of the year for the coming of our Lord. It will be sent free of charge to all who send their address.

Notice.

Eld. C. Goodrich has changed his residence in East Boston. He now resides at No. 69 Marion Street. Will correspondents please direct their letters to No. 69 Marion Street, East Boston, Mass?

Notice.

All preaching brethren wishing to come to Portsmouth, N. H., to preach, will please correspond with THOMAS E. WILSON.

Maine Second Advent Tract Society.

WM. H. MITCHELL,
R. R. YORK, } Executive Board.
S. K. PARTRIDGE,

I. C. WELLCOME, Treasurer and Business Agent.

It is desired that all orders for tracts and books for distribution by this Society be addressed to the Agent, I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me., who will supply them as fast as the means are furnished.

All our ministers will receive subscriptions for the Tract Fund, and they propose to raise $200, or more, for free distribution in Maine for 1866.

I. C. WELLCOME, Agent.

Notice.

Preaching brethren coming to Hoosick will please to correspond with George B. Keach, Hoosick Falls, N. Y. Box 2

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON.

J. G. Hook............Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

EAST BOSTON.

Meetings every afternoon and evening this week. Bro. Damman, Hook, and Goodrich will be there, as the Lord shall direct.

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, April 22d, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M.
WM. C. THURMAN.

Salem, Mass............Sunday, April 22d
Lawrence, Mass............Sunday, April 29th
J. COUCH.

West Gloucester............Sunday, April 22d
E. BELLOWS.

Harwinton, Ct............Sunday, April 22d
O. D. WOODRUFF.

EAST BOWDOINHAM.

R. R. York............Sunday, May 6th
H. D. Reed............Sunday, May 20th

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house, with Bro. H D Reed), Sunday, May 13th.
R. R. YORK.

Portsmouth, N. H............April 22d
C. S. EMERSON.

Winsted, Ct............April 22d
Wallingford Farms............April 29th
Winsted............May 6th
Suffico............May 13th
R. WILLIAMS.

Holden............Friday evening, April 20th and over the following Lord's day.
Will Bro. Smith meet me at the Worcester depot Friday afternoon?
ABIGAIL MUSSEY.

North Adams............Sunday, April 29th
E. MCCULLOCK.

Manchester............Friday evening, May 4th
East Canaan, N. H., (baptism)............Lord's day, May 6th
Manchester............Lord's day, May 13th
C. C. STEVENS.

Bristol............Sunday, April 22d
SETH WOODRUFF.

Lorrain, Jeff. Co., N. Y., Red school-house, Sunday, April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Lily school-house in the evening of the same day.
Glenmore, N. Y............May 3d and 4th
New London, (as Bro. Wm. Morrill may appoint), Sunday, May 6th.
Redfield Square, N. Y............May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburg, N. Y............May 22d and 23d
Copenhagen, N. Y............May 24th
C. H. WILLIAMS.

West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y............Sunday, May 6th
If any brethren wish me to hold meetings with them on Sundays of the coming summer, let them correspond with me at Dansville, N. Y., as I am at liberty to go wherever the door opens for me.
F. BURR.

Coventry, R. I., (at Central Baptist Church, between the Anthony and Washington Mills), Sunday, April 29th.
PETER NOKA.

Lynn, Mass............Sunday, April 22d
Worcester, Mass............Sunday, April 29th
At liberty through May.
H. MUNGER.

Concord N. H., (corner of Centre and Green streets), Sunday, May 13th.
Warner, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 15th and 16th.
Bradford, (Pond meeting-house), Thursday and Friday evenings, May 17th and 18th.
Canaan............Sunday, May 20th
GEO. W. BROWN.
[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request.]
H. MUNGER.

Portsmouth, N. H............Sunday, April 29th
J. G. SMITH.

Biddeford, Me............Sunday, April 22d
A. W. SIBLEY.

New Britain............Lord's day, April 29th
RANDOLPH E. LADD.

Square Pond, Ct............Sunday, April 29th
(Baptism in the afternoon)
P. S. BUTLER.

Newark, N. J............April 22d
New York, (Cooper Institute)............April 29th
Oceanport N. J............May 6th
WM. STUART.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall), Lord's day, April 29th
B. P. MANNING.

Springfield, Mass., Barnes' Block), Lord's days, May 6th and 13th, and through the week intervening.
SAMUEL CURRY.

Worcester............May 3d
Springfield............May 4th
New Haven, Ct............May 6th
Hartford, Ct............May 13th
New Haven, Ct............May 20th
New Britain, Ct............May 27th
New Haven, Ct............June 3d
Hartford, Ct............June 10th
Warehouse Point............June 17th
J. S. WHITE.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall)............May 6th
Rochester, N. H., (McDuffee District, where Bro. Smith may appoint)............Sunday, April 15th
JOSEPH PINKHAM.

Bath............April 21st over Sunday, and as long as the Lord will.
Will Bro. Booker meet me in Gardiner, Saturday, April 14th?
W. B. PERKINS.

CONCORD, N. H.

Timothy Cole............April 22d
Wm. Sutherland............April 29th
John Couch............Sunday, May 6th

Concord, (where Bro. Lord may appoint), Friday evening, April 20th.
North Sutton, (where Bro. Jesse Hagen may appoint), Saturday evening, April 21st, and Sunday 22d.
Danbury, (where the brethren may arrange), Thursday and Friday evenings, April 26th and 27th.
East Canaan............Saturday evening, April 28th and Sunday 29th.
C. H. WILLEY.
J. H. F. VARNEY.

Summersworth, Great Falls, N. H., Wednesday evening, April 18th, through the week, and over the following Lord's day.
L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Sangerville, (near Bro. Oren French's)............April 22d
Exeter, (Chamberlain school-house)............April 29th
Brewer, (as brethren may arrange)............May 6th
Levant, (Emmerson's Mills)............May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's)............May 27th
I. K. LOMBARD.

Concord, N. H., (corner of Green and Center Streets), Sundays, April 22d and 29th.
W. W. SUTHERLAND.

Pine Tree School-house, North Salem, N. Y. (or as Bro. Bailey may appoint)............Sundays, April 22d
Thomaston, Ct............Sunday, April 29th
Wrightville............evening, May 4th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Brockport............April 22d
Darien City, Genesee Co. (as Bro. Henry Sharrack may appoint), Sunday April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Baptist church, near Bro. B. C. Simonds, at 4 P. M. same day.
C. P. SWEET.

South Reading............Sunday, April 29th
C. GOODRICH.

Salem, Mass............Sunday, May 6th
L. BOUTELL.

Manchester, N. H............Sabbath April 22d
T. M. PREBLE.

Piermont, N. H., (Clark school-house)............April 22d
Orford, Quinttown, N. H............April 29th
Pomfret, Vt., (as J. Herington may appoint), May 6th
L. C. GLAZIER.

Epsom, (where Bro. Marden may appoint—for baptism) April 22d.
Melvin Village (for baptism)............April 29th
Parsonsfield, (where Bro. Moulton may appoint), May 6th.
Moultonborough............May 13th
T. W. PIPER.

Lovely Street, Ct............Sunday, April 22d
WILLIAM RIPLEY.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall), Saturday evening, April 28th, and Sunday, 29th, day and evening.
L. R. OTIS.

Champlain (Village), N. Y., A. M............April 29th
Montreal, C. E............May 6th
G. W. STETSON.

Biddeford, Me............Lord's day, April 29th
C. C. STEVENS.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall)............Sunday, April 22d
J. G. SMITH.

Plainfield Pond............April 22d
West Hoosic, (Advent Chapel)............April 29th
WM. J. BLANCHARD.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Sr. B. P. French—That poetry has been published in our paper.

Wm. Banton—You can tell when your monies are received by looking for your name in the cash receipts.

C. H. Bartlett—Expect it to be out soon.

Mrs. L. B. Miller—Credited in No. 535, to "J. B. Miller."

Mrs. L. Smith—You have paid to No. 564.

P. S. Butler—In a few months, probably.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.
To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 550. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—E. Glidden 542, H. A. Linden 562, G. T. Clough 562, W H Spencer 560, S D Daniels 557, E J Fowle 556, C. Ingleston 578, B. Botts 571, M R Miles 564, C Twombly 567, B Dodge 558, J N Hines 576, B S Foster 100, M Putnam 571, F C Hutchins 493, O Glines 602, J Whitman 595, M D Rundlett 553, J Chandler 552.

$1.25 each—G A Welch 579, J M Jenkins 575, D Hoearth 561, B F Treat 579, S B Meloon 570, J Garland 553, E A Pratt 564, J Young 598, G W Whiting 598, L T Marsh 595, E Orton 575, S Brown 575, W Griswold 576, W Pullen 577, M Shatwell 574, Wm. Justice 576, J Closson 591, P R Town 573, J Weston 400, L S Smith 565, E D Hanson 570, W R Chamberlain 576, I Ames 576, W A McNeil 576, H Sherman 576, J Whipple 571, M Bishop 579, M T Osgood 575, M A Barker 565, B O Emerson 574, Wm. Hines 568, R Devereux 572, R. S. Johnson 576, A J Glover 576, E Pinkham 587, J Chapman 576, L J Baldwin 576, A Hamilton 572, A D Smith 592, L Brooks 576, H F Pray 565, A Kingsbury 598, L S Ford 572, S P Fogg 576.

$2.00 each—E J Packard 595, H Hart 526, S Ferren 581, E Ware 608, A H Clark 601, D Smith 584, J Closson 532, S Woodcock 629, W Bassford 535, J M Dalton 582, R Lovell 574, S Cox 530.

$2.50 each—R. E. Childs 573, E Sturtevant 597, C J Towne 596, H Daniels 578, E Dunham 590, A E Pepper (from what P. O.?) E D Hitchcock 598, T Libby 601, A Chase 581, J B Davis 580, G. A. Lewis 596, A. Scripture 596, B Sperry 587, A Prouty 598, W Banton 589, O Taber 602, A J Wood 602, C C Dow 598, A A Adams 603, M O French 596, E Merrill 609, G Dennis 602, A Pierce 602, D W Noble 602, W P French 590, S. D. Berry 602, A. Persons 602, C P Hubbard 602, M O West 602, J. W. Whipple 602, M P Clark 602, J A Pierce 601, S Hanley 604, J. Sarle 577, H. Youngs 601, C. B. Tenney 583, J. Whitecar 624, E McEwen 602, J Bowerman 592, J J Kerr 605, T T Churchill 594, N Davis 598, M E Freeman 601, N Libby 596, E J Packard 541, Miss E Fulton 601, C Blanchard 601, J K Teft 601, H Chase 590, J W Merrill 601, N S Tuck (what P. O.?) P T Watson 598, W Sugden 594, M A Wood 624.

Various sums—M. A. Small $3.00, 578; H. Farmer $3.80, 536; L B Miller $6 50, 556; A Larned 63c, 555; R. Vandervort 25c, 564; G. R. Stone $12.50, 613; L. F. Bacon $3.00, 601; L. Robbins $3 00, 533; J. E. Young $1.00, 589; M Dawley 63c, 537; A Richards $3.00, 614; H Hall $3.00, 586; J H Morgan $3.00, 608; J P Darling $3.00, 572; C. M. Chapman $1.50, 575; L. M. Borden $5 50, 603; H A Gould 63c, 562; F C Upson $2.65, 604; P. Ramer $7.00, 561; H. S. Webster 87c, 558; J D Kilpatrick 25c, 571; L. Peak $1.50, 565; L. Newton $3.00, 612; D Brewster $5.00, 604; F Woodward 50c, 551; J S Bragdon $3.00, 557; J P Yates $5.00, 555; Mary S Gay 50c, 563; C Cady $3.00, 593; W Pinkham $3.00, 603; J Hackett $3.00, 550; N Foster 63c, 563; J Curtis $1.50, 566.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

Miss E Fulton $2 50, H Dowding 60c, M C McCulloch $9.00, W B Bartlett $1.00, E Glidden 30c, E Metz 50c, Mrs. O D Woodruff $1.00, S F Morse $1.00, W H Walden 35c, T Payton $1.10, M Brinkerhoff $1.50, T C Upson 35c, C L Percival 50c, A Chase $2.50, C Twombly 25c, W Sweet $5.00, S P Wright $3.80, L Johnson $1.15, E D Hanson $1.20, W. W. Bennett $1.00, S P Wright $3.80, J Pine $1.00, L Scholl $1.70, M B B—50c, R Devereux 20c, C Haley 25c, A Raymond 20c, C H Leverton 50c, J W Palmer $2.00, P S Butler $2.15, J Whitecar $1.00.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

L O Gage, H A Linden, A Servis, Wm. H Spencer, J W Taylor, D N Chadsey, L B Weaver, M B Czechowski.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Dr. L. I. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
H. K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francelia F. Curtis—149 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
Anna E. Smith—Missionary among the colored people. After May 1st, No. 491 Second Avenue, between 27th and 28th streets, New York City.
H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
J. R. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—564 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. F. Nason—North Hermon Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 57 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. I. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.

FOR SALE, BAGSTER'S BIBLE.
ENGLISH VERSION.

Interleaved Greek New Testament, half morocco, gilt. Price postpaid, $4.25. Only one copy. Address E. P. WOODWARD, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.
Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion............12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make itself?............16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God?..16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible?............24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament?............16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable?............16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles?..16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy............32 pp., 5c.
9. Moses and the Prophets............28 pp., 5c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars............28 pp., 5c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise............36 pp., 5c.
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture............32 pp., 5c.
13. Science, or Faith?............32 pp., 5c.

For the SET, (making 304 pp.)............40c. postpaid.

FOR A GREATER QUANTITY.

By mail, 800 pp............$1.00.
By express, 1000 pp............$1.00.
Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home............16 pp.
2. Life Insurance............16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost!............8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet?............8 pp.
5. About God (for children)............4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing............4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ............4 pp.
8. Now............4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent postpaid—
One set (64 pp.)............6 c
1300 pp............$1.00
1800 pp., (by express, not prepaid)............$1.00
Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE STUDENT'S LIBRARY.
IN FIVE VOLUMES (OF pp. each.)

For the set—{ By express—cloth, $4.00; paper, $2.50. By mail—cloth, $5.00; paper, $3.00. }

Single Copy—cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cts. [illegible]

I. Signs of the Times; or, a Glance at Christendom as it is. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

II. The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christian Earth. [illegible] By D. T. Taylor.

III. Thessalonica, or The Model Church; a Sketch of Primitive Christianity; and REASONS FOR MY HOPE [illegible] SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION [illegible]

IV. The Great Controversy between God and Man [illegible]

V. Future Punishment, as taught in the Scriptures [illegible]

BOOKS AND TRACTS
FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE
ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.
THE LAST-DAY-TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 9c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.
REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 15c; by mail, 20c.
THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.
REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 15c; by mail, 20c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.
SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 20c.
THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.
THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c; by mail, 15c.
THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 5c.
THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.
THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $5.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.
THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.
CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.
FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.
ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 29c.
RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings 20c.
DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.
PAULINE THEOLOGY; or The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.
GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.
IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense in Eternal Punishment. 6c; by mail, 8c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.
THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. [illegible] by mail, 4c.
SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.
REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c; by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS. A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.
THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.
CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36. Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.
DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.86.
CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.
THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.
FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.
THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 29c.
CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid; $2.00 per dozen.
THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 19c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 8c. on every three copies.
SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.
AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c; by mail, 10c.
EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 80c; by mail, 88c.
HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.
COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.
PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.
EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS of a Bruised Reed. By F. H. Chamberlain. By mail, 17c.
THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.
CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.
NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.
DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.
GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 3c. single; by mail, 5c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.
HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.
BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.
SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 30c; $3.00 per dozen. Paper 20c; $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.
CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.
RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of the "cities of the nations." By Wm. Shepherd. 10c., postpaid; 85c. a dozen.
THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Jenks. 5c; by mail, 7c.
OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the American Advent Mission Society, its Constitution, Officers, Addresses, etc. [illegible]
EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a slave for forty-three years. [illegible]
BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. [illegible] dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 2c., postpaid.
THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS, their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their History and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Sheldon. [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE BROTHERS AND SISTERS, GREETING.

Dear brothers and sisters, I bless God to-day,
Who kindly permits me to meet with you here;
Though our homes from each other lie far, far away,
'Tis sweet to exchange words of comfort and cheer.
The world calls us strangers; I count not as such,
Dear brothers and sisters in Christ Jesus our Lord;
O! my soul has been warmed to a flame by the touch
Of the Spirit ye breathe in each love written word.

O! pray without ceasing, rejoice evermore,
And in every thing let us, dear brethren, give thanks;
For soon of Life's river we'll stand on the shore,
And loud victory sing on its evergreen banks.

When wayworn and weary my heart well nigh faints,
As forward I press to life's glorious goal,
The faith once delivered, dear friends, to the saints,
How precious, how blessed, how sweet to my soul.

Time's sands are fast sinking; they're almost run out—
"My Lord, saith the servant, his coming delays";
Do ye love his appearing? O, why will ye doubt,
Till the kingdoms of earth are enshrouded in blaze?

To who plead your unfitness, your ignorance, youth,
May ye dare hide no longer the light ye receive;
Who like Jonah have shrunk from proclaiming the truth
To a world that may mock you and never believe.

God's grace shall assist you—O, take up the cross,
And boldly proclaim what you deem to be truth;
Preach our Savior's near coming, dear friend, to the loss
Of all earthly treasures, and may God help your youth.

O bid them be ready, their lamps filled with oil,
Their lights trimmed and burning when Jesus shall come,
To bring his dear children to rest from their toil,
In his glorious kingdom forever at home.

East Roxbury, Vt. A. E. McEllister.

For the World's Crisis.

LITTLE WANDERERS' HOME.

Many letters have been sent to me in regard to the above mentioned institution, and I take the method of answering the many questions asked, and to give further information for the instruction of all who are interested. As there are many writers for the Crisis, I will condense as much as possible, so that others may not be crowded out.

My introduction to this "city of brotherly love" (?) was, through the Lord, given me by Bro. H. L. Hastings. After being here awhile, heard of meetings sustained by our Advent sisters, Reeves and Helginson, among the colored population. Attended their meetings; was moved upon to cast in my lot with them. Did so, and have thus labored the greater part of the time for the last fourteen months. Have labored chiefly among the most degraded, living in all manner of places—cellars, garrets, sheds, shanties, etc. The Lord has enabled us to feed and clothe the destitute, and to visit the sick and dying. During this interval, over two hundred have professed to be converted and reclaimed. An evening school and a Sunday school have been established, and have been in successful operation for several months. This is a brief summary of our past history.

In my labors, I saw another want that must be met. In those terrible abodes of crime and poverty, bright, intelligent, and innocent children were found who could be rescued from fates worse than slavery. There were children with and without parents; some, whose parents were unfit; others, whose parents were unable to take care of them. I thought of my own mother, of my own brothers and sisters. I thought of mothers and fathers cut off from their little ones, and those little ones falling into unfriendly hands. At once my mind was made up to the task of saving those dear children who were surrounded by all that is vile and ungodly. The Lord soon gave me signal marks of his approval of my course.

At first I thought it might be best to hire a house, and afterwards buy one, if the Lord should so direct. Our missionary sisters entered into the work with me. For six weeks I sought for a house, but prejudice against color closed all doors against us. At last a house was advertised "for sale." The situation was all that could be desired, the house in excellent order, and offered to me at a very reasonable rate. I felt that it was the Lord's will that I should engage the house, and did so. The owner is a christian woman, and the Lord opened her heart to us. Since I engaged the place, other parties have been to her offering $500 more than I have to give, but the Lord has given her grace to refuse the temptation. No paper binds her. The grace of God in answer to prayer has done the work. Praise the Lord.

I was advised to consult this rich man, and that one, but preferred to consult the Lord. I had determined to trust wholly in the Lord for the money to pay. It was desirable that the money should be raised by the first of April. The work was urgent. The sooner the house was paid for, the more free we should be for our work. But my faith must be tested. The first heavy trial soon came along. A wealthy gentleman in New York, who supports some of our Advent sisters as missionaries, interested himself to obtain means for the purchase of the "Home." His wealthy friends were giving him of their money by hundreds of dollars, until at last he met one who told him that I believed not that the wicked would be eternally tormented, but that they would literally perish, while the righteous only would live forever. Deeming it a great heresy, he refunded all the money he had collected. I have seen him but twice in my life. On my second visit I had one of my mission girls with me who had just been rescued from the greatest peril. Then and there I was informed by him of the course he had pursued. You can well judge what my feelings were, as I looked at that dear girl, who is nearly white; and as I looked to him, and my heavenly Father, my soul was filled with sadness and grief. I clung to that little one all the closer, and looked to that God who judgeth righteously. At that time I thanked the Lord that he had enabled me to trust in him, and not in man. My heart was burdened, but my anchor had not been cast either in New York or in Boston among the wealthy, but it was cast amongst the promises of God's word. Though sorrowful, I could rejoice. The anchor held firm, for, by the grace of God, I did not sever or slip the cable.

The first of April came, and but $250.00 on hand that had been sent to pay for the house. Meanwhile the Lord was giving me little ones to care for, so that I knew I was in the path of duty. The clouds were dark and heavy, but the Lord did not suffer me to be tempted above that I was able to bear. On Tuesday morning a letter came with a $50.00 bill in it. At night another came, with a check for $234.00 in it, and the announcement that $100.00 more was on the way. Thus the Lord has reassured me of his favor. Another $100.00 is pledged by a Philadelphia brother, to be had when called for. Thus we have about $750.00 towards the home, and expect the Lord will soon supply the remaining $1750.00. For all this I give glory to the Lord. It is not for any merit or worth on my part.

The Lord has graciously inclined the heart of the woman who owns the house to give us further time for payment, even at a sacrifice of convenience and comfort on her part. Another token of favor from the Lord. How blessed it is to trust in the Lord.

Some want to know why we "buy a house so near the coming of Christ?" Because Jesus says, "Occupy till I come." We can, through the Lord, gather in a few souls: that will be worth many houses. I think if their children were in such peril, they might talk differently. Our missionary sisters will move into this house. Sr. Reeves will act as matron. We shall keep two or three children, and provide homes for others as the way may be opened. We shall have accommodations for forty children. Shall teach them to do housework forenoons. They will be educated, and in connection with an afternoon school for the purpose, we shall have a sewing school for girls. Our larger girls can assist much in the cares of the house, and will be brought up as missionaries for Jesus, excepting those who leave for other homes that may be provided for them. Philadelphia will furnish all the teachers need free of cost. Thus we shall manage economically, and shall expect to receive continually the blessing of the Lord. Pray for us. I hope that ere this month closes our house will be paid for. The Lord will knock away upon the hearts of his children until the house is paid for. Sister Helginson has little Mary at her home. I have Maria at my Aunt's, where I am boarding. Others are scattered about, waiting for the opening of the "Home."

I have a few more pictures of little Mary in her old garb, and in her present dress, which I sell at cost. By mail, 25 cts. for one; 46 cts. for the two. I have also pictures of Maria standing by my side, which I will forward by mail at cost, the price being 27 cents each. She is the one I had at the wealthy gentleman's house. These prices include picture, envelopes, and stamps.

I have received from friends in Lawrence $10.00; an unknown friend in Boston $5.00; a friend "no matter who" in Portland $1.00; H. D. L. of Boston $2.00; J. W. M. of Lynn $2.00; for which I thank them and the Lord.

Yours in the highways and hedges,

F. H. Burbank.

Philadelphia, Penn., S. W. Corner 7th and Spring Garden Sts.

Herald of Life, Herald of the Bridegroom, and Voice of the West, please copy.

For the World's Crisis.

PAY THY VOWS.

"Offer unto God thanksgiving, and pay thy vows unto the Most High."—Ps. 50: 14.

The fact that the Psalmist asks the people to pay their vows, pre-supposes that vows had been made, and if we come down to our own time, we find the way strewn with vows, and, alas! how few are, or have been paid. It has been often said that the way to death is marked with good resolutions, which have died at their birth, and vows that have been broken. It is better not to vow, than to vow and not pay. Notwithstanding the few that are kept, they are going up before the Lord daily and hourly. They are almost as numerous as the sand of the sea, but few of them are paid; many are forgotten, many more are neglected; and it is reserved for eternity to reveal the vast number that are reserved in store to appear against us to condemn in the day of judgment.

Reader, do you remember that dark night on the raging sea, when the waves were running mountains high, and the ship strained to the utmost, when every hope seemed gone, and you felt that the ocean's bed would soon be your resting-place, and the monsters of the deep feed upon you? then, when none was there to save, you looked away to God, and vowed that, if he would save you, you would serve him all the remainder of your life. Gradually the storm abated, the swelling waves sank to rest, the leaden sky grew clear, the presence of Christ seemed to be felt by the water, commanding it to "be still." There is a calm. Your vow is recorded. Have you kept it?

And you, young man, do you remember that time you went with the forlorn hope, and the emotion you had as you heard the thundering cannon and rattling cannister, when that old veteran was cut down by your side, and that mere boy lay bleeding at your feet; and still on, on they rushed, and you felt there was no escape from death? It was then you vowed that, if God would save you, you would serve him. The battle is over, the bellowing cannon is silent, the shrieks of the wounded grow fainter, as they cease to live, or are carried from the field, and silence reigns over the gory field. Silently from your heart is offered a prayer, mingled with thanksgiving, that you are spared; your vow is accepted, and remembered, and it will be a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death.

I see a fond mother watching by the deathbed of her darling child. Her life seems almost to depend upon that of the little one. Her heart seems breaking as her lovely one is being torn from her. The last beam of love from the fading eyes, the last kiss is given, and, as the little form lies cold in death, that fond mother, with bursting heart, vows, "My child, I will meet you in the kingdom." The grave receives it, and the mother has mourned as only mothers can. And now, though the poignancy is past, she still remembers that little one. Does she remember the vow?

And that husband, when he sees the dearest tie on earth is being severed, when the sharer of his joys, the partaker of his sorrows, the truest friend he ever knew, is leaving him, never more to hear her sweet voice in tones of love, comforting when he is disheartened, soothing when annoyed by the censures of the world; she it was who smiled when others frowned: now she is dying, and the strong man is bowed down. He vows to his God and his dying wife he will meet her in the saints' home. She believes him, and calmly passes away. He grieves for her sincerely. Long years pass, and she is not forgotten; but he who is so true to his dead wife, is he true to his God? is the vow kept sacred? is he trying to pay it?

Some of you remember that dear mother who is now sleeping. You remember her love for you, her care for you in sickness; you have heard her pray for her children when she was alone with God; you remember also that solemn time when the last hour came, as she called you to her deathbed; with a weak voice she made her last prayer for her children, soon to be motherless. You vowed to her and God that you would meet her. She died in peace, feeling sure you would keep your vow. She sleeps in hope, her work well done, ready for the coming of Jesus to raise the dead. Are you ready to meet her?

So I might go on through all the varied relations of life, and find the way marked with these broken pledges.

A bright-eyed boy is just beginning to feel the Spirit striving with him, saying in words, oh, so sweet! "Son, give me thy heart." He felt it was duty to yield to that sweet voice, but he said, No, not yet, sweet Spirit, wait till I am a man. At twenty-five the Spirit again pleads for his heart; but no, I cannot turn from the world now, when all is so fair, I would sit in the bowers of pleasure, cull the sweets that life offers for me, and when I am ten years older there will be time enough then. At thirty-five I see him again. But now he is so engaged in a whirl of business that no time is left for any thing else, and so the gentle Spirit is bidden to wait. At fifty-five he is bereft of his children, but even this fails to bring him to Christ. Soon, soon, says he, I will attend to this. There is plenty of time yet. The gentle Spirit is grieved. Silently it leaves him, for he is joined to his idols. At seventy-five I see the old man; a shade of sadness is on his wrinkled face; he is taking a view of the past. When I was a boy, says he, the Spirit strove with me. I bade it wait. So time after time I drove it from me, till to-day I am an old man, without hope, without God, and now I have to take up with the lamentation, the harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved. Thus it is all over the world. Vows are given only to be broken.

Soldier, are you willing to pay it? Tempest-tossed one, will you? And you, husband? you, mother? you, children? Shall these be paid, or will you grieve the Spirit from you, and be found at last unfit for a home with Christ, the Son of the Most High, to whom you have vowed? D. L. Clark.

Washington, D. C.

For the World's Crisis.

TO ONE SLEEPING IN JESUS.

'T was just eight long years ago, brother,
Eight sad years to this Spring-time,
That I took my pen before to call
Thee away from a sunny clime,
Whence thou hadst fled from our wintry strife,
To gather new hope to thy fading life.

Then nature had cast her snowy shroud,
The robin sang in yon tree,
And Hope sought her radiant light to shed,
Our forebodings to chase, while we
Hastened to tell thee "Spring-time has come,
Again to our lone hearts, brother, come home."

With death stamped on thy features, dear brother,
Its light illuming thine eye,
Back again to our oft stricken home
Thou camest, alas! to die.
But holy thy life, with trust all sublime,
Wentest thou to thy rest till another Spring-time.

And now in high hope exultant,
Without a foreshadowing fear,
I once again call to thee, brother,
Life's unending Spring-time is near.
The trumpet doth wait, and soon will call, Come!
List! thee, loved sleeper, list, and come home.

O, glad are our hearts now, dear brother,
And great the joy that we bear,
While watching the signs that betoken
The coming of morning so fair.
Then parents and beloved ones all will come,
In Jesus who sleep, to Eden our home.

No sorrow shall meet us there, brother,
No night shall succeed heaven's day;
But we shall rest in the mansions
Of bliss, forever and aye.
We know that the hour is now near to come,
We wait for thee, brother, wait to go home.

So. Sodus, March, 1866. Carrie H.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

Letter IV.—Improved Renderings in Luke 1: 1–55.

The following are some of the changes made in the Revised New Testament, from the readings which we find in the Common Version:

Luke 1: 3. For the rather self-laudatory declaration, "having had perfect understanding of all things, from the very first;" "having accurately traced all from," etc., the plain reading of the Greek.

Ver. 7. For the antiquated phrase, "well stricken in years;" "far advanced in years," the exact thought of the Greek. See also ver. 18.

Ver. 13. Not "thy prayer is heard," as though it had been struggling till now to gain an audience, and was just receiving attention; but "thy prayer was heard." As if the angel would say: "Years ago when you prayed for offspring, God heard your prayer, though you were not aware of it; and now he is about to bestow the desired blessing." This should encourage faith in prayer.

Ver. 21. For "the people waited for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple;" the continuative past tense, "were waiting," "were wondering;" the Hebrew ending given to the Hebrew word "Zachariah," as in the Old Testament; and the substantive phrase, corresponding with the Greek, "at his long tarrying."

Ver. 28. Not the cumbersome "Hail, thou that art highly favored," with "thou that art" in italics; but the concise energetic form of the original, "Hail, highly favored!"

Ver. 35. Not "The Holy Ghost," the word "ghost" being now used to signify "the soul of a deceased person, the soul or spirit separate from the body, an apparition" (Webster); but "The Holy Spirit," in his living, creative, vitalizing power, "will come upon thee." And instead of the irreverent "that holy thing which shall be born of thee;" the dignified and truthful expression, "the Holy One that is born shall be called the Son of God."

Ver. 54. Instead of the obsolete "He hath holpen his servant Israel," in the perfect tense; we have the plain English, in the aorist tense, with "Israel" next, like the Greek, "He helped Israel, his servant."

Vs. 54 and 55. Instead of the loose translation and inaccurate pointing, "in remembrance of his mercy; as he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever;" we have the exact expression of the Greek reproduced in the English, "to remember mercy, as he spoke to our fathers, for Abraham and for his seed for ever."

I had noted several other valuable readings in this chapter, the fruit of the mature scholarship which has been bestowed on the Revised Testament. But as my space is now filled, I must defer them to another time.

C. W. Waterhouse.

Home Influence.—We shall never know, until we are ushered into eternity, how great has been the influences which one gentle, loving spirit has exercised in a household, shedding the mild radiance of its light over all the common events of daily life, and checking the inroads of discord and sin by the simple setting forth of that love which "seeketh not her own," but which "suffereth long and is kind."

For the World's Crisis.

PEN PICTURES OF BIBLE SCENES.

NUMBER TWENTY-SIX.

REBELLION OF ABSALOM.

King David had ruled over Israel many years, and had surrounded his throne with the glory of many victories. The nations had felt the strength of his valiant arms on every side. The Philistines had been subdued, the children of Moab had fallen before his advancing power, and proud Ammon could not withstand his conquering legions. Edom was garrisoned with his troops, and the Syrian hosts had fled in dismay before his valiant captain Joab. David was in the zenith of his career, made glorious by the success of a long and eventful life; he had overthrown all his enemies, and peace reigned in Israel. Every man sat under his own vine and fig tree, and rejoiced in the abundance which the earth produced.

But in the midst of this seeming security, the throne of David, so firmly established by the success of the past, was soon to be shaken by a tumult strange and terrible. The king so great, and good, and noble, had stained his reign with an unrighteous deed, for which he must be punished. Even David had gone astray, and he must be humbled before all Israel. In the noontide of his greatness, the cloud arose that threatened to obscure his reign in the night of overthrow.

Absalom, the son of the king, was ambitious to rule over Israel; he was popular with the people, for he was renowned for the comeliness of his person, and the suavity of his manners. He stood daily by the gate, so that when the people had any matter to lay before the king, he would inquire from whence they came, and would say, "See thy matters are good and right, but there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee." Then the wily Absalom would flatter each one that came for judgment, and thus he stole the hearts of the men of Israel, and endeavored to impress them with the idea that the king had lost all interest in their affairs, while he alone cared for them, and longed to do them justice.

When Absalom had matured his plans, he obtained leave of the king to go to Hebron, ostensibly to perform a vow there, but really to usurp the throne of his father. He sent spies to all parts of the land, announcing that when the trumpet should sound they should say, "Absalom reigneth in Hebron."

There was great confusion in Jerusalem when the defection of Absalom was made known, and that there were so many willing to espouse his rebellious cause. Even David almost despaired of the kingdom, and hastily prepared to leave the city. It was with sad hearts that the king and his followers passed out of Jerusalem, through the vale of Kidron, to the wilderness beyond. The people wept as they left the scenes of home, hallowed with joys of the past, for the future seemed dark and uncertain. The days of the reigning dynasty seemed almost numbered, but they were determined to share in its success or in its downfall.

Jerusalem was soon occupied by Absalom and his followers, after the king had fled, and preparations were made to follow up the success of the rebellion, which had opened so auspiciously for the ambitious Absalom.—Ahithophel, the former friend and counsellor of David, had proved recreant to his high trust, and was strengthening the designs of Absalom with his advice; but David had sent his trusty friend Hushai to defeat the wily Ahithophel, in which purpose he succeeded so well that the traitor counsellor left the new court in deep mortification, and soon destroyed his own life in the depth of disgrace.

After David and his followers had passed over Jordan, Absalom gathered the hosts of Israel and went in pursuit. The king had brave men, long inured to war, to sustain his cause, while the usurper had the undisciplined masses, late from the scenes of husbandry, to rally around the rebellious standard. At length the contending hosts met in the forest of Ephraim, to decide the fate of power.

It was a wild place for a conflict; jagged rocks choked the passages, and gnarled oaks of ages' growth obscured the view on every hand. As the fierce battle raged, the forest devoured more than the sword slew. The carnage was terrible; twenty thousand of the followers of Absalom fell that day, or were swallowed up in the wild wood of Ephraim.

Absalom saw with consternation the discomfiture of his troops, while the banners of the king were everywhere victorious, the same that he had so often seen return to Zion waving with triumph. His glorious schemes of kingly rule faded in the darkness of overthrow, and he madly turned from the terrors of the conflict. But in trying to escape, the forest trees seemed to conspire against him, for his flowing hair caught in the thick boughs of an oak, and he remained suspended in the air while his mule passed from under him. In this woful plight he was found by Joab, the captain of David's army, and slain. There he was buried in a pit, a heap of stones thrown upon his grave as a token of disgrace. Then every man who had supported the rebel cause, fled to his tent in shame and confusion. Thus perished Absalom in the midst of his years, a prey to his mad ambition.

But, for all the sorrow that this ungrateful son had caused him, David loved Absalom. And when the news of his overthrow was made known, "the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber of the gate and wept; and as he went, thus he said: O, my son Absalom! my son, my son Absalom, would that I had died for thee! O Absalom, my son, my son!"

After this all Israel, as one man, combined to bring back the king to Jerusalem, from which their perfidious conduct had expelled him. The return of David to his capital was a new triumph; the people were bound to him more strongly than ever. From the depth of despair, David was raised again even above his former station. The waves of rebellion had beaten against him in vain; his throne was more secure than ever. But he had been taught an important lesson of the insecurity of human greatness, and that undeviating justice is the best guaranty for the maintenance of his throne.

Absalom, who had aspired to power, was left alone to occupy a traitor's grave in the lonely wood of Ephraim, and instead of a grateful lineage to perpetuate his memory, a solitary column, which he had erected in the vale of Jehosaphat, was alone left to tell of Absalom the proud Absalom of other days.

Oren F. Allen.

☞ The road to happiness lies over small stepping stones. Slight circumstances are the stumbling-blocks of families.

For the World's Crisis.

A SERMON.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—Matt. 25: 46.

We will now commence the examination of the objections which are brought against our views, by our opponents. And first, we will come to the rich man and Lazarus. We ask, is it a parable, or a literal fact? First, we look at it as a literal fact. The Savior tells us that "there was a certain rich man, which . . . fared sumptuously every day," and then tells us that "there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table; moreover the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom. Does it say he that died was carried? Certainly it does. Did it take one angel, or two, or more, to carry Lazarus to Abraham's bosom? The Savior says, "angels." How many angels do you think it would take to carry the spirit, or the immortal soul, of Lazarus from earth to heaven, where God resides? The Savior says the angels carried Lazarus to Abraham's bosom, after he was dead. But what became of the dead body of Lazarus? Does it not plainly say, that "the beggar died and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom?" Then, of course, it was the dead body of Lazarus that was carried.

Where was Abraham at the time of our Savior's first advent? In Luke 20: 37, 38, our Savior plainly shows that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were dead, and would remain dead till the resurrection; for God was not their God till they were made alive from the dead. In relation to the rich man and Lazarus, does it look like a literal fact?

What became of the rich man? Let us now look at this part of the story, and see how it reads. It was said, he "fared sumptuously every day"; but he "also died, and was buried." Did the Savior mean the whole man was buried, or only his soul was buried? Which was it, the soul or body that was buried? Perhaps some might say the body was buried, and the soul went to hell; if so, then the soul has eyes as well as the body, and a tongue that can be tormented with fire and cooled with water, and can be used to call loud enough to make Father Abraham hear; when, in fact, Father Abraham was dead and silent in the grave, and knew nothing, and could not hear till Jesus called him from death to life. But suppose we say the rich man's body died and was buried, and in hell, or hades, lifted up his eyes, or opened his eyes, and could see so far as to recognize Father Abraham in heaven, beyond the bounds of time and space; and call loud enough to make him hear; we must think that the rich man had a good strong voice, and good eyesight, to call so loud and see so far.

But how did the rich man come to life in hades, the grave, or hell? Who can answer this question? I must confess I cannot. If the story of the rich man and Lazarus was a literal fact, we must come to the following conclusion, viz., that, according to modern theology, the rich man did not die, but the soul only left the body, and was buried, and lifted up its eyes and called for Lazarus—who was declared to be dead—to come and dip his finger in water, to cool the tongue of the rich man's soul. Would it not be far better to understand this parable to portray the destruction and downfall of the rich and haughty nation of the Jews, who rejected Christ and put him to death, and had killed the prophets, and other servants of the Most High; and that God would exalt the nations of the Gentiles, who should receive Christ and his sublime gospel of eternal life through the great Redeemer? I say, kind reader, would not this look the most reasonable? We think it would.

In our next article, we will examine the subject of the thief on the cross, and the souls under the altar. B. Perham.

Vernon, Vt.

DO NOT BE TOO POSITIVE.

Do not be too sure that you are right in your opinions. Remember, if you are right in one particular, you may be wrong in others. Do not boldly contradict, but calmly express your reasons, and patiently bear with those whose understanding is less clear, or whose reason may be disturbed by passion. Rather than "It is," and "It isn't," or "You did," and "You didn't," say, "It seems to me," or "I think it is," or "If I mistake not." Avoid all rude and ill natured expressions, as calling one foolish, obstinate, or provokingly stupid. Our aim should be to advance the truth, not ourselves. It often happens that much time is wasted and temper lost in matters of no great consequence. Let us readily yield in trifles. While in all cases concerning duty and happiness we are faithful to the right, let us remember to hold the truth in meekness.

How to make Barren Trees Fruitful.—Persons unacquainted with the physiology of trees, wonder why taking a ring of bark from a tree that is barren, will make it produce fruit. This is owing to the physiology of the vegetable kingdom. The sap of plants and trees ascends in spiral vessels commonly called pores, forming in its ascent the albumen, or what we commonly call the sap of the wood, immediately under the bark, and descends in the outer bark. To stop the sap from ascending from the roots to the branches, it is necessary, then, to girdle through the sap, or white wood, to the black wood, or heart. To stop the sap from descending to the root, all that is necessary is to take the bark off, without injuring the albumen or white wood. The principle then is, if you wish to kill a tree, cut through the albumen, or white wood, and stop the sap from ascending to the branches. If you wish to make it produce fruit, take off a narrow rim of bark, which, preventing the sap from leaving the branches, retains it for the benefit of the fruit.—Ohio Farmer.

Wounds in Trees.—The best way to manage them is to trim the edges smooth with a sharp knife, and then apply grafting wax, or clay, or dissolved shellac. The latter we have used for many years, and value it highly. Get about four ounces of the gum, break it up fine, and put in a bottle, then pour in a quart of alcohol, and shake the whole vigorously together. It will be of the consistence of cream, and may then be applied with a brush. It soon hardens and forms a varnish, which protects the wound from air and moisture, and permits the bark to heal over before the wood beneath has decayed at all. Whenever a tree is pruned, all limbs larger than one's finger should be at once covered with this or some similar preparation.—Ohio Farmer.

Fowls.—Never over feed. Never feed from trough, pan, basin, or any vessel. Feed only while they will run after it, and not at all if they seem careless about it. For seven or eight days before hatching, sprinkle the eggs with cold water while the hen is off. This will prevent the frequent complaint, that the chicken was dead in the shell.

Garget.—This disease occurs most frequently after cattle are turned out to pasture in spring. It manifests itself in inflammation of the bag and in bloody milk. Among the remedies most employed are the garget root and saltpetre. But we have tried a different course for two years past from all others recommended. When a cow comes home affected with garget, we have her carefully milked, and then put her in the cow house where she can lie on a warm bed, and feed her on dry hay, and allow her to go out to pasture but a short time the next day. In this way we have cured the difficulty more rapidly than by any other method, and without the use of internal remedies or external applications at all. Even in this mode of treatment we would not, in all cases, discard the use of appropriate medicines.—Maine Farmer.

A Way to "head" Bed Bugs.—If your readers need a sure remedy for bed bugs, they can have mine, and cleanse the foulest house of these troublesome vermin without expense. They have only to wash with salt and water, filling the cracks where they frequent with salt, and you may look in vain for them. Salt seems inimical to bed bugs, and they will not trail through it. I think it preferable to all ointments, and the buyer requires no certificate as to its genuineness.—Mrs. L. C. C. Pen Yan.

Remedy against Moths.—One ounce of gum camphor, and one ounce of powdered red pepper, macerated in eight ounces of strong alcohol for several days, then strained. With this tincture the furs or cloths are sprinkled over, and then rolled up in a sheet.

To Remove Coffee Stains.—Mix the yolk of an egg with a little milk-warm water, and use it as soap on the stain. For stains which have been on the material some time, add a few drops of spirits of wine to the egg and water.

For Sore Teats in Cows.—Wash twice per day with suds from Castile soap, and then anoint with glycerine.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

COLD WATER.

You may boast of your brandy and wine as you please,
Gin, cider, and all the rest,
Cold water transcends them in all the degrees,
It is good—it is better—'tis best.
It is good to warm you when you are cold;
Good to cool you when you are hot;
It is good for the young—it is good for the old,
Whatever their outward lot.
It is better than brandy to quicken the blood;
It is better than gin for the colic;
It is better than wine for the generous mood,
Than whisky or rum for a frolic.
'Tis the best of all drinks for quenching your thirst;
'T will revive you for work or for play;
In sickness or health 'tis the best and the first—
O, try it! you'll find it will pay.

LETTER TO THE CHILDREN.

Dear Little Folks:—I stole something once. It was many years ago, when I was but seven years old. I will tell you how it was. I had not then learned to write, but I used to "make up" little childish verses, and print the words with a pencil. I suppose some of you do the same. I expect that I wasted great quantities of good paper, for I remember that I was always teasing my mother for pennies to buy it with. Then I used to pick up all the bits of rags and old paper that I could find, and our storekeeper took them just as yours takes the bits of paper currency from you. In berry time I earned money, and sometimes I was paid for doing errands, but I spent all I got for paper.

But there came a day when I was quite out of paper, when there were neither berries nor errands nor old rags to be had, and no one would give or lend me a penny. "No, no," they said, "you must not waste so much paper. Wait till you can write properly." Wait! With my head full of the prettiest fancies! I have never had any half so sweet and beautiful since. Wait! With a batch of little rhymes in my head, all ready to be printed. All my first compositions appeared in print. It isn't everybody who can say that.

As I walked, sadly enough, down the path to the street, on my way to school, I was obliged to go past my grandfather's barn. I had just got to the great door, when I heard a cackle. I knew that she had laid an egg, and was bragging over it, as hens do. I knew, too, that an egg passed for a cent at the store, and that a cent would buy a sheet of paper.

O dear! It makes me hold my breath now to think of that moment of strong temptation. I am afraid I did not wait to think much about it. I found the dark corner where Biddy had hidden her nest, and I stole her white egg and held it close in my hand as I ran down the street. It was half a mile to the school-house, and I had gone but a little way before the egg began to feel cold and heavy. It grew heavy all at once, just as I remembered that God saw me steal it. I couldn't look one of my playmates in the face, and they were glad to run on and leave me to myself. The egg grew heavier and heavier, and so did my heart. I began to be afraid of the egg, for it seemed to tell of my sin. I gave up all idea of spending it, and I climbed over a wall and hid it behind the great stone. But I couldn't forget it. All the afternoon I kept thinking, "God saw me. He knows I am a little thief." At recess the children would not play with me; they said, "Nellie is cross," and they left me to go home by myself. I was glad of that, for I had made up my mind to carry the egg back to the nest. It was quite safe, just where I had left it, and when I had it in my hand and was running homeward as fast as I could, my lost happiness began to return. The egg grew lighter and lighter, and so did my heart. When the egg was once more fairly in the nest, I was so happy that I cried. Do you wonder? I have never wanted to steal anything since. And when I have seen little fingers reach out for little things which are not their own, I wonder if they forget, as I did, that God sees us always. May God bless all the little folks, and keep them honest. —Zion's Herald.

WHAT HARM?

"I hope you will not go to the ball to-night, Thomas," said Mrs. F. to her son, a young man who had just attained his majority.

"Why, not, mother? I can't see any harm in dancing."

"There is harm in any thing, Thomas, which diverts your mind from the concerns of eternity. You have lived twenty-one years, and have not yet commenced the great work for which life was given; and is it right for you to trifle with God's patience and forbearance by spending your time in frivolous amusement?"

"Mother, you are too strict and puritanical in your notions. I wish you would become as liberal as has my former teacher, Miss P. There was a time when she seemed to think of nothing but religion, and she made me uneasy and unhappy by talking about my sins and my danger; but lately she is more lively and agreeable, and last week she was persuaded to attend a dance; and, if it is a proper amusement for her, it certainly is for me."

The mother's heart sank within her. She had hoped much from Miss P.'s influence; she believed it had once led her son very near the foot of the cross. But Miss P. had yielded to the worldly influences which surrounded her; she had let down her watch; she had returned to the gayeties which had once been solemnly renounced; and now her example was telling on the interests of this precious soul.

Thomas went to the ball; and from that hour he plunged with mad eagerness into all the forms of earthly pleasure. Sometimes he was impressed with a solemn providence; sometimes conscience would awaken under the clear light of God's truth; but he lulled it to sleep by the reflection that he was only a little more gay than Miss P. and others, who were members of the church; that, if they found religion so dull and unsatisfactory that they were obliged to resort to worldly amusement, it could not be wrong for him to do the same, and he would certainly secure religion to die by. Thus he rushed on, until without a moment's warning, at an hour when he was not aware, the last summons came. While amusing himself with a favorite horse, he received an injury which proved fatal in a few hours. Agonizing pain, followed by utter insensibility, filled up the time which he had purposed when in health to spend in securing the salvation of his soul. . . .

Follower of Christ, take heed lest your backsliding endanger not only your own soul, but become the stumbling-block over which others shall plunge to remediless woe.—Christian Banner.

JEANNETTE'S SELF-DENIAL.

The Germans tell a story about a little girl named Jeannette, who once went out to see a grand review. She found a capital place from which to see the soldiers pass, and was looking to see them march, when she noticed a poor old woman in the crowd behind her, trying very hard to get where she could see the soldiers. Jeannette pitied her, and said to herself—

"I should like to see the soldiers march, but it isn't kind in me to stay where she can't see anything. I ought to honor old age, and I will."

So Jeannette called the old woman, and placing her in the nice seat, fell back among the crowd. There she had to tiptoe, and peep, and dodge about to catch a glimpse of the splendid scene which she might have seen fully and easily if she had kept her place. Some of the people said she was a silly girl, and laughed at her. Was she sorry for giving it up? No. She was glad, because she knew she had given pleasure to a poor old woman. Thus Jeannette was rewarded in her heart for her kindness to old age.

A few minutes later, a man covered with lace elbowed his way through the crowd, and said to her,—"Little girl, will you come to her ladyship?"

Now Jeannette could not imagine who her ladyship was, but she followed the man to a scaffold within the crowd. A lady met her at the top of the stairs, and said—

"My dear child, I saw you yield your seat to the old woman. You acted nobly. Now, sit down here by me. You can see everything here."

Thus Jeannette was rewarded a second time for honoring old age by denying herself. You are glad, are you not? You admire her conduct, don't you? If you do not, I think you need to take a lesson not only from Jeannette, but also from the pure and blessed Jesus. He denied himself enough to quit his heavenly throne and come to earth to die for you. Surely you ought for his sake to deny yourself little pleasures, when by doing so you can add to the enjoyment of the poor, the feeble, the sick, or the aged. If you will, your heart will grow glad under the smile of Jesus; and if no rich lady or gentleman rewards you here, yet, in the great fatherland Jesus will say to you—

"I saw you give up your own pleasure to make another happy. I was pleased with you. Sit down on my throne."—The Quiver.

THE POOR WOMAN AND THE DUKE.

The young will learn a lesson of disinterestedness from the following true narrative:

In the hard frost of 1740, the benevolent Duke of Montague went out one morning in disguise, as was his practice, in order to distribute his bounty to his afflicted fellow creatures. He descended into one of those subterraneous dwellings, of which there are many in London, and, accosting an old woman, inquired how she lived in these hard times, and if she needed charity.

"No," she replied; "I thank God I am not in want; but, if you have any thing to bestow, there is a poor creature in the next room almost starving."

The duke visited this poor object, made her a donation, and then inquired of the old woman if any more of her neighbors were in want. She said her left hand neighbor was very poor and very honest.

"Sure," replied the duke, "you are very generous and disinterested; pray, let me know your own circumstances."

"I owe nothing," said the good woman, "and am worth thirty shillings."

"Well, but I suppose a little addition would be acceptable?"

"Yes, certainly, but I think it wrong to take what others want so much more than I do."

The duke took out five guineas, and desired her acceptance of them. The poor creature was quite overcome by this mark of generosity, and when able to express herself, exclaimed, "Oh, sir, you are not a man, but an angel!"

☞ It is easier to fall than to rise; therefore take good heed to thy way.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance..............$2.50 a year.
If not paid within six months....$3.00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address.........$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address...........$10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.
Over all business matters, write Business.
Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.
Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.
Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.
All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to
MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE.

Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM:

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS:

Payable always in advance.

[illegible]

CLUBS—Sunday Schools and neighborhoods, by taking the paper in clubs, at the above rates, [illegible]

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY COMMENCE with January, April, or July, [illegible]

POSTAGE—[illegible]

ALL COMMUNICATIONS, orders, and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 551. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 6.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL,
JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS,
S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN,
D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ADVENT CRY.

BY WM. H. SPENCER.

O'er hill and vale the cry rings out,
"Dominus noster venit!"*
Our hearts well up to swell the shout—
"Dominus noster venit!"
From Zion's walls the tidings come,
Oh! blessed Jesus, we're most home,
No more with weary steps to roam
This sinful earth.
'Mid sin and scoffers raise the cry,
"Dominus noster venit!"
I turn from spring-time's bloom and dyes,
And worldly mirth,
In sadd'ning glory greets my eyes,
Yet from my heart a cry doth rise,
"Dominus noster venit!"

I love the blessed Advent cry,—
"Dominus noster venit!"
And many weary pilgrims sigh,
"Dominus noster venit!"
Thousands of saints with watching eyes
Are waiting for Thee from the skies,
To clothe them with the promised prize,
And dwell with thee;
Where sinners no more 'll mock the cry—
"Dominus noster venit!"
Oh! gladsome day we'll greet ere long,
When we shall see
The sign † in heaven, and all wrong
Shall vanish as we swell the song,
"Dominus noster venit!"

Above the strife is heard a sigh,
"Dominus noster venit!"
The soldier listens to the cry—
"Dominus noster venit!"
He listens to the sound, as o'er
The world it bears, from shore to shore,
The Advent cry—"Christ comes once more"
To this vile earth,
To take his waiting pilgrims home,
"Dominus noster venit!"
He comes, Satan to bind in chains,
When sin and mirth
Will fade away before the strains
Of the song that rings above the plains—
"Dominus noster venit!"

Methinks I hear the angels shout—
"Dominus noster venit!"
From Zion's walls rings loudly out,
"Dominus noster venit!"
What lights flash red along the walls!
Hark! hark! the angel's trumpet calls,
To gather in fair Zion's halls,
From east and west;
Oh! loudly rings the Advent cry,
"Dominus noster venit!"
We're almost home, the pilgrims sigh,
Almost our rest,
Where the tearful eyes are all dry—
Where sounds no more the Advent cry—
"Dominus noster venit!"

* "Our Lord is coming." † Matt. 24: 30.
Rochester, N. Y.

For the World's Crisis.

WHY ARE CHRISTIANS AFFLICTED?

A SHORT SERMON ON 1 COR. 11: 30–32.

"For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world."

The context shows these judgments came on the Corinthian brethren for making the Lord's Supper a kind of heathen feast; forgetting or changing the apostles' directions. Three important points are presented in these verses. First, one prominent cause of the afflictions of christians—SIN. Second, their need of learning and heeding all religious duties—judging themselves. Third, God's end or object in chastising his people—that they "should not be condemned with the world"—lose eternal life.

The great truths revealed in these verses I believe are overlooked or forgotten far too much for the peace and zeal of christians. I have never heard a sermon on this text, nor a full one from any text on the main doctrine they convey or establish. We hear much on the plainly revealed truth that God sends trials to try the faith of his people, and keep them humble; while the equally plain truth that he sends similar afflictions to correct for disobedience, is neglected, or not made equally prominent. There is a natural cause for this practise, namely: when brethren and loved ones are afflicted, we feel reluctant to tell them a cause, even if we judge it to be for failures in their duties. And besides, we do not always know their sins, as well they may themselves if they would examine their lives by God's word.

Job and David were representative saints, and their lives and experience were written to illustrate God's plan in his providence over his people; and so of other parts of the Old Testament. This is seen by 1 Cor. 10: 11,—"Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." See also from v. 6 to 12. David did not need to pray as did Job when troubles came (Job 10: 2), "Show me wherefore thou contendest with me." Nathan had told him from God that the sword should never depart from his house. But Job was conscious that he had tried to obey God in all things; so he became our example of faith and patience when afflicted, and can not see it is directly for sin.

We will notice a few more cases out of many in the Bible which prove that God chastises his saints on earth, that they may "not be condemned with the world." Moses was not lost, but severely chastised for speaking "unadvisedly with his lips," in not being permitted to enter the land of Canaan. This is a case where loss is recorded as a severe punishment for sin; yet good men tell us in our day that loss, even of eternal life and glory, is no punishment! See Deut. 32: 50, 51. The prophet who was deceived and ate bread when God told him not to, was killed by a lion. So Uzza was slain for putting out his hand to steady the ark. This is a striking lesson to all, as Uzza's sin was in his ignorance of the law; for if he and David had read the law with care, they would have known that the ark was always to be carried on priests' shoulders, and not in a cart. Uzza and the prophet came to an untimely death on earth, but will have life eternal as David and Moses.

These few cases from the Old Testament must suffice to illustrate the principle on which God deals with his people as individuals. The same principle is shown in his providence over nations, as seen in the history of the Jews. It is seen also in his care of gospel churches, as witnessed in the letters to the seven churches of Asia, Rev. 2 and 3. The churches were broken up as a chastisement, but the members "sleep in Jesus." The same evil often comes on churches in our day for sins, and has for ages past; and it is a grievous trial to all who love God and have a warm zeal for the salvation of sinners. Weak christians also suffer much for want of organized and healthy churches. But our text has reference to God's providence over individuals, and this is what concerns us most; for the plain reason that we can more fully and easily govern our own feelings and conduct than we can those of churches and nations. Obedient christians may be saved from personal judgments, though they come on the church for errors and sins; they can protest against those errors and sins, and thus clear their own skirts.

A query may be raised by some: Does Christ deal with his people under our dispensation on the same principle he did under the old one? Our text is a proof that he does. There seems to be an apparent difference in one respect; he more commonly sends spiritual trials, withholds temporal judgments for a while, but sends "leanness into their souls" (Ps. 106: 15). These Corinthian brethren would likely not have known the cause of their sickness and death, if they had not been told by an inspired teacher; and if we had such teachers in our day, we should often hear the same sad teaching to afflicted individuals and families; and such declarations as Nathan made to David—the sword shall be felt.

But we will name a few cases of God's providence as recorded in the New Testament, and so applicable to us. As false and deceived professors were not as common in days of persecution as now, Ananias was a case similar to this of the Corinthians. See Acts 5: 1–11. He and his wife did no worse than Peter had done—lied unto God. And we are told that both were deceived by Satan. Peter's life was spared on his "weeping bitterly," and because God had a great work for him to do; also to show the riches of God's grace and mercy, that others might hope for pardon when overtaken in faults. We have no more reason to believe that Ananias will be lost than these Corinthians; both being chastened that they might "not be condemned with the world."

A similar lesson is taught us in 1 Cor. 3: 12–15. Building with hay, wood, stubble, and suffering loss, may apply to this life or the future. The Bible is plain that there will be degrees of glory in God's kingdom; but as judgments in this life are often called "fire," so being saved "so as by fire" may mean such woes as came on those Corinthians. The fiery trials to try faith, seem to have been mostly sent in days of physical persecution, and the reward is to be in the eternal kingdom. Special blessings are to be given to those who come out of great persecution. But not so with those who are chastened for sin; they must "suffer loss" it would seem both in this and the future life.

When afflicted by the conduct of wicked men, we too often forget what David learned and said, "Deliver my soul from the wicked, which are thy sword; from men which are thy hand."—Ps. 17: 13, 14. "Affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground."—Job 5: 6. "Even the very hairs of your head are all numbered." Luke 12: 7. Wicked beings afflicted David and Israel by God's permission, or his withholding his restraining power, which was needful to prevent their acting out natural evil propensities,—just as the lions were restrained from hurting Daniel, and that restraint removed when his enemies appeared. God's government has not changed; so when bad men injure us we had better inquire and see if we have not reason to use David's language about Shimei,—"So let him curse, because the Lord hath said unto him, Curse David." 2 Sam. 16: 10.

Some say it is the devil that afflicts and kills. But the Bible tells us God smote Uzza (1 Chron. 13: 10); and the Lord sent the lion to kill the prophet (1 Kings 13: 26), and the same is so often told, that we should be cautious how we represent God's word and government over our sin-cursed world. If Satan afflicts, he goes just as far as permitted, as in the case of Job. It is his work to lead into sin, but God's to chasten whom he loves; and he takes his own mysterious way—by disease, by the elements, by bad men, or by Satan. Our wisdom is to acknowledge and fear his hand. Of course punishments do not atone for sin, nor satisfy justice, as restorationists hold. The blood of Christ alone effects this; and our text and subject is designed only to show God's dealings with those who come to Christ for life; yet it is important to such, as many, very many have learned by sad experience that Jer. 2: 19 tells a great truth—"Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee: know therefore and see that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee."

Remarks. 1st. The most frequent sins in our day, which bring God's chastisements, are sins of omission, caused by forgetting God's word, or neglecting to study it so as to understand it. These Corinthians forgot, or wrongly interpreted Paul's directions as to the Lord's Supper. Uzza and David had not the word hid in the heart, that they might not sin against God (Ps. 119: 11). Not heeding God's word, some coveted after money, "and pierced themselves through with many sorrows" (1 Tim. 6: 10). "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse," is as positive a command as "Thou shalt not steal"; yet how much oftener disregarded! See Mal. 3: 10. For omission of duty in this point "riches often take wings and fly away." It is God "that giveth thee power to get wealth."—Deut. 8: 18. Omitting to study God's word sufficiently on the final penalty of the law, is bringing gloom on most of the christian world, and so is a sinful omission of duty, especially in teachers, and they pierce "themselves (and others) through with many sorrows." All will admit, when calmly asked, that the doctrine of endless misery shocks them, and causes painful reflections. The fact is, God has stamped feelings in all hearts which must be tortured by a belief in this doctrine; and more deep sorrow is caused by it than we are aware of, or can know. All stand "in jeopardy every hour"; if not for themselves, for unconverted friends, and millions of sinners around them. Thanks be to God for giving wisdom to some to escape this chastisement, by ceasing to sin in neglecting the Bible on this subject, and thus learning that "the wages of sin is death"; that "yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be"; they will "cease from troubling" (God's universe), and the weary be at rest. Amen. It is sin, then, not to grow in knowledge" while we have the means to do so.

2nd. "Be sure your sin will find you out." Num. 32: 23. "For God shall bring every work into judgment."—Eccl. 12: 14. This applies to this life, as well as the future.

3d. As 1 John 1: 8–10 tells a clear truth: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves." Our text affords one ground of hope and comfort: being afflicted, whether to try faith, or for sin, is not evidence that we shall lose eternal life, but the reverse. See the 73d Psalm,—The wicked are not in trouble as other men; the ungodly prosper in the world, etc.

4th. When afflicted, we should remember Job's prayer—"Show me wherefore thou contendest with me," and re-examine our lives.

Buffalo, N. Y. J. BLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

WHY ARE YOU AN UNBELIEVER?

"LET US REASON TOGETHER."

A. Good morning, friend B. I shall be pleased to hear your answer to the question I propounded, namely,— Why are you an unbeliever in the Holy Scriptures? and, as we have some leisure, it will do us no harm to "reason together."

B. I will frankly give you some of my reasons. In the first place, the Scriptures are full of inconsistencies. They represent God to be a God of love; and yet his dealings with man are of the most tyrannical character, and fall infinitely below the commonest principles of justice known between man and man.

A. In what way? Please explain.

B. I refer more particularly to the future and eternal torment of the wicked, in flames of fire and brimstone. I have read with horror the accounts of the Inquisition, and have heard them branded as fiendish by all classes of men; and yet, considering their brief duration, how mild, in comparison with what a professed God of love will inflict on those who are simply unbelievers.

A. Are you sure that the Bible teaches such a doctrine?

B. I have heard it taught in the churches from my boyhood.

A. Are you sure that THEY have taught what the BIBLE teaches?

B. Whom should we expect to be the exponents of the Bible, if not the professed ministers thereof?

A. But did you never consider that they might have been biassed by human creeds, and, by the force of habit and education, may have put an unwarrantable construction upon the word of God.

B. If such indeed be the case, to whom should we go to learn the truth?

A. Go to the Bible, and read it for yourself.

B. But I have read it, or at least a great portion of it, and its teachings seem to me to correspond with the expositions of the preachers.

A. But perhaps you did not read it aright.

B. How should it be read?

A. I can answer that question, perhaps, better by an illustration. Suppose you were reading in a history of the battles fought during our late war, of cannons employed in the contest, of flags shot down, and of the dead left on the field, would you not take it for granted that cannon meant cannon, and the flags, flags; and the dead men, dead men? I think you would; and you would believe that the record meant just what it said.

B. I certainly should; but then the Bible is mystical, and full of figures and symbols.

A. And are not figures and symbols employed in history, and in all other writings? Yet you know how to discriminate between a plain statement and a figure of speech; and I can assure you, if you will read the Bible carefully, and with a sincere desire to learn what its teaching are, that you will find it a very plain book.

B. Do you mean to say that a person can understand all the Bible?

A. I mean to say that every thing in it concerning man's present condition and happiness, and future destiny, is stated in the plainest and most explicit terms.

B. Then the figures and symbols are superfluous?

A. Not at all. God has dealings with nations, as well as individuals; and I think you will find that, in most instances where symbolic language is employed, it has reference to nations and powers, or general events; and, in some instances, it is used to illustrate truths which have elsewhere been plainly taught.

B. I confess that if these things are so, much of its mystery is removed. But you have not told me what the Bible teaches in reference to man's future destiny.

A. I prefer that you should read it for yourself, and not trust to any human opinion. But I may refer you to the thirty-seventh Psalm, in connection with the teachings of our Savior and his apostles.

B. I conclude, then, from your reasoning, that it is not expected of us to believe what we cannot understand.

A. No; Christian faith believes what God says, because he says it, whether we understand it or not. The child, who hears his father tell of the wonders of the planetary bodies and the revolutions of the earth on its axis and around the sun, cannot comprehend it; yet he believes it, because his father says it. So with Christian faith. It receives with implicit and childlike trust the statements of Revelation, however dark and inscrutable they may appear now, and waits for further light to confirm its confidence in the divine testimony. No scholar becomes such at once. To the utterly ignorant child, the combination of letters is a perfect mystery; but when the alphabet is learned, the succeeding lessons are comparatively easy.

B. You say, then, that a person must learn how to read the Bible aright?

A. There are truths in the Bible which concern you personally; they will be as plain to you as the sunlight. There are other truths which concern the saints of God exclusively; these can only be spiritually discerned.

B. Would it not have been better had it come fully within the comprehension of all men?

A. I think that the plan of Divine Revelation is perfectly adapted to the condition of the human family. The child must learn to spell before it can read. He who would obtain a trade must first become a student; and to obtain a knowledge of any branch of art, science, or philosophy, the conditions of our nature are such as to make it absolutely necessary that we should first learn the rudiments thereof. Is it any less in accordance with reason that we should be required to follow the same gradations, in learning the great and important lessons of eternity—the knowledge of how to attain unto eternal life?

B. Your argument seems conclusive on that point, I will admit; but, after all, may not the Bible be a well concocted system of human philosophy?

A. Read the predictions of Jesus concerning the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem. You will find it recorded in the first part of the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew. Then find, in history, the record of their fulfillment, and you will find that not one stone was left upon another. Then, again, read the conclusion of the twenty-fourth with the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew, the predictions of Christ concerning his second advent, and of the signs which should precede that event. You may read of the fulfillment of most of them,—the persecutions and tribulation of the saints,—in the history of the church during the dark ages. The dark day and night, and the falling stars, are all upon the records of history; and of the last mentioned sign, there are thousands of living witnesses. Read, and you will find that two signs only remain to be fulfilled.

B. I have read the historical account of most of these things, but was not aware that they were matters of special prophecy.

A. Convince yourself, by a careful study of the record. Compare the present condition and character of the world with the prophecies of Jesus and his apostles concerning the last days. "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of the many shall wax cold." Matt. 24: 12. This expresses it in general terms; the details you* will find in 2 Timothy 3: 1–5, among which are covetousness, boasting, pride, blasphemy, disobedience to parents, traitors, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having the form and denying the power of godliness. Now compare these with your own observations, and with the records of the daily papers, not only in our own land, but in all parts of the world.

B. But we are taught by the churches that Christianity is progressing and spreading, and destined finally to embrace all the world.

A. Do the facts in the case justify such a belief? The Scriptures certainly do not. The Author of Christianity has declared most emphatically that the way to eternal life is a narrow way, and but "few" walk therein, while the way to destruction is broad, and the "many" walk therein. I know that there is a promise that "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea;" but that cannot possibly be while a foe to righteousness remaineth. When He comes whose right it is to reign, He will destroy the last enemy. Then shall the saints possess the kingdom under the whole heaven. Dan. 7: 27.

B. I thought that the saints were to possess a kingdom in the heavens.

A. The Bible does not teach so. David was a saint, a man after God's own heart, and it is expressly declared of him, in Acts 2: 34, "David is not ascended into the heavens."

B. According to your explanations, then, the teachings of the Bible, on some points at least, are quite different from that of the churches.

A. Examine for yourself, and then decide; but do not reject it because its teachings have been perverted, and its truths explained away, or mystified to suit the decrees of councils, the dogmas of men, or the creeds of churches.

B. I confess that I have hitherto rejected it more in consequence of what I have heard, than of what I have seen of it.

A. I trust that will no longer be the case with you, but that you will not only hear, but read also, and compare what you have heard with what you read.

B. You have, at least, so far interested me in the subject that I will promise to investigate for myself.

A. If you will do so, carefully and prayerfully, you will never have cause to regret it. You will find that God is indeed a God of love, and that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6: 23. G. THOMSON.

For the World's Crisis.

VIOLETS.

I wandered out one cheerless night,
Oppressed with care, weighed down with grief;
There seemed no ray of living light
To bring my weary soul relief.

I thought the misty twilight fell
In darker shades than e'er before—
Fate o'er the world had cast its spell,
And shut, for me, Hope's shining door.

A sudden turn, and all the way
Was bright with violets sweet and fair;
Ankle deep on the banks they lay,
And their soft perfume filled the air.

The tears gushed forth, my heart grew glad;
A scene of beauty met my view;
How could a human soul be sad
Where violets sparkled in the dew?

"Forgive," I cried, "my deep unrest,
The weary murmurs of my soul;
The violets' Painter knoweth best,
And will my destinies control."

Long years have passed their toilful way,
But the picture on my brain was set;
I shut my eyes at close of day,
And see the banks of violets yet.

V. W. OSGOOD.

For the World's Crisis.

EVERLASTING TORMENT NOT ENDLESS.

The offer of forgiveness on condition of repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, is glad tidings to a perishing world; because life and immortality are thereby brought to light, as attainable by those who must otherwise perish forever. This life is freely offered to all; for we read that "the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."—Rev. 22: 17. Those who fail to partake of the water of life will, of course, "utterly perish." A contrary opinion however prevails, predicated on the assumption that "everlasting destruction," which is the doom of the finally impenitent, means everlasting preservation in a very miserable condition. And although the Scriptures announce the pleasing intelligence that the devil is to be destroyed, yet we are gravely informed, by self-proclaimed orthodoxy, that this means that he is to be kept alive in unending torment. This is thought to be sustained by Rev. 20: 10, where it is said that the devil "shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever." This leads us to examine the last clause of this sentence, which, in the Greek, is eis tous aionas ton aionon; the plural form of aion being repeated twice in this instance.

Aion, rendered ever, is said by critics to be derived "from aei, always, and on, the present participle of the verb eimi, to be." Aei is sometimes used to denote the yearly recurrence of a thing, as in Mark 15: 8, where Pilate is requested to release a prisoner at the Passover, as he "ever (aei) had done." Aei, then, would seem to denote successive cycles of time; and this being joined to on, would seem to signify a continuation thereof, just as long as the thing to which it is applied endures. Aion and age correspond in some respects, both being capable of expressing limited and unlimited duration. The age of the universe is unending; while the age of an infant may be but of a few minutes' duration. The adjective form of aion is aionios, and is generally translated everlasting; which may mean finite, or infinite duration, according as it is used. The continual duration of a thing throughout a definite, or an indefinite period, is everlasting; which is the same in meaning as forever. When a man wills his property to a person and his heirs forever; the forever, in this case, lasts no longer than the life-time of the heirs; and the will is an everlasting will, because it lasts as long as the forever does.

"The words everlasting and eternal are to be understood by the nature of the objects to which they are applied; as, for example, when it is said that a disease cleaves to a man forever, it obviously means to the end of his life. So an everlasting priesthood means that it shall continue to the end of the dispensation. Everlasting hills, or mountains, means that they will continue till the end of the world. The terms are applied to the longest period to which the nature of the object will admit. The existence of the object being limited, so, of necessity, in these cases, the words have a limited meaning."—Cottage Bible, on Matt. 25: 46.

A limited use of the word "forever" is found in 2 Kings 5: 27, where Elisha said to Gehazi, "The leprosy of Naaman shall cleave to thee, and unto thy seed forever" (Sep. eis ton aiona). This same Greek phrase is used in the New Testament, to denote the age of the world (1 Cor. 8: 13; Eph. 2: 2); the same phrase that is rendered forever in other places. And this forever is spoken of as coming to an end.—1 Cor. 10: 11; Matt. 24: 3; 28: 20; 13: 39, 40, 49. And the aion of the world is spoken of in the plural; as, ton aionon. Eph. 3: 21; 1 Cor. 10: 11. These, with other examples that might be named, are sufficient to show that as the aion, or forever of a person's existence cannot be multiplied. Its use in the plural must signify the smaller cycles of time which constitute his forever. And the more limited the existence, the more limited the forever, and the cycles which compose it. That the devil's forever is limited, is proved by the testimony of Paul; who, speaking of Christ, says, "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil."—Heb. 2: 14.

If, then, the devil is to be destroyed, his forever and ever—eis tous aionas ton aionon—will end with his destruction. To say that it will take to all eternity to accomplish this, is equivalent to saying that he will never be destroyed; which would make Christ fail to accomplish his purpose. Again, we read—"He that committeth sin, is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." 1 John 3: 8. And, we read again, "All the wicked will God destroy." If this is so, then the devil and all his subjects must cease to exist, and then sin also will cease; so that the works of the devil will thereby be destroyed, but not otherwise. Sin and death are the works of the devil, and if he and his subjects were to exist to all eternity, his works would prove indestructible. But with his destruction, his work of sin and death will cease; because there will be no more sinners to sin, nor no more deaths on account of sin. Death, the last enemy, will then have been destroyed. And then the prayer of the Psalmist, "O let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end," will be answered. And this involves the end of the everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels; the smoke of whose torment is to ascend up "for ever and ever," until they are utterly consumed.

But because the wicked are to come to so dreadful an end, in an everlasting fire, we cannot conclude from this that the everlasting life of the righteous is to end also; for they are to put on immortality, which precludes the possibility of any end to their everlasting life. Their aionian life is that which pertains to unlimited duration, because it is immortal; while the life of the wicked being mortal, their forever is limited, and ends in their destruction by the second death, after their resurrection from the first death. If, then, there is to be an end to the wicked, as the Scriptures teach, in so many words, why should any one labor to prove that they have no end? Is there end endless? How, then, could Malachi say, "Behold, the day cometh which shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Ch. 4: 1. Will not a fire kindled by the Almighty for the express purpose of burning them up be of so intense a nature as to be utterly unquenchable, so that none can remain therein without being "burnt up"? "The day that cometh will burn them up"; hence it will not take to all eternity to accomplish it. That day, then, will end their forever, when future immortality shall have begun.

WILLIAM HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis

PREPARE FOR THE CONFLICT.

Though an army were stationed to guard a city, or nation, from the invasion of a mighty foe, yet, if the enemy showed no signs of an open warfare, but merely sent out scouting parties occasionally, the army, although harassed by skirmishes and in continual danger would in time grow careless. The soldiers would be likely to wander away from the camp, or neglect to hold themselves in readiness for an engagement at a moment's notice. But let the enemy make an advance, or begin to prepare for a general attack, and every good soldier would gather up his arms, examine his firelock, and be at his post. The stragglers would gather into camp, and every man would be awake and watchful.

Two armies might carry on a guerilla warfare for years; but unless they came into open battle, there would be no decisive victory on either side. Satan has been carrying on a guerilla warfare for a long time. He has snatched his victims here and there. The church has known that he lay in wait to deceive and destroy. Still, while he proclaimed no open war, she lived at her ease. Her soldiers wandered from the camp, beyond the sound of the Captain's call, and her sentinels slept at their post. But now the devil is marshalling his forces for an open conflict. His lease of the governments of this world has nearly run out, and he wants his claim renewed; or, rather, he thinks to retain possession by force of arms. He finds he can gain no decisive victory by the dodging, guerilla form of warfare, so in his desperation he has proclaimed open war—war to the knife.

There are two who claim the possession and government of this world. One by right of purchase as well as inheritance. The other claims it merely because he has had dominion so long. He is an usurper, and his claim is worthless; but he has many servants—millions who are ready to follow in his train and fight in his cause. He numbers his army—infuses into them his own diabolical spirit—views scornfully the little company who refuse to submit to his government, and in his presumption he is about to make an assault upon the camp of the saints, and bid defiance to the King of kings. There is a struggle coming that will decide which of the two claimants shall possess the kingdom. Will decide, did I say? No, that was decided long ago; but the coming struggle will end in the crowning of one, and the overthrow of the other.

Come, all who have enlisted under the banner of the rightful Heir to King David's throne, to arms! TO ARMS! Have any wandered away from the camp? Return quickly! The roll is being called. Let every one be at his post. The enemy's rangers are out on every side; all stragglers and deserters will fall an easy prey. Have they laid down their weapons? Gird on your armor at once! The enemy is advancing, the contest is at hand. Already we can hear their shouts of defiance, their horrid blasphemies, and fierce imprecations of wrath, and see their weapons of war, and their scowls of deadly hate.

'A battle is coming between the two kingdoms,
The armies are gathering round;
The pure testimony and vile persecutions
Will come to close contest ere long.
Then gird on your armor, ye saints of the Lord,
And He will direct you by his holy word,
The pure testimony will cut like a sword.'

Fear not, little flock! If you have on the whole armor, you are invincible. Our weapons are not carnal, but they are mighty. What if Satan has got legions of demons for recruiting officers, who have deceived and enlisted the fallen children of Adam in his service until his army is innumerable? They will be as reeds before the sharp sword which proceedeth out of the mouth of him on whose vesture is written, "King of kings and Lord of lords." It is not numbers which will gain the victory but righteousness and truth. God's promises are sure. The little flock with their all-conquering Leader, will prevail and possess the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world.

Let me belong to that little company whose God is the Lord. If we are his children, we need not fear the wrath of men or devils. We shall come off conquerors at last. True, we may fall in the contest, but if we fall we shall rise; if we die, we shall live again; live to enjoy eternally the society of the blessed, and the presence of our beloved elder Brother; live to share in the glory of the new earth; live to shout victory when the devil and all his host are shrouded in eternal night. Then let us endure until the end. We will make no compromise with Satan's mock government and confederacy. Trouble may come; tribulation may come; but He who hath bought us with his blood knows how to deliver us in the day of wrath and perdition of ungodly men.

B. P. FRENCH.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER V.—Improved Renderings in Luke 1: 63–80.

In my last I noticed some twelve improved readings of the Revised New Testament, in Luke 1: 1–55. Let us now notice improvements in the remainder of the chapter.

Ver. 63. Instead of "he asked for a table to lay his paper on while he was writing; "asking for a writing-tablet, he wrote," etc. In the wax, or other substance, with which this "writing-tablet" was coated, "he wrote," with his sharp-pointed, bodkin-like instrument, called a stylus, "His name is John." For the awkward "they marvelled all;" "they all wondered."

Ver. 66. For the rendering, "What manner of child shall this be?" we find the exact and accurate expression of the Greek, "What then will this child be?" The wonder was not, "What kind of a child will this be?" but, "What superior, wonderful man will he become?"

Ver. 68. Instead of "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people;" the blessing is for a specified thing, expressed in the beautiful phraseology of the original, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, that he visited and wrought redemption for his people.

Ver. 70. For the cumbersome and diffuse "which have been since the world began;" we find a curt and faithful representation of the Greek, in the simple words, "of old;" as in Gen. 6: 4, and Ps. 25: 6, Common Version.

Ver. 71. For the loose rendering, "That we should be saved from our enemies;" we find the exact expression of the Greek, "salvation from our enemies."

Ver. 72. Instead of the interpolated "To perform the mercy promised to our fathers;" we find the Hebraistic Greek of the original faithfully rendered into English in these brief and expressive words: "to show mercy to our fathers.

Ver. 77. Instead of "To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins;" we find the object brought to view and expressed as in the original text, "in order to give knowledge of salvation to his people in remission of their sins."

Ver. 80. For the obsolete "waxed strong in spirit;" "became strong in spirit." And for the antiquated "his shewing unto Israel;" we find the beautiful, Scriptural expression, "his manifestation to Israel.

These twenty-four instances, which I have noticed, are specimens of improvements in the translation in one chapter only, at the commencement of the Gospel by Luke; and they may serve to give a faint idea of the thorough manner in which this work has been done, and the immense labor and expense that the revision of the entire New Testament has cost. Surely, then, we should not withhold from it a just appreciation.

C. W. WATERHOUSE.

☞ Some men who know that they are great, are so very haughty withal and insufferable, that their acquaintances discover their greatness only by the tax of humility, which they are obliged to pay as the price of their friendship. Such characters are as tiresome and disgusting in the journey of life, as rugged roads are to the weary traveler, which he discovers to be turnpikes only by the tolls.

☞ The persons who live on the failings of their neighbors, will never die of starvation.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 551. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 6.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL,
JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS,
S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN,
D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ADVENT CRY.

BY WM. H. SPENCER.

O'er hill and vale the cry rings out,
"Dominus noster venet!" *
Our hearts well up to swell the shout—
"Dominus noster venet!"
From Zion's walls the tidings come,
Oh! blessed Jesus, we're most home,
No more with weary steps to roam
This sinful earth.
'Mid sin and scoffers raise the cry,
"Dominus noster venet!"
I turn from spring-time's bloom and dyes,
And worldly mirth,
In sadd'ning glory greets my eyes,
Yet from my heart a cry doth rise,
"Dominus noster venet!"

I love the blessed Advent cry,—
"Dominus noster venet!"
And many weary pilgrims sigh,
"Dominus noster venet!"
Thousands of saints with watching eyes
Are waiting for Thee from the skies,
To clothe them with the promised prize,
And dwell with thee;
Where sinners no more'll mock the cry—
"Dominus noster venet!"
Oh! gladsome day we'll greet ere long,
When we shall see
The sign † in heaven, and all wrong
Shall vanish as we swell the song,
"Dominus noster venet!"

Above the strife is heard a sigh,
"Dominus noster venet!"
The soldier listens to the cry—
"Dominus noster venet!"
He listens to the sound, as o'er
The world it bears, from shore to shore,
The Advent cry—"Christ comes once more"
To this vile earth,
To take his waiting pilgrims home,
"Dominus noster venet!"
He comes, Satan to bind in chains,
When sin and mirth
Will fade away before the strains
Of the song that rings above the plains—
"Dominus noster venet!"

Methinks I hear the angels shout—
"Dominus noster venet!"
From Zion's walls rings loudly out,
"Dominus noster venet!"
What lights flash red along the walls!
Hark! hark! the angel's trumpet calls,
To gather in fair Zion's halls,
From east and west;
Oh! loudly rings the Advent cry,
"Dominus noster venet!"
We're almost home, the pilgrims sigh,
Almost our rest,
Where the tearful eyes are all dry—
Where sounds no more the Advent cry—
"Dominus noster venet!"

* "Our Lord is coming." † Matt. 24. 30.

Rochester, N. Y.

For the World's Crisis.

WHY ARE CHRISTIANS AFFLICTED?

A SHORT SERMON ON 1 COR. 11: 30–32.

"For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world."

The context shows these judgments came on the Corinthian brethren for making the Lord's Supper a kind of heathen feast; forgetting or changing the apostles' directions. Three important points are presented in these verses. First, one prominent cause of the afflictions of christians—sin. Second, their need of learning and heeding all religious duties—judging themselves. Third, God's end or object in chastising his people—that they "should not be condemned with the world"—lose eternal life.

The great truths revealed in these verses I believe are overlooked or forgotten far too much for the peace and zeal of christians. I have never heard a sermon on this text, nor a full one from any text on the main doctrine they convey or establish. We hear much on the plainly revealed truth that God sends trials to try the faith of his people, and keep them humble; while the equally plain truth that he sends similar afflictions to correct for disobedience, is neglected, or not made equally prominent. There is a natural cause for this practise, namely: when brethren and loved ones are afflicted, we feel reluctant to tell them a cause, even if we judge it to be for failures in their duties. And besides, we do not always know their sins, as well they may themselves if they would examine their lives by God's word.

Job and David were representative saints, and their lives and experience were written to illustrate God's plan in his providence over his people; and so of other parts of the Old Testament. This is seen by 1 Cor. 10: 11,—"Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." See also from v. 6 to 12. David did not need to pray as did Job when troubles came (Job 10: 2), "Show me wherefore thou contendest with me." Nathan had told him from God that the sword should never depart from his house. But Job was conscious that he had tried to obey God in all things; so he became our example of faith and patience when afflicted, and can not see it is directly for sin.

We will notice a few more cases out of many in the Bible which prove that God chastises his saints on earth, that they may "not be condemned with the world." Moses was not lost, but severely chastised for speaking "unadvisedly with his lips," in not being permitted to enter the land of Canaan. This is a case where loss is recorded as a severe punishment for sin; yet good men tell us in our day that loss, even of eternal life and glory, is no punishment! See Deut. 32: 50, 51. The prophet who was deceived and ate bread when God told him not to, was killed by a lion. So Uzza was slain for putting out his hand to steady the ark. This is a striking lesson to all, as Uzza's sin was in his ignorance of the law; for if he and David had read the law with care, they would have known that the ark was always to be carried on priests' shoulders, and not in a cart. Uzza and the prophet came to an untimely death on earth, but will have life eternal as David and Moses.

These few cases from the Old Testament must suffice to illustrate the principle on which God deals with his people as individuals. The same principle is shown in his providence over nations, as seen in the history of the Jews. It is seen also in his care of gospel churches, as witnessed in the letters to the seven churches of Asia, Rev. 2 and 3. The churches were broken up as a chastisement, but the members "sleep in Jesus." The same evil often comes on churches in our day for sins, and has for ages past; and it is a grievous trial to all who love God and have a warm zeal for the salvation of sinners. Weak christians also suffer much for want of organized and healthy churches. But our text has reference to God's providence over individuals, and this is what concerns us most; for the plain reason that we can more fully and easily govern our own feelings and conduct than we can those of churches and nations. Obedient christians may be saved from personal judgments, though they come on the church for errors and sins; they can protest against those errors and sins, and thus clear their own skirts.

A query may be raised by some: Does Christ deal with his people under our dispensation on the same principle he did under the old one? Our text is a proof that he does. There seems to be an apparent difference in one respect; he more commonly sends spiritual trials, withholds temporal judgments for a while, but sends "leanness into their souls" (Ps. 106: 15). These Corinthian brethren would likely not have known the cause of their sickness and death, if they had not been told by an inspired teacher; and if we had such teachers in our day, we should often hear the same sad teaching to afflicted individuals and families; and such declarations as Nathan made to David—the sword shall be felt.

But we will name a few cases of God's providence as recorded in the New Testament, and so applicable to us. As false and deceived professors were not as common in days of persecution as now, Ananias was a case similar to this of the Corinthians. See Acts 5: 1–11. He and his wife did no worse than Peter had done—lied unto God. And we are told that both were deceived by Satan. Peter's life was spared on his "weeping bitterly," and because God had a great work for him to do; also to show the riches of God's grace and mercy, that others might hope for pardon when overtaken in faults. We have no more reason to believe that Ananias will be lost than these Corinthians; both being chastened that they might "not be condemned with the world."

A similar lesson is taught us in 1 Cor. 3: 12–15. Building with hay, wood, stubble, and suffering loss, may apply to this life or the future. The Bible is plain that there will be degrees of glory in God's kingdom; but as judgments in this life are often called "fire," so being saved "so as by fire" may mean such woes as came on those Corinthians. The fiery trials to try faith, seem to have been mostly sent in days of physical persecution, and the reward is to be in the eternal kingdom. Special blessings are to be given to those who come out of great persecution. But not so with those who are chastened for sin; they must "suffer loss" it would seem both in this and the future life.

When afflicted by the conduct of wicked men, we too often forget what David learned and said, "Deliver my soul from the wicked, which are thy sword; from men which are thy hand."—Ps. 17: 13, 14. "Affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground."—Job 5: 6. "Even the very hairs of your head are all numbered." Luke 12: 7. Wicked beings afflicted David and Israel by God's permission, or his withholding his restraining power, which was needful to prevent their acting out natural evil propensities,—just as the lions were restrained from hurting Daniel, and that restraint removed when his enemies appeared. God's government has not changed; so when bad men injure us we had better inquire and see if we have not reason to use David's language about Shimei,—"So let him curse, because the Lord hath said unto him, Curse David." 2 Sam. 16: 10.

Some say it is the devil that afflicts and kills. But the Bible tells us God smote Uzza (1 Chron. 13: 10); and the Lord sent the lion to kill the prophet (1 Kings 13: 26), and the same is so often told, that we should be cautious how we represent God's word and government over our sin-cursed world. If Satan afflicts, he goes just as far as permitted, as in the case of Job. It is his work to lead into sin, but God's to chasten whom he loves; and he takes his own mysterious way—by disease, by the elements, by bad men, or by Satan. Our wisdom is to acknowledge and fear his hand. Of course punishments do not atone for sin, nor satisfy justice, as restorationists hold. The blood of Christ alone effects this; and our text and subject is designed only to show God's dealings with those who come to Christ for life; yet it is important to such, as many, very many have learned by sad experience that Jer. 2: 19 tells a great truth—"Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee: know therefore and see that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee."

Remarks. 1st. The most frequent sins in our day, which bring God's chastisements, are sins of omission, caused by forgetting God's word, or neglecting to study it so as to understand it. These Corinthians forgot, or wrongly interpreted Paul's directions as to the Lord's Supper. Uzza and David had not the word hid in the heart, that they might not sin against God (Ps. 119: 11). Not heeding God's word, some coveted after money, "and pierced themselves through with many sorrows" (1 Tim. 6: 10). "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse," is as positive a command as "Thou shalt not steal"; yet how much oftener disregarded! See Mal. 3: 10. For omission of duty in this point "riches often take wings and fly away." It is God "that giveth thee power to get wealth."—Deut. 8: 18. Omitting to study God's word sufficiently on the final penalty of the law, is bringing gloom on most of the christian world, and so is a sinful omission of duty, especially in teachers, and they pierce "themselves (and others) through with many sorrows." All will admit, when calmly asked, that the doctrine of endless misery shocks them, and causes painful reflections. The fact is, God has stamped feelings in all hearts which must be tortured by a belief in this doctrine; and more deep sorrow is caused by it than we are aware of, or can know. All stand "in jeopardy every hour"; if not for themselves, for unconverted friends, and millions of sinners around them. Thanks be to God for giving wisdom to some to escape this chastisement, by ceasing to sin in neglecting the Bible on this subject, and thus learning that "the wages of sin is death"; that "yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be"; they will "cease from troubling" (God's universe), and the weary be at rest. Amen. It is sin, then, not to grow in knowledge" while we have the means to do so.

2nd. "Be sure your sin will find you out." Num. 32: 23. "For God shall bring every work into judgment."—Eccl. 12: 14. This applies to this life, as well as the future.

3d. As 1 John 1: 8–10 tells a clear truth: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves." Our text affords one ground of hope and comfort: being afflicted, whether to try faith, or for sin, is not evidence that we shall lose eternal life, but the reverse. See the 73d Psalm,—The wicked are not in trouble as other men; the ungodly prosper in the world, etc.

4th. When afflicted, we should remember Job's prayer—"Show me wherefore thou contendest with me," and re-examine our lives.

Buffalo, N. Y. J. BLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

WHY ARE YOU AN UNBELIEVER?

"LET US REASON TOGETHER."

A. Good morning, friend B. I shall be pleased to hear your answer to the question I propounded, namely,— Why are you an unbeliever in the Holy Scriptures? and, as we have some leisure, it will do us no harm to "reason together."

B. I will frankly give you some of my reasons. In the first place, the Scriptures are full of inconsistencies. They represent God to be a God of love; and yet his dealings with man are of the most tyrannical character, and fall infinitely below the commonest principles of justice known between man and man.

A. In what way? Please explain.

B. I refer more particularly to the future and eternal torment of the wicked, in flames of fire and brimstone. I have read with horror the accounts of the Inquisition, and have heard them branded as fiendish by all classes of men; and yet, considering their brief duration, how mild, in comparison with what a professed God of love will inflict on those who are simply unbelievers.

A. Are you sure that the Bible teaches such a doctrine?

B. I have heard it taught in the churches from my boyhood.

A. Are you sure that THEY have taught what the BIBLE teaches?

B. Whom should we expect to be the exponents of the Bible, if not the professed ministers thereof?

A. But did you never consider that they might have been biassed by human creeds, and, by the force of habit and education, may have put an unwarrantable construction upon the word of God.

B. If such indeed be the case, to whom should we go to learn the truth?

A. Go to the Bible, and read it for yourself.

B. But I have read it, or at least a great portion of it, and its teachings seem to me to correspond with the expositions of the preachers.

A. But perhaps you did not read it aright.

B. How should it be read?

A. I can answer that question, perhaps, better by an illustration. Suppose you were reading in a history of the battles fought during our late war, of cannons employed in the contest, of flags shot down, and of the dead left on the field, would you not take it for granted that cannon meant cannon, and the flags, flags; and the dead men, dead men? I think you would; and you would believe that the record meant just what it said.

B. I certainly should; but then the Bible is mystical, and full of figures and symbols.

A. And are not figures and symbols employed in history, and in all other writings? Yet you know how to discriminate between a plain statement and a figure of speech; and I can assure you, if you will read the Bible carefully, and with a sincere desire to learn what its teaching are, that you will find it a very plain book.

B. Do you mean to say that a person can understand all the Bible?

A. I mean to say that every thing in it concerning man's present condition and happiness, and future destiny, is stated in the plainest and most explicit terms.

B. Then the figures and symbols are superfluous?

A. Not at all. God has dealings with nations, as well as individuals; and I think you will find that, in most instances where symbolic language is employed, it has reference to nations and powers, or general events; and, in some instances, it is used to illustrate truths which have elsewhere been plainly taught.

B. I confess that if these things are so, much of its mystery is removed. But you have not told me what the Bible teaches in reference to man's future destiny.

A. I prefer that you should read it for yourself, and not trust to any human opinion. But I may refer you to the thirty-seventh Psalm, in connection with the teachings of our Savior and his apostles.

B. I conclude, then, from your reasoning, that it is not expected of us to believe what we cannot understand.

A. No; Christian faith believes what God says, because he says it, whether we understand it or not. The child, who hears his father tell of the wonders of the planetary bodies and the revolutions of the earth on its axis and around the sun, cannot comprehend it; yet he believes it, because his father says it. So with Christian faith. It receives with implicit and childlike trust the statements of Revelation, however dark and inscrutable they may appear now, and waits for further light to confirm its confidence in the divine testimony. No scholar becomes such at once. To the utterly ignorant child, the combination of letters is a perfect mystery; but when the alphabet is learned, the succeeding lessons are comparatively easy.

B. You say, then, that a person must learn how to read the Bible aright?

A. There are truths in the Bible which concern you personally; they will be as plain to you as the sunlight. There are other truths which concern the saints of God exclusively; these can only be spiritually discerned.

B. Would it not have been better had it come fully within the comprehension of all men?

A. I think that the plan of Divine Revelation is perfectly adapted to the condition of the human family. The child must learn to spell before it can read. He who would obtain a trade must first become a student; and to obtain a knowledge of any branch of art, science, or philosophy, the conditions of our nature are such as to make it absolutely necessary that we should first learn the rudiments thereof. Is it any less in accordance with reason that we should be required to follow the same gradations, in learning the great and important lessons of eternity—the knowledge of how to attain unto eternal life?

B. Your argument seems conclusive on that point, I will admit; but, after all, may not the Bible be a well concocted system of human philosophy?

A. Read the predictions of Jesus concerning the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem. You will find it recorded in the first part of the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew. Then find, in history, the record of their fulfillment, and you will find that not one stone was left upon another. Then, again, read the conclusion of the twenty-fourth with the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew, the predictions of Christ concerning his second advent, and of the signs which should precede that event. You may read of the fulfillment of most of them,—the persecutions and tribulation of the saints,—in the history of the church during the dark ages. The dark day and night, and the falling stars, are all upon the records of history; and of the last mentioned sign, there are thousands of living witnesses. Read, and you will find that two signs only remain to be fulfilled.

B. I have read the historical account of most of these things, but was not aware that they were matters of special prophecy.

A. Convince yourself, by a careful study of the record. Compare the present condition and character of the world with the prophecies of Jesus and his apostles concerning the last days. "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of the many shall wax cold." Matt. 24: 12. This expresses it in general terms; the details you will find in 2 Timothy 3: 1–5, among which are covetousness, boasting, pride, blasphemy, disobedience to parents, traitors, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having the form and denying the power of godliness. Now compare these with your own observations, and with the records of the daily papers, not only in our own land, but in all parts of the world.

B. But we are taught by the churches that Christianity is progressing and spreading, and destined finally to embrace all the world.

A. Do the facts in the case justify such a belief? The Scriptures certainly do not. The Author of Christianity has declared most emphatically that the way to eternal life is a narrow way, and but "few" walk therein, while the way to destruction is broad, and the "many" walk therein. I know that there is a promise that "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea;" but that cannot possibly be while a foe to righteousness remaineth. When He comes whose right it is to reign, He will destroy the last enemy. Then shall the saints possess the kingdom under the whole heaven. Dan. 7: 27.

B. I thought that the saints were to possess a kingdom in the heavens.

A. The Bible does not teach so. David was a saint, a man after God's own heart, and it is expressly declared of him, in Acts 2: 34, "David is not ascended into the heavens."

B. According to your explanations, then, the teachings of the Bible, on some points at least, are quite different from that of the churches.

A. Examine for yourself, and then decide; but do not reject it because its teachings have been perverted, and its truths explained away, or mystified to suit the decrees of councils, the dogmas of men, or the creeds of churches.

B. I confess that I have hitherto rejected it more in consequence of what I have heard, than of what I have seen of it.

A. I trust that will no longer be the case with you, but that you will not only hear, but read also, and compare what you have heard with what you read.

B. You have, at least, so far interested me in the subject that I will promise to investigate for myself.

A. If you will do so, carefully and prayerfully, you will never have cause to regret it. You will find that God is indeed a God of love, and that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6: 23. G. THOMSON.

For the World's Crisis.

VIOLETS.

I wandered out one cheerless night,
Oppressed with care, weighed down with grief;
There seemed no ray of living light
To bring my weary soul relief.

I thought the misty twilight fell
In darker shades than e'er before—
Fate o'er the world had cast its spell,
And shut, for me, Hope's shining door.

A sudden turn, and all the way
Was bright with violets sweet and fair;
Ankle deep on the banks they lay,
And their soft perfume filled the air.

The tears gushed forth, my heart grew glad;
A scene of beauty met my view;
How could a human soul be sad
Where violets sparkled in the dew?

"Forgive," I cried, "my deep unrest,
The weary murmurs of my soul;
The violets' Painter knoweth best,
And will my destinies control."

Long years have passed their toilful way,
But the picture on my brain was set;
I shut my eyes at close of day,
And see the banks of violets yet.

V. W. OSGOOD.

For the World's Crisis.

EVERLASTING TORMENT NOT ENDLESS.

The offer of forgiveness on condition of repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, is glad tidings to a perishing world; because life and immortality are thereby brought to light, as attainable by those who must otherwise perish forever. This life is freely offered to all; for we read that "the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."—Rev. 22: 17. Those who fail to partake of the water of life will, of course, "utterly perish." A contrary opinion however prevails, predicated on the assumption that "everlasting destruction," which is the doom of the finally impenitent, means everlasting preservation in a very miserable condition. And although the Scriptures announce the pleasing intelligence that the devil is to be destroyed, yet we are gravely informed, by self-proclaimed orthodoxy, that this means that he is to be kept alive in unending torment. This is thought to be sustained by Rev. 20: 10, where it is said that the devil "shall be tomented day and night for ever and ever." This leads us to examine the last clause of this sentence, which, in the Greek, is eis tous aionas ton aionon; the plural form of aion being repeated twice in this instance.

Aion, rendered ever, is said by critics to be derived "from aei, always, and on, the present participle of the verb eimi, to be." Aei is sometimes used to denote the yearly recurrence of a thing, as in Mark 15: 8, where Pilate is requested to release a prisoner at the Passover, as he "ever (aei) had done." Aei, then, would seem to denote successive cycles of time; and this being joined to on, would seem to signify a continuation thereof, just as long as the thing to which it is applied endures. Aion and age correspond in some respects, both being capable of expressing limited and unlimited duration. The age of the universe is unending; while the age of an infant may be but of a few minutes' duration. The adjective form of aion is aionios, and is generally translated everlasting; which may mean finite, or infinite duration, according as it is used. The continual duration of a thing throughout a definite, or an indefinite period, is everlasting; which is the same in meaning as forever. When a man wills his property to a person and his heirs forever; the forever, in this case, lasts no longer than the life-time of the heirs; and the will is an everlasting will, because it lasts as long as the forever does.

"The words everlasting and eternal are to be understood by the nature of the objects to which they are applied; as, for example, when it is said that a disease cleaves to a man forever, it obviously means to the end of his life. So an everlasting priesthood means that it shall continue to the end of the dispensation. Everlasting hills, or mountains, means that they will continue till the end of the world. The terms are applied to the longest period to which the nature of the object will admit. The existence of the object being limited, so, of necessity, in these cases, the words have a limited meaning."—Cottage Bible, on Matt. 25: 46.

A limited use of the word "forever" is found in 2 Kings 5: 27, where Elisha said to Gehazi, "The leprosy of Naaman shall cleave to thee, and unto thy seed forever" (Sep. eis ton aiona). This same Greek phrase is used in the New Testament to denote the age of the world (1 Cor. 8: 13; Eph. 2: 2); the same phrase that is rendered forever in other places. And this forever is spoken of as coming to an end.—1 Cor. 10: 11; Matt. 24: 3; 28: 20; 13: 39, 40, 49. And the aion of the world is spoken of in the plural; as, ton aionon. Eph. 3: 21; 1 Cor. 10: 11. These, with other examples that might be named, are sufficient to show that as the aion, or forever of a person's existence cannot be multiplied. Its use in the plural must signify the smaller cycles of time which constitute his forever. And the more limited the existence, the more limited the forever, and the cycles which compose it. That the devil's forever is limited, is proved by the testimony of Paul; who, speaking of Christ, says, "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil."—Heb. 2: 14.

If, then, the devil is to be destroyed, his forever and ever—eis tous aionas ton aionon—will end with his destruction. To say that it will take to all eternity to accomplish this, is equivalent to saying that he will never be destroyed; which would make Christ fail to accomplish his purpose. Again, we read—"He that committeth sin, is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." 1 John 3: 8. And, we read again, "All the wicked will God destroy." If this is so, then the devil and all his subjects must cease to exist, and then sin also will cease; so that the works of the devil will thereby be destroyed, but not otherwise. Sin and death are the works of the devil, and if he and his subjects were to exist to all eternity, his works would prove indestructible. But with his destruction, his work of sin and death will cease; because there will be no more sinners to sin, nor no more deaths on account of sin. Death, the last enemy, will then have been destroyed. And then the prayer of the Psalmist, "O let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end," will be answered. And this involves the end of the everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels; the smoke of whose torment is to ascend up "for ever and ever," until they are utterly consumed.

But because the wicked are to come to so dreadful an end, in an everlasting fire, we cannot conclude from this that the everlasting life of the righteous is to end also; for they are to put on immortality, which precludes the possibility of any end to their everlasting life. Their aionian life is that which pertains to unlimited duration, because it is immortal; while the life of the wicked being mortal, their forever is limited, and ends in their destruction by the second death, after their resurrection from the first death. If, then, there is to be an end to the wicked, as the Scriptures teach, in so many words, why should any one labor to prove that they have no end? Is there end endless? How, then, could Malachi say, "Behold, the day cometh which shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Ch. 4: 1. Will not a fire kindled by the Almighty for the express purpose of burning them up be of so intense a nature as to be utterly unquenchable, so that none can remain therein without being "burnt up"? "The day that cometh will burn them up"; hence it will not take to all eternity to accomplish it. That day, then, will end their forever, when future immortality shall have begun.

WILLIAM HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis

PREPARE FOR THE CONFLICT.

Though an army were stationed to guard a city, or nation, from the invasion of a mighty foe, yet, if the enemy showed no signs of an open warfare, but merely sent out scouting parties occasionally, the army, although harassed by skirmishes and in continual danger would in time grow careless. The soldiers would be likely to wander away from the camp, or neglect to hold themselves in readiness for an engagement at a moment's notice. But let the enemy make an advance, or begin to prepare for a general attack, and every good soldier would gather up his arms, examine his firelock, and be at his post. The stragglers would gather into camp, and every man would be awake and watchful.

Two armies might carry on a guerilla warfare for years; but unless they came into open battle, there would be no decisive victory on either side. Satan has been carrying on a guerilla warfare for a long time. He has snatched his victims here and there. The church has known that he lay in wait to deceive and destroy. Still, while he proclaimed no open war, she lived at her ease. Her soldiers wandered from the camp, beyond the sound of the Captain's call, and her sentinels slept at their post. But now the devil is marshalling his forces for an open conflict. His lease of the governments of this world has nearly run out, and he wants his claim renewed; or, rather, he thinks to retain possession by force of arms. He finds he can gain no decisive victory by the dodging, guerilla form of warfare, so in his desperation he has proclaimed open war—war to the knife.

There are two who claim the possession and government of this world. One by right of purchase as well as inheritance. The other claims it merely because he has had dominion so long. He is an usurper, and his claim is worthless; but he has many servants—millions who are ready to follow in his train and fight in his cause. He numbers his army—infuses into them his own diabolical spirit—views scornfully the little company who refuse to submit to his government, and in his presumption he is about to make an assault upon the camp of the saints, and bid defiance to the King of kings. There is a struggle coming that will decide which of the two claimants shall possess the kingdom. Will decide, did I say? No, that was decided long ago; but the coming struggle will end in the crowning of one, and the overthrow of the other.

Come, all who have enlisted under the banner of the rightful Heir to King David's throne, to arms! TO ARMS! Have any wandered away from the camp? Return quickly! The roll is being called. Let every one be at his post. The enemy's rangers are out on every side; all stragglers and deserters will fall an easy prey. Have any laid down their weapons? Gird on your armor at once! The enemy is advancing, the contest is at hand. Already we can hear their shouts of defiance, their horrid blasphemies, and fierce imprecations of wrath, and see their weapons of war, and their scowls of deadly hate.

"A battle is coming between the two kingdoms,
The armies are gathering round;
The pure testimony and vile persecutions
Will come in close contest ere long.
Then gird on your armor, ye saints of the Lord,
And He will direct you by his holy word,
The pure testimony will cut like a sword."

Fear not, little flock! If you have on the whole armor, you are invincible. Our weapons are not carnal, but they are mighty. What if Satan has got legions of demons for recruiting officers, who have deceived and enlisted the fallen children of Adam in his service until his army is innumerable? They will be as reeds before the sharp sword which proceedeth out of the mouth of him on whose vesture is written, "King of kings and Lord of lords." It is not numbers which will gain the victory but righteousness and truth. God's promises are sure. The little flock with their all-conquering Leader, will prevail and possess the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world.

Let me belong to that little company whose God is the Lord. If we are his children, we need not fear the wrath of men or devils. We shall come off conquerors at last. True, we may fall in the contest, but if we fall we shall rise; if we die, we shall live again; live to enjoy eternally the society of the blessed, and the presence of our beloved elder Brother; live to share in the glory of the new earth; live to shout victory when the devil and all his host are shrouded in eternal night. Then let us endure until the end. We will make no compromise with Satan's mock government and confederacy. Trouble may come; tribulation may come; but He who hath bought us with his blood knows how to deliver us in the day of wrath and perdition of ungodly men.

B. P. FRENCH.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER V.—Improved Renderings in Luke 1: 63–80.

In my last I noticed some twelve improved readings of the Revised New Testament, in Luke 1: 1–55. Let us now notice improvements in the remainder of the chapter.

Ver. 63. Instead of "he asked for a table to lay his paper on while he was writing; "asking for a writing-tablet, he wrote," etc. In the wax, or other substance, with which this "writing-tablet" was coated, "he wrote," with his sharp-pointed, bodkin-like instrument, called a stylus, "His name is John." For the awkward "they marvelled all;" "they all wondered."

Ver. 66. For the rendering, "What manner of child shall this be?" we find the exact and accurate expression of the Greek, "What then will this child be?" The wonder was not, "What kind of a child will this be?" but, "What superior, wonderful man will he become?"

Ver. 68. Instead of "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people;" the blessing is for a specified thing, expressed in the beautiful phraseology of the original, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, that he visited and wrought redemption for his people.

Ver. 70. For the cumbersome and diffuse "which have been since the world began;" we find a curt and faithful representation of the Greek, in the simple words, "of old;" as in Gen. 6: 4, and Ps. 25: 6, Common Version.

Ver. 71. For the loose rendering, "That we should be saved from our enemies;" we find the exact expression of the Greek, "salvation from our enemies."

Ver. 72. Instead of the interpolated "To perform the mercy promised to our fathers;" we find the Hebraistic Greek of the original faithfully rendered into English in these brief and expressive words: "to show mercy to our fathers.

Ver. 77. Instead of "To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins;" we find the object brought to view and expressed as in the original text, "in order to give knowledge of salvation to his people in remission of their sins."

Ver. 80. For the obsolete "waxed strong in spirit;" "became strong in spirit." And for the antiquated "his shewing unto Israel;" we find the beautiful, Scriptural expression, "his manifestation to Israel.

These twenty-four instances, which I have noticed, are specimens of improvements in the translation in one chapter only, at the commencement of the Gospel by Luke; and they may serve to give a faint idea of the thorough manner in which this work has been done, and the immense labor and expense that the revision of the entire New Testament has cost. Surely, then, we should not withhold from it a just appreciation.

C. W. WATERHOUSE.

☞ Some men who know that they are great, are so very haughty withal and insufferable, that their acquaintances discover their greatness only by the tax of humility, which they are obliged to pay as the price of their friendship. Such characters are as tiresome and disgusting in the journey of life, as rugged roads are to the weary traveler, which he discovers to be turnpikes only by the tolls.

☞ The persons who live on the failings of their neighbors, will never die of starvation.

For the World's Crisis.

ENCOURAGING.

Bro. Grant:—I am now here with Bro. Hitchcock, and we are having meetings here and in Mattison every evening. He has been laboring of late in the latter place, and some thirty or more have been brought into the light and love of the gospel. The door has been opened to us in Guilford, and they offered us the use of the Methodist meeting-house. Sunday we commenced. There was a good congregation out in the morning to hearken to the word of life.

At noon we went to the river side, when Bro. Hitchcock immersed six sisters, who had recently put on Christ by repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus, and have now risen from a watery grave to newness of life. They came out of the water rejoicing. They had done their duty. It was a blessed good season, and many were there to witness the scene, and all were orderly.

In the afternoon, many more came to see us, while we stood in defense of the gospel, beseeching men to lay hold on eternal life. The Spirit of the Lord was present to make the word effectual. In the evening there was a crowd came together of attentive listeners to the truth of the gospel we love so dearly; viz., the coming of Jesus to reward every man as his works shall be; involving the necessity of the resurrection of the dead.

The meeting was one of interest from morning till nine in the evening; and we had apparently the intelligent, thinking citizens of Guilford, who gave us an attentive hearing; and we could but think it left a favorable impression, and hope it will do much good.

We have been urged to stay through the week and over the coming Sunday, when we expect to occupy the same house. There is a desire all about here to hear the word of Christ, and the doctrine relative to his second coming. To meet the demands of a man of God, who has the heaven-commissioned message committed to his trust,—1st, He needs a great share of that wisdom from above so profitable to direct; much of the Holy Spirit to enlighten and sweeten and make the word effective; and an iron constitution, with lungs as strong as the blacksmith's bellows, for it is all work,—preach, preach, pray, sing, visit from house to house, call on the poor, and attend to their wants. The widow and fatherless must not be neglected; the bereaved have a demand upon our prayers and sympathies, and the children must not be overlooked. O, it is a great work! Well might the chief apostle exclaim, Who is sufficient for these things?

And yet some seem to come forth assuming apostleship for the time being, because their business fails, or for a little notoriety, or some cause other than the right one,—"Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." Then the cause of Christ suffers. The churches are weakened. We need and must have a ministry, God-appointed, who are ready to feed the flock of God, trusting him for his support. The poor must have the gospel, and the gospel must not be made merchandize. If the brethren do grow worldly, covetous, and stingy, the ministry must grow more benevolent, more self-denying, more loving and Christ-like, preaching a free gospel; urging upon all the principle of rendering good for evil. Preach and live Christ every day, every where; do "the work of an evangelist," and verily "thou shalt be fed." The promises cannot fail. Jesus is coming. He is a friend of mine; he is good to me; I love him; I will trust and obey him. I pray for the prosperity of Bible truth and pure religion. More anon.

Guilford, Ct., Apr. 16th. L. Boutell.

For the World's Crisis.

THE WORK IN CONCORD, N. H.

Bro. Grant:—I wish to say (in behalf of the brethren) through the Crisis, that the Lord has been, and is still at work through his faithful servant, Bro. H. Munger, assisted by Bro. T. Cole. We think there has been no less than one hundred different persons forward for prayers; among which, about sixty are happy in the Lord. Several of those who are converted were persons who lived in a state of rebellion against God all their days. Bro. M. has baptized twenty-six willing souls. God bless them. Many people now see the Bible in a very different light from what they did formerly. Our brethren have made many dark passages as clear as day, and the people say, "I do not know but what the Bible is true after all my unbelief."

Thos. B. Tamblyn.

Concord, N. H., April 20th, 1866.

"Religious Excitement at Concord, N. H.:—The 'Second Adventists' of Concord, N. H., are in the midst of an extensive revival, mainly induced through the labors of a certain preacher from Chicopee, Mass., who gave his farewell discourse Friday evening. There were many spectators present, who were somewhat moved to levity by the extravagant scenes presented in the church; whereupon the 'Campmeeting Napoleon' (as the clergyman styles himself) took occasion to address himself particularly to outsiders, using the bitterest epithets, and pointing personally with scorn to one and another in the audience. These remarks so incensed the crowd that they gathered outside of the church at the close of the services, with the intention of forcibly taking the preacher as he came out and riding him upon a rail; but a strong police force, previously summoned by the Adventists in anticipation of trouble, protected the speaker from violent hands. He is threatened, however, with rough usage if he attempts to hold forth again in Concord."—Boston Journal.

The above is more than half true. Perhaps we ought to think ourselves well off if one half of the truth is told in these times about the work of God. The speaker did not style himself the "Campmeeting Napoleon." It was a name given him by a correspondent of one of the Concord papers. As to a powerful reformation, it is true; and that I pointed out some that were disturbing the meeting, when sinners were coming forward for prayers, is also true; but that it took a strong police to protect me from violent hands was unknown to me. The people in Concord behaved well, with a few exceptions, which I noticed on the spot, and expect to go back there again soon, if the Lord will. Hiram Munger.

The Young Pilgrim for May 1st.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

A Bright Spring is coming (cut.) Always Spring. So hard to be Good. The Boy who would not go to the Theatre. The Power of Habit. Our Pattern. Our Crown. "May Stick to Thee!" A Child's Thoughts about God. Remember God sees you. A Little Child in a Revival. The Banians, or Traveller's Tree (cut.). A Penny a Day (Bible Illustrations.) Hungry for God's Word. A Little Kindness. The Colored Orphan School in St. Louis. Revival in Boston. Sabbath Schools in Rhode Island. "Criminally Negligent." Young Pilgrim Letters from [illegible] Clara, Emma and Agnes, [illegible]

Price 50 cents a year; 10 copies, 40 cts.; 50 copies, 35 cts. Address Young Pilgrim, [illegible]

The World's Crisis and Second Advent Messenger.

Boston, Wednesday, April 25, 1866.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable in advance, at the rate of $2.50 a year; but if delayed six months beyond the time of payment, the price is $3.00 a year. Thus 50 cents a year is saved by paying in advance.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, Geo. T. Adams.

MEETINGS IN BOSTON.

The meetings at Lowell Street, Boston, continue to be very interesting. Their meetings Sunday, April 22d, were specially so. Six were baptized, and others are seeking the Lord. Brn. Hook and Couch were present to proclaim the truth.

In East Boston, where Brn. Goodrich and Damman are holding meetings, there is a special interest. Seven were baptized last Sabbath (22d inst.) Praise the Lord for what he is doing.

MEETINGS IN LOWELL.

The meetings in Lowell are encouraging. Several from other churches are becoming deeply interested in the great truths of the Bible which have been long buried up under theological rubbish, like diamonds in dirt. Thank the Lord that some begin to see their sparkling beauty, and are willing to assist in removing the unsightly covering that has so long concealed them. We have cause to rejoice for what the Lord is doing. Some half a dozen rose for prayers last Lord's day (April 15th), and others are feeling much interest.

THE FENIANS.

The Fenians expect Mr. Stephens, their "Head Center," from Ireland, to land in this country soon, when they purpose to complete their arrangements for immediate action. Some people still talk as though the Fenian movement was not worth noticing, even saying they cannot do any thing if they try. Those who talk thus show they are not posted in such matters. We think they will have occasion to change their minds before twelve months are gone. Those who look for peace and quietude in the world in these last days, will be sadly disappointed. The political systems of the world are rotten to the very core, and cannot hang together much longer.

Doubtful.—In the last Crisis was an article headed, "A bundle of old, old letters, on themes of deepest moment." We had very serious doubts of its genuineness; and have since received information that leads us to believe that it is not reliable.

WICKEDNESS INCREASES.

Notwithstanding a few are waking up to catch a view of the perils that surround them, and seeking pardon for their sins; the great mass of mankind are rapidly progressing in infidelity and wickedness. The workers of iniquity are becoming very bold in the service of Satan. The "regular (New York) correspondent" of the Boston Journal, under date of April 13, 1866, says:—

"The most daring and successful robberies and burglaries ever known are transpiring every day. The first teller of one of our largest banks was knocked down in the day time in the Sub-Treasury Building, and robbed of $5000. Parties looked on and saw the robber taking the money from the pocket of the young man, and supposed he was assisting some one who had fainted."

"CHRIST AND THE PEOPLE."

We have just received a new work of the above title, published at the Banner of Light office, Boston. It contains 203 pp., prepared by Dr. A. B. Child, author of a work entitled, "Whatever is, is right." Dr. Child is a noted Spiritualist.

We will give the reader a few extracts from the work, that he may have some idea of the new Christ, and the new gospel, offered us by the spirits and their followers.

In his introduction, he calls the Bible account of the origin of our race, "The Mosaic fiction of Creation," and says, "the wages of sin is not death."—(p. 8.) Further on, when speaking of man, he says:—"That he is the legitimate offspring of the lower animals is almost a settled point."

When referring to what he denominates "the new school of religious philosophy," he says it is "doing a noble and holy work.... It has established beyond a doubt that the soul survives the dissolution of the body"—(p. 9.) Hence it appears that what the Bible does not do, the lying demons have succeeded in accomplishing; and by so doing, endeavor to prove that the great deceiver of our race did tell the truth when he contradicted the Lord, as recorded in Gen. 3: 4.

When speaking of the new order of things, which they propose to introduce, he says:—"The church, the state, and society, will recognize and practice a government differing widely from that of the past and present."—(p. 19.)

The Dr. goes on to say:—"Penalties for crime will be abolished.... The triune godhead of human devices—viz., commandments, laws, and penalties, will cease to be, and... meeting-houses, state-houses, and prison-houses will be turned to purposes of usefulness, which shall bless, not curse, humanity." (pp. 24, 25.)

"Line fences that bound individual possessions will be torn down and carried away.... The present laws of marriage... will be abandoned for a holier, purer, diviner revelation, that will ere long be given to the people."—(pp. 26, 27.)

"Religion that has heretofore been... subject to commandments and violation of commandments, rewards and punishments, will be cast off, as the bandages of infancy are in maturer life. A religion more spiritual will be discovered and acknowledged,...—a religion without written laws, without commandments;...—a religion too sacred to be spoken, too pure to be defiled,... resting upon... purity of earthly life,... a religion that every soul possesses by natural endowment, not one more than another.... This religion is simply desire.... With every one desire is spontaneous and sincere, pure and holy, no matter what the desire is.... The saint and the sinner are both religious. The true religion of God is in the bosom of the sinner, no less than it is in the saint."—(pp. 27-29.)

Thus much from the first chapter of "Christ and the People," according to the "new gospel." We do not see how it could be more fully in harmony with antichrist. We expect to see it developed more fully in a short time.

NEW TRACTS.

We have just received twenty new and interesting tracts from Bro. H. L. Hastings, 19 Lindall Street, Boston, entitled: "De Gruchy and De Carterette,—a Story of Grace"; "Jesus Christ's Money"; "Sam the Sailor"; "Consecration"; "The Good Master"; "Talks to Young men"; 3 tracts—"Sold Cheap," "A Mess of Pottage," "Sowing Wild Oats"; "The Life Boat's Last Turn"; "The Double Freedom"; "New Things"; "Marks, Good and Bad"; "I feel forehanded"; "Tom and the Judge"; "Why don't you shout?" "One single verse"; "A Thousand Guineas"; "What is Man?" "What is God?" and "Pray for the Sailor." Most of these are four page tracts, reprinted from The Christian.

"The Prophetic Time Question."—The above is the title of a new and interesting tract just received, written by Bro. William Sheldon. Those who are interested in the "time question," will find this work one of special interest. For sale at this office. Price 25 cts. post-paid. Five copies, $1.00. $16 per 100. To agents $25 copies for $4. By express, $4.50 post-paid.

We have received another tract of 24 pp., by Eld. P. B. Hoyt, entitled:—"An Inquiry. Do the Scriptures teach that God's people will know the time of the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

This tract is for those who think we can know nothing about the coming of Christ in advance of his second appearing. For sale at this office. Price 5 cts. Eight copies post-paid, 25 cts.; 20 copies, 50 cts.; $2 per 100.

"A GLOOMY PICTURE."

When we look at the present state of christendom, taken as a whole, it truly presents "a gloomy picture." When the present is contrasted with the past forty years we see a great change, but not for the better Then professors of religion were expected to come out from the world; but how changed the appearance since then. It is enough to make one's heart sad as he looks around him at the present day. Especially is this the case in relation to dress. We know it is said, "it does not make much difference what we wear, if the heart is only right." We are not disposed to dispute this statement, for when the heart is right, the individual will not seek to be conformed to the fashions and customs of a wicked world; but will feel like dressing in "modest apparel," as the Bible directs.

These thoughts arose in our mind after reading the following in Zion's Herald, for April 4th, 1866:—

THE SUBJECT OF DRESS, AND THE CENTENARY.

Mr. Editor.—As this Centenary year is the period for the accomplishment of many noble projects and praiseworthy deeds, whose object is to bless the world to the latest generation, an occasion that equally interests both sexes, and summons all our energies to co-operate in this undertaking, in addition to what has already been proposed, we would recommend an entire reform in the female dress, by adopting a mode which will comport with the principles of our holy religion. The modest apparel mentioned in Scripture, and worn by our early Methodists, evinces an elevation of mind and character, which is attainable only by a persistent course of self-denial and consecration to God. These virtues were eminently theirs; and by their unmitigated zeal, began and sustained a work which we, their descendants, are pledged to perpetuate in the use of the same means that are employed, in order to become the faithful followers of Christ, and instrumental of turning many to righteousness.

We commend their zeal in life, their triumphant death we would share; but how sadly recreant have many of us proved to our vows. Insidiously has one restraint after another been disregarded, until we find we are being involved in a mist savoring much of earth, and but very little of heaven. We have left our first love, withheld our offerings, and taken the things of God and turned them to our own account; and, like the votaries of the world of fashion, we are walking in a vain show of attire, and display of gorgeous ornaments, giving unbelievers a mystery to solve, while they wander on in darkness. This is a gloomy picture, and we do not like to contemplate it; yet let us do so until sufficiently impressed with its truth, and the necessity of forsaking sin and turning again to the Lord.

The proclamation has gone forth for the sacrifices and offerings of the church. We can devise nothing so judicious, or that would so facilitate this object, as the retrenchment of unnecessary expenses. According to our Discipline, this is no time to encourage superfluity of dress; and this will remain a fact as long as the M. E. church is true to its appointed mission. Let us commence this reform, immediately adding the amount of our superfluities to our sacrifices. Thus may the condition of God's willing poor be ameliorated, that they may not again 'suffer for want of the necessaries of life,' but come with thanksgiving, and lay their gift on the altar."

VISIONS.

We have just received a copy of a work by B. F. Snook, and Wm. H. Brinkerhoff, entitled, "The Visions of E. J. White, not of God." It is a tract of 27 pp., and should be read by those who are not satisfied on the subject. Price 10 cents. For sale at the Crisis office, and by Asa Aldrich, Marion, Linn Co., Iowa.

Bro. Snook writes:—"I have been a minister of the S. D. A. church for near six years, but can be so no longer. Their Visions and 'Third Angel's Message' I cannot indorse any longer. They are too absurd.

"I have been an incidental reader of the Crisis for some time, and now, through your kindness, receive it regularly. I highly appreciate and love its good spirit. I do and must believe that God is with you; though I do not agree with you on the Sabbath question. I believe that christian character is more with God than all outward forms. May God bless you, and aid you in your great and good work. My sympathies are deeply with you, and I hope to meet you in the kingdom of God."

$2000 [illegible] FUND.

For the [illegible] Tracts.

Previously [illegible]
Arabine Wright	[illegible]
Amelia Andrews	1.00

POOR FUND DONATIONS.

To send the Crisis to the Poor.

Whole number of free, 500. Amt. of expense, $1400,00.

Previous acknowledgments	$291.15
W. G. Leavitt	1.00
M. A. W.	.50
H. H. Hemenway (for the poor widow)	1.00
Arabine Wright	1.00
Amelia Andrews	3.00

The American Advent Mission Society.

All communications relating to the business of the Society, and all applications from persons as teachers or missionaries, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, William B. Herron, "Crisis" Office, Boston.

All donations of money, or clothing, or other supplies for the Freedmen, should be sent to the Treasurer, George T. Adams, 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

In sending supplies, enclose in a letter to the same address a notice and list of the articles sent.

FREEDMEN'S MISSION FUND.

Previous acknowledgments	1924.62
W. G. Leavitt	1.00
H. M. Oyer	2.92
S. Dodge	1.00
J. W. Trumbull	1.00
Y. P. Fund	4.25

YOUNG PILGRIM POOR FUND.

To send the Young Pilgrim to the Poor.

200 copies are sent free to Mission Schools and elsewhere.

Previous acknowledgments	$58.83
Andrew B. Fabrick, Clinton, Mich.	1.00
W. S. C., Rutland, Vt.	2.00

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$432.95
S. B. Munson, Tariffville, Ct.	2.50

WHY ARE YOU AN UNBELIEVER?

This is the title of a new tract to be issued by the Society in a few days. It is designed for that class of unbelievers who are made such by supposing the Bible to teach the doctrine of eternal torment. It will be found in full on the first page of this week's Crisis. Read it, and give it a circulation among your unbelieving friends. Single 1 cent; postage 2 cents. W. B. H.

BOOK NOTICE.

Thrilling Narrative, by Czechowski, late a Catholic Priest.

A few copies of this work have just been placed in our hands, for sale, for the benefit of the European Mission. Price $1.25 post-paid.

For the World's Crisis.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

LETTER FROM BRO. LESLIE.

To the Board of the Am. Ad. Miss. Society.

Dear Brethren:—After more delay than I anticipated when I arrived here, I am at length able to report to you the result of my efforts to find and secure a better field here for our mission work among the Freedmen of the South. But first I would express my gratitude to our heavenly Father for his great goodness in conducting us so safely here, and blessing us so richly and in so many ways since we came; opening to us as he has a door of entrance to this great field of labor, from which we hope to gather many sheaves, even in the short time we have to work. Let us adore him for his great goodness; and, without faltering, go on and labor until the Master calls in the laborers.

On my way here, I providentially met Bro. Himes in the city of St. Louis, and from him learned in regard to his labors here, and the prospects of our contemplated work. I found him somewhat discouraged in regard to our success in Memphis; and, from the information he gave me, I was led to view the prospect as dark and gloomy. Bro. H., however, was quite sick when I saw him, and was therefore unable to impress me favorably with the success of his labors here. He said he had worked hard (and I have here found that he did) without securing a field satisfactory to himself, or such as he thought we ought to obtain for our work. Yet he thought there might be a field here which we could find and occupy to good advantage and with good results. He urged me to press on and survey the ground, and whatever field I found that we could enter, he had no doubt the Society would take in charge. He pointed out to me a number of localities in the city, where, with means, we doubtless could establish schools and meetings, but they were not in his opinion as extensive as we should have, the ground being in part covered by the other societies here.

I have found, since my arrival, that, provided we could secure any or all of them, little would be gained; that the jealousy of the other societies would doubtless be aroused, and in our crowded condition at this late period of establishing missions here, they might render all our labors abortive. There was one locality, however, to which he referred me, that I should have taken when I came, if I had had the means to hire the land on which to put up a chapel and schoolhouse; but it has now passed into other hands.

The fields which God has now opened to us are apart from other enterprises like our own; and they are where we can occupy and cultivate the whole ground, if we move quickly and earnestly in the work.

After I got able to go around among the colored people, I visited those first to whom Bro. Himes referred me, and found that he had made many warm friends among them, and had left a good impression upon their minds. The pastor of the African Methodist church invited me to preach for him, and I have done so a number of times. I have preached and spoken wherever I could get an opportunity, with, I think, a good effect.

I have surveyed the ground here, I think, thoroughly; and am now able to state to you the result and prospects, which are, in my opinion, good.

NEW FIELDS OPEN.

There are two fields now open here for us, and it seems to me that God has reserved them for us; for, why they have not been taken I cannot tell, when there is so much anxiety on the part of every society here to occupy the whole ground.

One of these fields is in the southern section of the city, and the other at the northern part. The latter is the broadest, and ample enough for any society to cultivate. Here are many hundreds of Freedmen, women and children, without anything having yet been done for them. I have traveled over this ground many times, and, every time I go over it, I am better satisfied that no place could be found where we can, without hindrance, enter and do the work we can here do. So far as the people are concerned, every thing is ready. They are anxious and pleading for us to come. I have made many warm friends among them, and have no doubt that in a few months I can control these as fully as I did those at Nashville. If we can first get started here, there will be no difficulty in holding the entire ground, and teaching without let or hindrance our glorious and blessed truths. There is no influence here now that will work against us. We shall have all the scholars we can teach, and more work than we who are here can do. There is not a more needy people, nor a more darkened spot in the whole South than this. I am satisfied that this is where God has called us to labor, and these are the ones to whom he has sent us; and I fully believe that if we enter with energy and the spirit of the Master into the work, a harvest will be reaped, and in the day of Christ we shall be satisfied with what we have done.

The only thing I have met with (and that is the one great obstacle to the establishment of schools by all societies) is the want of a house and place in which to teach and hold meetings. This difficulty I expected. I have met it before in another section of this State, and am therefore prepared to grapple with it here; and, with God's assistance, expect to overcome it.

Here, as every where else South, every building of every kind is full; or, if there be houses or barns unoccupied, the people who own them will not let them for the purpose for which we want them. Failing to hire these, the only alternative is to rent a lot of land, if we can obtain it, and thereon build such a house for school and worship as we need. This is the way most societies have to do here. This can be done, and done at a less cost in the end than to lease a house already built.

Three days ago, in my travels over this interesting field, I found an old building (a mere shell) without an occupant. My heart leaped for joy, especially when I ascertained that a colored man controlled it. I at once got some four or five other colored men, who had, by my talking with them, become interested in a school, to go with me to see the man in whose possession the building was. We did not find him at home, but his wife said there was no doubt that the house could be had; "for they all wanted a school." I then left it with the men to ascertain if the building could be had; and yesterday I learned that I can have it.

To-morrow (Sunday) I preach in the building, and expect to have it filled with people. I shall speak to them in the morning on their great deliverance from bondage, and what God now requires of them in return for his goodness to them; urging upon them, also, the necessity of knowing what his word teaches, and that they must now learn to read it themselves, or they will be guilty of not improving the privileges given them.

This house is not as central as I should like, but it will be filled to overflowing the first week. It will not hold one fourth part of the number of scholars we shall have come. We shall have to open another school nearer the city proper as soon as a place can be obtained. The building is without windows, and these must be got and put in the coming week, with seats. The floor must also be relaid, and the walls whitewashed. I shall try hard to have the people bear this expense, and hope to succeed. I shall open the school, the Lord willing, in one week from day after to-morrow, April 9th. Sr. Butler will probably take charge of the school, after I get it well started. She will have to walk three miles from where we now board to do so. This she cannot do when the hot weather comes on. (But upon this point hereafter.)

So much, then, will be begun in this great field, which is miles in extent. This school will be towards the outer limits of the field, yet just where a school is as much needed as at any other point, and where the school will be large and full. The people here are almost frantic with delight at the idea of such a blessing.

Now, in relation to the other part of this field, and which is of the greatest importance, it being in the city proper, and including a dense population of colored people, all without help, but fully awake to the importance of sustaining a school as they are able. I have not yet obtained a building here in which to teach or hold worship, but I have the offer of land at a reasonable rent. I have looked to-day at a lot, just where we want it, for sixty dollars a year: size 30 x 40 feet. If we want more, it can be taken on the front for two dollars each additional foot. This, of course, is not in a very popular place, but it is all the better for our purpose. The only objection I have to it is, it is too low for health, provided we connect a mission-house with the chapel, which it certainly will be desirable, if not necessary to do, in order to lessen the expense of our living here. (But upon this also hereafter.)

Now, in relation to the other point of interest, viz: the field open in the southern section of the city. Here, as I have said, is a good field which seems to be offered us. Just where I should have selected a spot on which to locate a school and meeting, the government has possession of a lot of abandoned land, which Gen. Runkle of the Bureau offers me, for our purpose, for fifty dollars a year. He will give us a lease of it yearly so long as the government holds it.

In the immediate vicinity, and all around, are many colored people, few of whom go to any school or meeting, and the most of whom could be gathered in, taught, and christianized. I should like to secure this field, also, but not to the neglect of the other at the north of the city. Here we shall have the entire range of a large territory, where we shall neither crowd or be crowded; where none will dispute our claims, or complain that we are intruding upon their ground.

Thus, as briefly as possible, dear brethren, have I presented to you the fields which the Lord has enabled me to find here for our mission. I have not colored the prospect in the least, or sought to give you a more favorable impression of the importance of this field than it possesses. It is truly worth our attention, for there can be no doubt but here are many that can be saved in the day of Christ through our instrumentality. If there be a people here who will receive our message, it is this people. Preaching the gospel to them will truly be preaching it to the poor. Giving to them will be giving to the Lord. What we do for them will be done for Christ. Many of them are trying to be his, but they are stumbling dreadfully for want of the light which we have. Shall we give it to them? What I can do will be done, but I am powerless without the means in the form of places in which to teach or gather congregations and Sabbath schools. God help us in this work.

A CHAPEL AND MISSION HOUSE.

Both of these we need; both of these, it seems to me, we must have, or abandon the work here. If buildings could here be found which we could hire, the rent demanded would be so great that I doubt if we could pay it. But none can be found that can be rented for a colored school. I have satisfied myself on this point, having traveled daily over the ground, again and again; and were I to do so, and nothing else, for the next six months, the result would, in my opinion, be the same. It is possible that we might find a house, in a few months, that we could hire to live in; but this even is doubtful, as the houses before vacated are spoken for by other parties who have a knowledge of the circumstances, which we cannot, one time out of a thousand, obtain. Then, northern people are not preferred, in any case.

Again, if we could hire a tenement in which the missionary family could live, it might be so far removed from the school-house that, in the rainy or hot season, it would be nearly impossible for lady teachers to go and come; for when it is rainy here the mud is half-knee deep, and when it is dry the dust is about the same, and, with the heat, is almost insupportable. All societies here that build, connect the dwelling-house with the chapel. By so doing, they save the rent of land on one or the other, as well as expense in building, having but one roof to make for both houses.

PLAN OF A BUILDING.

My plan would be to erect a two-story building; having the lower story for a chapel and school purposes, and the upper one for the Mission family. This would give the family better air, and a place where they could retire less disturbed than on a level with the school room. And as I have said, we should save the rent of land for one building, and the expense of one roof. A building say 25 x 50 feet might be ample enough for the chapel and school-room. Or, if for the school more room was needed, one or two of the rooms above could be used as recitation rooms, or for private classes.

THE COST OF BUILDING.

What the cost of a building of this size and description would be, I have not had time to estimate. Bro. Himes has estimated at six hundred dollars; but I think he is somewhat too low. I however think that eight hundred dollars would cover the expense; and as, in all probability, I could raise something here among the people, perhaps for seven hundred dollars from the Society all might be done. We must take into account the seating of the chapel, which will cost fifty or seventy-five dollars, if not more, including desk, blackboard, writing-benches, etc.

RENT OF LAND.

The land which I have named before as having in view on which to build, provided you conclude so to do, may not be the best I can find, and perhaps we may have to pay somewhat more for a better location; but, so far as the rent of the land is concerned, I think the amount can be easily collected of the people for that purpose. I do not think they will be backward in doing all they can in support of the mission, when it once is established, and they see the benefits they are reaping from it. If God pours out his Spirit, as I believe he will, when we get to work with a good corps of devoted, loving hearts, which I hope to have here from the north, then especially will this people do everything in their power to sustain the schools and the worship of God; and much will be done, I have no doubt.

EXPENSES OF MISSIONARIES.

The expenses of your missionaries here are now necessarily great, and cannot be borne long with the salaries they are receiving. Boarding here is very expensive. It is from eight to twelve dollars per week, which we cannot long pay. This great expense can be saved by having a home provided by the Society, where the Mission family could board themselves. One half of their expenses, so far as food is concerned, could be saved. This induces me to urge upon your attention the necessity of a home for us and those whom you under God may send here to labor in this vast field.

MISSIONARIES AND TEACHERS.

I have put missionaries first, for I believe without this qualification the other amounts to but little with us as a Society. As teaching is only the means to an end, the end is to be obtained, or the means is lost, and had not better be used. Believing as we do that the end of this dispensation is near, the spiritual welfare of this, as well as all other people, is paramount to every thing else; and therefore should be aimed at continually and never lost sight of. Laboring for the salvation of these perishing ones is the primary work of this Society; while their preparation for the judgment is its main object. This being so, those who are sent out here to labor should have the object of the Society in view always; and every thing else should be regarded as simply a means to the attainment of this. Teaching and schools are necessary among this people now, as a means by which they can be brought to Christ and a knowledge of the truth; but to make these take the place of the great object sought, or substitute them for it, should not, and must not be done. In selecting laborers to come here, missionaries should be selected, who can teach; but the true missionary spirit should be the first quality required, and then a capacity to teach, which is necessary. I have written this that the Board may know what I desire in the persons they may be called upon, under God, to select and send here; as well as to have them understand my views in relation to the work I am here to do.

FUNDS AT HAND.

In order that the work of the mission may be commenced and carried forward, means are required where the work is to be begun. Everything here, as well as at most places, costs something; and nothing can be done or obtained without funds to pay for whatever is to be secured. If we would secure a house, the rent must be paid in advance. If we would obtain possession of a lot of land by lease, the rent must also be paid, in part at least, in advance. If clothing, books, papers, or anything arrives from friends at the North, the freight must be paid on them before we can get them. If we should start a school out of doors, books must be bought and the money advanced before we can sell them to the children, and some of them even be given away. And then there are incidental expenses which cannot be avoided here in a work like this any more than at the North. Without something in the hands of the missionary, you will see that he is helpless, and cannot move, even if the most favorable opportunities were presented of securing all that we might desire. With barely enough here to pay for my board from week to week, you will at once see that it is impossible for me to go forward to any great extent in the work which now abounds on every hand.

If we should lose this field now open, it will be because I have not the means to secure it. I am doing all I can to retain it, but others are trying to obtain it, and may, with the means in their power, succeed.

But all is committed to God and you; and I shall pray that he will direct you to do what may be pleasing in his sight, and consequently for his glory. All of which is hastily and imperfectly submitted, by your missionary,

I. I. Leslie.

Memphis, Tenn., Mar. 31st, 1866.

For the World's Crisis.

MISSION LETTERS FROM SWITZERLAND.

NUMBER FIVE.

Bro. Grant:—Since writing my last report, I have been extremely occupied, and have been from home considerable. I have spent much time among the Jura Mountains, and made also a tour to Basle, Berne and Lausanne, to look over the ground and make arrangements for the approaching spring battle. My most important work has been in the little city of Fleurier, and concerning it I will write you a little.

During my lectures in the place of which I wrote in my last report, I became acquainted with a little church of Irvingians, or Irvingites, or, as they style themselves, the "Catholic Apostolic church." The "Angel," "priest," or pastor, treated me very kindly, and manifested much interest in my labors here, as did his church, an intelligent people of good standing in the place. By special invitation, I was present one Sunday morning at their celebration of the mass, and after a separation of sixteen years from the Roman church, I was astonished to see the same ceremonies, with scarcely any variation, that I there participated in; the same ornamental dress is worn, with the cross richly embroidered upon the back. I saw the same consecration and celebration of the unleavened bread and wine; in a word, the same "sacrifice of the mass" that Roman priests perform every day, except that it was said in French instead of Latin In addition to the Roman mass, the priest said to the members, in the middle of the ceremony, "Bring your dimes to the altar." They then arose and carried one-tenth of their weekly income to a box in the altar. Formerly, Papists gave tithes to their priests once a year; but this practice has recently given place to a stated salary. I confess that it made my heart so sad to see this Popish mummery, that it was impossible for me to remain till the close of the performance.

Understanding as I do well, the meaning of the pretended "sacrifice non sanglant" of the mass, or liturgy, I pity those honest christians who are taken in by that snare of the enemy. This "Angel" of the church was so much interested in my lectures and private scriptural expositions, that he wrote to his bishop, Mr. Geering, of Basle, giving him an account of my lectures, and asking his opinion of the doctrines I preached. I believe the good "Angel" did this with an honest heart and the best intentions. But the crafty Bishop read this letter with an entirely different spirit. He answered it by a long letter in German, which was translated and read to the church, some extracts of which I will send you:

"The denial of the 'sacrament' of infant baptism is evident testimony that this man (meaning me), and the congregation to which he belongs, teach the doctrine of baptism in a very inexact manner. Those who deny the validity of infant baptism, do not consider baptism as an act emanating directly from the power of God and his free grace. They have not seized the fundamental idea of this sacrament, given for the communication of the life in Christ Jesus to humanity under the curse, but would have man bring something by his enlightened reason, and give himself to God, and they make of the sacrament of baptism a human act.... This is certain, and one may be sure that it is the fundamental idea with all who would shake off the doctrine of the sacrament, though they may seek to conceal this fundamental thought, being not themselves enlightened upon the subject.... The divine act is the first and important thing in the holy sacrament, and the approaching of man and his decision to give himself to God comes afterward. In infant baptism, parents and god-parents respond for those of whom Jesus said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." He then denies that in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper there is a sacrifice, but only a commemoration. Do you not see clearly that this is the error of all Protestants? It is strange that a man who has been a Roman priest, who ought to understand all the phases of the Protestant superstition and error in regard to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper as a sacrifice, and who in the Roman church must have celebrated the Lord's Supper as a sacrifice or mass, could throw away this doctrine, as the Protestants for three hundred years have done. That he was not better instructed by joining an American community, is certain proof that those who taught him were not apostles of Jesus Christ. (?) It is the most veritable and certain proof of the Apostatate the Lord has re-established, (?) that in these times the holy Eucharist is re-established in all its purity, after having been profaned by heretics, by superstition, and by sacrilegious disputes. It is natural that with the sacrifice he rejects also the altar and the priesthood, but let him not think to overthrow the priesthood of all christians. If we have no liturgy, we take from christian worship its dignity, and must listen to the prayers of well disposed christians, or to sermons more or less gifted," etc.

The distinguished member of that church who communicated to me this part of the Bishop's letter, wrote me: "Afterward I received with much surprise a visit from the Bishop, who came from Basle expressly to see me. He listened to me patiently, and in expectation of my withdrawing from his church. He possessed great authority and dignity. But he is evidently as a hen whose chickens are being taken from her.... O pray much for him that God may preserve him from thinking evil in his heart. He is much against you. I must desire, dear brother, that you may be here for a while. Mr. Geering thinks to remain here till Monday (Feb. 19); should it seem good to the Lord, he will send you here; such is my confidence. I feel for you and your mission a singular affection, which I frankly communicated to Mr. Geering. I told him with what joy I heard you speak of the manner in which you partook of the communion. All this is in his eye a great error. O may God defend his own cause, and preserve me from combating with him. He cannot give me a serpent when I ask of him bread. Pray much for me and for us all."

The next day (Feb. 17) I left home for the field of conflict, and the same evening sent a deputation to the Bishop asking him to accept a public discussion with me on the points of doctrine upon which he accused me of being a heretic, Sunday evening. But he refused the discussion, saying it was impossible for him to accept it, without the permission of the Apostle in London (who is the eighth from the days of Irving, and "when the number twelve is complete the end will come, and then the first and last Apostles will together occupy the judicial seat"). (?) Some of the members of his church insisted that he should accept a discussion with me for the benefit of their cause, to whom he answered that he could not, but would send for an Evangelist for that purpose.

Sunday P. M. several of the members of that church were gathered together at the house of the lady who invited me to Fleurier, and while I was speaking to them with much freedom, the servant notified her that Mr. Geering was at the door. She immediately left us and went to invite him in; but he refused to enter the parlor where we were, so she conversed with him some time in another room. When she returned she seemed in much agitation, and asked me with precipitation by what name the sect to which I belonged was called in America. I answered that those who believed in the speedy coming of Christ were usually called Advent Christians, and some Seventh Day Adventists. She said nothing further till the company dispersed, a few minutes afterward. She then told me that the Bishop had received a message from the "Apostle," who prohibited a discussion with me, saying that I belonged to the "degraded American Advent Millerites." . . . . She then politely asked me for information on the subject. I answered that a christian gentleman of the name of William Miller, who had great knowledge of the Scriptures, was the first who preached the doctrine of the soon coming of Christ in the United States and Canada, and his labors were abundantly blessed of God. I told her that there were several Advent bodies in the United States, but none of them called themselves by the name of Millerites.

I lectured Sunday evening, and the four succeeding ones, to attentive audiences, in defence of the cause of God and the honor of my dear American brethren and sisters, thro' whom I have the privilege of preaching in Europe the glad tidings of Jesus and his approaching Kingdom, but not masses, Dimes, infant sprinkling, etc., etc. I closed my lectures in Fleurier the 22d of February, by a sermon on the sacrifice of the Mass, which under the circumstances it seemed to me my duty to deliver. I send it to you, and you may publish it if you think best.

The seed sown in Fleurier seems to be abundantly blessed of God. Dear Bro. Coulon, pastor of the National Church, and his highly intelligent and excellent wife, are much interested in the soon coming of our Lord. As they understand the English language, they have learned some of our Advent hymns, which they are very fond of singing. They are loving-hearted christians. While I was at Fleurier, he gave a very excellent and interesting lecture for the benefit of the Freedmen of the United States, and considerable money was contributed. Much money has been raised by the churches of Switzerland for their benefit. May God bless them for thus remembering his poor children.

There are several families in Fleurier who have received with joy the evidence of our Lord's soon appearing, and are striving to overcome. Of these is a German brother, an excellent man, in the prime of life, who is well educated in the German and French languages. He desires to consecrate himself to the work of spreading abroad the glorious tidings, which he believes with all his heart. I expect he will accompany me in a tour which I purpose to make soon to Germany, and perhaps as far as Holland.

Bro. Geymet has just returned to Italy to labor. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for this dear young brother, that God may sustain him and make him instrumental in accomplishing much good in that land in which the powers of darkness have held such sway.

I trust you will remember us in your prayers. Your faithful brother in Christ,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

Grandson, Canton de Vaud, Suisse, March 21st, 1866.

Voice of the West, please copy.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE R. I. AND E. CONN. QUARTERLY CONFERENCE,

HELD AT EAST KILLINGLY, APR. 4TH TO 8TH.

The conference commenced Wednesday evening with preaching by Brn. Thomas and Damman.

Thursday, 9½ A. M. After an interesting social meeting, and the appointment of a committee to arrange for preaching during the conference, delegates from various churches gave in their reports.

Bro. D. V. Corey reported the East Killingly church. Brn. Noka and Hopkins had recently labored there. Two had been converted, and two reclaimed from wandering, as the result. Regular prayer meetings had been re-established there evenings during every week. Omens for good were manifest.

Bro. N. Shumway reported the Danielsonville church as about the same as at last conference. Had preaching most of the time. The new chapel was progressing rather slowly.

Abington church, reported by Bro. Wade. Brn. Morse, Noka, Bellows, Chapman, and Streeter, had preached the word. Meant to keep the light burning. Had not followed cunningly devised fables in making known the coming of the Lord. Sabbath school had suffered during the winter, but should now revive it.

Central church, reported by Bro. E. Bellows. Scarcely alive. Have now established a permanent prayer meeting.

River Point, by Bro. Durfee. Membership scattered by the burning of the Arctic Mills. Had paid the debt on their chapel, and raised funds to paint it. Prospect encouraging.

Exeter church, reported by letter. Elder Edwin R. Wood, pastor. Few prayer and conference meetings. Five had decided to keep the seventh day as a Sabbath. . . . [illegible]

Lafayette, by letter. A few willing to bear the burden and heat of the day, and labor for the cause of Christ. Preaching twice a month, by Bro. E. R. Wood.

REPORT OF PREACHERS.

A. Durfee. Have not confined my labors to any one place. Have preached at Natick, River Point, Pontiac and Mohegan. Often dissatisfied with my own labors, and want more deep, heart work in saving men.

H. F. Carpenter. Have closed my labors with the church at Rutland, Vt., where for two years my relation to that church has been most pleasant, and where I have been well cared for by some noble hearts, who love to sacrifice for the gospel's sake. I have now moved to Danielsonville, Ct., and hope and expect to see some fruit unto the glory of God.

E. Bellows. Labors limited by the sickness of my family. Am not discouraged in doing my Master's will. Our race is short. Loved Jesus' coming in '44,—love it better now.

D. O. Hopkins. Had labored at Comer Hill. Twelve had been converted. Nine baptized. At Chestnut Hill some good had been done. Expect to baptize two next Sunday.

D. V. Corey. Had labored at Chestnut Hill.

V. P. Simmons. I need a better experience in my own heart, before I can feel like preaching. I preached once at last Conference.

A. Damman. Had labored mostly at New Bedford, with Brn. Hook, Piper and Thomas. In New Bedford and Fair Haven, two hundred had professed faith in Christ, and seventy-nine had been baptized.

J. W. Thomas. Have been in New Bedford and Fair Haven most of the time. Have gained a net experience by my connection with the revival at New Bedford. I expect to return to Fair Haven church, which has reorganized, and unitedly desire my labors for the present.

Adjourned till to-morrow at 9 A. M.

Friday, 9 A. M. The clerk being absent, Bro. J. W. Thomas was chosen clerk pro tem.

The following resolution was offered and adopted for discussion, viz:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this conference, preachers and lay members ought to labor with greater energy, and possess more wisdom, and more of the harmlessness of the dove, in order to build up one anothes in the most holy faith, and successfully win souls to Christ, and to keep them in the love of God.

Resolved, That the eleventh article of the constitution be suspended. Passed.

Moved, That Bro. J. W. Thomas be ordained at this conference. Carried.

On motion, the conference adjourned its business session to attend to the Freedmen's Mission.

The treasurer of that mission reported $60.25 pledged, $37.00 of which had been collected and forwarded to the General Advent Mission for the Freedmen, according to directions given at the last conference. This report was accepted and adopted.

Subscriptions were now solicited, and $21.50 more were soon pledged, and a goodly part paid over to the treasurer.

Moved, That the funds be kept in the treasurer's hand, till, by inquiry, we can ascertain how and when we can most profitably apply it for the freedmen's aid. Carried.

Meetings for worship and dispensation of the word were continued over the Lord's day, during which Bro. J. W. Thomas was ordained for the ministry, by the laying on of the hands of the presbytery.

Circumstances rendering it impossible for the clerk to be present at the meetings o Saturday and Sunday, he cannot fully speak of them; but he has no doubt but that they were both interesting and profitable; and that they will result in much good to the little flock at Chestnut Hill. We are happy to say that nearly all the sessions of the R. I. and E. Ct. conference have been followed by a revival interest in the places where they were held. May such results continue.

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

LIFE SKETCHES.

A new edition has just been issued, and those who have subscribed and paid will be supplied just as soon as it can be ascertained who have been supplied, and who have not. As some copies have been sent directly from Boston during Mrs. Mussey's absence, it may be difficult to tell the whole number who are yet unsupplied. Will not those who are expecting copies, whether paid for or not, please send their names immediately, and money if they have not already paid, and they shall receive the books by return mail. Price $1.00, postpaid.

Quite a number have received copies which are not yet paid for. Will they not send in the money immediately? Sr. Mussey needs every cent due her to pay for the present edition. Now who will send in their names and money, or the names of their friends, and thus enable Sr. M. to dispose of the whole edition at once, pay her bills, and pay her for her trouble in the past?

Those sending money now due, address Mrs. ABIGAIL MUSSEY, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Those who wish for books, address E. P. Woodward (Crisis Box), Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE YOUNG CONVERTS.

It is good to hear of so many giving their hearts to God. A word to you, as you are about to start on this journey. Have you counted the cost? if so, you will come out all right when the war is ended; so we bid you welcome to the ranks. Yes, we bid you welcome to a good share of persecution, if you live godly in Christ Jesus. We promise you that the enemy will be on your track, but if you resist him he will flee from you; we promise you that you will lose your reputation and be looked down upon by this wicked world, and you will be called foolish. It is a self-denying, cross-bearing way. Will you go? You say yes. Then we promise you still farther that you will meet with many things to try your patience; but look to Jesus. It will all do you good. We ask again, will you go through? If you are bound to go through, and have not been making any boys' trades, we promise from God's word that Jesus will be with you in every trial. He will never leave nor forsake you. You will have an hundred fold here, and in the world to come life everlasting. A bright crown will be yours, and you will drink from life's pure river, walk the golden streets, and have the privilege of seeing our blessed Redeemer. You will also see all the dear saints that ever lived. You will have everything that is good. We promise you our [illegible] good. We will go with you [illegible] helping us.

We ask in conclusion, will you face the storm? If so, you will have a share in all the good things here, and in the world to come eternal life. It will pay. So be of good cheer, it wont be long. Look to Jesus, and not to cold-hearted professors, that are almost ready to give up the war. Take courage. You have started on a good journey; one which, if you are faithful, will end well. May God help you to be honest, humble and good, that Jesus may say to you in that day, "Come ye blessed of my Father." May God grant you grace in every time of need, is the prayer of your brother.

Concord, N. H. JOHN T. KIMBALL.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Cushman.

BRO. GRANT:—It is now just a year since I formed an acquaintance with your paper. It is the most interesting paper I ever read. I have been a believer in the Advent message since 1838. I embraced the seventh-day views in 1851, and took the Review four years. I gave up the seventh-day Sabbath in 1863, choosing Christ rather than Moses; "knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ; even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified. . . . For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me. I do not frustrate the grace of God; for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain."

I think there is enough in the word of God to convince any rational being that a man is saved through the death and sufferings of Christ, and not by the law. There is a great deal that might be said upon this subject, but I will forbear. Bro. Thompson and myself have been holding some meetings in the town of Adams, and some seven or eight have embraced the Advent message, and are now proclaiming the speedy coming of Christ. The work is still increasing. Oh may the Lord lead them by his Spirit into all truth.

Monroe, Mich. HORACE CUSHMAN.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—The day I wrote you last I was taken to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was very ill indeed for ten days; but the Lord has heard the prayer of his people, and raised me up once more, and put me in the field again. I am now at this place, holding a week's meeting, to build up and strengthen the things that remain, and try to bring others to Christ. This mission is doing well now. I think we have passed through our heaviest trials. Four rose for prayers last evening, and the whole congregation seemed to be melted to tenderness. I think the rowdies have come to the conclusion to let us alone, as none have come to trouble us this time. Truly we had a day of peace and joy in the Holy Ghost last Sabbath. Praise God for the victory through Christ, who is able to do all things.

Hackensack, N. J. A. E. SMITH.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool April 7th, Queenstown 8th.

The Austro-Prussian question was unchanged. Prussia is reported to be in a continued uncompromising attitude. The Emperor of Russia has sent two notes to the sovereigns, it is reported, tendering mediation.

The political excitement on the German question, it is said, runs high in Paris, and it is positively reasserted that France is quietly getting an army of observation together and strengthening her garrisons. The minor German States were arming.

DOMESTIC.

New York, April 17. A special dispatch, dated Eastport, to-day, has the following:

"A schooner, loaded with arms, consigned to B. Doran Killian, was seized on her arrival here this morning, but after several hours' detention, was released. Instructions have been received from Washington to strictly enforce the neutrality laws. A large delegation of Fenians arrived to-day."

A special dispatch, dated Montreal, has the following: "A government detective, who has just made a trip on the American side of Lakes Erie and Michigan, reports that the Fenians have fifteen vessels, besides schooners and transports, loading with field artillery, equipments, stores, etc. He also reports large shipments of arms to frontier points and unusual activity in Fenian circles along the frontier."

A special dispatch to the Herald, dated St. Andrews, N. B., has the following:

"There is much excitement here. Volunteers are flocking here from all quarters. The Lieut. Governor and suite are expected here this evening. A regiment of regulars, two companies of artillery, and one of engineers, will be due here to-morrow. Business is almost entirely suspended. The New-Brunswick House of Assembly, yesterday, adjourned for a month. It is said positively that under the new government the habeas corpus will be suspended.

New York, April 19. Last evening a large meeting of the Roberts-Sweeney Fenians took place at Cooper Institute. Addresses were made by Mr. A. L. Morrison of Missisouri. Mr. Roberts stated that this was the last public meeting to be held by his party before the final blow for liberty would be struck.

New York, April 19. The disease on board the steamer Virginia is pronounced a marked Asiatic cholera by the Health Officers. She remained at the upper quarantine until 11 o'clock to-day, when she went to the lower bay. No communication is allowed between her and the shore. Arrangements are making to remove all passengers from the ship to-morrow. It is said there will be no danger of the disease reaching the city from the vessel.

The cholera appeared when the vessel was eight days out, and from one hundred to two hundred persons were attacked, of whom thirty-seven died and twenty-one or twenty-two are now sick, eleven of which are doubtful cases. All the other passengers are reported convalescent. The disease is entirely among the steerage passengers, a large proportion of whom are Germans, and it is supposed that they brought the cholera on board. The mortality among them has been greater than among the Irish or German passengers.

It is mentioned as a singular circumstance, that the disease broke out in about the same place on the ocean at which the passengers on the England were attacked.

April 21. Reports from quarantine state that five new cases of cholera occurred yesterday. Ten were buried yesterday. Five more died last night and sixty-seven are now on hospital ships. The above are by passengers per Virginia. The steamship England arrived to-day. Passengers and crew are all well. One hundred and fifty deaths occurred at Halifax. She will be rigidly quarantined.

April 22. It is stated that the cholera is increasing on the steamship Virginia at a fearful rate, thirty-three new cases having occurred. The hospital ship at quarantine is capable of holding only seventy-five persons, and there are sixty-seven now on board. No other accommodations have as yet been provided.

It is reported that no less than three hundred pulpits in New England are vacant for want of proper support, and that eight hundred are so poorly supported as to yield barely subsistence to the clergy.

PROPHECY OF THE POPE.—A story is going the round of the [illegible] with a high Spanish [illegible] [illegible] says:—"Unfortunately, it is to be feared that the year 1866 will be one in which a great deal of blood will be shed. The fire of the demagogues will burst forth in many parts of Europe; however, this dreadful conflagration will have finished in 1867, when peace will be re-established. Rome will view with grief a second edition of the scenes of 1848, and the Pope will be compelled to abandon the City of the Church as a fugitive. In 1867, when the Pope returns to the Vatican, (?) a grand council will be assembled, and the centenary of St. Peter will be celebrated. In 1868, you will be present at my funeral."

THE FENIAN WAR.—Campobello, the island where parturient Fenianism is expected to give birth to the long-heralded "Irish republic," is a narrow piece of land, stretching north and south, at the entrance to the Bay of Fundy and at the mouth of the river St. Croix. It is only ten miles long and nowhere more than three miles wide, and is owned entirely by J. J. Robinson, a retired captain of the British navy, who lives at the village of Welchpool, the only settlement of consequence on the island. Welchpool is only three miles from Eastport, Me., and has a fine harbor. The island belongs to New Brunswick.

THE MARSHALL HOUSE.—The proprietor of this establishment, No. 10 Marshall Street, Boston, offer to the public a house where there is no drinking, and the company is always respectable and orderly. On the ground floor there is a restaurant, kept on the European plan. The house contains fifty lodging rooms, and Mr. Wadsworth is a polite and obliging landlord, whose moderate charges are suited to the times.

☞ A Committee of the Chicago Academy of Sciences report that they find trichinæ in the muscles of twenty-eight hogs out of the one thousand three hundred and ninety-four examined, and they conclude that in the hogs brought to Chicago one in fifty is affected with trichiniasis, in a greater or less degree. As a security, the Committee say it is simply necessary to cook the meat thoroughly.

☞ There is a great revival of religion in progress at Springfield, Illinois, under the direction of Rev. Mr. Hammond. Three meetings are held daily in the State House, which are attended by thousands, and converts are numbered by hundreds. Mr. Hammond has been permitted to hold meetings in the jail, and the result is that more than one half of the prisoners have been converted.

The Cincinnati Gazette says that pure "Essence of Coffee" is now made in that city out of the "cheapest, dirtiest and nastiest molasses," which is boiled until it ropes, cooled in pans, and when hard, broken up and pulverized. Ground rye is then mixed with it, after which it is boxed up, each box being sold at eighty cents, and labelled "Pure Essence of Coffee."

☞ The boys of the Grammar schools of New Bedford have organized themselves into a society for the suppression of profanity and vulgarity in their schools; have drawn up a regular constitution and by-laws, and mean to make the organization thus begun a powerful and efficient instrument of good.

☞ A large number of capitalists and others assembled at Philadelphia on Thursday, to witness the process of making paper out of wood. A poplar tree, taken from the hill-side, was converted into a clear, white, soft paper in the space of five hours, to the surprise of all present.

☞ A Florida paper asserts that the yellow fever is prevailing at Key West at a considerable extent, and that the regular troops stationed there are to be removed to Tampa in consequence.

Obituaries.

STEERE.—Died in Harmony, R. I., April 14th, after a short but very distressing illness, my father, Hosea Steere, in the eighty-second year of his age. He sleeps in Jesus. MARTHA STEERE.

ORTON.—Died in Blackinton, Mass., April 5th, 1866, our father, Philander Orton, aged sixty-three years, seven months.

Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion by Bro. Wm. J. Blanchard, of Savoy, Mass., from 1 Cor. 15: 49. EDSON NORTON.

Notices.

Dedication and Organization of a Freedmen's Church.

The Lord willing, there will be a dedication of a hall, fitted up for a Freedmen's church, So. East corner of 3d St. and Washington Avenue, a few steps from the post-office, Sunday, Apr. 29th, 1866.

Also, same day and place, there will be an organization of an African church, composed of freedmen, upon the gospel rule of taking the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice.

Also, on Monday evening following, Apr. 30th, a colored school for adults will commence, to be kept five evenings in each week, conducted by Sr. D. K. Prescott, assisted by her sister, Francelia F. Curtis.

A Bible class for adults and children will be organized for the Freedmen, Sunday, May 6th.

Thus far, brethren and sisters, you may rely upon, if the Lord will. If there is any good news for you in prospect, you must wait till seeming facts become facts; for I do not like smoke without fire. The few white brethren and sisters here are with me fully, and are doing their share of the work as instruments of God. H. K. FLAGG.

Notice of the Iowa Miss. Tent.

Those in the West who wish Tent meetings will please make arrangements without delay. There is to be a Tent meeting in Butler and Floyd Co., Iowa, and I am to visit Minn. I can be engaged by the different kinds of Adventists who need Tent meetings till the tent is paid for, whether I preach much or not. Address Elder PETER S. DETO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Other papers please copy.

Notice.

All preaching brethren wishing to come to Springfield, Mass., to preach, will please correspond with THOMAS H. WEAVER.

Notice.

Preaching brethren desiring to preach to the church in Yalesville, Conn., will correspond with Geo. A. Marble, that there may be no conflicting appointments. GEO. A. MARBLE.

Notice.

There will be a conference in Manchester, N. H., in the Advent Hall, Merchant's Exchange, in connection with our yearly feast, to commence Thursday evening, April 27th, and hold over the following Sabbath. The Lord's Supper will be eaten on Sunday evening, April 30th. All are invited. S. W. BISHOP.

Notice.

What church in New Hampshire would like to have the next quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference held with them, which by vote is to commence on Thursday, previous to the first Sunday in June? Will you write me relative to it, and direct to East Boston, Mass., so that due notice may be given of the same? A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. I expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauque Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N.Y. CHARLES [illegible], Bap. Minister.

Notice.

A. Flanell has issued a tract containing evidences from the types of the year and season of the year for the coming of our Lord. It will be sent free of charge to all who send their address.

Notice.

Eld. C. Goodrich has changed his residence, in East Boston. He now resides at No. 69 Marion Street. Will correspondents please direct their letters to No. 69 Marion Street, East Boston, Mass?

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that to [illegible] early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press [illegible], otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, Boston, corner of [illegible] and [illegible] Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON.

J. O. [illegible] . . . . Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

EAST BOSTON.

Meetings every evening this week. Bro. Damman will preach Sunday the 29th.

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Main Street), Sunday, April 29th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M. WM. C. THURMAN.

Lawrence, Mass. . . . . Sunday, April 29th J. COUCH.

Natic, R. I. . . . . Saturday evening, April 28th and Lord's day, 29th.
West Haven . . . . April 30th
Oceanport, N. J. . . . . May 1st through the week, and over the following Lord's day. MILES GRANT.

CONCORD, N. H.

Wm. Sutherland . . . . April 29th
John Couch . . . . Sunday, May 6th
Geo. W. Brown, from Elliot, Me. . . . Sunday, May 13th
Miles Grant . . . . Sunday, May 20th
Charles Ramsey . . . . Sunday, May 27th
Timothy Cole . . . . June 3d and 10th

Concord, N. H., (corner of Centre and Green streets) Sunday, May 6th.
Warner, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 15th and 16th.
Bradford, (Pond meeting-house), Thursday and Friday evenings, May 17th and 18th.
Canaan . . . . Sunday, May 20th GEO. W. BROWN, of Portsmouth, N. H.

[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request. Brethren will please bear in mind that there are two George W. Browns, and this is not the other one. H. MUNGER.

Haverhill, Mass . . . . Sunday, April 29th A. W. SIBLEY.

Portland . . . . Sunday April 29th and May 6th and 13th. TIMOTHY COLE.

West Abington, Mass . . . . Sundays, April 29th C. C. RAMSEY.

Freeport, (Swamp school-house) . . . . Sunday, May 20th R. R. YORK.

Warner Gore . . . . Sunday, April 29th and longer if duty requires.
Schoodac (school-house) . . . . Sunday, May 6th C. W. SARGENT.

Bradford, N. H., (Pond meeting-house) . . . . May 6th WM. WALKER, 2d.

River Point, R. I. . . . . Sunday, May 6th J. T. DIXON.

Cheshire Street, Ct. . . . . Sunday, April 29th B. HITCHCOCK. LUTHER BOUTELL.

Springfield, Mass . . . . Sunday, April 29th DR. A. M. HIGGINS.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. . . . . Sunday, April 29th W. N. PILE.

Newark, N. J. . . . . Lord's day, April 29th SAMUEL CURRY.

Rome (Tellery school-house) . . . . April 29th
Belgrade (meeting house) . . . . May 13th
Rome (Town House) . . . . May 20th H. B. SEVEY.

Haverhill, Mass . . . . Monday evening, April 30th
Dover, N. H. . . . . Wed. eve., May 2d
New Durham . . . . Thursday eve, May 3d
Alton Corner . . . . Friday eve, May 4th
Baccoonborough . . . . Saturday eve, May 5th and over the Lord's day.
Exeter, N. H. . . . . Lord's day, May 13th A. ROSS.

Abington, Ct. . . . . Sunday, A. M., April 29th
West Woodstock, Ct., at 5 o'clock, Sunday, P. M., April 29th.
Abington, Ct. . . . . May 6th
Danielsonville, Ct. . . . . May 13th
Bristol, Ct. . . . . May 20th
Hartford, Ct. . . . . May 27th
If any in the vicinity of Bristol or Hartford desire evening appointments while I am in Western Connecticut, write me at Danielsonville, Ct. H. F. CARPENTER.

Salisbury, N. H., Methodist Chapel, South Road Village, Sabbath, April 29th. T. M. PREBLE.

Cheshire, Ct . . . . Sundays, May 6th and 13th CHAS. E. PIPER.

South Berwick, (Central Hall) . . . . Sunday, April 29th THOS. M. LATHAM.

RICHMOND, R. I., (CLARK'S HALL.)

M. R. Phetteplace . . . . Sunday, May 13th
Augustus Durfee . . . . Sunday, May 27th

Harwinton, Ct. . . . . Sunday, April 29th O. D. WOODRUFF.

Guilford, Ct . . . . Sunday, April 29th WM. H. FISHER.

West Falmouth, Me. . . . . April 29th
Shall have a conference meeting in the meeting-house, Saturday 28th, P. M., 2 o'clock. Probably Bro. York will be with me. I. C. WELLCOME.

South Windsor, Ct . . . . May 5th and over Sunday.
Agawam, Mass . . . . May 13th GEO. A. STREETER.

Warner, N. H., Sunday, May 13th, at the school-house in Bro. Hamphill's District, about one mile from Waterloo school-house. SIMEON ROBY.

Lovely Street, Ct. . . . . Sunday, April 29th
Pleasant Valley . . . . Sunday, May 6th
Yalesville, Ct. . . . . Sunday, May 13th
Bristol, Ct. . . . . Sunday, May 20th
Cheshire Street, Ct. . . . . Sunday, May 27th S. WOODRUFF.

PLEASANT VALLEY, CT.

Seth Woodruff . . . . May 6th
R. Williams . . . . May 20th
Lovely Street, Ct. . . . . May 13th WM. J. RIPLEY.

East Farnham, (Bull school-house), Friday, 4 P. M., May 11th.
Stukeley, (near Lewis Brown's), Saturday, 4 P. M., May 12th.
At the Sargeant school-house, 10½ A. M., Sabbath, May 13th.
At the Lake, a quarterly meeting, commencing on Saturday, at 2 P. M., May 19th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Let all interested attend. C. P. DOW.

EAST BOWDOINHAM.

R. R. York . . . . Sunday, May 6th
H. D. Reed . . . . Sunday, May 20th

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house, with Bro. H D Reed), Sunday, May 13th. R. R. YORK.

Wallingford Farms . . . . April 29th
Winsted . . . . May 6th
Seltico . . . . May 13th R. WILLIAMS.

North Adams . . . . Sunday, April 29th E. MCCULLOCK.

Manchester . . . . Friday evening, May 4th
East Canaan, N. H., (baptism) . . . . Lord's day, May 6th
Manchester . . . . Lord's day, May 13th C. C. STEVENS.

Lorrain, Jeff. Co., N. Y., Red school-house, Sunday, April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Lily school-house in the evening of the same day.
Glenmore, N. Y. . . . . May 3d and 4th
New London, (as Bro. Wm. Morrill may appoint), Sunday, May 6th.
Redfield Square, N. Y. . . . . May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburg, N. Y. . . . . May 22d and 23d
Copenhagen, N. Y. . . . . May 24th C. H. WILLIAMS.

West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y. . . . . Sunday, May 6th
If any brethren wish me to hold meetings with them on Sundays of the coming summer, let them correspond with me at Dansville, N. Y., as I am at liberty to go wherever the door opens for me. F. BURR.

Coventry, R. I., (at Central Baptist Church, between the Anthony and Washington Mills), Sunday, April 29th. PETER NOKA.

Portsmouth, N. H. . . . . Sunday, April 29th J. G. SMITH.

New Britain . . . . Lord's day, April 29th RANDOLPH E. LADD.

Square Pond, Ct. . . . . Sunday, April 29th (Baptism in the afternoon.) P. S. BUTLER.

New York, (Cooper Institute) . . . . April 29th
My appointment at Oceanport, N. J., is withdrawn. WM. STUART.

Concord, N. H., (Angelus Hall), Lord's day, April 29th R. [illegible]

Springfield, Mass., Barnes' Block, Lord's days, May 6th and 13th, and through the week intervening. SAMUEL CURRY.

Melvin Village (for baptism) . . . . April 29th
Pascoag [illegible], (where Bro. [illegible] may appoint), May 6th.
[illegible] . . . . May 13th T. W. [illegible]

Worcester . . . . May 6th
[illegible] . . . . May 13th
New Haven, Ct. . . . . May 20th
Hartford, Ct. . . . . May 27th
[illegible] . . . . June 3d
[illegible] . . . . June 10th
Hartford, Ct. . . . . June 17th
Warehouse Point . . . . June 17th J. S. WHITE.

Concord, N. H. (Angelus Hall) . . . . May 6th
[illegible], N. H., (Methodist District, where Bro. Smith may appoint) . . . . Sunday, April 15th JOSEPH PINKHAM.

East Canaan . . . . Saturday evening, April 28th and Sunday 29th. C. H. WILLEY.

J. H. P. VARNEY.

Worcester, Mass . . . . Sunday, April 29th H. MUNGER.

Exeter, (Chamberlain school-house) . . . . April 29th
Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) . . . . May 6th
Levant, (Kenniston's Mills) . . . . May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's) . . . . May 27th I. K. LOMBARD.

Thomaston, Ct. . . . . Sunday, April 29th
Wrightsville . . . . evening, May 6th GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Darien City, Genesee Co. (as Bro. Henry Sharrock may appoint), Sunday April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Baptist church, near Bro. B. C. Simonds, at 4 P. M. same day. C. P. SWEET.

South Reading . . . . Sunday, April 29th C. GOODRICH.

Salem, Mass . . . . Sunday, May 6th L. BOUTELL.

Orford, Quinttown, N. H. . . . . April 29th
Pomfret, Vt., (as J. Harrington may appoint), May 6th L. C. GLAZIER.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall), Saturday evening April 28th, and Sunday, 29th, day and evening. L. R. OTIS.

Champlain (Village), N. Y., & M. . . . . April 29th
Montreal, C. E. . . . . May 6th G. W. STETSON.

Biddeford, Me . . . . Lord's day, April 29th C. C. STEVENS.

West Hoosic, (Advent Chapel) . . . . April 29th WM. J. BLANCHARD.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. L. Himes—The Young Pilgrim has been sent as ordered.

M. M. Weaver—T. T. F., Manchester, N. H.

A. W. Gage—Paid to No. 554.

S. B. Ensign—Have no English Bibles with references between the verses.

Mrs. W. Thrall—E. Hitchcock credited in No. 550.

E. Burton—The price of the Lyre you will find in the book list, on the last column.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 551. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—H A Wood 571, E Small 568, T Austain 564, M Kimball 542, J V Young 571, E M Kingsbury 571, A Shaw 553, A S Barber 600, M Dore 560.

$1.25 each—S Dodge 572, H M Oyer 580, P M London 569, C Smith 576, J H Lang 531, W Gladden 576, J L Roberts 586, S J Henderson 576, W S Chandler 571, J. B Adams 574, T R V Bradley 600, J B Mooney 572, M. Curtis 578, E W Ager 574, E Seal 580, S J Buswell 556, J C Shorey 577, M M Hazard 572, M O Dunham 571, F E. Morrill 574, J. Hogan 576, A. Cooms 576, H. Veasey 576, O Pease 592, S B Saxton 579, H A Brown 573.

$2.00 each—E. Stowe 651, L. Tiffany 682, B. Moody 589, A Douglass 595, E Britton 539, P Morgan 573, C E Gierlow 631, L Orcutt 575.

$2.50 each—S. Rogers 611, M. Farnham 606, W. H Kimball 583, H W Norville 607, M J Groton 602, M Swallow 672, H Johnson 602, C E Burke 581, C C Barker 602, J Hutchins 563, J C Hutchins 606, D A Brown 600, L H Van Spanckeren 593, J Mitchell 601, J Moore 593, M H Dorr 603, I Jillson 642, E H Jillson 679, E A Little 607, S P Vickery 525, C W Ellwood 602, J Harriman 602, D Hodge 596, E Green 602, E Mabey 601, I M Ware 599, H W Hammonds 594, H Cornwell 602, C F Whittier 602, J Hurd 606, H Burrell 571, P Tucker 598, V B Moore 602, H F Paul 607, M E Munsey 602, T A Moulton 602, E E Dalton 602, E Stimpson 602, L. A. Tucker 602.

$3.00 each—N H Berry 612, A. F. Pawley 538, E. T. Day 560, J Quimby 516, J Ray 601, F S Bradford 517, D Taylor 619, C Carpenter 598, C Bond 608.

Various sums—P S Ainsworth $1.68, 562; E. Dexter $3.60, 572, T. Witham $9.00, 572; M. J. Pierce $1.50, 600; C H Aborn $3.45, 551; I E Gillespie 25c, 559; L. Wallingford 50c, 560; W W Cheadle $2.25, 587; N. A. Brooks $1.50, 563; H Foster $5.00, 577; H. B. Dunlap 50c, 551; E Wetmore $1.50, 608; E Orton 85c, 551; S. Orton (No. Pownal, Vt.) 95c, 560; W Holsinger 55c, 556; S Pray $3.60, 581; H Babbitt $5.00, 525.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

H M Oyer 83c, M M Tower 83c, J A Burnham $5.00, P S Ainsworth $8.32, M. A. Georgia 50c, S J Buswell $2.10, I E Gillespie $1.75, C C Baker $1.00, E Hutchins $1.00, G L Wilson $1.00, W. W. Cheadle $1.75, P. Ramer $3.50, W H Nevers 30c, H M Bryant $7.20, W S Raymond $1.00, E Dodgson 40c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.—P S Butler, J S Whitcar, W S Raymond, J S Burnham, M M Tower, H M Dyer, C C Barker, I M Raynor, S J Buswell, I E Gillespie, G L Winslow, S Ramer, P Ramer, W. W. Cheadle, W. Holsinger, M. McCulloch, E Dodgson.

BY EXPRESS—H M Bryant, P S Ainsworth.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

E Hutchins, L Taylor, A E Smith, W L Carroll, I I Leslie, C E Clark, A Lewis, J Croffut, S Whitaker, O W Stetson, L M Britton, I C Wellcome, L Boutell, M Wood, W A Penn, S Curry, L C McKinstry, P Eaton.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Dr. I. I. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
H. K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francelia F. Curtis—149 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
Anna E. Smith—Missionary among the colored people. After May 1st, No. 492 Second Avenue, between 27th and 28th streets, New York City.
H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
J. R. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—364 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
Wm. A. Penn—Pulaski, Oswego Co., N. Y.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
R. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. P. Nason—North Haven, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—16, Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 67 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. I. Deye—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 94, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.

FOR SALE, BAGSTER'S BIBLE.

ENGLISH VERSION.

Interleaved Greek New Testament, half morocco, gilt. Price, postpaid, $4.25. Only one copy. Address E. P. WOODWARD, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion . . . . 12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make itself? . . . . 16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God? . . 16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible? . . . . 24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament? . . . . 16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable? . . . . 16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles? . . 16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy . . . . 16 pp., 4c.
9. Moses and the Prophets . . . . 20 pp., 5c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars . . . . 28 pp., 5c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise . . . . 36 pp., 5c.
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture . . . . 28 pp., 5c.
13. Science, or Faith? . . . . 32 pp., 5c.

For the Set, (making 284 pp.) . . . . 40c, postpaid.

FOR A GREATER QUANTITY.

By mail, 500 pp. . . . . $1.00.
By express, 1000 pp. . . . . $1.[illegible]

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

For sale at the office of the

ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 8c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 8c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 8c.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 20c.

THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c; by mail, 15c.

THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 4c.

THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $3.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.

CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.

ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 29c.

RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.

GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.

IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL: What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT: What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 6c.

THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an emission of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c; by mail, 8c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. c; by mail, 4c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c; by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS: A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.26. Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.86.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 30c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid; $2.00 per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 18c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 8c. on every three copies.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 80c; by mail, 90c.

HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.

COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New." By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS of a Bruised Reed. By F. H. Chamberlain. By mail, 17c.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.

NON-RESISTANCE. By W. O. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 3c. single; by mail, 4c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

BETHLEHEM; a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 30c; $2.80 per dozen. Paper 20c, $1.50 per dozen, postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 6c; per dozen, 60c.

RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of the "cities of the nations." By Wm. Shepherd. 10c, postpaid; 85c. a dozen.

THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Jenks. 6c; by mail 7c.

OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Operations of the American Advent Mission Society, its Constitution, Officers, [illegible]

EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a Slave for forty-three years. 10c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 10c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 2c, postpaid.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. [illegible]

here; such is my confidence. I feel for you and your mission a singular affection, which I frankly communicated to Mr. Geering. I told him with what joy I heard you speak of the manner in which you partook of the communion. All this is in his eye a great error. O may God defend his own cause, and preserve me from combating with him. He cannot give me a serpent when I ask of him bread. Pray much for me and for us all."

The next day (Feb. 17) I left home for the field of conflict, and the same evening sent a deputation to the Bishop asking him to accept a public discussion with me on the points of doctrine upon which he accused me of being a heretic, Sunday evening. But he refused the discussion, saying it was impossible for him to accept it, without the permission of the Apostle in London (who is the eighth from the days of Irving, and "when the number twelve is complete the end will come, and then the first and last Apostles will together occupy the judicial seat"). (?) Some of the members of his church insisted that he should accept a discussion with me for the benefit of their cause, to whom he answered that he could not, but would send for an Evangelist for that purpose.

Sunday P M several of the members of that church were gathered together at the house of the lady who invited me to Fleurier, and while I was speaking to them with much freedom, the servant notified her that Mr. Geering was at the door. She immediately left us and went to invite him in; but he refused to enter the parlor where we were, so she conversed with him some time in another room. When she returned she seemed in much agitation, and asked me with precipitation by what name the sect to which I belonged was called in America. I answered that those who believed in the speedy coming of Christ were usually called Advent Christians, and some Seventh Day Adventists. She said nothing further till the company dispersed, a few minutes afterward. She then told me that the Bishop had received a message from the "Apostle," who prohibited a discussion with me, saying that I belonged to the "degraded American Advent Millerites." . . . She then politely asked me for information on the subject. I answered that a christian gentleman of the name of William Miller, who had great knowledge of the Scriptures, was the first who preached the doctrine of the soon coming of Christ in the United States and Canada, and his labors were abundantly blessed of God. I told her that there were several Advent bodies in the United States, but none of them called themselves by the name of Millerites.

I lectured Sunday evening, and the four succeeding ones, to attentive audiences, in defence of the cause of God and the honor of my dear American brethren and sisters, thro' whom I have the privilege of preaching in Europe the glad tidings of Jesus and his approaching Kingdom, but not masses, Dimes, infant sprinkling, etc, etc. I closed my lectures in Fleurier the 22d of February, by a sermon on the sacrifice of the Mass, which under the circumstances it seemed to me my duty to deliver. I send it to you, and you may publish it if you think best.

The seed sown in Fleurier seems to be abundantly blessed of God. Dear Bro. Coulon, pastor of the National Church, and his highly intelligent and excellent wife, are much interested in the soon coming of our Lord. As they understand the English language, they have learned some of our Advent hymns, which they are very fond of singing. They are loving-hearted christians. While I was at Fleurier, he gave a very excellent and interesting lecture for the benefit of the Freedmen of the United States, and considerable money was contributed. Much money has been raised by the churches of Switzerland for their benefit. May God bless them for thus remembering his poor children.

There are several families in Fleurier who have received with joy the evidence of our Lord's soon appearing, and are striving to overcome. Of these is a German brother, an excellent man, in the prime of life, who is well educated in the German and French languages. He desires to consecrate himself to the work of spreading abroad the glorious tidings, which he believes with all his heart. I expect he will accompany me in a tour which I purpose to make soon to Germany, and perhaps as far as Holland.

Bro. Geymet has just returned to Italy to labor. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for this dear young brother, that God may sustain him and make him instrumental in accomplishing much good in that land in which the powers of darkness have held such sway.

I trust you will remember us in your prayers. Your faithful brother in Christ,

M. B. Czechowski.

Grandson, Canton de Vaud, Suisse, March 21st, 1866.

Voice of the West, please copy.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE R. I. AND E. CONN. QUARTERLY CONFERENCE,

HELD AT EAST KILLINGLY, APR. 4TH TO 8TH.

The conference commenced Wednesday evening with preaching by Brn. Thomas and Damman.

Thursday, 9½ A. M. After an interesting social meeting, and the appointment of a committee to arrange for preaching during the conference, delegates from various churches gave in their reports.

Bro. D. V. Corey reported the East Killingly church. Brn. Noka and Hopkins had recently labored there. Two had been converted, and two reclaimed from wandering, as the result. Regular prayer meetings had been re-established there evenings during every week. Omens for good were manifest.

Bro. N. Shumway reported the Danielsonville church as about the same as at last conference. Had preaching most of the time. The new chapel was progressing rather slowly.

Abington church, reported by Bro. Wade. Brn. Morse, Noka, Ballows, Chapman, and Streeter, had preached the word. Meant to keep the light burning. Had not followed cunningly devised fables in making known the coming of the Lord. Sabbath school had suffered during the winter, but should now revive it.

Central church, reported by Bro. E. Bellows. Scarcely alive. Have now established a permanent prayer meeting.

River Point, by Bro. Durfee. Membership scattered by the burning of the Arctic Mills. Had paid the debt on their chapel, and raised funds to paint it. Prospect encouraging.

Exeter church, reported by letter. Elder Edwin R. Wood, pastor. Few prayer and [illegible] decided to keep the seventh day as a Sabbath.

Lafayette, by letter. A few willing to bear the burden and heat of the day, and labor for the cause of Christ. Preaching twice a month, by Bro. E. R. Wood.

REPORT OF PREACHERS.

A. Durfee. Have not confined my labors to any one place. Have preached at Natick, River Point, Pontiac and Mohegan. Often dissatisfied with my own labors, and want more deep, heart work in saving men.

H. F. Carpenter. Have closed my labors with the church at Rutland, Vt., where for two years my relation to that church has been most pleasant, and where I have been well cared for by some noble hearts, who love to sacrifice for the gospel's sake. I have now moved to Danielsonville, Ct., and hope and expect to see some fruit unto the glory of God.

E. Bellows. Labors limited by the sickness of my family. Am not discouraged in doing my Master's will. Our race is short. Loved Jesus' coming in '44,—love it better now.

D. O. Hopkins. Had labored at Comer Hill. Twelve had been converted. Nine baptized. At Chestnut Hill some good had been done. Expect to baptize two next Sunday.

D. V. Corey. Had labored at Chestnut Hill.

V. P. Simmons. I need a better experience in my own heart, before I can feel like preaching. I preached once at last Conference.

A. Damman. Had labored mostly at New Bedford, with Brn. Hook, Piper and Thomas. In New Bedford and Fair Haven, two hundred had professed faith in Christ, and seventy-nine had been baptized.

J. W. Thomas. Have been in New Bedford and Fair Haven most of the time. Have gained a net experience by my connection with the revival at New Bedford. I expect to return to Fair Haven church, which has reorganized, and unitedly desire my labors for the present.

Adjourned till to-morrow at 9 A. M.

Friday, 9 A. M. The clerk being absent, Bro. J. W. Thomas was chosen clerk pro tem.

The following resolution was offered and adopted for discussion, viz:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this conference, preachers and lay members ought to labor with greater energy, and possess more wisdom, and more of the harmlessness of the dove, in order to build up one another in the most holy faith, and successfully win souls to Christ, and to keep them in the love of God.

Resolved, That the eleventh article of the constitution be suspended. Passed.

Moved, That Bro. J. W. Thomas be ordained at this conference. Carried.

On motion, the conference adjourned its business session to attend to the Freedmen's Mission.

The treasurer of that mission reported $60.25 pledged, $37.00 of which had been collected and forwarded to the General Advent Mission for the Freedmen, according to directions given at the last conference. This report was accepted and adopted.

Subscriptions were now solicited, and $21.50 more were soon pledged, and a goodly part paid over to the treasurer.

Moved, That the funds be kept in the treasurer's hand, till, by inquiry, we can ascertain how and when we can most profitably apply it for the freedmen's aid. Carried.

Meetings for worship and dispensation of the word were continued over the Lord's day, during which Bro. J. W. Thomas was ordained for the ministry, by the laying on of the hands of the presbytery.

Circumstances rendering it impossible for the clerk to be present at the meetings o Saturday and Sunday, he cannot fully speak of them; but he has no doubt but that they were both interesting and profitable; and that they will result in much good to the little flock at Chestnut Hill. We are happy to say that nearly all the sessions of the R. I and E. Ct. conference have been followed by a revival interest in the places where they were held. May such results continue.

H. F. Carpenter; Clerk.

LIFE SKETCHES.

A new edition has just been issued, and those who have subscribed and paid will be supplied just as soon as it can be ascertained who have been supplied, and who have not. As some copies have been sent directly from Boston during Mrs. Mussey's absence, it may be difficult to tell the whole number who are yet unsupplied. Will not those who are expecting copies, whether paid for or not, please send their names immediately, and money if they have not already paid, and they shall receive the books by return mail. Price $1.00, postpaid.

Quite a number have received copies which are not yet paid for. Will they not send in the money immediately? Sr. Mussey needs every cent due her to pay for the present edition. Now who will send in their names and money, or the names of their friends, and thus enable Sr. M. to dispose of the whole edition at once, pay her bills, and pay her for her trouble in the past?

Those sending money now due, address Mrs. Abigail Mussey, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Those who wish for books, address E. P. Woodward (Crisis Box), Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE YOUNG CONVERTS.

It is good to hear of so many giving their hearts to God. A word to you, as you are about to start on this journey. Have you counted the cost? if so, you will come out all right when the war is ended; so we bid you welcome to the ranks. Yes, we bid you welcome to a good share of persecution, if you live godly in Christ Jesus. We promise you that the enemy will be on your track, but if you resist him he will flee from you; we promise you that you will lose your reputation and be looked down upon by this wicked world, and you will be called foolish. It is a self-denying, cross-bearing way. Will you go? You say yes. Then we promise you still farther that you will meet with many things to try your patience; but look to Jesus. It will all do you good. We ask again, will you go through? If you are bound to go through, and have not been making any boys' trades, we promise from God's word that Jesus will be with you in every trial. He will never leave nor forsake you. You will have an hundred fold here, and in the world to come life everlasting. A bright crown will be yours, and you will drink from life's pure river, walk the golden streets, and have the privilege of seeing our blessed Redeemer. You will also see all the dear saints that ever lived. You will have everything that is good. We promise you our prayers, and to do you good. We will go with you, the Lord helping us.

We ask in conclusion, will you face the storm? If so, you will have a share in all the good things here, and in the world to come eternal life. It will pay. So be of good cheer, it wont be long. Look to Jesus, and not to cold-hearted professors, that are almost ready to give up the war. Take courage. You have started on a good journey; one which, if you are faithful, will end well. May God help you to be honest, humble and good, that Jesus may say to you in that day, "Come ye blessed of my Father." May God grant you grace in every time of need, is the prayer of your brother.

Concord, N. H. John T. Kimball.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Cushman.

Bro. Grant:—It is now just a year since I formed an acquaintance with your paper. It is the most interesting paper I ever read. I have been a believer in the Advent message since 1838. I embraced the seventh-day views in 1851, and took the Review four years. I gave up the seventh-day Sabbath in 1862, choosing Christ rather than Moses; "knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ; even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified. . . . For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me. I do not frustrate the grace of God; for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain."

I think there is enough in the word of God to convince any rational being that a man is saved through the death and sufferings of Christ, and not by the law. There is a great deal that might be said upon this subject, but I will forbear. Bro. Thompson and myself have been holding some meetings in the town of Adams, and some seven or eight have embraced the Advent message, and are now proclaiming the speedy coming of Christ. The work is still increasing. Oh may the Lord lead them by his Spirit into all truth.

Monroe, Mich. Horace Cushman.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

Bro. Grant:—The day I wrote you last I was taken to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was very ill indeed for ten days; but the Lord has heard the prayer of his people, and raised me up once more, and put me in the field again. I am now at this place, holding a week's meeting, to build up and strengthen the things that remain, and try to bring others to Christ. This mission is doing well now. I think we have passed through our heaviest trials. Four rose for prayers last evening, and the whole congregation seemed to be melted to tenderness. I think the rowdies have come to the conclusion to let us alone, as none have come to trouble us this time. Truly we had a day of peace and joy in the Holy Ghost last Sabbath. Praise God for the victory through Christ, who is able to do all things.

Hackensack, N. J. A. E. Smith

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool April 7th, Queenstown 8th.

The Austro-Prussian question was unchanged. Prussia is reported to be in a continued uncompromising attitude. The Emperor of Russia has sent two notes to the sovereigns, it is reported, tendering mediation.

The political excitement on the German question, it is said, runs high in Paris, and it is positively reasserted that France is quietly getting an army of observation together and strengthening her garrisons. The minor German States were arming.

DOMESTIC.

New York, April 17. A special dispatch, dated Eastport, to-day, has the following:

"A schooner, loaded with arms, consigned to B. Doran Killian, was seized on her arrival here this morning, but after several hours' detention, was released. Instructions have been received from Washington to strictly enforce the neutrality laws. A large delegation of Fenians arrived to-day."

A special dispatch, dated Montreal, has the following: "A government detective, who has just made a trip on the American side of Lakes Erie and Michigan, reports that the Fenians have fifteen vessels, besides schooners and transports, loading with field artillery, equipments, stores, etc. He also reports large shipments of arms to frontier points and unusual activity in Fenian circles along the frontier."

A special dispatch to the Herald, dated St. Andrews, N. B., has the following:

"There is much excitement here. Volunteers are flocking here from all quarters. The Lieut. Governor and suite are expected here this evening. A regiment of regulars, two companies of artillery, and one of engineers, will be due here to-morrow. Business is almost entirely suspended. The New-Brunswick House of Assembly, yesterday, adjourned for a month. It is said positively that under the new government the habeas corpus will be suspended."

New York, April 19. Last evening a large meeting of the Roberts-Sweeney Fenians took place at Cooper Institute. Addresses were made by Mr. A. L. Morrison of Missouri. Mr. Roberts stated that this was the last public meeting to be held by his party before the final blow for liberty would be struck.

New York, April 19. The disease on board the steamer Virginia is pronounced a marked Asiatic cholera by the Health Officers. She remained at the upper quarantine until 11 o'clock to-day, when she went to the lower bay. No communication is allowed between her and the shore. Arrangements are making to remove all passengers from the ship to-morrow. It is said there will be no danger of the disease reaching the city from the vessel.

The cholera appeared when the vessel was eight days out, and from one hundred to two hundred persons were attacked, of whom thirty-seven died and twenty-one or twenty-two are now sick, eleven of which are doubtful cases. All the other passengers are reported convalescent. The disease is entirely among the steerage passengers, a large proportion of whom are Germans, and it is supposed that they brought the cholera on board. The mortality among them has been greater than among the Irish or German passengers.

It is mentioned as a singular circumstance, that the disease broke out in about the same place on the ocean at which the passengers on the England were attacked.

April 21. Reports from quarantine state that five new cases of cholera occurred yesterday. Ten were buried yesterday. Five more died last night and sixty-seven are now on hospital ships. The above are by passengers per Virginia. The steamship England arrived to-day. Passengers and crew are all well. One hundred and fifty deaths occurred at Halifax. She will be rigidly quarantined.

April 22. It is stated that the cholera is increasing on the steamship Virginia at a fearful rate, thirty-three new cases having occurred. The hospital ship at quarantine is capable of holding only seventy-five persons, and there are sixty-seven now on board. No other accommodations have as yet been provided.

It is reported that no less than three hundred pulpits in New England are vacant for want of proper support, and eight hundred are so poorly supported as to yield barely subsistence to the clergy.

Prophecy by the Pope.—A story is going the round of the Neapolitan papers in regard to a prophecy made by [illegible] in a conversation with a high Spanish personage. It remains to be seen whether His Holiness is as good at a prophecy as [illegible]. The Holy Father says:—"Unfortunately, it is to be feared that the year 1866 will be one in which a great deal of blood will be shed. The fire of the demagogues will burst forth in many parts of Europe; however, this dreadful conflagration will have finished in 1867, when peace will be re-established. Rome will view with grief a second invasion of the enemies of 1848, and the Pope will be obliged to abandon the City of the Church as a fugitive. In 1867, when the Pope returns to the Vatican, (?) a grand council will be assembled, and the centenary of St. Peter will be celebrated in 1868; you will be present at my funeral!"

The Fenian War.—Campobello, the island where parturient Fenianism is expected to give birth to the long-heralded "Irish republic," is a narrow piece of land, stretching north and south, at the entrance to the Bay of Fundy and at the mouth of the river St. Croix. It is only ten miles long and nowhere more than three miles wide, and is owned entirely by J. J. Robinson, a retired captain of the British navy, who lives at the village of Welchpool, the only settlement of consequence on the island. Welchpool is only three miles from Eastport, Me., and has a fine harbor. The island belongs to New Brunswick.

The Marshall House.—The proprietor of this establishment, No. 10 Marshall Street, Boston, offer to the public a house where there is no drinking, and the company is always respectable and orderly. On the ground floor there is a restaurant, kept on the European plan. The house contains fifty lodging rooms, and Mr. Wadsworth is a polite and obliging landlord, whose moderate charges are suited to the times.

☞ A Committee of the Chicago Academy of Sciences report that they find trichinæ in the muscles of twenty-eight hogs out of the one thousand three hundred and ninety-four examined, and they conclude that in the hogs brought to Chicago one in fifty is affected with trichinæsis, in a greater or less degree. As a security, the Committee say it is simply necessary to cook the meat thoroughly.

☞ There is a great revival of religion in progress at Springfield, Illinois, under the direction of Rev. Mr. Hammond. Three meetings are held daily in the State House, which are attended by thousands, and converts are numbered by hundreds. Mr. Hammond has been permitted to hold meetings in the jail, and the result is that more than one half of the prisoners have been converted.

The Cincinnati Gazette says that pure "Essence of Coffee" is now made in that city out of the "cheapest, dirtiest and nastiest molasses," which is boiled until it ropes, cooled in pans, and when hard, broken up and pulverized. Ground rye is then mixed with it, after which it is boxed up, each box being sold at eighty cents, and labelled "Pure Essence of Coffee."

☞ The boys of the Grammar schools of New Bedford have organized themselves into a society for the suppression of profanity and vulgarity in their schools, have drawn up a regular constitution and by-laws, and mean to make the organization thus begun a powerful and efficient instrument of good.

☞ A large number of capitalists and others assembled at Philadelphia on Thursday, to witness the process of making paper out of wood. A poplar tree, taken from the hill-side, was converted into a clear, white, soft paper in the space of five hours, to the surprise of all present.

☞ A Florida paper asserts that the yellow fever is prevailing at Key West at a considerable extent, and that the regular troops stationed there are to be removed to Tampa in consequence.

Obituaries.

Steere.—Died in Harmony, R. I., April 14th, after a short but very distressing illness, my father, Hosea Steere, in the eighty-second year of his age.

He sleeps in Jesus. Martha Steere.

Orton.—Died in Blackinton, Mass., April 5th, 1866, our father, Philander Orton, aged sixty-three years, seven months.

Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion by Bro. Wm. J. Blanchard, of Savoy, Mass., from 1 Cor. 15. 49. Edson Norton.

Notices.

Dedication and Organization of a Freedmen's Church.

The Lord willing, there will be a dedication of a hall, fitted up for a Freedmen's church, So. East corner of 3d St. and Washington Avenue, a few steps from the post-office, Sunday, Apr. 29th, 1866.

Also, same day and place, there will be an organization of an African church, composed of freedmen, upon the gospel rule of taking the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice.

Also, on Monday evening following, Apr. 30th, a colored school for adults will commence, to be kept five evenings in each week, conducted by Sr D. K. Prescott, assisted by her sister, Francelia F. Curtis.

A Bible class for adults and children will be organized for the Freedmen, Sunday, May 6th.

Thus far, brethren and sisters, you may rely upon, if the Lord will. If there is any good news for you in prospect, you must wait till seeming facts become facts; for I do not like smoke without fire. The few white brethren and sisters here are with me fully, and are doing their share of the work as instruments of God. H. K. Flagg.

Notice of the Iowa Miss. Tent.

Those in the West who wish Tent meetings will please make arrangements without delay. There is to be a Tent meeting in Butler and Floyd Co., Iowa, and I am to visit Minn. I can be engaged by the different kinds of Adventists who need Tent meetings till the tent is paid for, whether I preach much or not. Address Elder Peter S. Deyo, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Other papers please copy.

Notice.

All preaching brethren wishing to come to Springfield, Mass., to preach, will please correspond with Thomas R. Weaver.

Notice.

Preaching brethren desiring to preach to the church in Yalesville, Conn., will correspond with Geo. A. Marble, that there may be no conflicting appointments. Geo. A. Marble.

Notice.

There will be a conference in Manchester, N. H., in the Advent Hall, Merchant's Exchange, in connection with our yearly feast, to commence Thursday evening, April 27th, and hold over the following Sabbath. The Lord's Supper will be eaten on Sunday evening, April 30th. All are invited.

S. W. Bishop.

Notice.

What church in New Hampshire would like to have the next quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference held with them, which by vote is to commence on Thursday, previous to the first Sunday in June? Will you write me relative to it, and direct to East Boston, Mass., so that due notice may be given of the same?

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. Wm. Sheldon.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N.Y.

[illegible], Bap. Minister.

Notice.

A. Flexall has issued a tract containing evidences from the types on the year and season of the year for the coming of our Lord. It will be sent free of charge to all who send their address.

Notice.

Eld. C. Goodrich has changed his residence, in East Boston. He now resides at No. 60 Marion Street. Will correspondents please direct their letters to No. 60 Marion Street, East Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

[illegible]

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, occupied by Calderwood and [illegible]. Meetings are held regularly there three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston.

J. O. Hatch .... Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

East Boston.

Meetings every evening this week. Bro. Damman will preach Sunday the 29th.

Charlestown, Mass., (60 Maine Street), Sunday, April 29th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M. Wm. C. Thurman.

Lawrence, Mass .... Sunday, April 29th. J. Couch.

Natic, R. I. .... Saturday evening, April 28th and Lord's day, 29th.
West Haven .... April 29th
Oceanport, N. J. .... May 1st through the week, and over the following Lord's day. Miles Grant.

Concord, N. H.

Wm. Sutherland .... April 29th
John Couch .... Sunday, May 6th
Geo. W. Brown, from Elliot, Me. .... Sunday, May 13th
Miles Grant .... Sunday, May 20th
Charles Rumsey .... Sunday, May 27th
Timothy Cole .... June 3d and 10th

Concord, N. H., (corner of Centre and Green streets) Sunday, May [illegible]
Warner, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 15th and 16th.
Bradford, (Pond meeting-house), Thursday and Friday evenings, May 17th and 18th.
Canaan .... Sunday, May 20th
Geo. W. Brown, of Portsmouth, N. H.
[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request. Brethren will please bear in mind that there are two George W. Browns, and this is not the other one. H. Munger.

Haverhill, Mass .... Sunday, April 29th. A. W. Sibley.

Portland .... Sunday April 29th and May 6th and 13th. Timothy Cole.

West Abington, Mass .... Sundays, April 29th. C. C. Ramsey.

Freeport, (Swamp school-house) .... Sunday, May 20th. R. R. York.

Warner Gore .... Sunday, April 29th and longer if duty requires.
Schoodac (school-house) .... Sunday, May 6th. C. W. Sargent.

Bradford, N. H., (Pond meeting-house) .... May 6th. Wm. Walker, 2d.

River Point, R. I. .... Sunday, May 6th. J. T. Dixon.

Cheshire Street, Ct .... Sunday, April 29th. B. Hitchcock. Luther Boutell.

Springfield, Mass .... Sunday, April 29th. Dr. A. M. Higgins.

Pleasant Valley, Ct .... Sunday, April 29th. W. N. Pile.

Newark, N. J. .... Lord's day, April 29th. Samuel Curry.

Rome (Yellery school-house) .... April 29th
Belgrade (meeting house) .... May 13th
Rome (Town House) .... May 20th. H. B. Bevey.

Haverhill, Mass .... Monday evening, April 30th
Dover, N. H. .... Wed. eve., May 2d
New Durham .... Thursday eve, May 3d
Alton Corner .... Friday eve, May 4th
Raccoonborough .... Saturday eve, May 5th and over the Lord's day
Exeter, N. H .... Lord's day, May 13th. A. Ross.

Abington, Ct .... Sunday, A. M., April 29th
West Woodstock, Ct., at 5 o'clock, Sunday, P. M., April 29th.
Abington, Ct .... May 6th
Danielsonville, Ct .... May 13th
Bristol, Ct .... May 20th
Hartford, Ct .... May 27th
If any in the vicinity of Bristol or Hartford desire evening appointments while I am in Western Connecticut, write me at Danielsonville, Ct. H. F. Carpenter.

Salisbury, N. H., Methodist Chapel, South Road Village, Sabbath, April 29th. T. M. Preble.

Cheshire, Ct .... Sundays, May 6th and 13th. Chas. E. Piper.

South Berwick, (Central Hall) .... Sunday, April 29th. Thos. M. Latham.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall.)
M. R. Phetteplace .... Sunday, May 13th
Augustus Durfee .... Sunday, May 27th

Harwinton, Ct .... Sunday, April 29th. O. D. Woodruff.

Guilford, Ct .... Sunday, April 29th. Wm. H. Fisher.

West Falmouth, Me. .... April 29th
Shall have a conference meeting in the meeting-house, Saturday 28th, P. M., 2 o'clock. Probably Bro York will be there with me. I. C. Wellcome.

South Windsor, Ct .... May 5th and over Sunday.
Agawam, Mass .... May 13th. Geo. A. Streeter.

Warner, N. H., Sunday, May 13th, at the school-house in Bro Hampbill's District, about one mile from Waterloo school-house. Simeon Roby.

Lovely Street, Ct .... Sunday, April 29th
Pleasant Valley .... Sunday, May 6th
Yalesville, Ct .... Sunday, May 13th
Bristol, Ct .... Sunday, May 20th
Cheshire Street, Ct .... Sunday, May 27th. S. Woodruff.

Pleasant Valley, Ct.
Seth Woodruff .... May 6th
R. Williams .... May 20th
Lovely Street, Ct .... May 13th. J. Rittey.

East Farnham, (Bull school-house), Friday, 4 P. M., May 11th.
Stukeley, (near Lewis Brown's), Saturday, 4 P. M., May 12th.
At the Sargeant school-house, 10½ A. M., Sabbath, May 13th.
At the Lake, a quarterly meeting, commencing on Saturday, at 2 P. M., May 19th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Let all interested attend. C. P. Dow.

East Bowdoinham.
R. R. York .... Sunday, May 6th
H. D Reed .... Sunday, May 20th

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house, with Bro. H D Reed), Sunday, May 13th. R. R. York.

Wallingford Farms .... April 29th
Winsted .... May 6th
Bethlehem .... May 13th. B. Williams.

North Adams .... Sunday, April 29th. E. McCulloch.

Manchester .... Friday evening, May 4th
East Canaan, N. H., (baptism) .... Lord's day, May 6th
Manchester .... Lord's day, May 13th. C. C. Stevens.

Lorrain, Jeff Co., N. Y., Red school-house, Sunday, April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Lily school-house in the evening of the same day.
Glenmore, N. Y. .... May 3d and 4th
New London, (as Bro. Wm. Morrill may appoint), Sunday, May 6th.
Redfield Square, N. Y. .... May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburg, N. Y. .... May 22d and 23d
Copenhagen, N. Y. .... May 24th. C. H. Williams.

West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y. .... Sunday, May 6th
If any brethren wish me to hold meetings with them on Sundays of the coming summer, let them correspond with me at Dansville, N. Y., as I am at liberty to go wherever the door opens for me. F. Burr.

Coventry, R. I., (at Central Baptist Church, between the Anthony and Washington Mills), Sunday, April 29th. Peter Noka.

Portsmouth, N. H. .... Sunday, April 29th. J. G. Smith.

New Britain .... Lord's day, April 29th. Randolph E. Ladd.

Square Pond, Ct .... Sunday, April 29th (Baptism in the afternoon.) P. R. Butler.

New York, (Cooper Institute) .... April 29th
My appointment at Oceanport, N. J., is withdrawn. Wm. Stuart.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall), Lord's day, April 29th [illegible]

[illegible]

Worcester, Mass. .... [illegible]
[illegible]
Warehouse Point .... June 17th. J. S. White.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) .... May 6th
Rochester, N. H., (McDuffee District, where Bro. Smith may appoint) .... Sunday, April 15th. Joseph Pittman.

East Canaan .... Saturday evening, April 28th and Sunday 29th. [illegible]
J. H. F. Varney.

Worcester, Mass. .... Sunday, April 29th. H. Munger.

Exeter, (Chamberlain school-house) .... April 29th
Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) .... May 6th
Lowest, (Boardman's Mills) .... May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's) .... May 27th. L. K. Libbard.

Thomaston, Ct. .... Sunday, April 29th
Wrightville .... evening, May 4th. Geo. L. Teeple.

Darien City, Genesee Co. (as Bro. Henry Sharrack may appoint), Sunday April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Baptist church, near Bro. B. C. Simonds, at 4 P. M. same day. C. F. Sweet.

South Reading .... Sunday, April 29th. C. Goodrich.

Salem, Mass. .... Sunday, May 6th. L. Boutell.

Orford, Quinttown, N. H. .... April 29th
Pomfret, Vt., (as J. Herington may appoint), May 6th. L. C. Glazier.

Richmond, R. I., (Clerk's Hall), Saturday evening April 28th, and Sunday, 29th, day and evening. L. R. Otis.

Champlain (Village), N. Y., A. M. .... April 29th
Montreal, C. E. .... May 6th. G. W. Stetson.

Biddeford, Me. .... Lord's day, April 29th. C. C. Stevens.

West Hoosic, (Advent Chapel) .... April 29th. Wm. J. Blanchard.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. L. Himes—The Young Pilgrim has been sent as ordered.

M. M. Weaver—T. T. P., Manchester, N. H.

A. W. Gage—Paid to No. 554.

S. B. Ensign—Have no English Bibles with references between the verses.

Mrs. W. Thrall—E. Hitchcock credited in No. 630.

E. Burton—The price of the Lyre you will find in the book list, on the last column.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 551. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—H A Wood 571, E Small 563, T Austain 564, M Kimball 542, J V Young 571, E M Kingsbury 571, A Shaw 553, A S Barber 600, M Dore 560.

$1.25 each—S Dodge 572, H M Oyer 560, P M London 569, C Smith 576, J H Long 535, W Gladden 576, J L Roberts 566, S J Henderson 576, W S Chandler 571, J. B Adams 574, T R V Bradley 500, J B Mooney 574, M. Curtis 578, E W Ager 574, E Seal 580, S J Buswell 556, J C Shorey 577, M M Hazard 577, M O Dunham 572, F E. Morrill 574, J. Hogan 576, A. Coons 576, H. Veazey 576, O Pease 592, S B Saxton 579, H A Brown 573.

$2.00 each—E. Stowe 651, L. Tiffany 582, B. Moody 589, A Douglass 595, E Britton 539, P Morgan 573, C E Gierlow 631, L Orcutt 575.

$2.50 each—S. Rogers 511, M. Farnham 596, W. H Kimball 568, H W Norville 607, M J Groton 602, M Swallow 602, H Johnson 607, C E Burke 581, C C Barker 602, J Hutchins 563, J C Hutchins 608, D A Brown 600, I, H Van Spanckeren 593, S Mitchell 591, J Moore 595, M H Dorr 603, I Jillson 542, E H Jillson 579, E A Little 607, S P Vickery 523, C W Ellwood 601, J Harriman 602, D Hodge 594, E Green 602, E Maher 593, I M Ware 592, H W Hammonds 594, H Cornwell 602, C F Whittier 602, J Hurd 606, R Burrell 571, P Tucker 595, V R Moore 602, H F Paul 602, M E Mussey 602, T A Moulton 602, E E Dalton 602, E Stimpson 602, L. A. Tucker 602.

$3.00 each—N H Berry 612, A. F. Pawley 558, E. T Day 560, J Quimby 516, J Ray 601, F S Bradford 512, D Taylor 619, C Carpenter 598, C Bond 598.

Various sums—P S Ainsworth $1.65, 561; E. Dexter $1.60, 572, T. Witham $1.03, 572, M. J. Pierce $1.50, 600, C H Abora $3.45, 551, I E Gillespie 25c, 559, L. Wallingford 50c, 563, W W Cheadle $2.25, 597, N. A. Brooks $1.50, 563, H Foster $5.00, 577, H. B. Dunlap 50c, 551, E. Wetmore $1.30, 568; E Orton 55c, 551; E Orton (No. Pownal, Vt.) 95c, 560, W Holsinger 53c, 556, S Pray $5.50, 581; H Babbitt $5.00, 615.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

H M Oyer 83c, M M Tower 83c, J A Burnham $3.00, P S Ainsworth $8.32, M. A. Georgia 50c, S J Buswell $2.10, I E Gillespie $1.75, C C Baker $1.00, E Hutchins $1.00, G L Wilson $1.00, W. W. Cheadle $1.75, P Ramer $3.50, W H Nevers 50c, H M Bryant $7.30, W S Raymond $1.00, E Dodgson 40c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.—P S Butler, J S Whitemar, W S Raymond, J S Burnham, M M Tower, H M Dyer, C C Becker, I M Raynor, S J Buswell, I E Gillespie, G L Winslow, S Ramer, P Ramer, W. W. Cheadle, W. Holsinger, M. McCulloch, E Dodgson.

By Express.—H M Bryant, P S Ainsworth.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

E Hutchins, L Taylor, A E Smith, W L Carroll, I I Leslie, C E Clark, A Lewis, J Croffut, S Whitaker, G W Stetson, L M Britton, I C Wellcome, L Boutell, M Wood, W A Fenn, S Curry, L C McKinstry, P Eaton.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Dr. I. I. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
H. K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francelia F. Curtis—149 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
Anna E. Smith—Missionary among the colored people. After May 1st, No. 492 Second Avenue, between 27th and 28th streets, New York City.
H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
J. R. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
O. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—364 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
F. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
Wm. A. Fenn—Pulaski, Oswego Co., N. Y.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. P. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
C. S. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station B., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 67 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. I. Dryo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 949, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.

FOR SALE, BAGSTER'S BIBLE.

English Version.

Interleaved Greek New Testament, half morocco, gilt. Price, postpaid, $4.25. Only one copy. Address E. P. Woodward, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion .... 12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make itself? .... 16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God? .... 16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible? .... 24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament? .... 16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable? .... 16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles? .... 16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy .... 32 pp., 6c.
9. Moses and the Prophets .... 32 pp., 6c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars .... 28 pp., 6c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise .... [illegible]
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture .... [illegible]
13. Science, or Faith? .... [illegible]

For the Set, (making [illegible] pp.) .... [illegible]

FOR A [illegible] QUANTITY.

By mail, [illegible] .... [illegible]
[illegible]
Address all orders to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

for sale at the office of the ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Chart of Christendom [illegible]. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.50.
THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE; by H. L. Hastings, and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c; by mail, 27c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 10c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 10c.
THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 28c.
REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 15c; by mail, 18c.
THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.
REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 15c; by mail, 20c.
THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 14c.
SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 10c.
THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 5c; by mail, 10c.
LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.
THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c; by mail, 15c.
THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 5c.
THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.
THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $1.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.
THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.
CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.
FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 25c.
ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 29c.
RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.
DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.
PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.
GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.
THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.
IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.
WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE SOUL. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 6c; by mail, 7c.
THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an outgrowth of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c; by mail, 8c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.
ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.
THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 300 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 3c; by mail, 4c.
BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 4c; by mail, 6c.
SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.
REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c; by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS. A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.
THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.
CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.35. Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.90.
CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.
THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.
LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.
FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.
THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.
THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 30c.
CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c. postpaid; $1.50 a dozen.
THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 18c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 3c. on every three copies.
SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.
AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 5c; by mail, 10c.
EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.
THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 30c; by mail, 35c.
HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.
COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.
PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.
THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New." By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.
EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS of a Bruised Reed. By F. H. Chamberlain. By mail, 17c.
THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.35. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.86. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.35.
CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 90c.
NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.
DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.
GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 3c. single; by mail, 5c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.
HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.
BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.
SOCIAL HYMNS, Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 30c; $2.50 per dozen. Paper 20c, $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.
CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. [illegible]
BARABBAS THE HARLOT. [illegible]
THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. [illegible]
OUR MISSION WORK. [illegible]
EXPERIENCES OF [illegible]
BLIND BARTIMEUS; [illegible]
THE [illegible] OF HOLY ANGELS [illegible]

here; such is my confidence. I feel for you and your mission a singular affection, which I frankly communicated to Mr. Geering. I told him with what joy I heard you speak of the manner in which you partook of the communion. All this is in his eye a great error. O may God defend his own cause, and preserve me from combating with him. He cannot give me a serpent when I ask of him bread. Pray much for me and for us all."

The next day (Feb. 17) I left home for the field of conflict, and the same evening sent a deputation to the Bishop asking him to accept a public discussion with me on the points of doctrine upon which he accused me of being a heretic, Sunday evening. But he refused the discussion, saying it was impossible for him to accept it, without the permission of the Apostle in London (who is the eighth from the days of Irving, and "when the number twelve is complete the end will come, and then the first and last Apostles will together occupy the judicial seat"). (?) Some of the members of his church insisted that he should accept a discussion with me for the benefit of their cause, to whom he answered that he could not, but would send for an Evangelist for that purpose.

Sunday P. M. several of the members of that church were gathered together at the house of the lady who invited me to Fleurier, and while I was speaking to them with much freedom, the servant notified her that Mr. Geering was at the door. She immediately left us and went to invite him in; but he refused to enter the parlor where we were, so she conversed with him some time in another room. When she returned she seemed in much agitation, and asked me with precipitation by what name the sect to which I belonged was called in America. I answered that those who believed in the speedy coming of Christ were usually called Advent Christians, and some Seventh Day Adventists. She said nothing further till the company dispersed, a few minutes afterward. She then told me that the Bishop had received a message from the "Apostle," who prohibited a discussion with me, saying that I belonged to the "degraded American Advent Millerites" . . . She then politely asked me for information on the subject. I answered that a christian gentleman of the name of William Miller, who had great knowledge of the Scriptures, was the first who preached the doctrine of the soon coming of Christ in the United States and Canada, and his labors were abundantly blessed of God. I told her that there were several Advent bodies in the United States, but none of them called themselves by the name of Millerites.

I lectured Sunday evening, and the four succeeding ones, to attentive audiences, in defence of the cause of God and the honor of my dear American brethren and sisters, thro' whom I have the privilege of preaching in Europe the glad tidings of Jesus and his approaching Kingdom, but not masses, Dimes, infant sprinkling, etc., etc. I closed my lectures in Fleurier the 22d of February, by a sermon on the sacrifice of the Mass, which under the circumstances it seemed to me my duty to deliver. I send it to you, and you may publish it if you think best.

The seed sown in Fleurier seems to be abundantly blessed of God. Dear Bro. Coulon, pastor of the National Church, and his highly intelligent and excellent wife, are much interested in the soon coming of our Lord. As they understand the English language, they have learned some of our Advent hymns, which they are very fond of singing. They are loving-hearted christians. While I was at Fleurier, he gave a very excellent and interesting lecture for the benefit of the Freedmen of the United States, and considerable money was contributed. Much money has been raised by the churches of Switzerland for their benefit. May God bless them for thus remembering his poor children.

There are several families in Fleurier who have received with joy the evidence of our Lord's soon appearing, and are striving to overcome. Of these is a German brother, an excellent man, in the prime of life, who is well educated in the German and French languages. He desires to consecrate himself to the work of spreading abroad the glorious tidings, which he believes with all his heart. I expect he will accompany me in a tour which I purpose to make soon to Germany, and perhaps as far as Holland.

Bro. Geymet has just returned to Italy to labor. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for this dear young brother, that God may sustain him and make him instrumental in accomplishing much good in that land in which the powers of darkness have held such sway.

I trust you will remember us in your prayers. Your faithful brother in Christ,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

Grandson, Canton de Vaud, Suisse, March 21st, 1866.

Voice of the West, please copy.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE R. I. AND E. CONN. QUARTERLY CONFERENCE,

HELD AT EAST KILLINGLY, APR. 4TH TO 8TH.

The conference commenced Wednesday evening with preaching by Brn. Thomas and Damman.

Thursday, 9½ A. M. After an interesting social meeting, and the appointment of a committee to arrange for preaching during the conference, delegates from various churches gave in their reports.

Bro. D. V. Corey reported the East Killingly church. Brn. Noka and Hopkins had recently labored there. Two had been converted, and two reclaimed from wandering, as the result. Regular prayer meetings had been re-established there evenings during every week. Omens for good were manifest.

Bro. N. Shumway reported the Danielsonville church as about the same as at last conference. Had preaching most of the time. The new chapel was progressing rather slowly.

Abington church, reported by Bro. Wade. Brn. Morse, Noka, Bellows, Chapman, and Streeter, had preached the word. Meant to keep the light burning. Had not followed cunningly devised fables in making known the coming of the Lord. Sabbath school had suffered during the winter, but should now revive it.

Central church, reported by Bro. E. Bellows. Scarcely alive. Have now established a permanent prayer meeting.

River Point, by Bro. Durfee. Membership scattered by the burning of the Arctic Mills. Had paid the debt on their chapel, and raised funds to paint it. Prospect encouraging.

Exeter church, reported by letter. Elder Edwin R. Wood, pastor. Few prayer and conference meetings. Five had decided to keep the seventh day as a Sabbath. [illegible]

Lafayette, by letter. A few willing to bear the burden and heat of the day, and labor for the cause of Christ. Preaching twice a month, by Bro. E. R. Wood.

REPORT OF PREACHERS.

A. Durfee. Have not confined my labors to any one place. Have preached at Natick, River Point, Pontiac and Mohegan. Often dissatisfied with my own labors, and want more deep, heart work in saving men.

H. F. Carpenter. Have closed my labors with the church at Rutland, Vt., where for two years my relation to that church has been most pleasant, and where I have been well cared for by some noble hearts, who love to sacrifice for the gospel's sake. I have now moved to Danielsonville, Ct., and hope and expect to see some fruit unto the glory of God.

E. Bellows. Labors limited by the sickness of my family. Am not discouraged in doing my Master's will. Our race is short. Loved Jesus' coming in '44,—love it better now.

D. O. Hopkins. Had labored at Comer Hill. Twelve had been converted. Nine baptized. At Chestnut Hill some good had been done. Expect to baptize two next Sunday.

D. V. Corey. Had labored at Chestnut Hill.

V. P. Simmons. I need a better experience in my own heart, before I can feel like preaching. I preached once at last Conference.

A. Damman. Had labored mostly at New Bedford, with Brn. Hook, Piper and Thomas. In New Bedford and Fair Haven, two hundred had professed faith in Christ, and seventy-nine had been baptized.

J. W. Thomas. Have been in New Bedford and Fair Haven most of the time. Have gained a net experience by my connection with the revival at New Bedford. I expect to return to Fair Haven church, which has reorganized, and unitedly desire my labors for the present.

Adjourned till to-morrow at 9 A. M.

Friday, 9 A. M. The clerk being absent, Bro. J. W. Thomas was chosen clerk pro tem.

The following resolution was offered and adopted for discussion, viz:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this conference, preachers and lay members ought to labor with greater energy, and possess more wisdom, and more of the harmlessness of the dove, in order to build up one another in the most holy faith, and successfully win souls to Christ, and to keep them in the love of God.

Resolved, That the eleventh article of the constitution be suspended. Passed.

Moved, That Bro. J. W. Thomas be ordained at this conference. Carried.

On motion, the conference adjourned its business session to attend to the Freedmen's Mission.

The treasurer of that mission reported $60.25 pledged, $37.00 of which had been collected and forwarded to the General Advent Mission for the Freedmen, according to directions given at the last conference. This report was accepted and adopted.

Subscriptions were now solicited, and $21.50 more were soon pledged, and a goodly part paid over to the treasurer.

Moved, That the funds be kept in the treasurer's hand, till, by inquiry, we can ascertain how and when we can most profitably apply it for the freedmen's aid. Carried.

Meetings for worship and dispensation of the word were continued over the Lord's day, during which Bro. J. W. Thomas was ordained for the ministry, by the laying on of the hands of the presbytery.

Circumstances rendering it impossible for the clerk to be present at the meetings of Saturday and Sunday, he cannot fully speak of them; but he has no doubt but that they were both interesting and profitable; and that they will result in much good to the little flock at Chestnut Hill. We are happy to say that nearly all the sessions of the R. I. and E. Ct. conference have been followed by a revival interest in the places where they were held. May such results continue.

H. F. CARPENTER; Clerk.

LIFE SKETCHES.

A new edition has just been issued, and those who have subscribed and paid will be supplied just as soon as it can be ascertained who have been supplied, and who have not. As some copies have been sent directly from Boston during Mrs. Mussey's absence, it may be difficult to tell the whole number who are yet unsupplied. Will not those who are expecting copies, whether paid for or not, please send their names immediately, and money if they have not already paid, and they shall receive the books by return mail. Price $1.00, postpaid.

Quite a number have received copies which are not yet paid for. Will they not send in the money immediately? Sr. Mussey needs every cent due her to pay for the present edition. Now who will send in their names and money, or the names of their friends, and thus enable Sr. M. to dispose of the whole edition at once, pay her bills, and pay her for her trouble in the past?

Those sending money now due, address Mrs. ABIGAIL MUSSEY, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Those who wish for books, address E. P. Woodward (Crisis Box), Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE YOUNG CONVERTS.

It is good to hear of so many giving their hearts to God. A word to you, as you are about to start on this journey. Have you counted the cost? if so, you will come out all right when the war is ended; so we bid you welcome to the ranks. Yes, we bid you welcome to a good share of persecution, if you live godly in Christ Jesus. We promise you that the enemy will be on your track, but if you resist him he will flee from you; we promise you that you will lose your reputation and be looked down upon by this wicked world, and you will be called foolish. It is a self-denying, cross-bearing way. Will you go? You say yes. Then we promise you still farther that you will meet with many things to try your patience; but look to Jesus. It will all do you good. We ask again, will you go through? If you are bound to go through, and have not been making any boys' trades, we promise from God's word that Jesus will be with you in every trial. He will never leave nor forsake you. You will have an hundred fold here, and in the world to come life everlasting. A bright crown will be yours, and you will drink from life's pure river, walk the golden streets, and have the privilege of seeing our blessed Redeemer. You will also see all the dear saints that ever lived. You will have everything that is good. We promise you our prayers, and to do you good. We will go with you, the Lord helping us.

We ask in conclusion, will you face the storm? If so, you will have a share in all the good things here, and in the world to come eternal life. It will pay. So be of good cheer, it wont be long. Look to Jesus, and not to cold-hearted professors, that are almost ready to give up the war. Take courage. You have started on a good journey; one which, if you are faithful, will end well. May God help you to be honest, humble and good, that Jesus may say to you in that day, "Come ye blessed of my Father." May God grant you grace in every time of need, is the prayer of your brother.

Concord, N. H. JOHN T. KIMBALL.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Cushman.

BRO. GRANT:—It is now just a year since I formed an acquaintance with your paper. It is the most interesting paper I ever read. I have been a believer in the Advent message since 1838. I embraced the seventh-day views in 1851, and took the Review four years. I gave up the seventh-day Sabbath in 1863, choosing Christ rather than Moses; "knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ; even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified. . . . For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me. I do not frustrate the grace of God; for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain."

I think there is enough in the word of God to convince any rational being that a man is saved through the death and sufferings of Christ, and not by the law. There is a great deal that might be said upon this subject, but I will forbear. Bro. Thompson and myself have been holding some meetings in the town of Adams, and some seven or eight have embraced the Advent message, and are now proclaiming the speedy coming of Christ. The work is still increasing. Oh may the Lord lead them by his Spirit into all truth.

Monroe, Mich. HORACE CUSHMAN.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—The day I wrote you last I was taken to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was very ill indeed for ten days; but the Lord has heard the prayer of his people, and raised me up once more, and put me in the field again. I am now at this place, holding a week's meeting, to build up and strengthen the things that remain, and try to bring others to Christ. This mission is doing well now. I think we have passed through our heaviest trials. Four rose for prayers last evening, and the whole congregation seemed to be melted to tenderness. I think the rowdies have come to the conclusion to let us alone, as none have come to trouble us this time. Truly we had a day of peace and joy in the Holy Ghost last Sabbath. Praise God for the victory through Christ, who is able to do all things.

Hackensack, N. J. A. E. SMITH.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool April 7th, Queenstown 8th.

The Austro-Prussian question was unchanged. Prussia is reported to be in a continued uncompromising attitude. The Emperor of Russia has sent two notes to the sovereigns, it is reported, tendering mediation.

The political excitement on the German question, it is said, runs high in Paris, and it is positively reasserted that France is quietly getting an army of observation together and strengthening her garrisons. The minor German States were arming.

DOMESTIC.

New York, April 17. A special dispatch, dated Eastport, to-day, has the following:

"A schooner, loaded with arms, consigned to B. Doran Killian, was seized on her arrival here this morning, but after several hours' detention, was released. Instructions have been received from Washington to strictly enforce the neutrality laws. A large delegation of Fenians arrived to-day."

A special dispatch, dated Montreal, has the following: "A government detective, who has just made a trip on the American side of Lakes Erie and Michigan, reports that the Fenians have fifteen vessels, besides schooners and transports, loading with field artillery, equipments, stores, etc. He also reports large shipments of arms to frontier points and unusual activity in Fenian circles along the frontier."

A special dispatch to the Herald, dated St. Andrews, N. B., has the following:

"There is much excitement here. Volunteers are flocking here from all quarters. The Lieut. Governor and suite are expected here this evening. A regiment of regulars, two companies of artillery, and one of engineers, will be due here to-morrow. Business is almost entirely suspended. The New-Brunswick House of Assembly, yesterday, adjourned for a month. It is said positively that under the new government the habeas corpus will be suspended."

New York, April 19. Last evening a large meeting of the Roberts-Sweeney Fenians took place at Cooper Institute. Addresses were made by Mr. A. L. Morrison of Missiouri. Mr. Roberts stated that this was the last public meeting to be held by his party before the final blow for liberty would be struck.

New York, April 19. The disease on board the steamer Virginia is pronounced a marked Asiatic cholera by the Health Officers. She remained at the upper quarantine until 11 o'clock to-day, when she went to the lower bay. No communication is allowed between her and the shore. Arrangements are making to remove all passengers from the ship to-morrow. It is said there will be no danger of the disease reaching the city from the vessel.

The cholera appeared when the vessel was eight days out, and from one hundred to two hundred persons were attacked, of whom thirty-seven died and twenty-one or twenty-two are now sick, eleven of which are doubtful cases. All the other passengers are reported convalescent. The disease is entirely among the steerage passengers, a large proportion of whom are Germans, and it is supposed that they brought the cholera on board. The mortality among them has been greater than among the Irish or German passengers.

It is mentioned as a singular circumstance, that the disease broke out in about the same place on the ocean at which the passengers on the England were attacked.

April 21. Reports from quarantine state that five new cases of cholera occurred yesterday. Ten were buried yesterday. Five more died last night and sixty-seven are now on hospital ships. The above are by passengers per Virginia. the steamship England arrived to-day. Passengers and crew are all well. One hundred and fifty deaths occurred at Halifax. She will be rigidly quarantined.

April 22. It is stated that the cholera is increasing on the steamship Virginia at a fearful rate, thirty-three new cases having occurred. The hospital ship at quarantine is capable of holding only seventy-five persons, and there are sixty-seven now on board. No other accommodations have as yet been provided.

☞ It is reported that no less than three hundred pulpits in New England are vacant for want of proper support, and that eight hundred are so poorly supported as to yield barely subsistence to the clergy.

PROPHECY BY THE POPE.—A story is going the round of the Neapolitan papers in regard to a prophecy made by Pio IX when in conversation with a high Spanish personage. He remains to be seen whether His Holiness is as good as a prophecy as Mathieu (de la Drome). The Holy Father says:—"Unfortunately, it is to be feared that the year 1866 will be one in which a great deal of blood will be shed. The fire of the demagogues will burst forth in many parts of Europe; however, this dreadful conflagration will have finished in 1867, when peace will be re-established. Rome will view with grief a second edition of the scenes of 1848, and the Pope will be obliged to abandon the City of the Church as a fugitive. In 1867, when the Pope returns to the Vatican, (?) a grand council will be assembled, and the centenary of St. Peter will be celebrated. In 1868, you will be present at my funeral!"

THE FENIAN WAR.—Campobello, the island where parturient Fenianism is expected to give birth to the long-heralded "Irish republic," is a narrow piece of land, stretching north and south, at the entrance to the Bay of Fundy and at the mouth of the river St. Croix. It is only ten miles long and nowhere more than three miles wide, and is owned entirely by J. J. Robinson, a retired captain of the British navy, who lives at the village of Welchpool, the only settlement of consequence on the island. Welchpool is only three miles from Eastport, Me., and has a fine harbor. The island belongs to New Brunswick.

THE MARSHALL HOUSE.—The proprietor of this establishment, No. 10 Marshall Street, Boston, offer to the public a house where there is no drinking, and the company is always respectable and orderly. On the ground floor there is a restaurant, kept on the European plan. The house contains fifty lodging rooms, and Mr. Wadsworth is a polite and obliging landlord, whose moderate charges are suited to the times.

☞ A Committee of the Chicago Academy of Sciences report that they find trichina in the muscles of twenty-eight hogs out of the one thousand three hundred and ninety-four examined, and they conclude that in the hogs brought to Chicago one in fifty is affected with trichiniasis, in a greater or less degree. As a security, the Committee say it is simply necessary to cook the meat thoroughly.

☞ There is a great revival of religion in progress at Springfield, Illinois, under the direction of Rev. Mr. Hammond. Three meetings are held daily in the State House, which are attended by thousands, and converts are numbered by hundreds. Mr. Hammond has been permitted to hold meetings in the jail, and the result is that more than one half of the prisoners have been converted.

The Cincinnati Gazette says that pure "Essence of Coffee" is now made in that city out of the "cheapest, dirtiest and nastiest molasses," which is boiled until it ropes, cooled in pans, and when hard, broken up and pulverised. Ground rye is then mixed with it, after which it is boxed up, each box being sold at eighty cents, and labelled "Pure Essence of Coffee."

☞ The boys of the Grammar schools of New Bedford have organized themselves into a society for the suppression of profanity and vulgarity in their schools, have drawn up a regular constitution and by-laws, and mean to make the organization thus begun a powerful and efficient instrument of good.

☞ A large number of capitalists and others assembled at Philadelphia on Thursday, to witness the process of making paper out of wood. A poplar tree, taken from the hill-side, was converted into a clear, white, soft paper in the space of five hours, to the surprise of all present.

☞ A Florida paper asserts that the yellow fever is prevailing at Key West at a considerable extent, and that the regular troops stationed there are to be removed to Tampa in consequence.

Obituaries.

STEERE.—Died in Harmony, R. I., April 14th, after a short but very distressing illness, my father, Hosea Steere, in the eighty-second year of his age. He sleeps in Jesus. MARTHA STEERE.

ORTON.—Died in Blackinton, Mass., April 5th, 1866, our father, Philander Orton, aged sixty-three years, seven months.

Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion by Bro. Wm. J. Blanchard, of Savoy, Mass., from 1 Cor. 15: 49. EDSON NORTON.

Notices.

Dedication and Organization of a Freedmen's Church.

The Lord willing, there will be a dedication of a hall, fitted up for a Freedmen's church, So. East corner of 3d St. and Washington Avenue, a few steps from the post-office, Sunday, Apr. 29th, 1866.

Also, same day and place, there will be an organization of an African church, composed of freedmen, upon the gospel rule of taking the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice.

Also, on Monday evening following, Apr. 30th, a colored school for adults will commence, to be kept five evenings in each week, conducted by Sr. D. K. Prescott, assisted by her sister, Francella F. Curtis.

A Bible class for adults and children will be organized for the Freedmen, Sunday, May 6th.

Thus far, brethren and sisters, you may rely upon, if the Lord will. If there is any good news for you in prospect, you must wait till seeming facts become facts; for I do not like smoke without fire. The few white brethren and sisters here are with me fully, and are doing their share of the work as instruments of God. H. K. FLAGG.

Notice of the Iowa Miss. Tent.

Those in the West who wish Tent meetings will please make arrangements without delay. There is to be a Tent meeting in Butler and Floyd Co., Iowa, and I am to visit Minn. I can be engaged by the different kinds of Adventists who need Tent meetings till the tent is paid for, whether I preach much or not. Address Elder PETER S. DETO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Other papers please copy.

Notice.

All preaching brethren wishing to come to Springfield, Mass., to preach, will please correspond with THOMAS R. WEAVER.

Notice.

Preaching brethren desiring to preach to the church in Yalesville, Conn., will correspond with Geo. A. Marble, that there may be no conflicting appointments. GEO. A. MARBLE.

Notice.

There will be a conference in Manchester, N. H., in the Advent Hall, Merchant's Exchange, in connection with our yearly feast, to commence Thursday evening, April 27th, and hold over the following Sabbath. The Lord's Supper will be eaten on Sunday evening, April 30th. All are invited. S. W. BISHOP.

Notice.

What church in New Hampshire would like to have the next quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference held with them, which by vote is to commence on Thursday, previous to the first Sunday in June? Will you write me relative to it, and direct to East Boston, Mass., so that due notice may be given of the same?

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N.Y. CHARLES GOODCROVE, Bap. Minister.

Notice.

A. Parsell has issued a tract containing evidences from the types on the year and season of the year for the coming of our Lord. It will be sent free of charge to all who send their address.

Notice.

Eld. C. Goodrich has changed his residence, in East Boston. He now resides at No. 69 Marion Street. Will correspondents please direct their letters to No. 69 Marion Street, East Boston, Mass.?

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren, that all appointments should reach us as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press early on Wednesday; otherwise they will not be inserted until the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, corner of Causeway and Lowell streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON.

J. G. Hook ....Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

EAST BOSTON.

Meetings every evening this week. Bro. Damman will preach Sunday the 29th.

Charlestown, Mass., (60 Mulberry Street), Sunday, April 29th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M. WM. C. THURMAN.

Lawrence, Mass. ....Sunday, April 29th. J. COUCH.

Natic, R. I. ....Saturday evening, April 28th and Lord's day, 29th.
West Haven ....April 30th
Oceanport, N. J. ....May 1st through the week, and over the following Lord's day. MILES GRANT.

CONCORD, N. H.

Wm. Sutherland ....April 29th
John Couch ....Sunday, May 6th
Geo. W. Brown, from Effingham, Me. ....Sunday, May 13th
Miles Grant ....Sunday, May 20th
Charles Ramsey ....Sunday, May 27th
Timothy Cole ....June 3d and 10th

Concord, N. H., (corner of Centre and Green streets) Sunday, May [illegible]
Warner, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 15th and 16th.
Bradford, (Pond meeting-house), Thursday and Friday evenings, May 17th and 18th.
Canaan ....Sunday, May 20th. GEO. W. BROWN, of Portsmouth, N. H.

[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request. Brethren will please bear in mind that there are two George W. Browns, and this is not the other one. H. MUNGER.]

Haverhill, Mass. ....Sunday, April 29th. A. W. SIBLEY.

Portland ....Sunday, April 29th and May 6th and 13th. TIMOTHY COLE.

West Abington, Mass. ....Sundays, April 29th. C. C. RAMSEY.

Freeport, (Swamp school-house) ....Sunday, May 20th. R. R. YORK.

Warner Gore ....Sunday, April 29th and longer if duty requires.
Schoodac (school-house) ....Sunday, May 6th. C. W. SARGENT.

Bradford, N. H., (Pond meeting-house) ....May 6th. WM. WALKER, 2d.

River Point, R. I. ....Sunday, May 6th. J. T. DIXON.

Cheshire Street, Ct. ....Sunday, April 29th. B. HITCHCOCK, LUTHER BOUTELL.

Springfield, Mass. ....Sunday, April 29th. DR. A. M. HIGGINS.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. ....Sunday, April 29th. W. N. PILE.

Newark, N. J. ....Lord's day, April 29th. SAMUEL CURRY.

Rome (Yellow school-house) ....April 29th
Belgrade (meeting house) ....May 6th
Rome (Town House) ....May 20th. H. B. SEVEY.

Haverhill, Mass. ....Monday evening, April 30th
Dover, N. H. ....Wed. eve., May 2d
New Durham ....Thursday eve, May 3d
Alton Corner ....Friday eve, May 4th
Barnstead ....Saturday eve, May 5th and over the Lord's day
Exeter, N. H. ....Lord's day, May 13th. A. ROSS.

Abington, Ct. ....Sunday, A. M., April 29th
West Woodstock, Ct., at 5 o'clock, Sunday, P. M., April 29th.
Abington, Ct. ....May 6th
Danielsonville, Ct. ....May 13th
Bristol, Ct. ....May 20th
Hartford, Ct. ....May 27th
If any in the vicinity of Bristol or Hartford desire evening appointments while I am in Western Connecticut, write me at Danielsonville, Ct. H. F. CARPENTER.

Salisbury, N. H., Methodist Chapel, South Road Village, Sabbath, April 29th. T. M. PREBLE.

Cheshire, Ct. ....Sundays, May 6th and 13th. CHAS. E. PIPER.

South Berwick, (Central Hall) ....Sunday, April 29th. THOS. M. LATHAM.

RICHMOND, R. I., (CLARK'S HALL.)

M. R. Plettsplace ....Sunday, May 13th
Augustus Durfee ....Sunday, May 27th

Harwinton, Ct. ....Sunday, April 29th. O. D. WOODRUFF.

Guilford, Ct. ....Sunday, April 29th. WM. H. FISHER.

West Falmouth, Me. ....April 29th. Shall have a conference meeting in the meeting-house, Saturday 28th, P. M., 2 o'clock. Probably Bro. York will be with me. I. C. WELLCOME.

South Windsor, Ct. ....May 6th and over Sunday.
Agawam, Mass. ....May 13th. GEO. A. STREETER.

Warner, N. H., Sunday, May 13th, at the school-house in Bro. Hamphill's District, about one mile from Waterloo school-house. SIMEON ROBY.

Lovely Street, Ct. ....Sunday, April 29th
Pleasant Valley ....Sunday, May 6th
Yalesville, Ct. ....Sunday, May 13th
Bristol, Ct. ....Sunday, May 20th
Cheshire Street, Ct. ....Sunday, May 27th. S. WOODRUFF.

PLEASANT VALLEY, CT.

Seth Woodruff ....May 6th
R. Williams ....May 13th
Lovely Street, Ct. ....May 20th. WM. J. RIPLEY.

East Farnham, (Bull school-house), Friday, 4 P. M., May 11th.
Stukeley, (near Lewis Brown's), Saturday, 4 P. M., May 12th.
At the Sargeant school-house, 10½ A. M., Sabbath, May 13th.
At the Lake, a quarterly meeting, commencing on Saturday, at 2 P. M., May 19th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Let all interested attend. C. P. DOW.

EAST BOWDOINHAM.

R. R. York ....Sunday, May 6th
H. D. Reed ....Sunday, May 20th

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house, with Bro. H. D. Reed), Sunday, May 13th. R. R. YORK.

Wallingford Farms ....April 29th
Winsted ....May 6th
Bolton ....May 13th. R. WILLIAMS.

North Adams ....Sunday, April 29th. E. MCCULLOCH.

Manchester ....Friday evening, May 4th
East Canaan, N. H., (baptism) ....Lord's day, May 6th
Manchester ....Lord's day, May 13th. C. C. STEVENS.

Lorraine, Jeff Co., N. Y., Red school-house, Sunday, April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Lily school-house in the evening of the same day.
Glenmore, N. Y. ....May 5th and 6th
New London, (as Bro. Wm. Morrill may appoint), Sunday, May 6th.
Redfield Square, N. Y. ....May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburg, N. Y. ....May 21st
Copenhagen, N. Y. ....May 22d and 23d. C. H. WILLIAMS.

West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y. ....Sunday, May 6th. If any brethren wish me to hold meetings with them on Sundays of the coming summer, let them correspond with me at Danville, N. Y., as I am at liberty to go wherever the door opens for me. P. BURR.

Coventry, R. I., (at Central Baptist Church, between the Anthony and Washington Mills), Sunday, April 29th. PETER NOKA.

Portsmouth, N. H. ....Sunday, April 29th. J. G. SMITH.

New Britain ....Lord's day, April 29th. RANDOLPH E. LADD.

Square Pond, Ct. ....Sunday, April 29th (Baptism in the afternoon.) R. B. BUTLER.

New York, (Cooper Institute) ....April 29th. My appointment at Oceanport, N. J., is withdrawn. WM. SHELDON.

Concord, N. H., (Angelus Hall), Lord's day, April 29th. [illegible]

[illegible]

Hartford, Ct. ....June 17th. J. S. WHITE.

[illegible]

East Canaan ....Sunday, April 29th. J. H. F. VARNEY.

Worcester, Mass. ....April 29th. H. MUNGER.

Exeter, (Chamberlain school-house) ....April 29th
Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) ....May 6th
Lowell, (Beaumont's Mills) ....May 13th
Bebee, (near Bro. Harriman's) ....May 27th. L. K. LOMBARD.

Thomaston, Ct. ....Sunday, April 29th
Wrightsville ....Sunday, May 6th. GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Darien City, Genesee Co. (as Bro. Henry Sherman may appoint), Sunday April 29th, at 10½ A. M., and at the Baptist church, near Bro. R. C. Simonds, at 4 P. M. same day. C. F. SWEET.

South Reading ....Sunday, April 29th. C. GOODRICH.

Salem, Mass. ....Sunday, May 6th. L. BOUTELL.

Orford, Quinttown, N. H. ....April 29th
Pomfret, Vt., (as J. Herington may appoint), May 6th. L. C. GLAZIER.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall), Saturday evening April 28th, and Sunday, 29th, day and evening. [illegible]

Champlain (Village), N. Y., A. M. ....April 29th
Montreal, C. E. ....May 6th. G. W. STETSON.

Biddeford, Me. ....Lord's day, April 29th. C. C. STEVENS.

West Hoosic, (Advent Chapel) ....April 29th. W. J. BLANCHARD.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. L. Himes—The Young Pilgrim has been sent as ordered.
M. M. Weaver—T. T. P., Manchester, N. H.
A. W. Gage—Paid to No. 554.
S. B. Ensign—Have no English Bibles with references between the verses.
Mrs. W. Thrall—E. Hitchcock credited in No. 630.
E. Burton—The price of the Lyre you will find in the book list, on the last column.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 551. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—H A Wood 571, F Small 563, T Austain 564, M Kimball 542, J Y Young 571, E M Kingsbury 571, A Shaw 553, A S Barber 600, M Dore 560.

$1.25 each—S Dodge 572, H M Dyer 580, P M London 564, C Smith 576, J L Long 551, W Gladden 576, J L Roberts 586, R J Henderson 576, W S Chandler 571, J B Adams 574, T R V Bradley 600, J B Mowery 574, M Curtis 578, E W Agar 574, F Seal 560, S J Boswell 556, J C Shorey 577, M M Hazard 572, M O Dunham 571, F E Morrill 574, J Hogan 576, A Coons 576, H Veazey 576, O Pease 592, S B Saxton 579, H A Brown 573.

[illegible]

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL—P S Butler, J S Whitney, W S Raymond, J B Burnham, M M Tower, H M Dyer, C C Barker, I M Haynor, S J Boswell, F P Gillespie, G L Winslow, R Ramer, P Kamer, W. W. Chandle, W. Hoisinger, M. McCulloch, E. Dodgson.

BY EXPRESS—H M Bryant, F S Ainsworth.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

E Hutchins, L Taylor, A E Smith, W L Carroll, I I Leslie, C E Clark, A Lewis, J Crofut, S Whitaker, G W Stetson, L M Britton, I C Wellcome, L Boutell, M Wood, W A Fenn, B Curry, L C McKinstry, P Eaton.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Dr. I. L. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
H. K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francella F. Curtis—149 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
Anna E. Smith—Missionary among the colored people. After May 1st, No. 497 Second Avenue, between 25th and 26th streets, New York City.
H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. Q. Jacob—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
J. H. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. B. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. P. Piper—41 Green Street, Boston, Mass.
J. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
D. T. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
E. Bellows—354 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—[illegible], Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
Wm. A. Fenn—Pulaski, Oswego Co., N. Y.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Wm. J. Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. P. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station B., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 67 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. I. Dyer—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.

FOR SALE, BAGSTER'S BIBLE.

ENGLISH VERSION.

Interleaved Greek New Testament, half morocco, gilt. Price, postpaid, $4.25. Only one copy. Address E. P. WOODWARD, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion ....12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make Itself? ....16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God? ....16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible? ....24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament? ....16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable? ....16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles? ....16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy ....20 pp., 5c.
9. Moses and the Prophets ....20 pp., 5c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars ....20 pp., 5c.

[illegible]

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper [illegible].

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 9c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 11c; by mail, 13c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 11c; by mail, 13c.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 30c.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 24c.

SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 20c.

THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c; by mail, 15c.

THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 5c.

THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $3.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.

CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.

ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 28c.

RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.

GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.

IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT. What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c; by mail, 8c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE MIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. [illegible]; by mail, 4c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c; by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS. A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36; Cloth, $1.75, by mail, $2.07.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.35. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.86.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00, by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 29c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid; $1.00 per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 18c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 8c. on every three copies.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 80c; by mail, 96c.

HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.

COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By P. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS of a Bruised Reed. By F. H. Chamberlain. By mail, 17c.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.

NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 30c; by mail, 34c.

DIPTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Heimer. 3c. single; by mail, 4c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 30c; $3.00 per dozen. Paper 20c, $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of the "cities of the nations." By Wm. Shepherd. 10c, postpaid; 80c. a dozen.

THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Jolliffe. 6c; by mail, 7c.

OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the American Advent Mission Society, its Constitution, Officers, [illegible]

EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a Slave for forty-three years. 20c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 3c., postpaid.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Sheldon. [illegible]

DANIEL'S FAITH.

Tune.—"Old Family Bible."

May our faith be like that of the good Hebrew Daniel,
Who was the most faithful of those in his day;
Through Christ he endured all their vile persecution,
From his blessed Savior he'd turn not away.
It seemed that they then, by their human inventions,
Had given commandment he should cease to pray;
But, heedless of all their wicked intentions,
He called on Jehovah three times every day.

He did not retire away into secret,—
His windows were opened to Jerusalem;
As for the commandment, he never would keep it,
He cared not for king nor the fierce lion's den.
He was firm to his trust, and he would not give over,
Through God he defeated the whole wicked plan;
He knew there was strength in the arm of Jehovah,
He trusted in God, and had no fear of man.

They then made arrangements, they called for assistance
To bear him away unto yon lonely place;
He gave himself up without any resistance,
Still calling on God and believing his grace.
They bore him away to yon lonely prison,
And then let him down into that fearful goal;
But it seemed unto him like a little heaven,
With glory in view and Christ in his soul.

He finds himself now in the den among lions,
And feels that his standing is on holy ground;
He then breaks the silence with an old song of Zion,
And makes the whole cavern with praises resound.
The night passing on and the morning now breaking,
The king rises early and starts on his way;
Away to the cavern of Daniel now making,
To see if he lived and continued to pray.

With trembling footsteps, from past recollections,
The king is approaching, and now hear him say—
O Daniel! O Daniel! hast thou found protection?
Has thy God delivered, and wilt thou yet pray?
Yes, God has been with me, and I am not fearful;
His presence I find, and my faith is the same,
And now I am happy, contented and cheerful,
My God has come down, and the lions are tame.

O king, there's no danger, not yet the least trouble,
While praying to God by night and by day;
Though lions may roar and our foes may redouble,
At the word of the Lord they will all calm away.
Come up, my good Hebrew, thou shalt have my favor,
And let it be published and sounded abroad;
Besides Daniel's God there is no other Savior,
Let all come and worship this old Hebrew's God.

[Written about thirty years ago, by Eld. York, a F. W. Baptist.]

For the World's Crisis.

A SERMON.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25: 46.

We will now examine the subject of the thief on the cross (Luke 23: 43),—"To-day thou shalt be with me in paradise." In the first place, what was the request of the thief? We answer, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Did Christ come into his kingdom at his crucifixion? No indeed, he certainly did not; neither did he go into his kingdom, nor to paradise at that time; for, on the third day after his resurrection, he told Mary in the garden that he had not yet ascended to his God, and her God, and to his Father and her Father; and he did not ascend until forty days after his resurrection; and furthermore, he is not yet in his paradise, or kingdom, where he is to reign with his saints; neither will he be in his paradise, or kingdom, till he comes in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory; as described in Dan. 7: 13, 14, Matt. 25: 31, 16: 27, 19: 28, Mark 8: 38, Acts 1: 11, 1 Thess. 4: 16, 2 Thess. 1: 7, Jude 14, and Rev. 1: 7. We see very plainly that Jesus does not come into his kingdom until he leaves the mediatorial seat, and then he will raise his saints, and the promise which was made to the thief on the cross, the day of his crucifixion, will be fulfilled to him.

Can you find one passage in all the Bible which proves that any person receives his reward at death? But how plain it is taught in the Bible that every one is to receive his reward at or after the great day of judgment. Look at Matt. 16: 27.

We will now say a few words about the souls under the altar, as this is often referred to as proof that the soul is immortal, and leaves the body at death. If the souls here spoken of are immortal, and are separate entities from their bodies, and are in heaven under an altar, crying for vengeance on their murderers, they in a deplorable condition, and must be in great misery; in which case I should not think they were in heaven, but in a state of suffering and distress; and not only so, but they have a different disposition from what our dear Savior and St. Stephen had, when they prayed for their murderers, saying, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Those souls were the persons under the altar of persecution, while being slaughtered under the reign of the Papal beast, and whose blood, like the blood of Abel, cried for vengeance on their murderers. Do immortal souls in heaven have blood to shed? They cried for vengeance on their blood.

But, says the objector, "the spirit" returns "unto God who gave it," and that is the soul. Stop a moment, and let us recollect that the word spirit, in Eccl. 12: 7, is translated from the Hebrew word that is rendered breath; and in many places in the Bible the same Hebrew word is translated wind. The Bible declares that man is "mortal," and God only is immortal.

We will say a few words about the smoke of their torment ascending up forever, and being tormented day and night forever and ever. If we examine the symbols or figures made use of by the Revelator, you will find it is very hard to prove any doctrine of the Bible by them. In the book of Revelation, at the fourth chapter and eleventh verse, we read that the worshipers of the beast and his image were to be tormented in the presence of the holy angels and of the Lamb; "and they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast." The beast here represents a power on earth, and a very wicked power, too; and the wrath, or judgments of God were poured out upon the worshipers of this wicked beast, which is nothing less than the Papal beast; and in Rev. 20: 10, the devil, the beast, and the false prophet are represented as cast into a lake of fire and brimstone, to be tormented day and night for ever and ever. The beast represents a power, or government on earth; and the false prophet represents a false religion; and the devil is the deceiver and leader, who in other Scriptures it is declared shall be destroyed when Christ comes with his mighty angels in flaming fire, to take vengeance on the ungodly.

In one place it is declared that death and the devil shall be destroyed; and the Papal beast, I think, will be destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming. I think the Papal beast, and his worshipers, are now, in these last days in which we live, receiving the dreadful judgments of God, and are now tormented day and night; and this will continue till they are finally destroyed, which result will be eternal death, which is an eternal cessation of being.

In conclusion, kind reader, I would say that I am afraid that thousands, and perhaps millions, will be forever lost, who, in a stubborn manner, are determined to continue in the dreadful error of immortal-soulism, and endless misery, which reflects an awful character on God, and virtually destroys the doctrine of the resurrection, and discredit the great mission of Christ on earth; and lays the foundation of modern Spiritualism, and Mormonism, and many other cruel errors, which have been a great curse to the human family for centuries past. O may the good Lord keep his dear saints from being polluted by these dreadful errors, and prepare us for his kingdom, which is close upon us, and save us at last, for Jesus' sake. Amen, and Amen.

Vernon, Vt. B. PERHAM.

For the World's Crisis.

KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS.

NUMBER TWO.

In our former article we showed that God's commandments were sometimes limited to persons and nations, some of which we specified. We will allude to some others in this article, and show how men of this dispensation can be christians and not keep commands which are abolished; or, in Scripture terms, "be justified without the deeds of the law."

While Christ was preaching his gospel, he was not acting in the office of a priest. See Heb. 8: 4. "For if he were on earth he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law."

Christ acted the part and filled the office of a prophet while here in this ministry. See Deut. 18: 15, 19, and Acts 3: 20–24. As a prophet under the law, or Mosaic administration, Christ observed and kept it, and taught others to keep it, while at the same time he was prophesying of the new dispensation, new covenant, new commandments, etc., soon to be in force.

When he was crucified, the great sacrifice was made for sin. At his death the Sinaic dispensation closed, in God's arrangement, although the people did not then know it. At Christ's resurrection he entered the priest's office, of an unchangeable priesthood. See Heb. 7: 16–24; also, Heb. 9: 11–17. Too plain to be misunderstood. Chist, then, was the prophet which the Father declared at his baptism, and at the transfiguration, to be his beloved Son, commanding us to hear him.

Christ has given us a New Covenant, not endorsed the old one, nor has he transferred the old one from the tables of stone to the hearts of his people. "He hath made the first old." "But now he hath obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a BETTER covenant, which was established upon BETTER promises."—Heb. 8: 6. Let it be remembered that the old covenant was the ten commandments. Let Paul speak again. "For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah. . . . In that he saith a new covenant, he hath made the first old." Heb. 8: 7, 13.

Christ, then, is our lawgiver, our mediator, our high priest, and whatever the new covenant (the law of faith) teaches, embraces the commandments we are to keep. Paul clearly states that he and the other apostles were not ministers of the old covenant, but that God had made them "able ministers of the new." 2 Cor. 3: 6.

Thus we find the apostles always teaching the doctrine of the new covenant, and never of the old. They allude to it, tell us its use, and when it ended, and by what means. They contrast it with the new, and show the difference. But they call the old "not perfect," "faulty," "a yoke of bondage," "done away," "abolished," "dead," "taken out of the way," etc., etc. They everywhere enjoin the new covenant on the Gentile church, or believers, calling it the "spirit," "new covenant," "law of faith," "better hope," better promises," "royal law," "law of the spirit of life," etc., etc.

Now I ask candidly, can any one, knowing these facts, honestly say, concerning those who follow Christ and obey his covenant, his commands, "If you do not keep the ten commandments you can kill, steal, swear, and do anything you please?" Does Christ's new covenant allow such liberties? I think not.

Again. Can it be a just charge against us to say, "You believe in keeping nine of the commandments of the decalogue and reject the fourth?"

This is not the truth with us. We reject the ten. That code of law was never made to nor for Gentile believers under Christ; it is now abolished, and the nation for whose special benefit it was made is scattered. But as some may begin to feel troubled lest they be deprived of a Sabbath, I will promise to tell them in another article about the Christian's Sabbath. I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

DEATH.

Death has been called "the king of terrors," and likewise said to be "the terror of kings." Death seems to invade the land at the present day in a twofold sense. Look on either hand, and we may see more or less of our fellow mortals lie prostrate in death. Dear reader, is it not high time for us to look up to the great preserver of life—the God who created us—for our safety, and more especially for our salvation? "We must be prepared to die," is the expression which we frequently hear; and truly this preparation is all-important; but we ask if we can better prepare ourselves to die than by preparing ourselves to live a righteous life, while we are permitted to dwell here below?

The great Teacher instructed mankind to live well, and dying well is to be inferred as a consequence of a well-spent life. In deviating from this rule, mankind have made a great mistake. They have too often thought that one set of principles would be best for life, and another for death; when the truth is, that man is the best prepared to die, when best prepared to live. Here let me observe, all men are seeking, or wishing for happiness; but as long as man lies under the power of sin, he must suffer the penalty. If we desire happiness, we must deny ourselves of sin, and all sinful pleasures; and embrace that religion which shall liberate us from the bondage of sin and a guilty conscience; and then the terror of death, and all that afflicts the mind, will flee from us, and we shall feel that happiness which the unbeliever and sinful man knows nothing about; that peace that passeth all understanding.

Wherever the spirit of true religion and christianity is found, there is peace and joy and comfort. There are cherished the pure principles of love to God and love to man, which raise the mind far above the unjust persecutions that are being hurled at it; and, in spite of all convulsions and agitations, it stands as firm as a rock. When we behold the beauty and purity of religion, shall we not embrace it? O let us cherish with devotedness the great and immutable truths of the gospel of Christ.

Dear reader, I have laid before you the terrors of death and the rescue,—by embracing the true and undefiled religion of Christ. O let us by all means attend to the sacred word of the gospel before we shall find it too late. "Behold now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation." Death is surrounding us on every side. And according to what we discover by reading the Scriptures of truth, and the signs of the times, our Judge is soon coming to judge us. At that great and trying day, may we have on the wedding garment, the robe of righteousness, that we may stand before him with a pure heart, shining in brilliant raiment, ready to be invited to his royal wedding feast.

Fisherville, N. H. J. ELKINS.

Voice of the West, please copy.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRISTIAN FAITHFULNESS.

The Savior said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." The apostle Paul said to the Colossian brethren, "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk (not sit) ye in him; rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving." The apostle Peter exhorted the disciples of the Lord in his day to "beware, lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness; but grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Father Paul faithfully exhorted his Corinthian brethren to "be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord," etc.

So we might go on and cite numerous passages of Scripture, showing the vast importance of christian faithfulness. To be short, let me say that multitudes have begun well, ane run well for a season; and it is a duty we owe to God to always abound in faith and love. There is no possible excuse for a christian, if he does not constantly grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the truth. We should earnestly pray for that love which casteth out all fear, and the abiding witness of the Spirit that we are the children of God. We should live so near the Savior, by a godly, humble, prayerful, spiritual life and conversation, that all our many enemies cannot shake our faith in Christ, or in any way draw us aside into sin and darkness.

If a professor of religion does not love God more to-day than yesterday, love souls more, is not more willing to bear reproach for Christ; to talk with and pray for sinners; to give of his substance, time and talents, and have his name cast out as evil among men; if he is not willing to be anything or nothing, for Christ's sake, to save souls, and does not so continue to feel every successive day of his life; the Bible pronounces him to be a guilty backslider from God.

O! may the Lord help us, one and all who love the Lord supremely, to be up and doing, and work while the day lasts. Time is short, and what we do must be done quickly. Yours in faith and love, P. TANDY.

For the World's Crisis.

DUMB FOLKS.

They are dumb, when? Not when nonsense is introduced—something funny to laugh at—something of a worldly nature, about farms or merchandise, the latest novel, the religious festival, the picnic, the donation party, or the New Year's calls, where feasting, wine-bibbing, joking and jesting are the order of the day. No tongues are tied now; no one is dumb here, now where marrying and giving in marriage, the latest cut in things for the wardrobe, are subjects for discussion; mouths are open wider in this direction, tongues fly, move glibly, fluently. But introduce the subject of prayer, praise, the reading of God's word, visiting the sick, the oppressed—speak of heaven and heavenly things, the glory of the upper world, the joys of salvation, the peace of God in the soul flowing like a river, the happiness resulting from well-doing, from imitating Jesus,—what now? any response? All is silent as the grave; lips are closed, tongues are tied. Quote a passage of Scripture, repeat a verse or two from the pen of inspiration, more precious than gold,—any one to reply? any to second the motion? Not one; not a word, or look of smiling approbation is manifested; all is hushed as the tomb; every one is dumb! dumb! struck dumb!

This alluding to things spiritual and eternal, talking often one to another of the Lord's mercies and judgments, for him to hearken and hear, that a book of remembrance may be written before him of them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name, is not to be tolerated in this refined age, and in refined circles. This referring to the Bible for subjects of interest and conversation, or declaring, like David, what great things God hath done for our souls, is out of place, out of time, out of date. "Away with sombre looks, things grave, serious, eternal; away with the Bible, its doctrines and precepts, its holy inculcations; give us something mirthful—that will tickle the fancy—a spice of wit, that will provoke laughter." "Let us eat, drink, and make merry, for to-morrow we die."

Is not this picture a true one of the present, every day piety? Friends, what are we coming to?

D. F. NEWTON, Author of Home Thrusts.

"EXTRAORDINARY PREDICTION" OF NEARLY TWENTY YEARS AGO.—In an old Kinderbook Almanac of 1847 is the following prediction about the United States:—

When the country is ruled by a tailor bold,
A beggar shall stitch with a thimble of gold;
And the water shall furnish, instead of the land,
Three millions of men, with their first in command.

Mr. Editor:—The above (as from said Almanac of 1847) appears in the Cleveland (O.) Times, of February, 1849, a copy of which is before me. Its singularity is certainly striking, to say the least. But would the last two lines of the stanza in question bear the construction as for commerce to crowd the vasty main with unprecented cargoes and numerousness of craft and crews at an imminent date?—or do they bode war, with plenty of privateering, and battles by sea? "Three millions of men with their first in command," to be on "the waters" "instead of the land," as the latter has chiefly proved the case from 1861 to the middle of 1865? It was by merest chance I noticed the "prediction," still its strangeness seems to provoke attention.

HENRY G. PERRY.

Natchez, Miss., Jan., 1866.

For the World's Crisis.

GLADNESS.

My heart is made to rejoice as I read in the blessed word of the beauties and glories there will be in Eden restored; and I long for it to come. I read that there will be no more pain, and it fills my heart with joy to know the time will soon come. For twenty-eight long years pain has been my constant companion, by night and by day, but often these thoughts have come into my mind with almost healing balm, there will be no more pain, and for some time I could hardly realize that I should ever be where pain could not afflict, and cause us days of distress and nights of groans. Lord, speed the day, is my prayer. Amen, even so come, Lord Jesus.

How it fills my heart with joy and gladness to know that it is written that God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes. O it is cheering to read of these blessed things. How it helps us bear up under our trials and afflictions, and gives us new life to press on in the good way.

I am so glad that weeping will come to an end. Let the wheels of time fly swiftly round, and bring the day of gladness. Again I read there shall be no more death nor sorrow. How cheering are these words to those who mourn the loss of dear ones, or stand by their dying bedsides and see them struggling for life, and then hear their sad farewell spoken, and see their eyes close in death; but we have hope beyond the narrow confines of the charnel house of death. This hope cheers us amid the sorrows of the way, and soon it will be heard from the lips of the dear Savior; "Awake, and sing, ye that dwell in dust." Will not that sound fill our hearts with gladness? Dear ones, who mourn the early death of loved ones, look to him who has said, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death. O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction," and let these thoughts fill thy heart with gladness; for the day is very near. Soon it will be heard that time is "no longer;" then, if we are ready to meet the Lord, our hearts will be filled with gladness, and we shall meet our dear loved ones to be separated no more. I long to be there.

LUTHERA B. WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

THE MEEK.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."—MATT 5: 5.

How much of it? "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 7: 27. We see that we shall not be stinted, but we shall inherit substance, and enough of it; for the glory of the Lord will cover the earth as the water now covers the sea. And then the New Jerusalem is to come down from God out of heaven, the glorious metropolis of the restored earth; then we shall have our bodies changed and made like Christ's glorious body.

John says, "I saw no temple therein; for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it; and the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." Also out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people,—yes, all the old prophets and apostles, the martyrs, and a goodly company that are now looking for Jesus, I trust will be prepared to say, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us." Let us be ready, for I think the kingdom is within thirty two months.

Your brother, waiting and praying,

Sandy Hill, N. Y. IRA FANCHER.

VALUABLE RULES.

1. We may be sure that our will is likely to be crossed during the day, so prepare for it.
2. Everybody in the house has an evil nature as well as ourselves, and therefore we are not to expect too much.
3. To learn the different temper of each individual.
4. To look upon each member of the family as one for whose soul we are bound to watch, as those that must give account.
5. When any good happens to any one, to rejoice at it.
6. When inclined to give an angry answer, to lift up the heart in prayer.
7. If, from sickness, pain or infirmity, we feel irritable, to keep a very strict watch over ourselves.
8. To observe when others are suffering, and drop a word of kindness or sympathy suited to them.
9. To watch for little opportunities of pleasing, and to put little annoyances out of the way.
10. To take a cheerful view of everything, and to encourage hope.
11. To speak kindly to the servants, and praise them for little things when you can.
12. In all little pleasures which may occur, to put self last.
13. To try for the "soft answer that turneth away wrath."
14. When we have been pained by an unkind word or deed, to ask ourselves, "Have I not done the same thing and been forgiven?"
15. In conversation, not to exalt ourselves, but to bring others forward.
16. To be very gentle with the younger ones, and treat them with respect.
17. Never to judge one another, but to attribute a good motive when you can.—Christian Treasury.

HOW TO MAKE A SERMON.

The description contained in the following extract, of "how to make a sermon," contains valuable suggestions which are worthy of being preserved. We commend them to the notice of pastors, who are familiar with the labor required to prepare two good sermons a week for their hearers:

A clerical correspondent of the Witness gives some good advice to ministers upon this subject. In the first place, he says: "If you have a printed book of plans and skeletons, throw it into the fire. Secondly: if you have a blank book in which you have collected the plans of sermons you have heard other ministers preach, throw that into the fire too. Thirdly: if you have been in the habit of picking your sermons up from scraps and newspapers and books, stop it. Fourthly: if you have been in the habit of reading printed sermons a good many times over and then attempting to preach them, stop that. Get your Bible—fix on a passage, sit down to it, and begin by reading the passage over and over again. Study every verse thoroughly, and select the verse you wish to use for a text. Of this verse, study not only every sentence, but every clause and every word most diligently. Look out the meaning of individual words especially. Note down on paper whatever thoughts occur to you during this effort. Avoid commentators, except for the meaning of obscure clauses or phrases. And even then, only use them after—not before—you have sucked out of the passage all you can by your own effort. If you take this course your thoughts will be mainly both rich and original. They will please yourself, and of course excite you to additional thought. Having worked on in this way for six, twelve, or fifteen hours of hard and prayerful study, being careful to write down all the thoughts that occur to you as you go on, you will find that you have collected a mass of thought sufficient to make three or perhaps five sermons. But do not make three or five. Make only one. Out of this accumulation of thought select the choicest and best, and arrange them under proper headings in one sermon. If you write only on one side of single leaves, which is an excellent plan, you can throw much of your matter into sermon form without rewriting. Imbue your soul with your theme by going prayerfully over it several times; then, rising from your knees in your closet, hasten to the pulpit and try to preach just as though you never expected to address your hearers again.—Ex.

WILD OATS.

There is an ancient story of a man who owned a beautiful field which a wily stranger vainly sought to purchase.

The young man was firm in his refusal to sell the inheritance of his fathers. When every effort failed, the stranger at last offered to hire what he could not buy; and proposed to rent the land long enough to raise one crop to maturity and get it off, and then the lease was to expire, the property revert to the owner and all the stranger's right in the field was to cease.

The bargain was concluded and the cunning scamp sowed the soil with acorns from end to end. The first year they sprouted like leaves, the next year they grew like scions, five years after they were slender rods, ten years after they were thrifty saplings, twenty years and they were young trees, and so the crop grew on, until the young man became old and poor, and weary with waiting, and when at last, grizzled and gray, broken with many years, he sank into his grave, his once verdant field was a forest of lusty oaks, which lifted their giant arms heavenward to the sunshine, defied the summer drouth and the wintry hurricane, and bade fair to survive the storms and changes of many centuries.

And yet the lease was unexpired. The one crop had not become mature, nor been gathered to the garner, but the thoughtless young man had lost his heritage; the land was his no more.

Just so, in the fair generous soil of youth, with its bounding pulses and its exuberant life, Satan says "Let me sow just one crop, and gather it in, and then, in a little while, when it is removed, I will ask no more. Pluck up the good seed sown at a mother's knee, buried by a mother's prayers, and watered by a mother's tears, clear off the rubbish that has grown up from the sweet influences of home, amid the gentle loves of sisterhood, and the kindly powers of piety and grace; away with all religious mopings and godly nonsense, clear the field for a new crop, just one: young men, you know, 'must sow their wild oats.' When this crop is off then there will be time for other grains. Then, in mature life, plant the seeds of goodness, greatness, nobility, purity, and godliness; all these may grow," Satan says, "only let me first have one crop of wild oats."

And multitudes give heed to his wiles and consent to his proposals. But of all the mad delusions of mortals, theirs is the worst. Nothing grows longer, or roots stronger than wild oats. And may God pity the man who has leased his soul to Satan for one such crop. I have seen wild oats sown and grown. I have seen the harvest. I have seen the fatal brand of lust upon the beastly countenance. I have seen the blear of drunkenness in the reddened eye. I have seen the restless twitching of the shattered nerves, I have seen the stiffened gait of the ruined debauchee, and the sneaking glance which told that nothing but brass could make him hold up his head before the world. I have seen the wasted form, the sunken cheeks, the hectic flush; I have heard the shattered voice, the hollow cough, the sad confession, the vain regrets! Aye, I have preached Christ through grated windows, and in gloomy cells, and through the long stony corridors whence bars and bolts shut out the freedom and the joy of life; and I have looked on fetters, and knelt by the side of the young man guilty of his brother's blood, and amid it all I have said, "This is the harvest that comes of sowing wild oats."

Yes, and there are dark dishonored graves where lie the buried hopes of fathers, the joys of mothers' hearts, the pride of brothers, and the love of sisters fair, and in the rank and tangled weeds that sprout and flourish, feeding on the corruptions of the dead, we see the result of "sowing wild oats."

Young man, possessed of all the grand opportunities of youthful life in this swift speeding age, can you, will you, lend your soul to Satan for him to raise one crop of "wild oats?" Will you sell your birthright for a summer's purchase? Will you, in the beastliness of lust, in the vortex of pleasure, in the red gleaming of the wine cup, in the deadly hallucinations of narcotic drugs, in the poison of tobacco, in the pleasures of riot, in the foul pestilences of disease, in the madness of the gaming table, in the painted harlot's vile embrace, will you, can you drown all there is about you of purity, and nobleness, and principle, and manliness, and become a poor degraded wretched thing?

Would you find your youth a fond delusion, your manhood a fruitless struggle, and your old age a vain regret? Would you spend a weary worthless life, and see your sun go down at noon? Would you feel that existence has been a mourning failure, never to be retrieved? Would you come before the Giver of your powers, to receive his condemnation and his curse? Would you miss that glad and glorious immortality which is the heritage of all the sons of God? Would you come forth in the last harvest day, to shame and everlasting contempt? Then sow "wild oats."

You cannot eradicate the crop. The adamantine chains that bind together cause and effect will link you to the results of your actions here. Some things are already done beyond recall. In God alone is there pardon for the past! In Christ alone is there salvation from the guilt already incurred. In the blood of sprinkling alone, is there cleansing from the deep stains that now pollute your soul. In the Holy Spirit alone is there a renovating power that shall revive and renew the wasting vigor of your moral life. In God's word alone, is there a lamp to guide your feet in your perplexed and dangerous path. In God's love and grace alone, is there deliverance from all your iniquities. Rejecting these you will bind the millstone of sin about your neck as with the chains of fate, and plunge hopeless in the fiery billows of despair. Beware what you sow. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Gal. 6: 7–9.—The Christian.

DO YOUR WORK IN SEASON.—Nature always has before us the most striking examples of how she anticipates her work. Let us copy them. If she had not set her buds last fall, we should have no fruit this year on our trees. If the bulb of the lily, dahlia, crocus and snow-drop had not been swollen and perfected by the autumnal influences of last year, we should look in vain for their sweet faces among the dried herbage of the early spring, or as the gayer garniture of the garden as summer flowers. Nature never forgets to do her work in season. In many things, let her become our guide and prompter.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.—No. 2.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

It will be unnecessary to occupy much space in discussing the nature of this affection. It has been claimed by some to be essentially inflammatory in its character, the inflammation being confined to the mucous membrane of the stomach and intestines. But this is certainly erroneous.

First: where the disease is arrested before the collapse, there are no symptoms presented indicative of inflammation, but patients recover with great rapidity.

Second: when the patient dies during the stage of collapse, the post mortem examination shows no traces of inflammatory action. The mucous membrane of the stomach and bowels present no more of an altered condition than the lungs, kidneys, or skin.

Third: inflammation of this membrane, when produced by any cause, never produces those symptoms peculiar to cholera. That there is some irritation there, I do not deny; but that is not the disease; it is merely an attendant of it. Extensive irritation of the whole intestinal canal frequently occurs, without producing any symptoms of cholera.

The real condition is the opposite of inflammation. The centres of organic life are the first points morbidly impressed. This impression is produced by a poison, which, having gained access to the system, manifests a specific affinity for these points. The consequence is general enervation, and of course debility of the alimentary canal. This debility is attended with a degree of morbid excitability, which predisposes the mucous and muscular coats to become irritated; and conversely, an irritating influence acting directly on the mucous surface may constitute a predisposing or even an exciting cause of cholera, by its debilitating effect upon the splancnic nerves. Then, when the full force of the poison is experienced on the nervous centres, an enervated and relaxed condition of the mucous membrane is the consequence; and the watery and plastic portions of the blood are permitted to escape through the blood-vessels; and hence the diarrhea and rice-water discharges. The influence of the poison is felt through all parts of the system at the same time. The nervous centres supplying the muscular system being so highly irritated, muscular spasm is the result. The blood is extensively vitiated by the direct influence of the poison in that fluid, on the heart and arteries. Add to this the great drain upon the blood through the blood-vessels of the bowels, of the white portion of that fluid (fibrin and serum), and we find the blood rapidly decomposing; so that when drawn, even from an artery, it presents a thick, black appearance, resembling a partially decomposed clot. This condition of the blood prevents its being freely circulated through the general system, or through the lungs. The consequence is stagnation of the blood in the capillaries of the skin, imperfect aeration, diminished heat of surface; collapse is the consequence, and death supervenes from asphyxia.

The causes of cholera may be divided into three varieties: 1st. Predisposing. 2nd. Exciting. 3d. Specific.

Predisposing causes are such as reduce the system to such a state as is favorable to the development of cholera. Whatever has a tendency to impair the general health, and depress the vitality of the individual, predisposes to an attack of cholera. Under this head may be named old age, previous disease, irregular, intemperate, and vicious habits; deficiency of food; exposure to confined, damp, or otherwise vitiated air, as where persons are thickly crowded together in ships, camps, prisons, cities, etc.; depression of spirits; fear; sudden emotions; all these and many other circumstances might be named as diminishing the constitutional stamina, and therefore predisposing causes of this malady. Among irregular, intemperate, and vicious habits, may be named as most potent in destroying the constitutional vigor, excessive venery, the use of alcoholic liquors of every description, irregular meals, late hours, etc.

The fact that these vices are practised so extensively in our larger towns and cities, accounts in part for the disease being confined almost entirely to cities; and this portion of the population are those upon whom the disease falls with the greatest fatality. These habits have a twofold influence in the work; first, they produce and keep up a high state of irritation in the whole system; inflame the blood and render it unfit for nutrient purposes; destroy the natural tonicity of the alimentary canal; exhaust the nervous forces, and most thoroughly sap the vitality. Secondly, they induce poverty and filth, depress the mind, and most effectually open every door to the advance of this terrible epidemic. The condition of the air found in the habitations of the poor in our cities is most unfavorable. By it the blood becomes vitiated, and the already overburthened system falls an easy prey to the epidemic.

First among all the predisposing or even exciting causes is fear of the disease. It is positively my opinion that a great many cases of cholera have been brought on and terminated fatally through fear alone. It is one of the most potent influences in the spread of this malady that can possibly exist. Experiments by eminent physiologists have established the fact that a person may readily be put to death by fright. If a person becomes convinced that he is going to contract a disease, he is almost as sure to come down and die with it.

The exciting causes do not vary materially from those said to be predisposing, except that their impression is more suddenly produced. Any circumstance occurring calculated to derange suddenly the organic functions, may excite an attack of cholera in persons laboring under the specific cause. A sudden change of temperature, by suddenly checking the perspiration, and throwing a greater burthen on the mucous membrane of the bowels, may become an exciting cause. The use of crude, indigestible material, unripe fruits, impure water, etc., are all injurious at any time, and dangerous during an epidemic of cholera.

By specific cause, I mean that subtile, invisible, intangible, and yet remarkable influential principle which carries this fearful malady around the globe;—that influence which, when most concentrated, is capable of producing the disease without regard to surrounding circumstances, predisposing or exciting causes. The next question asked is, What is this something? After examining all the hypotheses which have fallen under my notice, I have come to the conclusion that we know nothing about it. The hypothesis that is spoken of most favorably by many eminent men at the present time is, that it consists of invisible animalcule floating in the air; and from the nature and habits of the disease this seems the most probable. Whatever it is, it seems to act as a ferment, rapidly destroying the mass of circulating fluid, and poisoning the nervous system. Further than this, we know nothing positively.

The next question asked by many is this: "Is the disease contagious?" No,—no more so than intermittent fever. It has been considered by the majority of people highly contagious, and this very idea has caused the death of thousands. There is no more danger in attending a patient laboring under it, provided the sick-room be well ventilated, than there is in standing in the streets of an infected city, though you are a mile from a cholera patient. Experience has demonstrated this to be true. The more a person becomes frightened, and tries to avoid the disease, the more certain is he to contract it.

After a person has remained in a place until the epidemic has made its appearance there, he has already become infected with the specific cause; and in leaving, from a change of diet, etc., he will be more liable to contract the disease than had he remained and quietly pursued his usual occupation.

When people come to understand that the disease is not contagious, and that the less the attempt to avoid the disease by sudden changes of diet, localities, and other influences, the less liable they are to an attack of it, then will the epidemic have met a formidable barrier to its progress and severity.

Bristolville, Ohio.

For the World's Crisis.

FREE.

Yes, thank God, I am free from one of the greatest nuisances that we have in the land, and that is tobacco. I became addicted to this vile habit by being with bad boys, and I believe this is the way that almost every one gets into this habit. I always felt guilty to have any one ask me if I used tobacco. I know it is a bad habit. As soon as I gave my heart to God, it seemed impressed upon me that I must break from this snare; for I truly believe it is a snare of the devil to draw us into greater sins. Every one knows that tobacco leads to strong drink, and this leads to every other sin.

A habit is acquired by littles. I began by smoking sweet fern. Our lives are made up of little things; therefore, let us look out for these little things, or perchance they may ensnare us before we are aware of it. When I gave my heart to God, I gave my whole heart, and I determined to cleanse it from every thing impure and unholy in the sight of God. I don't expect to enter the kingdom of heaven full of vice and intemperance; for we are commanded in God's word to be temperate in all things; and yet a great many professed christians break this law of God.

I believe it is a sin in the sight of God to use this vile poison, when every body knows that it is poison; and then to see christians murder themselves by inches, I think it is too bad. I doubt not but that some will curse me for this; but I care not what the world says. I am resolved to live for God hereafter, and I feel it my duty to take the ground against this vile habit. I have got out of the pit, and I think it is my duty to try and help others out. Our country is full of this vile stuff to overflowing, and not only ours, but the whole enlightened world. This fact don't make it right nevertheless. So the whole world were sinners but eight, at the time of the flood.

I notice some good pieces on this evil in the Crisis, and I love to read them. I think it is the duty of christians to bring all the force they can to bear against this great evil, which is coiling like a huge serpent around this enlightened country.

Your Bro. in Christ, CURTIS J. LOUGEE.

Gilmanton, N. H.

DIPHTHERIA.—Great relief in diphtheria is said to be found by placing cayenne pepper in the sharpest vinegar, dropping in live coals, and inhaling the steam from a teapot. It gives strength to throw up the detached membrane, besides affording great relief in breathing. WM. L. CARROLL.

REMEDY FOR SORE THROAT.—Dissolve a quantity of saleratus in strong vinegar; heat and inhale the fumes through a tunnel. It will cure sore throat or diphtheria—so say those who have tried it.

WM. L. CARROLL.

REST.—After abundant exercise, then should come a period of rest. It is not consonant with health to be "always on the drive."

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance.................$2.50 a year.
If not paid within six months......$3.00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address..........$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address..........$10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.

CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.
Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM:

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS:

Payable always in advance.

[illegible]

DANIEL'S FAITH.

TUNE.—"Old Family Bible."

May our faith be like that of the good Hebrew Daniel,
Who was the most faithful of those in his day;
Through Christ he endured all their vile persecution,
From his blessed Savior he'd turn not away.
It seemed that they then, by their human inventions,
Had given commandment he should cease to pray;
But, heedless of all their wicked intentions,
He called on Jehovah three times every day.

He did not retire away into secret,—
His windows were opened to Jerusalem;
As for the commandment, he never would keep it,
He cared not for king nor the fierce lion's den.
He was firm to his trust, and he would not give over,
Through God he defeated the whole wicked plan;
He knew there was strength in the arm of Jehovah,
He trusted in God, and had no fear of man.

They then made arrangements, they called for assistance
To bear him away unto yon lonely place;
He gave himself up without any resistance,
Still calling on God and believing his grace.
They bore him away to yon lonely prison,
And then let him down into that fearful goal;
But it seemed unto him like a little heaven,
With glory in view and Christ in his soul.

He finds himself now in the den among lions,
And feels that his standing is on holy ground;
He then breaks the silence with an old song of Zion,
And makes the whole cavern with praises resound.
The night passing on and the morning now breaking,
The king rises early and starts on his way;
Away to the cavern of Daniel now making,
To see if he lived and continued to pray.

With trembling footsteps, from past recollections,
The king is approaching, and now hear him say—
O Daniel! O Daniel! hast thou found protection?
Has thy God delivered, and wilt thou yet pray?
Yes, God has been with me, and I am not fearful;
His presence I find, and my faith is the same,
And now I am happy, contented and cheerful,
My God has come down, and the lions are tame.

O king, there's no danger, not yet the least trouble,
While praying to God by night and by day;
Though lions may roar and our foes may redouble,
At the word of the Lord they will all calm away.
Come up, my good Hebrew, thou shalt have my favor,
And let it be published and sounded abroad;
Besides Daniel's God there is no other Savior,
Let all come and worship this old Hebrew's God.

[Written about thirty years ago, by Eld. York, a F. W. Baptist.]

For the World's Crisis.

A SERMON.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25: 46.

We will now examine the subject of the thief on the cross (Luke 23: 43),—"To-day thou shalt be with me in paradise." In the first place, what was the request of the thief? We answer, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Did Christ come into his kingdom at his crucifixion? No indeed, he certainly did not; neither did he go into his kingdom, nor to paradise at that time; for, on the third day after his resurrection, he told Mary in the garden that he had not yet ascended to his God, and her God, and to his Father and her Father; and he did not ascend until forty days after his resurrection; and furthermore, he is not yet in his paradise, or kingdom, where he is to reign with his saints; neither will he be in his paradise, or kingdom, till he comes in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory; as described in Dan. 7: 13, 14, Matt. 25: 31, 16: 27, 19: 28, Mark 8: 38, Acts 1: 11, 1 Thess. 4: 16, 2 Thess. 1: 7, Jude 14, and Rev. 1: 7. We see very plainly that Jesus does not come into his kingdom until he leaves the mediatorial seat, and then he will raise his saints, and the promise which was made to the thief on the cross, the day of his crucifixion, will be fulfilled to him.

Can you find one passage in all the Bible which proves that any person receives his reward at death? But how plain it is taught in the Bible that every one is to receive his reward at or after the great day of judgment. Look at Matt. 16: 27.

We will now say a few words about the souls under the altar, as this is often referred to as proof that the soul is immortal, and leaves the body at death. If the souls here spoken of are immortal, and are separate entities from their bodies, and are in heaven under an altar, crying for vengeance on their murderers, they in a deplorable condition, and must be in great misery; in which case I should not think they were in heaven, but in a state of suffering and distress; and not only so, but they have a different disposition from what our dear Savior and St. Stephen had, when they prayed for their murderers, saying, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Those souls were the persons under the altar of persecution, while being slaughtered under the reign of the Papal beast, and whose blood, like the blood of Abel, cried for vengeance on their murderers. Do immortal souls in heaven have blood to shed? They cried for vengeance on their blood.

But, says the objector, "the spirit" returns "unto God who gave it," and that is the soul. Stop a moment, and let us recollect that the word spirit, in Eccl. 12: 7, is translated from the Hebrew word that is rendered breath; and in many places in the Bible the same Hebrew word is translated wind. The Bible declares that man is "mortal," and God only is immortal.

We will say a few words about the smoke of their torment ascending up forever, and being tormented day and night forever and ever. If we examine the symbols or figures made use of by the Revelator, you will find it is very hard to prove any doctrine of the Bible by them. In the book of Revelation, at the fourth chapter and eleventh verse, we read that the worshipers of the beast and his image were to be tormented in the presence of the holy angels and of the Lamb; "and they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast." The beast here represents a power on earth, and a very wicked power, too; and the wrath, or judgments of God were poured out upon the worshipers of this wicked beast, which is nothing less than the Papal beast; and in Rev. 20: 10, the devil, the beast, and the false prophet are represented as cast into a lake of fire and brimstone, to be tormented day and night for ever and ever. The beast represents a power, or government on earth; and the false prophet represents a false religion; and the devil is the deceiver and leader, who in other Scriptures it is declared shall be destroyed when Christ comes with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, to take vengeance on the ungodly.

In one place it is declared that death and the devil shall be destroyed; and the Papal beast, I think, will be destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming. I think the Papal beast, and his worshipers, are now, in these last days in which we live, receiving the dreadful judgments of God, and are now tormented day and night; and this will continue till they are finally destroyed, which result will be eternal death, which is an eternal cessation of being.

In conclusion, kind reader, I would say that I am afraid that thousands, and perhaps millions, will be forever lost, who, in a stubborn manner, are determined to continue in the dreadful error of immortal-soulism, and endless misery, which reflects an awful character on God, and virtually destroys the doctrine of the resurrection, and discredit the great mission of Christ on earth; and lays the foundation of modern Spiritualism, and Mormonism, and many other cruel errors, which have been a great curse to the human family for centuries past. O may the good Lord keep his dear saints from being polluted by these dreadful errors, and prepare us for his kingdom, which is close upon us, and save us at last, for Jesus' sake. Amen, and Amen.

Vernon, Vt. B. PERHAM.

For the World's Crisis.

KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS.

NUMBER TWO.

In our former article we showed that God's commandments were sometimes limited to persons and nations, some of which we specified. We will allude to some others in this article, and show how men of this dispensation can be christians and not keep commands which are abolished; or, in Scripture terms, "be justified without the deeds of the law."

While Christ was preaching his gospel, he was not acting in the office of a priest. See Heb. 8: 4. "For if he were on earth he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law."

Christ acted the part and filled the office of a prophet while here in this ministry. See Deut. 18: 15, 19, and Acts 3: 20-24. As a prophet under the law, or Mosaic administration, Christ observed and kept it, and taught others to keep it, while at the same time he was prophesying of the new dispensation, new covenant, new commandments, etc., soon to be in force.

When he was crucified, the great sacrifice was made for sin. At his death the Sinaic dispensation closed, in God's arrangement, although the people did not then know it. At Christ's resurrection he entered the priest's office, of an unchangeable priesthood. See Heb. 7: 16-24; also, Heb. 9: 11-17. Too plain to be misunderstood. Chist, then, was the prophet which the Father declared at his baptism, and at the transfiguration, to be his beloved Son, commanding us to hear him.

Christ has given us a New Covenant, not endorsed the old one; nor has he transferred the old one from the tables of stone to the hearts of his people. "He hath made the first old." "But now he hath obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a BETTER covenant, which was established upon BETTER promises."—Heb. 8: 6. Let it be remembered that the old covenant was the ten commandments. Let Paul speak again. "For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah. . . . In that he saith a new covenant, he hath made the first old." Heb. 8: 7, 13.

Christ, then, is our lawgiver, our mediator, our high priest, and whatever the new covenant (the law of faith) teaches, embraces the commandments we are to keep. Paul clearly states that he and the other apostles were not ministers of the old covenant, but that God had made them "able ministers of the new." 2 Cor. 3: 6.

Thus we find the apostles always teaching the doctrine of the new covenant, and never of the old. They allude to it, tell us its use, and when it ended, and by what means. They contrast it with the new, and show the difference. But they call the old "not perfect," "faulty," "a yoke of bondage," "done away," "abolished," "dead," "taken out of the way," etc., etc. They everywhere enjoin the new covenant on the Gentile church, or believers, calling it the "spirit," "new covenant," "law of faith," "better hope," better promises," "royal law," "law of the spirit of life," etc., etc.

Now I ask candidly, can any one, knowing these facts, honestly say, concerning those who follow Christ and obey his covenant, his commands, "If you do not keep the ten commandments you can kill, steal, swear, and do anything you please?" Does Christ's new covenant allow such liberties? I think not.

Again. Can it be a just charge against us to say, "You believe in keeping nine of the commandments of the decalogue and reject the fourth?"

This is not the truth with us. We reject the ten. That code of law was never made to nor for Gentile believers under Christ; it is now abolished, and the nation for whose special benefit it was made is scattered. But as some may begin to feel troubled lest they be deprived of a Sabbath, I will promise to tell them in another article about the Christian's Sabbath. I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

DEATH.

Death has been called "the king of terrors," and likewise said to be "the terror of kings." Death seems to invade the land at the present day in a twofold sense. Look on either hand, and we may see more or less of our fellow mortals lie prostrate in death. Dear reader, is it not high time for us to look up to the great preserver of life—the God who created us—for our safety, and more especially for our salvation? "We must be prepared to die," is the expression which we frequently hear; and truly this preparation is all-important; but we ask if we can better prepare ourselves to die than by preparing ourselves to live a righteous life, while we are permitted to dwell here below?

The great Teacher instructed mankind to live well, and dying well is to be inferred as a consequence of a well-spent life. In deviating from this rule, mankind have made a great mistake. They have too often thought that one set of principles would be best for life, and another for death; when the truth is, that man is the best prepared to die, when best prepared to live. Here let me observe, all men are seeking, or wishing for happiness; but as long as man lies under the power of sin, he must suffer the penalty. If we desire happiness, we must deny ourselves of sin, and all sinful pleasures; and embrace that religion which shall liberate us from the bondage of sin and a guilty conscience; and then the terror of death, and all that afflicts the mind, will flee from us, and we shall feel that happiness which the unbeliever and sinful man knows nothing about; that peace that passeth all understanding.

Wherever the spirit of true religion and christianity is found, there is peace and joy and comfort. There are cherished the pure principles of love to God and love to man, which raise the mind far above the unjust persecutions that are being hurled at it; and, in spite of all convulsions and agitations, it stands as firm as a rock. When we behold the beauty and purity of religion, shall we not embrace it? O let us cherish with devotedness the great and immutable truths of the gospel of Christ.

Dear reader, I have laid before you the terrors of death and the rescue,—by embracing the true and undefiled religion of Christ. O let us by all means attend to the sacred word of the gospel before we shall find it too late. "Behold now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation." Death is surrounding us on every side. And according to what we discover by reading the Scriptures of truth, and the signs of the times, our Judge is soon coming to judge us. At that great and trying day, may we have on the wedding garment, the robe of righteousness, that we may stand before him with a pure heart, shining in brilliant raiment, ready to be invited to his royal wedding feast.

Fisherville, N. H. J. ELKINS.

Voice of the West, please copy.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRISTIAN FAITHFULNESS.

The Savior said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." The apostle Paul said to the Colossian brethren, "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk (not sit) ye in him; rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving." The apostle Peter exhorted the disciples of the Lord in his day to "beware, lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness; but grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" Father Paul faithfully exhorted his Corinthian brethren to "be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord," etc.

So we might go on and cite numerous passages of Scripture, showing the vast importance of christian faithfulness. To be short, let me say that multitudes have begun well, ane run well for a season; and it is a duty we owe to God to always abound in faith and love. There is no possible excuse for a christian, if he does not constantly grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the truth. We should earnestly pray for that love which casteth out all fear, and the abiding witness of the Spirit that we are the children of God. We should live so near the Savior, by a godly, humble, prayerful, spiritual life and conversation, that all our many enemies cannot shake our faith in Christ, or in any way draw us aside into sin and darkness.

If a professor of religion does not love God more to-day than yesterday, love souls more, is not more willing to bear reproach for Christ; to talk with and pray for sinners; to give of his substance, time and talents, and have his name cast out as evil among men; if he is not willing to be anything or nothing, for Christ's sake, to save souls, and does not so continue to feel every successive day of his life; the Bible pronounces him to be a guilty backslider from God.

O! may the Lord help us, one and all who love the Lord supremely, to be up and doing, and work while the day lasts. Time is short, and what we do must be done quickly. Yours in faith and love, P. TANDY.

For the World's Crisis.

DUMB FOLKS.

They are dumb, when? Not when nonsense is introduced—something funny to laugh at—something of a worldly nature, about farms or merchandise, the latest novel, the religious festival, the picnic, the donation party, or the New Year's calls, where feasting, wine-bibbing, joking and jesting are the order of the day. No tongues are tied now; no one is dumb here, now where marrying and giving in marriage, the latest cut in things for the wardrobe, are subjects for discussion; mouths are open wider in this direction, tongues fly, move glibly, fluently. But introduce the subject of prayer, praise, the reading of God's word, visiting the sick, the oppressed—speak of heaven and heavenly things, the glory of the upper world, the joys of salvation, the peace of God in the soul flowing like a river, the happiness resulting from well-doing, from imitating Jesus,—what now? any response? All is silent as the grave; lips are closed; tongues are tied. Quote a passage of Scripture, repeat a verse or two from the pen of inspiration, more precious than gold,—any one to reply? any to second the motion? Not one; not a word, or look of smiling approbation is manifested; all is hushed as the tomb; every one is dumb! dumb! struck dumb!

This alluding to things spiritual and eternal, talking often one to another of the Lord's mercies and judgments, for him to hearken and hear, that a book of remembrance may be written before him of them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name, is not to be tolerated in this refined age, and in refined circles. This referring to the Bible for subjects of interest and conversation, or declaring, like David, what great things God hath done for our souls, is out of place, out of time, out of date. "Away with sombre looks, things grave, serious, eternal; away with the Bible, its doctrines and precepts, its holy inculcations; give us something mirthful—that will tickle the fancy—a spice of wit, that will provoke laughter." "Let us eat, drink, and make merry, for to-morrow we die."

Is not this picture a true one of the present, every day piety? Friends, what are we coming to?

D. F. NEWTON, Author of Home Thrusts.

"EXTRAORDINARY PREDICTION" OF NEARLY TWENTY YEARS AGO.—In an old Kinderhook Almanac of 1847 is the following prediction about the United States:—

When the country is ruled by a tailor bold,
A beggar shall stitch with a thimble of gold;
And the water shall furnish, instead of the land,
Three millions of men, with their first in command.

Mr. Editor:—The above (as from said Almanac of 1847) appears in the Cleveland (O.) Times, of February, 1849, a copy of which is before me. Its singularity is certainly striking, to say the least. But would the last two lines of the stanza in question bear the construction as for commerce to crowd the vasty main with unprecented cargoes and numerousness of craft and crews at an imminent date?—or do they bode war, with plenty of privateering, and battles by sea? "Three millions of men with their first in command," to be on "the waters" "instead of the land," as the latter has chiefly proved the case from 1861 to the middle of 1865? It was by merest chance I noticed the "prediction," still its strangeness seems to provoke attention.

HENRY G. PERRY.

Natchez, Miss., Jan., 1866.

For the World's Crisis.

GLADNESS.

My heart is made to rejoice as I read in the blessed word of the beauties and glories there will be in Eden restored; and I long for it to come. I read that there will be no more pain, and it fills my heart with joy to know the time will soon come. For twenty-eight long years pain has been my constant companion, by night and by day, but often these thoughts have come into my mind with almost healing balm, there will be no more pain, and for some time I could hardly realize that I should ever be where pain could not afflict, and cause us days of distress and nights of groans. Lord, speed the day, is my prayer. Amen, even so come, Lord Jesus.

How it fills my heart with joy and gladness to know that it is written that God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes. O it is cheering to read of these blessed things. How it helps us bear up under our trials and afflictions, and gives us new life to press on in the good way.

I am so glad that weeping will come to an end. Let the wheels of time fly swiftly round, and bring the day of gladness. Again I read there shall be no more death nor sorrow. How cheering are these words to those who mourn the loss of dear ones, or stand by their dying bedsides and see them struggling for life, and then hear their sad farewell spoken, and see their eyes close in death; but we have hope beyond the narrow confines of the charnel house of death. This hope cheers us amid the sorrows of the way, and soon it will be heard from the lips of the dear Savior; "Awake, and sing, ye that dwell in dust." Will not that sound fill our hearts with gladness? Dear ones, who mourn the early death of loved ones, look to him who has said, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death. O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction," and let these thoughts fill thy heart with gladness; for the day is very near. Soon it will be heard that time is "no longer;" then, if we are ready to meet the Lord, our hearts will be filled with gladness, and we shall meet our dear loved ones to be separated no more. I long to be there.

LUTHERA B. WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

THE MEEK.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."—MATT. 5: 5.

How much of it? "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 7: 27. We see that we shall not be stinted, but we shall inherit substance, and enough of it; for the glory of the Lord will cover the earth as the water now covers the sea. And then the New Jerusalem is to come down from God out of heaven, the glorious metropolis of the restored earth; then we shall have our bodies changed and made like Christ's glorious body.

John says, "I saw no temple therein; for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it; and the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." Also out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people,—yes, all the old prophets and apostles, the martyrs, and a goodly company that are now looking for Jesus, I trust will be prepared to say, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us." Let us be ready, for I think the kingdom is within thirty two months.

Your brother, waiting and praying,

Sandy Hill, N. Y. IRA FANCHER.

VALUABLE RULES.

1. We may be sure that our will is likely to be crossed during the day, so prepare for it.
2. Everybody in the house has an evil nature as well as ourselves, and therefore we are not to expect too much.
3. To learn the different temper of each individual.
4. To look upon each member of the family as one for whose soul we are bound to watch, as those that must give account.
5. When any good happens to any one, to rejoice at it.
6. When inclined to give an angry answer, to lift up the heart in prayer.
7. If, from sickness, pain or infirmity, we feel irritable, to keep a very strict watch over ourselves.
8. To observe when others are suffering, and drop a word of kindness or sympathy suited to them.
9. To watch for little opportunities of pleasing, and to put little annoyances out of the way.
10. To take a cheerful view of everything, and to encourage hope.
11. To speak kindly to the servants, and praise them for little things when you can.
12. In all little pleasures which may occur, to put self last.
13. To try for the "soft answer that turneth away wrath."
14. When we have been pained by an unkind word or deed, to ask ourselves, "Have I not done the same thing and been forgiven?"
15. In conversation, not to exalt ourselves, but to bring others forward.
16. To be very gentle with the younger ones, and treat them with respect.
17. Never to judge one another, but to attribute a good motive when you can.—Christian Treasury.

HOW TO MAKE A SERMON.

The description contained in the following extract, of "how to make a sermon," contains valuable suggestions which are worthy of being preserved. We commend them to the notice of pastors, who are familiar with the labor required to prepare two good sermons a week for their hearers:

A clerical correspondent of the Witness gives some good advice to ministers upon this subject. In the first place, he says: "If you have a printed book of plans and skeletons, throw it into the fire. Secondly: if you have a blank book in which you have collected the plans of sermons you have heard other ministers preach, throw that into the fire too. Thirdly: if you have been in the habit of picking your sermons up from scraps and newspapers and books, stop it. Fourthly: if you have been in the habit of reading printed sermons a good many times over and then attempting to preach them, stop that. Get your Bible—fix on a passage, sit down to it, and begin by reading the passage over and over again. Study every verse thoroughly, and select the verse you wish to use for a text. Of this verse, study not only every sentence, but every clause and every word most diligently. Look out the meaning of individual words especially. Note down on paper whatever thoughts occur to you during this effort. Avoid commentators, except for the meaning of obscure clauses or phrases. And even then, only use them after—not before—you have sucked out of the passage all you can by your own effort. If you take this course your thoughts will be mainly both rich and original. They will please yourself, and of course excite you to additional thought. Having worked on in this way for six, twelve, or fifteen hours of hard and prayerful study, being careful to write down all the thoughts that occur to you as you go on, you will find that you have collected a mass of thought sufficient to make three or perhaps five sermons. But do not make three or five. Make only one. Out of this accumulation of thought select the choicest and best, and arrange them under proper headings in one sermon. If you write only on one side of single leaves, which is an excellent plan, you can throw much of your matter into sermon form without rewriting. Imbue your soul with your theme by going prayerfully over it several times; then, rising from your knees in your closet, hasten to the pulpit and try to preach just as though you never expected to address your hearers again. —Ex.

WILD OATS.

There is an ancient story of a man who owned a beautiful field which a wily stranger vainly sought to purchase.

The young man was firm in his refusal to sell the inheritance of his fathers. When every effort failed, the stranger at last offered to hire what he could not buy; and proposed to rent the land long enough to raise one crop to maturity and get it off, and then the lease was to expire, the property revert to the owner and all the stranger's right in the field was to cease.

The bargain was concluded and the cunning scamp sowed the soil with acorns from end to end. The first year they sprouted like leaves, the next year they grew like scions, five years after they were slender rods, ten years after they were thrifty saplings, twenty years and they were young trees, and so the crop grew on, until the young man became old and poor, and weary with waiting, and when at last, grizzled and gray, broken with many years, he sank into his grave, his once verdant field was a forest of lusty oaks, which lifted their giant arms heavenward to the sunshine, defied the summer drouth and the wintry hurricane, and bade fair to survive the storms and changes of many centuries.

And yet the lease was unexpired. The one crop had not become mature, nor been gathered to the garner, but the thoughtless young man had lost his heritage; the land was his no more.

Just so, in the fair generous soil of youth, with its bounding pulses and its exuberant life. Satan says "Let me sow just one crop, and gather it in, and then, in a little while, when it is removed, I will ask no more. Pluck up the good seed sown at a mother's knee, buried by a mother's prayers, and watered by a mother's tears, clear off the rubbish that has grown up from the sweet influences of home, amid the gentle loves of sisterhood, and the kindly powers of piety and grace; away with all religious mopings and godly nonsense, clear the field for a new crop, just one: young men, you know, 'must sow their wild oats.' When this crop is off then there will be time for other grains. Then, in mature life, plant the seeds of goodness, greatness, nobility, purity, and godliness; all these may grow," Satan says, "only let me first have one crop of wild oats."

And multitudes give heed to his wiles and consent to his proposals. But of all the mad delusions of mortals, theirs is the worst. Nothing grows longer, or roots stronger than wild oats. And may God pity the man who has leased his soul to Satan for one such crop. I have seen wild oats sown and grown. I have seen the harvest. I have seen the fatal brand of lust upon the beastly countenance. I have seen the blear of drunkenness in the reddened eye. I have seen the restless twitching of the shattered nerves, I have seen the stiffened gait of the ruined debauchee, and the sneaking glance which told that nothing but brass could make him hold up his head before the world. I have seen the wasted form, the sunken cheeks, the hectic flush; I have heard the shattered voice, the hollow cough, the sad confession, the vain regrets! Aye, I have preached Christ through grated windows, and in gloomy cells, and through the long stony corridors whence bars and bolts shut out the freedom and the joy of life; and I have looked on fetters, and knelt by the side of the young man guilty of his brother's blood, and amid it all I have said, "This is the harvest that comes of sowing wild oats."

Yes, and there are dark dishonored graves where lie the buried hopes of fathers, the joys of mothers' hearts, the pride of brothers, and the love of sisters fair, and in the rank and tangled weeds that sprout and flourish, feeding on the corruptions of the dead, we see the result of "sowing wild oats."

Young man, possessed of all the grand opportunities of youthful life in this swift speeding age, can you, will you, lend your soul to Satan for him to raise one crop of "wild oats?" Will you sell your birthright for a summer's purchase? Will you, in the beastliness of lust, in the vortex of pleasure, in the red gleaming of the wine cup, in the deadly hallucinations of narcotic drugs, in the poison of tobacco, in the pleasures of riot, in the foul pestilences of disease, in the madness of the gaming table, in the painted harlot's vile embrace, will you, can you drown all there is about you of purity, and nobleness, and principle, and manliness, and become a poor degraded wretched thing?

Would you find your youth a fond delusion, your manhood a fruitless struggle, and your old age a vain regret? Would you spend a weary worthless life, and see your sun go down at noon? Would you feel that existence has been a mourning failure, never to be retrieved? Would you come before the Giver of your powers, to receive his condemnation and his curse? Would you miss that glad and glorious immortality which is the heritage of all the sons of God? Would you come forth in the last harvest day, to shame and everlasting contempt? Then sow "wild oats."

You cannot eradicate the crop. The adamantine chains that bind together cause and effect will link you to the results of your actions here. Some things are already done beyond recall. In God alone is there pardon for the past! In Christ alone is there salvation from the guilt already incurred. In the blood of sprinkling alone, is there cleansing from the deep stains that now pollute your soul. In the Holy Spirit alone is there a renovating power that shall revive and renew the wasting vigor of your moral life. In God's word alone, is there a lamp to guide your feet in your perplexed and dangerous path. In God's love and grace alone, is there deliverance from all your iniquities. Rejecting these you will bind the millstone of sin about your neck as with the chains of fate, and plunge hopeless in the fiery billows of despair. Beware what you sow. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Gal. 6: 7-9.—The Christian.

DO YOUR WORK IN SEASON.—Nature always has before us the most striking examples of how she anticipates her work. Let us copy them. If she had not set her buds last fall, we should have no fruit this year on our trees. If the bulb of the lily, dahlia, crocus and snow-drop had not been swollen and perfected by the autumnal influences of last year, we should look in vain for their sweet faces among the dried herbage of the early spring, or as the gayer garniture of the garden as summer flowers. Nature never forgets to do her work in season. In many things, let her become our guide and prompter.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.—No. 2.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

It will be unnecessary to occupy much space in discussing the nature of this affection. It has been claimed by some to be essentially inflammatory in its character, the inflammation being confined to the mucous membrane of the stomach and intestines. But this is certainly erroneous.

First: where the disease is arrested before the collapse, there are no symptoms presented indicative of inflammation, but patients recover with great rapidity.

Second: when the patient dies during the stage of collapse, the post mortem examination shows no traces of inflammatory action. The mucous membrane of the stomach and bowels present no more of an altered condition than the lungs, kidneys, or skin.

Third: inflammation of this membrane, when produced by any cause, never produces those symptoms peculiar to cholera. That there is some irritation there, I do not deny; but that is not the disease; it is merely an attendant of it. Extensive irritation of the whole intestinal canal frequently occurs, without producing any symptoms of cholera.

The real condition is the opposite of inflammation. The centres of organic life are the first points morbidly impressed. This impression is produced by a poison, which, having gained access to the system, manifests a specific affinity for these points. The consequence is general enervation, and of course debility of the alimentary canal. This debility is attended with a degree of morbid excitability, which predisposes the mucous and muscular coats to become irritated; and conversely, an irritating influence acting directly on the mucous surface may constitute a predisposing or even an exciting cause of cholera, by its debilitating effect upon the splanchnic nerves. Then, when the full force of the poison is experienced on the nervous centres, an enervated and relaxed condition of the mucous membrane is the consequence; and the watery and plastic portions of the blood are permitted to escape through the blood-vessels; and hence the diarrhea and rice-water discharges. The influence of the poison is felt through all parts of the system at the same time. The nervous centres supplying the muscular system being so highly irritated, muscular spasm is the result. The blood is extensively vitiated by the direct influence of the poison in that fluid, on the heart and arteries. Add to this the great drain upon the blood through the blood-vessels of the bowels, of the white portion of that fluid (fibrin and serum), and we find the blood rapidly decomposing; so that when drawn, even from an artery, it presents a thick, black appearance, resembling a partially decomposed clot. This condition of the blood prevents its being freely circulated through the general system, or through the lungs. The consequence is stagnation of the blood in the capillaries of the skin, imperfect aeration, diminished heat of surface; collapse is the consequence, and death supervenes from asphyxia.

The causes of cholera may be divided into three varieties: 1st. Predisposing. 2nd. Exciting. 3d. Specific.

Predisposing causes are such as reduce the system to such a state as is favorable to the development of cholera. Whatever has a tendency to impair the general health, and depress the vitality of the individual, predisposes to an attack of cholera. Under this head may be named old age, previous disease, irregular, intemperate, and vicious habits; deficiency of food; exposure to confined, damp, or otherwise vitiated air, as where persons are thickly crowded together in ships, camps, prisons, cities, etc.; depression of spirits; fear; sudden emotions; all these and many other circumstances might be named as diminishing the constitutional stamina, and therefore predisposing causes of this malady. Among irregular, intemperate, and vicious habits, may be named as most potent in destroying the constitutional vigor, excessive venery, the use of alcoholic liquors of every description, irregular meals, late hours, etc.

The fact that these vices are practised so extensively in our larger towns and cities, accounts in part for the disease being confined almost entirely to cities; and this portion of the population are those upon whom the disease falls with the greatest fatality. These habits have a twofold influence in the work; first, they produce and keep up a high state of irritation in the whole system; inflame the blood and render it unfit for nutrient purposes; destroy the natural tonicity of the alimentary canal; exhaust the nervous forces, and most thoroughly sap the vitality. Secondly, they induce poverty and filth, depress the mind, and most effectually open every door to the advance of this terrible epidemic. The condition of the air found in the habitations of the poor in our cities is most unfavorable. By it the blood becomes vitiated, and the already overburthened system falls an easy prey to the epidemic.

First among all the predisposing or even exciting causes is fear of the disease. It is positively my opinion that a great many cases of cholera have been brought on and terminated fatally through fear alone. It is one of the most potent influences in the spread of this malady that can possibly exist. Experiments by eminent physiologists have established the fact that a person may readily be put to death by fright. If a person becomes convinced that he is going to contract a disease, he is almost as sure to come down and die with it.

The exciting causes do not vary materially from those said to be predisposing, except that their impression is more suddenly produced. Any circumstance occurring calculated to derange suddenly the organic functions, may excite an attack of cholera in persons laboring under the specific cause. A sudden change of temperature, by suddenly checking the perspiration, and throwing a greater burthen on the mucous membrane of the bowels, may become an exciting cause. The use of crude, indigestible material, unripe fruits, impure water, etc., are all injurious at any time, and dangerous during an epidemic of cholera.

By specific cause, I mean that subtile, invisible, intangible, and yet remarkable influential principle which carries this fearful malady around the globe;—that influence which, when most concentrated, is capable of producing the disease without regard to surrounding or exciting causes. What is this something? After examining all the hypotheses which have fallen under my notice, I have come to the conclusion that we know nothing about it. The hypothesis that is spoken of most favorably by many eminent men at the present time is, that it consists of invisible animalcule floating in the air; and from the nature and habits of the disease this seems the most probable. Whatever it is, it seems to act as a ferment, rapidly destroying the mass of circulating fluid, and poisoning the nervous system. Further than this, we know nothing positively.

The next question asked by many is this: "Is the disease contagious?" No,—no more so than intermittent fever. It has been considered by the majority of people highly contagious, and this very idea has caused the death of thousands. There is no more danger in attending a patient laboring under it, provided the sick-room be well ventilated, than there is in standing in the streets of an infected city, though you are a mile from a cholera patient. Experience has demonstrated this to be true. The more a person becomes frightened, and tries to avoid the disease, the more certain is he to contract it.

After a person has remained in a place until the epidemic has made its appearance there, he has already become infected with the specific cause; and in leaving, from a change of diet, etc., he will be more liable to contract the disease than had he remained and quietly pursued his usual occupation.

When people come to understand that the disease is not contagious, and that the less the attempt to avoid the disease by sudden changes of diet, localities, and other influences, the less liable they are to an attack of it, then will the epidemic have met a formidable barrier to its progress and severity.

Bristolville, Ohio.

For the World's Crisis.

FREE.

Yes, thank God, I am free from one of the greatest nuisances that we have in the land, and that is tobacco. I became addicted to this vile habit by being with bad boys, and I believe this is the way that almost every one gets into this habit. I always felt guilty to have any one ask me if I used tobacco. I know it is a bad habit. As soon as I gave my heart to God, it seemed impressed upon me that I must break from this snare; for I truly believe it is a snare of the devil to draw us into greater sins. Every one knows that tobacco leads to strong drink, and this leads to every other sin.

A habit is acquired by littles. I began by smoking sweet fern. Our lives are made up of little things; therefore, let us look out for these little things, or perchance they may ensnare us before we are aware of it. When I gave my heart to God, I gave my whole heart, and I determined to cleanse it from every thing impure and unholy in the sight of God. I don't expect to enter the kingdom of heaven full of vice and intemperance; for we are commanded in God's word to be temperate in all things; and yet a great many professed christians break this law of God.

I believe it is a sin in the sight of God to use this vile poison, when every body knows that it is poison; and then to see christians murder themselves by inches, I think it is too bad. I doubt not but that some will curse me for this; but I care not what the world says. I am resolved to live for God hereafter, and I feel it my duty to take the ground against this vile habit. I have got out of the pit, and I think it is my duty to try and help others out. Our country is full of this vile stuff to overflowing, and not only ours, but the whole enlightened world. This fact don't make it right nevertheless. So the whole world were sinners but eight, at the time of the flood.

I notice some good pieces on this evil in the Crisis, and I love to read them. I think it is the duty of christians to bring all the force they can to bear against this great evil, which is coiling like a huge serpent around this enlightened country.

Your Bro. in Christ, CURTIS J. LOUGEE.

Gilmanton, N. H.

DIPHTHERIA.—Great relief in diphtheria is said to be found by placing cayenne pepper in the sharpest vinegar, dropping in live coals, and inhaling the steam from a teapot. It gives strength to throw up the detached membrane, besides affording great relief in breathing. WM. L. CARROLL.

REMEDY FOR SORE THROAT.—Dissolve a quantity of saleratus in strong vinegar; heat and inhale the fumes through a tunnel. It will cure sore throat or diphtheria—so say those who have tried it.

WM. L. CARROLL.

REST.—After abundant exercise, then should come a period of rest. It is not consonant with health to be "always on the drive."

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance................$2.50 a year.
If not paid within six months ...$3.00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address ....$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address........$10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.

CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM:

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS:

Payable always in advance.

[illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 552. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 2, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 7.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL, JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS,
S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN,
D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY."

Watch, ye saints, with eyelids waking,
Lo! the powers of heaven are shaking,
Keep your lamps all trimmed and burning,
Ready for your Lord's returning.

CHORUS.—Lo! he comes, he comes all glorious,
Jesus comes to reign victorious,
Jesus comes to reign victorious,
Jesus, Jesus comes.

Lo! the promise of your Savior,
Pardoned sin and purchased favor,
Blood-washed robes and crowns of glory,
Haste to tell Redemption's story!
Lo! he comes, etc.

Kingdoms at their base are crumbling,
Hark! his chariot wheels are rumbling,
Tell, O tell of grace abounding,
While the seventh trump is sounding.
Lo! he comes, etc.

Nations wane, though proud and stately,
Christ his kingdom hasteth greatly;
Earth her latest pangs is summing,
Shout, ye saints, your Lord is coming.
Lo! he comes, etc.

Lamb of God! thou meek and lowly;
Judah's Lion! high and holy;
Lo! thy "Bride comes forth to meet thee,"
All in blood-washed robes to greet thee.
Lo! he comes, etc.

Mrs. Phœbe Palmer.

For the World's Crisis.

SUNDAY KEEPING.

In a former article, I promised to give some reasons for observing "the first day of the week," as a day of rest and worship. I will now redeem that promise, and thus answer the question often put to me by "seventh day" keepers.

It will be proper first to state that I do NOT observe it because a Roman Emperor enjoined it upon his subjects; neither because some Pope required it of the church. Neither because Christ changed the laws concerning the "seventh day," so as to apply them to the first day; nor because I find any specific command in the "new covenant" to keep any one day as more holy than another. I do observe it, and have for twenty-two years.

First, Because "on the first day of the week" our glorious conqueror—Jesus Christ—triumphed over death and the grave, in behalf of our race; ratifying the new covenant, and establishing a new order of things in respect to time and worship. This being a greater and more important event than any other recorded in history, either profane or sacred, it is worthy of being observed by man, who receives greater benefits from that event than from all others since time began. Both as a day of rest from toil and care, and especially to worship him whose abundant grace he has received, and to meditate upon the great salvation purchased at such cost, endeavoring to lead sinners to seek that redemption secured for them on that day, when our Lord arose from the dead.

Second, Because the experience of man for some three thousand years, since the "seventh day" Sabbath was instituted in the wilderness, has proved it beneficial to him, physically and religiously, to enjoy a day of rest and worship as often as one in seven. And since the seventh was "abolished" with the old covenant, of which it was a part (2 Cor. 3: 7, 13), we choose the "Queen of days, the resurrection day, the highest of all days," as expressed by one of the early disciples of our Lord.

Third. Because, while Christ "abolished" and "blotted out" the old covenant, of which the seventh day Sabbath was a part (See Eph. 2: 15, and Col. 2: 14), he honored "the first day of the week" by his triumphant resurrection, to begin a new dispensation (John 20: 1), and by holding a meeting with his disciples on the same day to acquaint them that he was their risen Lord, and to bestow upon them the gift of the Holy Ghost.—John 20: 19. Also by holding a "second" meeting with them on the next "first day of the week" after his resurrection.—John 20: 26.

Fourth. Because more than twenty years after this we find the church of believers who were raised up under the labors of inspired apostles, observing this "first day of the week" in worship, and partaking the Lord's Supper. Acts 20: 7. We also find this practice according to the "apostles' doctrine."—Acts 2: 42. Again we hear Paul commanding the church of Christ to "stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle."—2 Thess. 2: 15, also 3: 6. Again, we find Paul directing the churches to consecrate a portion of their substance "on the first day of the week" for the poor saints.—1 Cor. 16: 2. We therefore conclude, that the "traditions" Paul taught, and "the apostles' doctrine," contained some instruction about "the first day of the week."

But once more. More than thirty years after Paul, we find the beloved John "in the Spirit on the Lord's day," and receiving that wonderful book, "The Revelation of Jesus Christ."—Rev. 1: 1–10.

From the above considerations, and others not named, we conclude that it is safe to follow such examples as those mentioned above, set by the disciples who enjoyed Christ's presence and blessings in it; also to continue "steadfast in the doctrine" and "traditions" commanded by the inspired apostles. That the observance of "the first day of the week" is not an innovation, or corruption of apostolic and primitive custom, is fully proved by the history of the church; for all christians, from the day of Christ's resurrection down to these "last days," have kept it not as holy time, but as above stated, a day of rest and of worship. It was several hundreds years after Christ, when darkness began to cover the church, and they began to call the first day "holy time," in distinction from all time.

I envy not the wisdom, nor the enjoyment of the man who thinks so little of Christ, of his resurrection, and redemption, as to disregard and dishonor his resurrection day by devoting it to the common business of this life. In early days of gospel light, the Jewish converts to christianity, although some of them observed circumcision, the offering of sacrifices, and keeping of the seventh day; yet they scrupulously kept "the first day of the week," in honor to Christ and his resurrection.

I have now given my chief reasons in short. Some who read them may think me very ignorant on this subject, and wish to enlighten me. Well, if there is better light, I will gladly accept it; yet let me inform you that I have seen and read about all that has been said on the opposite side the last twenty years. You must give me better light than that, for the gospel light has entirely eclipsed that. Yours, waiting for the Lord,

Yarmouth, Me. I. C. WELLCOME.

INFIDELITY AND PROPHECY.

(Continued.)

There is one point on which we propose to test the pretensions of the authors of the Bible, and that is in the direction of KNOWLEDGE. Men, we all know, are short-sighted and ignorant. What we can know by our senses, and what we can remember from our experience, makes up most of our personal knowledge. No man can accurately tell the future. To-morrow's events are beyond the ken of mortals. The past and the present, the distant and the near may be ours, but the future we cannot fathom nor unveil.

And though jugglers and fortune-tellers make shrewd guesses, yet they do not unfold the mysteries of coming fate. The old oracles could not fully declare the future. Sometimes their utterances had a double meaning, and if you went wrong it was only because you did not understand them right. They were shrewd, tricky, and evasive.

The Spiritual mediums of the present day seem equally unreliable here. They cannot tell the future. Spirits can perhaps telegraph you what is doing half way round the world; or can hunt over gravestones and family records, and tell you how many children your grandmother had, and whether your aunts and uncles are dead or alive; but they cannot tell you the future. Sometimes they do try it. I heard of a medium who predicted her own death within twenty-four hours, and the prophecy came true; but then the stomach-pump brought up laudanum enough out of her to kill two or three such women, and the presence of that accounted for the miracle.

But when we come to foreseeing the events of the far-off ages, no one can do it unless in the first place he is OMNISCIENT, and can see all things present and future at a glance; and also ALMIGHTY, so that he he can make his words hold good, and not have his plans thwarted, subverted, or interfered with.

And right upon this very point we may test the inspiration of the Scriptures. If we find that they contain predictions uttered ages before their fulfillment, and that those prophecies have all failed, we may then reject the book at once. But if, on the contrary, we find that these prophecies are accurately and circumstantially fulfilled, then we must admit that since man cannot foresee the events of a single hour, he who could minutely declare the events of the far-off future must be OMNISCIENT and OMNIPOTENT, and hence that writing which records such declarations must be inspired by a divine mind.

And no christian can reasonably complain of such a test as this, for it is the very test proposed in these same Scriptures coming from the Lord himself. "I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are NOT YET DONE; saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure."—Isaiah 46: 10. "Behold the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare; BEFORE THEY SPRING FORTH I TELL YOU OF THEM."—Isa. 42: 9. And he calls on all the idolaters to meet this challenge, saying, "Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your STRONG REASONS, saith the King of Jacob. Let them bring them forth, and show us WHAT SHALL HAPPEN: let them show the former things, what they be, that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them; or DECLARE US THINGS FOR TO COME. Show the things that ARE TO COME HEREAFTER, that we may KNOW THAT YE ARE GODS: yea, do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together."—Isa. 41: 21–24. Now we propose to apply this very rule to the records of Scripture, and see whether the prophets can abide their own tests. If they can, we accept them as inspired teachers; if not, we reject them as vile impostors.

And we need not go hunting through the dark ages for evidences on this point. We shall not do it. The prophets of the Old Testament uttered hundreds of predictions with reference to the nations and lands around them, and there are plenty of travelers who have visited these lands, and can tell whether these words are accomplished or not.

One of the most noted of these travelers is C. F. Volney, a learned and eloquent French skeptic, who traversed those very countries, and wrote not only a journal of his "Travels in Syria and Egypt," but also "The Ruins of Empires," a powerful work aimed against the inspiration of the Scriptures. But his infidelity cannot invalidate his testimony as a trustworthy and observing traveler, and as a faithful recorder of the scenes which he had witnessed.

Volney's Travels are characterized by the Edinburgh Review (No. 50, p. 417) as "an admirable book" of "extraordinary merit." And the learned Malte-Brun, in his geography (vol. 2, p. 126), after mentioning several geographers, antiquarians, travelers, missionaries, and naturalists, who have ably elucidated particular parts of the countries belonging to Asiatic Turkey, remarks, "It was reserved for the genius of Volney to combine their detached accounts with the fruits of his own observation and study, so as to present the world with a complete description of Syria.

We shall take then those prophecies which foretold the condition of Palestine and the adjacent countries, and the latest of which was written, according to infidel admissions, more than two thousand years ago, and lay them side by side with the writings of Volney and Gibbon, who wrote in the eighteenth century, and whose statements we shall also confirm and amplify with occasional extracts from the writings of more modern travelers, and thus bring the records of prophecy and the facts of history together, and test the pretensions of the prophet by the historic facts which travelers can see to-day. If the prophecy and the facts disagree, the prophecy must fall. If the prophecy two thousand years old agrees with the facts that meet the traveler's gaze to-day, then Omniscience must have dictated the prediction, and Omnipotence secured its fulfillment. And if that be so, THE BIBLE IS THE WORD OF GOD.

In exhibiting this matter, we shall make use of the collection of Alexander Keith, who has with much labor drawn up the following parallel statements, which we copy entire with very slight alterations.

[The first portion appeared in the first number of "The Christian."]

PROPHECY. The vine languishes. Isa. 24: 7.
FULFILLMENT. "In the mountains they do not prune the vines, and they nowhere ingraft trees."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 335.

P. The new wine mourneth; they shall not drink wine with a song. Isa. 24: 9.

F. "Good cheer would infallibly expose them to extortion, and wine to a corporeal punishment."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., p. 480.

P. Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it. Isa. 24: 9.

F. "The wines of Jerusalem are most execrable."—Jolliffe's Letters from Palestine, vol. i., p. 164. "The wine drank in Jerusalem is probably the very worst to be met with in any country."—Wilson's Travels, p. 150.

P. All the merry-hearted do sigh. Isa. 24: 7.

F. "The Arabs (in singing) may be said to excel most in the melancholy strain. To hear his plaintive tones, his sighs and sobs, it is almost impossible to refrain from tears." Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 440.

P. The mirth of tabrets ceaseth; the joy of the harp ceaseth. Isa. 24: 8.

F. "They (the inhabitants) have no music but vocal, for they neither know nor esteem instrumental. Such instruments as they have, not excepting their flutes, are detestable."—Volney's Travels, p. 439.

P. The noise of them that rejoice endeth; all joy is darkened; the mirth of the land is gone. Isa. 24: 8, 11.

F. "They have a serious, nay, even sad and melancholy, countenance. They rarely laugh; and the gayety of the French appears to them a fit of delirium."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., pp. 476, 461.

P. Many days and years shall ye be troubled, ye careless women. Tremble, ye women that are at ease; be troubled, ye careless ones; strip you and make you bare, and gird sackcloth upon your loins. Isa. 32: 10, 11.

F. "In Palestine you may see married women almost uncovered."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., p. 361.

P. Upon the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers. Isa. 32: 13.

The forts and towers shall be dens forever. Isa. 32: 14.

F. "The earth produces only briers and wormwood."—Volney's Ruins, p. 9.

"At every step we meet with ruins of towers, dungeons and castles with fosses, frequently inhabited by jackals, owls, and scorpions."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 336.

P. A pasture of flocks: there shall the lambs feed after their manner; and the waste places of the fat ones shall strangers eat. Isa. 32: 14.

F. "All the parts of Galilee which afford pasture are occupied by Arab tribes, around whose brown tents the sheep and lambs gambol to the sound of the reed, which at nightfall calls them home."—Malte-Brun, vol. ii., p. 148.

P. The multitude of the city shall be left. Isa. 32: 14.

The defenced city shall be left desolate, and the habitations forsaken, and left like a wilderness. Isa. 27: 10.

F. "There are innumerable monuments which depose in favor of the great population of high antiquity, such as the prodigious quantity of ruins dispersed over the plains, and even in the mountains, at this day deserted." Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 368.

P. When the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off; the women come and set them on fire. Isa. 27: 10.

F. "The olive-trees (near Arimathea) are daily perishing through age, the ravages of contending factions, and even from secret mischief. The Mamelukes having cut down all the olive-trees, for the pleasure they take in destroying, or to make fires, Yafa has lost its greatest commerce."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., pp. 332, 333.

P. For it is a people of no understanding. Isa. 27: 10.

F. "The most simple arts are in a state of barbarism; the sciences are totally unknown." Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 443.

P. Your cities burned with fire. Isa. 1: 7.

F. "A place lately ravaged with fire and sword would have precisely the appearance of this village (Loudd, Lydda). Ramla is in almost as ruinous a state."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., pp. 332, 333.

P. Many pastors have destroyed my vineyard, they have trodden my portion under foot. Jer. 12: 10.

F. "Like the Turkmen, the Curds are pastors and wanderers. A third wandering people in Syria, are the Bedouin Arabs. The Turkmen, the Curds, and the Bedouins have no fixed habitations, but keep perpetually wandering, with their tents and herds." Chap. 23 of Volney's Travels is entitled, "Of the Pastoral or Wandering Tribes of Syria."—Vol. i., p. 367, etc.

P. They have made my pleasant portion a desolate wilderness; the whole land is made desolate. Jer. 12: 10, 11.

F. "With its numerous advantages of climate and soil, it is not astonishing that Syria should always have been esteemed a most delicious country."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., p. 321. "I have seen nothing but solitude and desertion."—Volney's Ruins, p. 7.

P. The spoilers are come upon all high places through the wilderness. Jer. 12: 12.

F. "These precautions (against robbers) are above all necessary in the countries exposed to the Arabs, such as Palestine, and the whole frontier of the desert."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 417.

P. No flesh shall have peace. Jer. 12: 12.

F. "War, famine, and pestilence assail them at every turn."—Volney's Ruins, p. 9.

P. They have sown wheat, but they shall reap thorns: they have put themselves to pain, but shall not profit. Jer. 12: 13.

F. "Man sows in anguish, and reaps vexation and care."—Volney's Ruins, p. 11.

"They would not be permitted to reap the fruits of their labors."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 435.

P. They shall be ashamed of your revenues. Jer. 12: 13.

F. "The annual sum paid by Syria into the treasury of the Sultan amounts to 2345 purses.

For Aleppo	800
Tripoli	750
Damascus	45
Acre	—
Palestine	—
	2345 purses."

(Or $112,135.)—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 360.

P. Thus saith the Lord God of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel, They shall eat their bread with carefulness, and drink their water with astonishment; that her land may be desolate from ALL that is therein, because of the violence of all them that dwell therein. Ezek. 12: 19.

F. "The peasants are everywhere reduced to a little cake of barley or dourra, to onions, lentils, and water." "Dread prevails through the villages." "The arbitrary power of the Sultan, transmitted to the Pacha and to all his sub-delegates, by giving a free course to extortion, becomes the mainspring of a tyranny which circulates through EVERY class, while its effects, by a reciprocal reaction, are everywhere fatal to agriculture, the arts, commerce, population; in a word, EVERYTHING which constitutes the power of the state."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., pp. 378, 379, 412, 477.

P. Ye shall be as a garden that hath no water. Isa. 1: 30. How long shall the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein?

F. "The remains of cisterns are to be found (throughout Judea) in which they collected the rain water; and traces of the canals by which these waters were distributed on the fields."—Malte-Brun's Geography, vol. ii., pp. 150, 151. "We here see none of that gay carpeting of grass and flowers which decorate the meadows of Normandy and Flanders. The land of Syria has almost always a dusty appearance. Had not these countries been ravaged by the hands of man, they might perhaps at this day have been shaded by forests."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 359.

P. And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and they shall know that I am the Lord. Ezek. 12: 20.

F. "Every day I found in my route villages deserted and cities in ruins."—Volney's Ruins, c. i.

P. When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, there shall be as the shaking of an olive-tree, and as the gleaning of the grapes when the vintage is done. Isa. 24: 13.

The glory of Jacob shall be made thin. Isa. 17: 4.

F. "I looked for the ancient people and their works; and all that I could find was a faint trace, like what the foot of the passenger leaves on the sand."—Volney's Ruins, c. ii.

P. But yet in it shall be a tenth; and it shall return and shall be eaten, as a teil-tree, and as an oak, whose substance is in them, when they cast their leaves. Isa. 6: 13.

F. "The land of the plains is FAT and loamy, and exhibits every sign of the greatest fecundity. Were nature assisted by art, the productions of the most distant countries might be produced within the distance of twenty leagues."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., pp. 308, 317. "Galilee would be a paradise were it inhabited by an industrious people under an enlightened government."—Malte-Brun's Geography, vol. ii., p. 140.

P. The city that went out by thousands shall leave a hundred. Amos, v. 3.

F. "A tract from which a hundred individuals draw a scanty subsistence formerly maintained thousands."—Pierre Belo quoted by Malte-Brun.

For the World's Crisis.

PEACE.

"Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you."

Christ's peace is given unto us. Do we prize it as we ought? have we that treasure to-day? Paul tells us it is one of the first fruits of the Spirit, and if we "have not the Spirit of Christ we are none of his." "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Now, for one, I desire to reap life everlasting; do not you, my brother? my sister? We profess to believe "the Judge standeth before the door." Do we believe it? Methinks it is high time for us to watch and pray, and keep all the commandments; in short, become perfect men and women in Christ Jesus.

"In many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth," and grieve not the holy spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God, for Christ's sake, hath forgiven you."

Unless I obey all these words, I cannot inherit the kingdom of God. Christ says, the Highest is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil; "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful. Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned; forgive, and ye shall be forgiven." Lord help me, for even my strength is perfect weakness, and I will obey. How many of you, my brethren and sisters, will say so to? Remember if we vow unto the Lord, we must perform our vows.

How I wish I had always forgiven from the heart. We can come so much nearer the Lord in prayer. If we do not separate ourselves from him, nothing else can. Is it not blessed? Do not let Satan cheat you out of the enjoyment of this glorious, perfect peace, so freely given. By nature we are selfish, short-sighted. If there are annoyings, strife, etc., among us, are we "not carnal, and walk as men?" How much we need the bond of perfection among ourselves. O, let us bear "one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." If there are misunderstandings, let us be careful how we take up a reproach against our neighbor. We must not backbite, if we would dwell in the Lord's holy hill. It is much better to stir up the pure minds than the evil. Let us exercise long-suffering, forbearance, and forgiveness, if we would be godlike. All this is easy enough, unless it be in cases where we feel ourselves really injured; and that is the very place, no doubt, where Satan means to ensnare us, and ingratiate his own spirit within us, and so grieve the Holy Spirit away. Would we take Christ for our example, we should say, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." So let us go to our Father in heaven, tell him our grievances, and pray for them, and be very careful, if we feel any anger creeping into our hearts, to make a mighty effort to get rid of it.

How great is the long-suffering of our God towards us. If he were like man, where should you and I be now? How sorry I am, I have ever transgressed. I have sought and found forgiveness of God, and would now humbly ask to be forgiven by my brethren and sisters. I desire to walk perfectly in the way of the Lord, denying myself of every evil [illegible] fess our faults to each other, and pray one for another. We are not to judge each other. God looks at the hearts. How pure they must be; and how clean our hands. We cannot deceive him.

Ye who do not regard iniquity in your hearts, pray for me. My health is very poor. I am unable to labor. It may be the Lord will restore me to health and strength.

Your sister striving to follow Christ,
Marlboro', Vt. S. WHITAKER.

For the World's Crisis.

"NO PROPHETIC TIME IN THE BIBLE."

The devil will leave no stone unturned to keep, or lead people into darkness on the subject of our nearness to the Lord's coming. The different measurements of prophetic time so clearly show our nearness to the judgment, that in order to escape the solemn conclusion some are insisting that there is "no prophetic time in the Bible," thinking thus to invalidate the time argument. But if this claim is true, it not only overthrows the time argument, but blots out christianity, and stamps Jesus Christ as a notorious impostor, for the true Messiah was to come in sixty-nine weeks after the "going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem;" and if literal time, instead of prophetic time, is meant, Jesus is proved to be a false Messiah; for he did not come for hundreds of years afterward, and therefore our christianity is all spurious.

The true Messiah must come at the time specified, and Jesus came at no such time, UNLESS PROPHETIC TIME IS GIVEN; and therefore Jesus is a false Messiah, unless the time here given is prophetic time. Also sixty-nine weeks from the erection of Jerusalem's wall, were to measure to the time Messiah should be "cut off," and Jesus was not "cut off" till hundreds of years later; therefore, unless prophetic time is given, Jesus is not the promised Messiah, but an impostor. Also the "five months" under the fifth trumpet, and the hour, day, month and year under the sixth trumpet, are by this principle reduced to literal time, although already so exactly fulfilled in prophetic time. This is dispensing with prophetic time at too great an expense,—the denial of Jesus as the true Messiah, and the denial of prophecy already fulfilled in prophetic time.

But if there is any prophetic time in the Bible, how much of it is prophetic, and how can we discriminate between literal and prophetic time? Let us candidly notice the manner in which literal time is invariably given, and then the rule by which we can distinguish between literal and prophetic time.

1st. Literal time, in the Bible, is invariably given in years, when over one year is given; and a PLURALITY OF LITERAL YEARS ARE NEVER EXPRESSED IN DAYS. Such a thing as expressing three years and a half by 1260 days, is unknown in the Bible; but as in the case of Elijah, "three years and six months" is the style of expression. Such a thing as expressing six years, four months and twenty days, by 2300 days, or any other measurement of years and a fraction over on the same principle, is not once found in the Bible. This is not God's style in giving literal time; but in dealing out literal time to man, he always conforms to the usages of man in reckoning time, as in the case of the seventy years of captivity. There is not an exception to this rule in the Bible.

Also it is true that when a space of literal time over a year long is given, it is never expressed in weeks. Nor are several years of literal time ever expressed in months.

2d. As God invariably gives literal years, months, and days, in the ordinary way, it follows that when a measurement of days or weeks over the number contained in a year, is given, the time is prophetic. Also time given in connection with symbols is generally prophetic. With these two facts before us, we need not be in doubt whether given measurements of time are literal or prophetic. Thus the 2300, 1260, 1290, and 1335 days are proved prophetic. WM. SHELDON.

LEANNESS.

The following communication shows the state of Christendom generally. Is it not time to awake out of sleep?—ED.

For the World's Crisis.

Communication and Petition

Of the Consistory of the 3d Ref. D. Church at Schenectady, to the Reverend Classis of Schenectady, N. Y., at their spring session, 1866.

MEN AND BRETHREN:—Since we seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, we deeply feel the great want of the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, and in consequence of it, the want of the spiritual gifts which the original church in the first and second century possessed abundantly.

These heavenly gifts were their only powerful means for increasing in numbers and virtues; for multiplying their faithful laborers; exercising reasonable service; keeping good discipline; preserving sound knowledge; manifesting pure religion; explaining God's mystery, and Babylon's mystery, too; conquering Judaism and Heathenism; and preparing the way to the Lord of lords, and King of kings, for his second advent.

These gifts were a much better reward and gain to them than precious stones, and pearls, and books, and tracts, and all kinds of newspapers; because men became by it a spiritual temple, sinners a royal priesthood, and strangers a peculiar people.

These marvelous gifts were their art and science, their ornament, strength and power in the world, before the world, and against the world. Yes, these marvelous and magnificent gifts were their whole armor of God, which enabled them to stand against their visible and invisible enemies, and to overcome the devil, hell, and death.

But alas how different is it with us! We have them not. None among us has the unction from the Holy One. None among us can testify of himself what Jesus said, that "out of his body shall flow rivers of living waters." None of our congregations can really be called "the salt of the earth, and the light of the world."

On this ground we are very poor and miserable in comparison with the ancient christians and well beloved saints. We must confess freely that they were great in the beginning of the kingdom of heaven, but we, after eighteen centuries, are small, very small, indeed; they did increase, but we do decrease, like our fathers. We cannot prophesy, but they could. We cannot heal the sick, but they could. We cannot speak in different languages without learning them; but they could. We cannot discern spirits distinctly, and appoint the right men in the right place, as they could (Acts 13: 2). We cannot work miracles, and exercise power over life and death; but they could. We cannot give the Holy Ghost through laying our hands on them that are near and dear to us; but they could. We cannot build in a few weeks, or months, new and flourishing churches, model churches; but they could. Each of them was a new created world. We cannot say truly that church is our joy, and that is our glory, and that the crown of our rejoicing; but they could. Our heavenly Father was pleased with many of them, and angels smiled on them. But, sirs, it is not so with us.

And as it is with us, so, just so, it is with other consistories, presbyteries, churches and denominations both in America and Europe. Or where is a single church whose faith is spoken of throughout the whole world? Or where is a denomination by whose officers and members could be proved that they are examples to all men.

Of course, we know very well, there is in the Roman and Greek Catholic churches a host of monks, and nuns, and priests, and chaplains, and bishops, and archbishops, and prelates, and patriarchs, and cardinals, and "holy Sees." But none of them, from the greatest to the least, is an apostle of Jesus Christ.

We know very well, also, there are in the numerous Protestant churches and sects many "laymen," many deacons, many elders, many pastors, many missionaries, many professors, many students, and many doctors; but none of them a Prophet of the Most High, and none a prophet's son.

There are no apostles, no prophetesses, no workers of miracles any more. And, therefore, we feel and acknowledge our poverty and nakedness with the profoundest sorrow.

"Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them!"

But, oh! the Lord feeds us with bread of tears, and our drink is mingled with weeping because of his indignation, and his wrath. O, he is angry against our prayer (Psalm 80), and therefore does not answer it. He has covered himself with a cloud, that our prayer should not pass through (Lament. 3).

He has punished us by a cruel civil war, and many murderous battles; by innumerable diseases, casualties, accidents and death.

And now he is threatening us by a fearful pestilence and rinderpest, and by another terrible earthquake in revolution. Notwithstanding our statistics, and churches, and conventions say "Peace and Safety!" yet, we say, there will be no peace and safety, but sudden destruction cometh upon them (1 Thess. 5). He, who is the judge and avenger, is heaping mischiefs upon our "proud nation," and is spending his arrows upon our "great country." "O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end" (Deut. 32)!

For we believe the Scripture, that he has not appointed us to wrath, but that we shall escape from the wrath to come, and to obtain a temporal and eternal salvation by him who is called "Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

These are the reasons why we regard it as our duty and privilege to lay the state of things before you, men and brethren, as a Classis, and through the Classis, if necessary, before the General Synod, or, through the organ of our denomination (the Christian Intelligencer), before the public in general.

Your humble fellow brethren, WILLIAM F. SCHWILK, Pastor; William Nicklas, Henry Fink, Carl Golocke, Louis Feldman, George Steinfahrer, David Pfaffenbach.

For the World's Crisis.

HIGHER ATTAINMENTS.

He who is satisfied with his present experience will not be in as good a place to-morrow as he is to-day; and the christian who is always dissatisfied with the present condition of his experience, will rise higher in his experience. I do not mean by his being dissatisfied that he gets no satisfaction at all from his experience. He likes the nature of it. Well he loves to look at the past and see how he has progressed unto the truth, how the light has increased, and he rejoices in the prospect of knowing and enjoying more, and the thought that he may thus happily advance leads him to feel comparatively dissatisfied with the degree of his knowledge and happiness. This then is the great first principle of a higher attainment, namely, EARNESTLY DESIRING MORE, and desiring it so as to seek for the elevation in knowledge and grace which will finally bring him to the top of Old Pisgah, from whence there is a clear view over into the new earth, the land of promise.

Higher attainments, a better knowledge of self and wants, must precede all advancement. I get new light to-day that I had not yesterday; I see in the distance much yet to be possessed; I discover that it is really beyond where I now am; I feel that what I want most and I want all the advantages of this advanced position. In comparing myself with what I see in the future, I feel a real want, or necessity, for that position. I know I am not there, and I see something in me which keeps me from reaching that place. There is the fresh "discovery of self." I cannot now go on and do this as I could, because I see the wrong now; so to make the advance I must get rid of the imperfection; and having got rid of it, and reached the coveted advance and elevation, I find it is with me as it is with the traveler, who seems to see the blue atmosphere and the earth meet but a little before him, but when he reaches that spot, the connecting places which he seemed to see just there—the verge of creation, is removed far in advance; and if he should keep traveling over this round earth eternally, he would always find it so. It is no doubt true, that, while the christian will overcome self before he reaches the everlasting kingdom, he will always grow in wisdom and love. Higher attainments bring us near to God. They are reached by striving, lying low in the dust before God, and praying for light, then walking in the light as fast as you see it.

"The path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Oh, I am glad that the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid, through Christ (so that they are accessible to us), in God's infinity, so that I have no fears of ever exhausting the fountain from which "I drink, and yet am ever dry," because the peculiar sweetness and richness of the "water of life" always makes me thirst for more. O, brethren, is it not blessed that we need not remain in statu quo, droning along like shriveled and diminutive dwarfs, but may always "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," till we come not only to the measure of the stature" of "a perfect man" in Christ, but to the "fullness of joy," and the evermore pleasures, the river of life itself (we are only at the fountain-source now), and learn more and more of the plan of salvation, of God's great love for us in the plan, the great importance of our state there, and all the rich, free, full, unbounded avenues of comfort and knowledge, on which the full, broad, bright light of God's unfailing presence will ever shine?

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

For the World's Crisis.

SCATTERING AND INCREASING.

Serving God with our little, whether in the way of time, talents, property, or influence, is the way to make it more. Nothing is wasted by which God is honored, or man blessed. It is but seed sown, to be gathered again a hundred-fold in the harvest.

O, then, when I shall awake up
The long lost talents of my life,
[illegible]

[illegible]
East Concord, N. H.

☞ Nothing has such a tendency to weaken, not only the powers of invention, but the intellectual powers in general, as a habit of extensive reading without reflection [illegible] reading books, [illegible] many is a mere [illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 552. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 2, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 7.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL, JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN, D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart, the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY."

Watch, ye saints, with eyelids waking,
Lo! the powers of heaven are shaking.
Keep your lamps all trimmed and burning,
Ready for your Lord's returning.

CHORUS.—Lo! he comes, he comes all glorious,
Jesus comes to reign victorious,
Jesus comes to reign victorious,
Jesus, Jesus comes.

Lo! the promise of your Savior,
Pardoned sin and purchased favor,
Blood-washed robes and crowns of glory,
Haste to tell Redemption's story!
Lo! he comes, etc.

Kingdoms at their base are crumbling,
Hark! his chariot wheels are rumbling,
Tell, O tell of grace abounding,
While the seventh trump is sounding.
Lo! he comes, etc.

Nations wane, though proud and stately,
Christ his kingdom hasteth greatly;
Earth her latest pangs is summing,
Shout, ye saints, your Lord is coming.
Lo! he comes, etc.

Lamb of God! thou meek and lowly;
Judah's Lion! high and holy,
Lo! thy "Bride comes forth to meet thee,"
All in blood-washed robes to greet thee.
Lo! he comes, etc.

Mrs. Phebe Palmer.

For the World's Crisis

SUNDAY KEEPING.

In a former article, I promised to give some reasons for observing "the first day of the week," as a day of rest and worship. I will now redeem that promise, and thus answer the question often put to me by "seventh day" keepers.

It will be proper first to state that I do NOT observe it because a Roman Emperor enjoined it upon his subjects; neither because some Pope required it of the church. Neither because Christ changed the laws concerning the "seventh day," so as to apply them to the first day; nor because I find any specific command in the "new covenant" to keep any one day as more holy than another. I do observe it, and have for twenty-two years.

First, Because "on the first day of the week" our glorious conqueror—Jesus Christ—triumphed over death and the grave, in behalf of our race; ratifying the new covenant, and establishing a new order of things in respect to time and worship. This being a greater and more important event than any other recorded in history, either profane or sacred, it is worthy of being observed by man, who receives greater benefits from that event than from all others since time began. Both as a day of rest from toil and care, and especially to worship him whose abundant grace he has received, and to meditate upon the great salvation purchased at such cost, endeavoring to lead sinners to seek that redemption secured for them on that day, when our Lord arose from the dead.

Second, Because the experience of man for some three thousand years, since the "seventh day" Sabbath was instituted in the wilderness, has proved it beneficial to him, physically and religiously, to enjoy a day of rest and worship as often as one in seven. And since the seventh was "abolished" with the old covenant, of which it was a part (2 Cor. 3. 7, 13), we choose the "Queen of days, the resurrection day, the highest of all days," as expressed by one of the early disciples of our Lord.

Third. Because, while Christ "abolished" and "blotted out" the old covenant, of which the seventh day Sabbath was a part (See Eph. 2: 15, and Col. 2: 14), he honored "the first day of the week" by his triumphant resurrection, to begin a new dispensation (John 20: 1), and by holding a meeting with his disciples on the same day to acquaint them that he was their risen Lord, and to bestow upon them the gift of the Holy Ghost.—John 20: 19. Also by holding a "second" meeting with them on the next "first day of the week" after his resurrection.—John 20: 26.

Fourth. Because more than twenty years after this we find the church of believers who were raised up under the labors of inspired apostles, observing this "first day of the week" in worship, and partaking the Lord's Supper. Acts 20: 7. We also find this practice according to the "apostles' doctrine."—Acts 2: 42. Again we hear Paul commanding the church of Christ to "stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle."—2 Thess. 2: 15, also 3: 6. Again, we find Paul directing the churches to consecrate a portion of their substance "on the first day of the week" for the poor saints.—1 Cor. 16: 2. We therefore conclude, that the "traditions" Paul taught, and "the apostles' doctrine," contained some instruction about "the first day of the week."

But once more. More than thirty years after Paul, we find the beloved John "in the Spirit on the Lord's day," and receiving that wonderful book, "The Revelation of Jesus Christ."—Rev. 1: 1–10.

From the above considerations, and others not named, we conclude that it is safe to follow such examples as those mentioned above, set by the disciples who enjoyed Christ's presence and blessings in it; also to continue "steadfast in the doctrine" and "traditions" commanded by the inspired apostles. That the observance of "the first day of the week" is not an innovation, or corruption of apostolic and primitive custom, is fully proved by the history of the church; for all christians, from the day of Christ's resurrection down to these "last days," have kept it not as holy time, but as above stated, a day of rest and of worship. It was several hundreds years after Christ, when darkness began to cover the church, and they began to call the first day "holy time," in distinction from all time.

I envy not the wisdom, nor the enjoyment of the man who thinks so little of Christ, of his resurrection, and redemption, as to disregard and dishonor his resurrection day by devoting it to the common business of this life. In early days of gospel light, the Jewish converts to christianity, although some of them observed circumcision, the offering of sacrifices, and keeping of the seventh day; yet they scrupulously kept "the first day of the week," in honor to Christ and his resurrection.

I have now given my chief reasons in short. Some who read them may think me very ignorant on this subject, and wish to enlighten me. Well, if there is better light, I will gladly accept it; yet let me inform you that I have seen and read about all that has been said on the opposite side the last twenty years. You must give me better light than that, for the gospel light has entirely eclipsed that. Yours, waiting for the Lord,

Yarmouth, Me. I. C. WELLCOME.

INFIDELITY AND PROPHECY.

(Continued.)

There is one point on which we propose to test the pretensions of the authors of the Bible, and that is in the direction of KNOWLEDGE. Men, we all know, are short-sighted and ignorant. What we can know by our senses, and what we can remember from our experience, makes up most of our personal knowledge. No man can accurately tell the future. To-morrow's events are beyond the ken of mortals. The past and the present, the distant and the near may be ours, but the future we cannot fathom nor unveil.

And though jugglers and fortune-tellers make shrewd guesses, yet they do not unfold the mysteries of coming fate. The old oracles could not fully declare the future. Sometimes their utterances had a double meaning, and if you went wrong it was only because you did not understand them right. They were shrewd, tricky, and evasive.

The Spiritual mediums of the present day seem equally unreliable here. They cannot tell the future. Spirits can perhaps telegraph you what is doing half way round the world; or can hunt over gravestones and family records, and tell you how many children your grandmother had, and whether your aunts and uncles are dead or alive; but they cannot tell you the future. Sometimes they do try it. I heard of a medium who predicted her own death within twenty-four hours, and the prophecy came true; but then the stomach-pump brought up laudanum enough out of her to kill two or three such women, and the presence of that accounted for the miracle.

But when we come to foreseeing the events of the far-off ages, no one can do it unless in the first place he is OMNISCIENT, and can see all things present and future at a glance; and also ALMIGHTY, so that he can make his words hold good, and not have his plans thwarted, subverted, or interfered with.

And right upon this very point we may test the inspiration of the Scriptures. If we find that they contain predictions uttered ages before their fulfillment, and that those prophecies have all failed, we may then reject the book at once. But if, on the contrary, we find that these prophecies are accurately and circumstantially fulfilled, then we must admit that since man cannot foresee the events of a single hour, he who could minutely declare the events of the far-off future must be OMNISCIENT and OMNIPOTENT, and hence that writing which records such declarations must be inspired by a divine mind.

And no christian can reasonably complain of such a test as this, for it is the very test proposed in these same Scriptures coming from the Lord himself. "I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are NOT YET DONE; saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure."—Isaiah 46: 10. "Behold the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare; BEFORE THEY SPRING FORTH I TELL YOU OF THEM."—Isa. 47: 9. And he calls on all the idolaters to meet this challenge, saying, "Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your STRONG REASONS, saith the King of Jacob. Let them bring them forth, and show us WHAT SHALL HAPPEN; let them show the former things, what they be, that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them; or DECLARE US THINGS FOR TO COME. Show the things that ARE TO COME HEREAFTER, that we may KNOW THAT YE ARE GODS: yea, do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together."—Isa. 12: 21–24. Now we propose to apply this very rule to the records of Scripture, and see whether the prophets can abide their own tests. If they can, we accept them as inspired teachers; if not, we reject them as vile impostors.

And we need not go hunting through the dark ages for evidences on this point. We shall not do it. The prophets of the Old Testament uttered hundreds of predictions with reference to the nations and lands around them, and there are plenty of travelers who have visited these lands, and can tell whether these words are accomplished or not.

One of the most noted of these travelers is C. F. Volney, a learned and eloquent French skeptic, who traversed those very countries, and wrote not only a journal of his "Travels in Syria and Egypt," but also "The Ruins of Empires," a powerful work aimed against the inspiration of the Scriptures. But his infidelity cannot invalidate his testimony as a trustworthy and observing traveler, and as a faithful recorder of the scenes which he had witnessed.

Volney's Travels are characterised by the Edinburgh Review (No. 50, p. 417) as "an admirable book" of "extraordinary merit." And the learned Malte-Brun, in his geography (vol. 2, p. 126), after mentioning several geographers, antiquarians, travelers, missionaries, and naturalists, who have ably elucidated particular parts of the countries belonging to Asiatic Turkey, remarks, "It was reserved for the genius of Volney to combine their detached accounts with the fruits of his own observation and study, so as to present the world with a complete description of Syria.

We shall take then those prophecies which foretold the condition of Palestine and the adjacent countries, and the latest of which was written, according to infidel admissions, more than two thousand years ago, and lay them side by side with the writings of Volney and Gibbon, who wrote in the eighteenth century, and whose statements we shall also confirm and amplify with occasional extracts from the writings of more modern travelers, and thus bring the records of prophecy and the facts of history together, and test the pretensions of the prophet by the historic facts which travelers can see to-day. If the prophecy and the facts disagree, the prophecy must fall. If the prophecy two thousand years old agrees with the facts that meet the traveler's gaze to-day, then Omniscience must have dictated the prediction, and Omnipotence secured its fulfillment. And if that be so, THE BIBLE IS THE WORD OF GOD.

In exhibiting this matter, we shall make use of the collection of Alexander Keith, who has with much labor drawn up the following parallel statements, which we copy entire with very slight alterations.

[The first portion appeared in the first number of "The Christian."]

PROPHECY. The vine languishes. Isa. 24: 7.

FULFILLMENT. "In the mountains they do not prune the vines, and they nowhere ingraft trees."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 335.

P. The new wine mourneth; they shall not drink wine with a song. Isa. 24: 9.

F. "Good cheer would infallibly expose them to extortion, and wine to a corporeal punishment."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., p. 480.

P. Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it. Isa. 24: 9.

F. "The wines of Jerusalem are most execrable."—Jolliffe's Letters from Palestine, vol. i., p. 184. "The wine drank in Jerusalem is probably the very worst to be met with in any country."—Wilson's Travels, p. 130.

P. All the merry-hearted do sigh. Isa. 24: 7.

F. "The Arabs (in singing) may be said to excel most in the melancholy strain. To hear his plaintive tones, his sighs and sobs, it is almost impossible to refrain from tears." Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 440.

P. The mirth of tabrets ceaseth; the joy of the harp ceaseth. Isa. 24: 8.

F. "They (the inhabitants) have no music but vocal, for they neither know nor esteem instrumental. Such instruments as they have, not excepting their flutes, are detestable."—Volney's Travels, p. 439.

P. The noise of them that rejoice endeth; all joy is darkened; the mirth of the land is gone. Isa. 24: 8, 11.

F. "They have a serious, nay, even sad and melancholy countenance. They rarely laugh; and the gayety of the French appears to them a fit of delirium."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., pp. 476, 461.

P. Many days and years shall ye be troubled, ye careless women. Tremble, ye women that are at ease; be troubled, ye careless ones; strip you and make you bare, and gird sackcloth upon your loins. Isa. 32: 10, 11.

F. "In Palestine you may see married women almost uncovered."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., p. 361.

P. Upon the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers. Isa. 32: 13.

The forts and towers shall be dens forever. Isa. 32: 14.

F. "The earth produces only briers and wormwood."—Volney's Ruins, p. 9.

"At every step we meet with ruins of towers, dungeons and castles with fosses, frequently inhabited by jackals, owls, and scorpions."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 336.

P. A pasture of flocks: there shall the lambs feed after their manner; and the waste places of the fat ones shall strangers eat. Isa. 32: 14.

F. "All the parts of Galilee which afford pasture are occupied by Arab tribes, around whose brown tents the sheep and lambs gambol to the sound of the reed, which at nightfall calls them home."—Malte-Brun, vol. ii., p. 146.

P. The multitude of the city shall be left. Isa. 32: 14.

The defenced city shall be left desolate, and the habitations forsaken, and left like a wilderness. Isa. 27: 10.

F. "There are innumerable monuments which depose in favor of the great population of high antiquity, such as the prodigious quantity of ruins dispersed over the plains, and even in the mountains, at this day deserted." Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 368.

P. When the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off; the women come and set them on fire. Isa. 27: 10.

F. "The olive-trees (near Arimathea) are daily perishing through age, the ravages of contending factions, and even from secret mischief. The Mamelukes having cut down all the olive-trees, for the pleasure they take in destroying, or to make fires, Yafa has lost its greatest commerce."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., pp. 332, 333.

P. For it is a people of no understanding. Isa. 27: 10.

F. "The most simple arts are in a state of barbarism; the sciences are totally unknown." Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 442.

P. Your cities burned with fire. Isa. 1: 7.

F. "A place lately ravaged with fire and sword would have precisely the appearance of this village (Loudd, Lydda). Ramla is in almost as ruinous a state."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., pp. 332, 333.

P. Many pastors have destroyed my vineyard, they have trodden my portion under foot. Jer. 12: 10.

F. "Like the Turkmen, the Curds are pastors and wanderers. A third wandering people in Syria, are the Bedouin Arabs. The Turkmen, the Curds, and the Bedouins have no fixed habitations, but keep perpetually wandering, with their tents and herds." Chap. 23 of Volney's Travels is entitled, "Of the Pastoral or Wandering Tribes of Syria."—Vol. i., p. 367, etc.

P. They have made my pleasant portion a desolate wilderness; the whole land is made desolate. Jer. 12: 10, 11.

F. "With its numerous advantages of climate and soil, it is not astonishing that Syria should always have been esteemed a most delicious country."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., p. 321. "I have seen nothing but solitude and desertion."—Volney's Ruins, p. 7.

P. The spoilers are come upon all high places through the wilderness. Jer. 12: 12.

F. "These precautions (against robbers) are above all necessary in the countries exposed to the Arabs, such as Palestine, and the whole frontier of the desert."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 417.

P. No flesh shall have peace. Jer. 12: 12.

F. "War, famine, and pestilence assail them at every turn."—Volney's Ruins, p. 9.

P. They have sown wheat, but they shall reap thorns: they have put themselves to pain, but shall not profit. Jer. 12: 13.

F. "Man sows in anguish, and reaps vexation and care."—Volney's Ruins, p. 11.

"They would not be permitted to reap the fruits of their labors."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 435.

P. They shall be ashamed of your revenues. Jer. 12: 13.

F. "The annual sum paid by Syria into the treasury of the Sultan amounts to 2345 purses.

For Aleppo		800
Tripoli		750
Damascus		45
Acre		—
Palestine		—
		2345 purses."

(Or $112,135.)—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 360.

P. Thus saith the Lord God of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel, They shall eat their bread with carefulness, and drink their water with astonishment; that her land may be desolate from ALL that is therein, because of the violence of all them that dwell therein. Ezek. 12: 19.

F. "The peasants are everywhere reduced to a little cake of barley or dourra, to onions, lentils, and water." "Dread prevails through the villages." "The arbitrary power of the Sultan, transmitted to the Pacha and to all his sub-delegates, by giving a free course to extortion, becomes the mainspring of a tyranny which circulates through EVERY class, while its effects, by a reciprocal reaction, are everywhere fatal to agriculture, the arts, commerce, population; in a word, EVERYTHING which constitutes the power of the state." Volney's Travels, vol. ii., pp. 378, 379, 412, 477.

P. Ye shall be as a garden that hath no water. Isa. 1: 30. How long shall the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein?

F. "The remains of cisterns are to be found (throughout Judea) in which they collected the rain water; and traces of the canals by which these waters were distributed on the fields."—Malte-Brun's Geography, vol. ii., pp. 150, 151. "We here see none of that gay carpeting of grass and flowers which decorate the meadows of Normandy and Flanders. The land of Syria has almost always a dusty appearance. Had not these countries been ravaged by the hands of man, they might perhaps at this day have been shaded by forests."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii., p. 359.

P. And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and they shall know that I am the Lord. Ezek. 12: 20.

F. "Every day I found in my route villages deserted and cities in ruins."—Volney's Ruins, c. i.

P. When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, there shall be as the shaking of an olive-tree, and as the gleaning of the grapes when the vintage is done. Isa. 24: 13.

The glory of Jacob shall be made thin. Isa. 17: 4.

F. "I looked for the ancient people and their works; and all that I could find was a faint trace, like what the foot of the passenger leaves on the sand."—Volney's Ruins, c. ii.

P. But yet in it shall be a tenth; and it shall return and shall be eaten, as a teil-tree, and as an oak, whose substance is in them, when they cast their leaves. Isa. 6: 13.

F. "The land of the plains is FAT and loamy, and exhibits every sign of the greatest fecundity. Were nature assisted by art, the productions of the most distant countries might be produced within the distance of twenty leagues."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., pp. 308, 317. "Galilee would be a paradise were it inhabited by an industrious people under an enlightened government."—Malte-Brun's Geography, vol. ii., p. 140.

P. The city that went out by thousands shall leave a hundred. Amos, v. 3.

F. "A tract from which a hundred individuals draw a scanty subsistence formerly maintained thousands."—Pierre Belo quoted by Malte-Brun.

For the World's Crisis.

PEACE.

"Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you."

Christ's peace is given unto us. Do we prize it as we ought? have we that treasure to-day? Paul tells us it is one of the first fruits of the Spirit, and if we "have not the Spirit of Christ we are none of his." "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Now, for one, I desire to reap life everlasting; do not you, my brother? my sister? We profess to believe "the Judge standeth before the door." Do we believe it? Methinks it is high time for us to watch and pray, and keep all the commandments; in short, become perfect men and women in Christ Jesus.

"In many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth," and grieve not the holy spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God, for Christ's sake, hath forgiven you."

Unless I obey all these words, I cannot inherit the kingdom of God. Christ says, the Highest is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil; "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful. Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned; forgive, and ye shall be forgiven." Lord help me, for even my strength is perfect weakness, and I will obey. How many of you, my brethren and sisters, will say so to? Remember if we vow unto the Lord, we must perform our vows.

How I wish I had always forgiven from the heart. We can come so much nearer the Lord in prayer. If we do not separate ourselves from him, nothing else can. Is it not blessed? Do not let Satan cheat you out of the enjoyment of this glorious, perfect peace, so freely given. By nature we are selfish, short-sighted. If there are annoyings, strife, etc., among us, are we "not carnal, and walk as men?" How much we need the bond of perfection among ourselves. O, let us bear "one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." If there are misunderstandings, let us be careful how we take up a reproach against our neighbor. We must not backbite, if we would dwell in the Lord's holy hill. It is much better to stir up the pure minds than the evil. Let us exercise long-suffering, forbearance, and forgiveness, if we would be godlike. All this is easy enough, unless it be in cases where we feel ourselves really injured; and that is the very place, no doubt, where Satan means to ensnare us, and ingratiate his own spirit within us, and so grieve the Holy Spirit away. Would we take Christ for our example, we should say, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do" So let us go to our Father in heaven, tell him our grievances, and pray for them, and be very careful, if we feel any anger creeping into our hearts, to make a mighty effort to get rid of it.

How great is the long-suffering of our God towards us. If he were like man, where should you and I be now? How sorry I am, I have ever transgressed. I have sought and found forgiveness of God, and would now humbly ask to be forgiven by my brethren and sisters. I desire to walk perfectly in the way of the Lord, denying myself of every evil way. Let us now without further delay confess our faults to each other, and pray one for another. We are not to judge each other. God looks at the hearts. How pure they must be; and how clean our hands. We cannot deceive him.

Ye who do not regard iniquity in your hearts, pray for me. My health is very poor. I am unable to labor. It may be the Lord will restore me to health and strength.

Your sister striving to follow Christ,

Marlboro', Vt. S. WHITAKER.

For the World's Crisis.

"NO PROPHETIC TIME IN THE BIBLE."

The devil will leave no stone unturned to keep, or lead people into darkness on the subject of our nearness to the Lord's coming. The different measurements of prophetic time so clearly show our nearness to the judgment, that in order to escape the solemn conclusion some are insisting that there is "no prophetic time in the Bible," thinking thus to invalidate the time argument. But if this claim is true, it not only overthrows the time argument, but blots out christianity, and stamps Jesus Christ as a notorious impostor, for the true Messiah was to come in sixty-nine weeks after the "going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem"; and if literal time, instead of prophetic time, is meant, Jesus is proved to be a false Messiah; for he did not come for hundreds of years afterward, and therefore our christianity is all spurious.

The true Messiah must come at the time specified, and Jesus came at no such time, UNLESS PROPHETIC TIME IS GIVEN; and therefore Jesus is a false Messiah, unless the time here given is prophetic time. Also sixty-nine weeks from the erection of Jerusalem's wall, were to measure to the time Messiah should be "cut off," and Jesus was not "cut off" till hundreds of years later; therefore, unless prophetic time is given, Jesus is not the promised Messiah, but an impostor. Also the "five months" under the fifth trumpet, and the hour, day, month and year under the sixth trumpet, are by this principle reduced to literal time, although already so exactly fulfilled in prophetic time. This is dispensing with prophetic time at too great an expense,—the denial of Jesus as the true Messiah, and the denial of prophecy already fulfilled in prophetic time.

But if there is any prophetic time in the Bible, how much of it is prophetic, and how can we discriminate between literal and prophetic time? Let us candidly notice the manner in which literal time is invariably given, and then the rule by which we can distinguish between literal and prophetic time.

1st. Literal time, in the Bible, is invariably given in years, when over one year is given; and a PLURALITY OF LITERAL YEARS ARE NEVER EXPRESSED IN DAYS. Such a thing as expressing three years and a half by 1260 days, is unknown in the Bible; but as in the case of Elijah, "three years and six months" is the style of expression. Such a thing as expressing six years, four months, and twenty days by 2300 days; or any other measurement of years and a fraction over on the same principle, is not once found in the Bible. This is not God's style in giving literal time; but in dealing out literal time to men, he always conforms to the usages of men in reckoning time, as in the case of the seventy years of captivity. There is not an exception to this rule in the Bible.

Also it is true that when a space of literal time over a year long is given, it is never expressed in weeks. Nor are several years of literal time ever expressed in months.

2d. As God invariably gives literal years, months, and days, in the ordinary way, it follows that when a measurement of days or weeks over the number contained in a year, is given, the time is prophetic. Also time given in connection with symbols is generally prophetic. With these two facts before us, we need not be in doubt whether given measurements of time are literal or prophetic. Thus the 2300, 1260, 1290, and 1335 days are proved prophetic. WM. SHELDON.

LEANNESS.

The following communication shows the state of Christendom generally. Is it not time to awake out of sleep?—ED.

For the World's Crisis.

Communication and Petition

Of the Consistory of the 3d Ref. D. Church at Schenectady, to the Reverend Classis of Schenectady, N. Y., at their spring session, 1866.

MEN AND BRETHREN:—Since we seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, we deeply feel the great want of the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, and in consequence of it, the want of the spiritual gifts which the original church in the first and second century possessed abundantly.

These heavenly gifts were their only powerful means for increasing in numbers and virtues; for multiplying their faithful laborers; exercising reasonable service; keeping good discipline; preserving sound knowledge; manifesting pure religion; explaining God's mystery, and Babylon's mystery, too; conquering Judaism and Heathenism; and preparing the way to the Lord of lords, and King of kings, for his second advent.

These gifts were a much better reward and gain to them than precious stones, and pearls, and books, and tracts, and all kinds of newspapers; because men became by it a spiritual temple, sinners a royal priesthood, and strangers a peculiar people.

These marvelous gifts were their art and science, their ornament, strength and power in the world, before the world, and against the world. Yes, these marvelous and magnificent gifts were their whole armor of God, which enabled them to stand against their visible and invisible enemies, and to overcome the devil, hell, and death.

But alas how different is it with us! We have them not. None among us has the unction from the Holy One. None among us can testify of himself what Jesus said, that "out of his body shall flow rivers of living waters." None of our congregations can really be called "the salt of the earth, and the light of the world."

On this ground we are very poor and miserable in comparison with the ancient christians and well beloved saints. We must confess freely that they were great in the beginning of the kingdom of heaven, but we, after eighteen centuries, are small, very small, indeed; they did increase, but we do decrease, like our fathers. We cannot prophesy, but they could. We cannot heal the sick, but they could. We cannot speak in different languages without learning them; but they could. We cannot discern spirits distinctly, and appoint the right men in the right place, as they could (Acts 13: 2). We cannot work miracles, and exercise power over life and health; but they could. We cannot give the Holy Ghost through laying our hands on them that are near and dear to us; but they could. We cannot build in a few weeks, or months, new and flourishing churches, model churches; but they could. Each of them was a new created world. We cannot say truly that church is our joy, and that is our glory, and that the crown of our rejoicing; but they could. Our heavenly Father was pleased with many of them, and angels smiled on them. But, sirs, it is not so with us.

And as it is with us, so, just so, it is with other consistories, presbyteries, churches and denominations both in America and Europe. Or where is a single church whose faith is spoken of throughout the whole world? Or where is a denomination by whose officers and members could be proved that they are examples to all men.

Of course, we know very well, there is in the Roman and Greek Catholic churches a host of monks, and nuns, and priests, and chaplains, and bishops, and archbishops, and prelates, and patriarchs, and cardinals, and "holy Sees." But none of them, from the greatest to the least, is an apostle of Jesus Christ.

We know very well, also, there are in the numerous Protestant churches and sects many "laymen," many deacons, many elders, many pastors, many missionaries, many professors, many students, and many doctors; but none of them a Prophet of the Most High, and none a prophet's son.

There are no apostles, no prophetesses, no workers of miracles any more. And, therefore, we feel and acknowledge our poverty and nakedness with the profoundest sorrow.

"Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them!"

But, oh! the Lord feeds us with bread of tears, and our drink is mingled with weeping because of his indignation, and his wrath. O, he is angry against our prayer (Psalm 80), and therefore does not answer it. He has covered himself with a cloud, that our prayer should not pass through (Lament. 3).

He has punished us by a cruel civil war, and many murderous battles; by innumerable diseases, casualties, accidents and death.

And now he is threatening us, by a fearful pestilence and rinderpest, and by another terrible earthquake or revolution. For although our statesmen and churchmen, and peace conventions say "Peace and Safety!" yet, we say, there will be no peace and safety, but sudden destruction cometh upon them (1 Thess. 5). He, who is the judge and avenger, is heaping mischiefs upon our "proud nation," and is spending his arrows upon our "great country." "O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end" (Deut. 32)!

For we believe the Scripture, that he has not appointed us to wrath, but that we shall escape from the wrath to come, and to obtain a temporal and eternal salvation by him who is called "Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

These are the reasons why we regard it as our duty and privilege to lay the state of things before you, men and brethren, as a Classis, and through the Classis, if necessary, before the General Synod, or, through the organ of our denomination (the Christian Intelligencer), before the public in general.

Your humble fellow brethren, WILLIAM F. SCHWILK, Pastor; William Nicklas, Henry Fink, Carl Golucke, Louis Feldman, George Steinfuhrer, David Ppaffenbach.

For the World's Crisis.

HIGHER ATTAINMENTS.

He who is satisfied with his present experience will not be in as good a place to-morrow as he is to-day; and the christian who is always dissatisfied with the present condition of his experience, will rise higher in his experience. I do not mean by his being dissatisfied that he gets no satisfaction at all from his experience. He likes the nature of it. Well he loves to look at the past and see how he has progressed unto the truth, how the light has increased, and he rejoices in the prospect of knowing and enjoying more, and the thought that he may thus happily advance leads him to feel comparatively dissatisfied with the degree of his knowledge and happiness. This then is the great first principle of a higher attainment, namely, EARNESTLY DESIRING MORE, and desiring it so as to seek for the elevation in knowledge and grace which will finally bring him to the top of Old Pisga, from whence there is a clear view over into the new earth, the land of promise.

Higher attainments, a better knowledge of self and wants, must precede all advancement. I get new light to-day that I had not yesterday; I see in the distance much yet to be possessed; I discover that it is really beyond where I now am; I feel that what I want most [illegible] and I want all the advantages of this advanced position. In comparing myself with what I see in the future, I feel a real want, or necessity, for that position. I know I am not there, and I see something in me which keeps me from reaching that place. There is the fresh "discovery of self." I cannot now go on and do this as I could, because I see the wrong now; so to make the advance I must get rid of the imperfection; and having got rid of it, and reached the coveted advance and elevation, I find it is with me as it is with the traveler, who seems to see the blue atmosphere and the earth meet but a little before him, but when he reaches that spot, the connecting places which he seemed to see just there—the verge of creation, is removed far in advance; and if he should keep traveling over this round earth eternally, he would always find it so. It is no doubt true, that, while the christian will overcome self before he reaches the everlasting kingdom, he will always grow in wisdom and love. Higher attainments bring us near to God. They are reached by striving, lying low in the dust before God, and praying for light, then walking in the light as fast as you see it.

"The path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Oh, I am glad that the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid, through Christ (so that they are accessible to us), in God's infinity, so that I have no fears of ever exhausting the fountain from which "I drink, and yet am ever dry," because the peculiar sweetness and richness of the "water of life" always makes me thirst for more. O, brethren, is it not blessed that we need not remain in statu quo, droning along like shriveled and diminutive dwarfs, but may always "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," till we come not only to the measure of the stature" of "a perfect man" in Christ, but to the "fullness of joy," and the evermore pleasures, the river of life itself (we are only at the fountain-source now), and learn more and more of the plan of salvation, of God's great love for us in the plan, the great importance of our state there, and all the rich, free, full, unbounded avenues of comfort and knowledge, on which the full, broad, bright light of God's enlightening presence will ever shine?

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

For the World's Crisis.

SCATTERING AND INCREASING.

Serving God with our little, whether in the way of time, talents, property, or influence, is the way to make it more. Nothing is wasted by which God is honored, or man blessed. It is but seed sown, to be gathered again a hundred-fold in the harvest.

O, then, when I shall render up
The long lent talents of my life,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

ELIZABETH [illegible]

East Concord, N. H.

☞ Nothing has such a tendency to weaken, not only the powers of invention, but the intellectual powers in general, as a habit of extensive reading without reflection; [illegible] many is a mere substitute for thinking.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ST. LOUIS MISSION.

Bro. Grant:—It would be a satisfaction to the friends east to know how we are prospering in our mission school at St. Louis. I will write them briefly in regard to it. It is kept in a vacant, private dwelling-house, about three miles from the heart of the city, among a settlement of Freedmen. Most of them are very destitute and ignorant. The school has been in session about two months. We began with twenty scholars, and our number has increased slowly. Now there are are about thirty regular attendants. There are many who came at the commencement of the school who have since gone out to service; their pecuniary circumstances being such that they are obliged to embrace every opportunity that presents itself to earn a scanty support. The scholarship of many of them is very good, and they exhibit a degree of energy to dissect and devour every thing that comes within their reach, in the form of reading matter, with as much greediness as the most intelligent white children that ever came under my observation as a teacher, while there are others much inclined to be stupid and indifferent about learning; but we find the same characteristics among all children. I can only say in regard to their deportment, it is as good, if not not better than we could reasonably expect, and, when we consider that nearly all of them have grown up in the cotton or tobacco field, can we look for the more refined sensibility of feeling exhibited by the more favored? but should we not rather expect them to be more like the unbroken New England soil, rough and uneven? There are none who are religious connected with the school; but it is not really surprising, none of them being over fourteen years of age. Most of them have one parent or both connected with the Methodist or Baptist church, and every Lord's day there is a meeting and Sabbath school in the school-room, and two or three times during the week.

In company with sister Mary, I have visited the school several times, and I find that no pains are spared on the part of the superintendent, who is a dark man, to make it interesting. The school is well supplied with Testaments, singing books, cards, and papers, that the Methodist society, of which they are a branch, supply them with regularly. And here I remark, that those who know anything of her, know equally well that she is a mother that nurses and cradles her offspring, using every precaution to guard against all other isms but Methodism. Thus you see I am fettered; yet, as a teacher in the fear of God, I have tried, and shall continue to perform my part, though quiet and unobtrusive, in pruning the vines, "remembering the end."

There is among us a wide field, uncultivated, undisturbed, which, if it could be plowed with God's truth, and sown with salvation, would, at the time of ingathering, yield a store of ripe grain for the garner. O glory, my soul is full.

"Oh, reapers of life's harvest,
Why stand ye idle, dumb?
The golden morn is passing,
And soon the night will come."

Many have been blessed under the labors of Bro. Flagg, who I believe would have dotted the fair plains of Canaan; but for the want of an independent place of worship, the [illegible] in a most heartless manner, crushed them, until the arch-traitor, I greatly fear, will effect a spiritual death.

Since sister Mary and I have labored in the west, by the abuse of almost every kind that we have received, whether merited or unmerited, God be the judge, we have been convinced that nothing can be done to amount to any permanent good among the professed churches of God, by way of preaching the truth. If there could be one grand rally to erect a tabernacle, be it ever so humble, where God could dwell in power, the priests filled with holiness and the people with salvation, St. Louis and its vicinity, I think, might become the great breastworks of the West, that would loom up in defiance of the powers of error and Satan. May we not hope for such a blessing? None but God knows how the hearts of the little flock yearn over it. Where is the shepherd that will journey with scrip and staff, as did the apostles, to our neglected western country, to watch over the little flock, and labor with a strong nerve to add to it such as are willing to come in by the door? Such a one must expect to endure privations, persecutions of the deepest cast, pass through valleys of tears; yet the divine Assistant is here to administer his healing balm. Remember how Jesus said, I am the Good Shepherd, I will mark thy pastures, attend all thy wants, and in every path and thicket go before thee. "Follow thou me."

I never felt more like performing the solemn act of consecrating myself to God, pleading with him to accept me as a thank-offering, for his unmerited love. Though I possess no box of rich ointment with which to bathe his feet, the mite is freely given.

I have many things to write, but I will not with ink and pen; I trust I shall come unto you shortly, and shall speak face to face. May the excellency of our divine Master be shed in rich profusion through our hearts and lives, is my prayer.

From a sister seeking to be more like Jesus, Francelia F. Curtis,
Teacher of the Mission School.

St. Louis, Mo.

LIFE SKETCHES.

A new edition has just been issued, and those who have subscribed and paid will be supplied just as soon as it can be ascertained who have been supplied, and who have not. As some copies have been sent directly from Boston during Mrs. Mussey's absence, it may be difficult to tell the whole number who are yet unsupplied. Will not those who are expecting copies, whether paid for or not, please send their names immediately, and money if they have not already paid, and they shall receive the books by return mail. Price $1.00, postpaid.

Quite a number have received copies which are not yet paid for. Will they not send in the money immediately? Sr. Mussey needs every cent due her to pay for the present edition. Now who will send in their names and money, or the names of their friends, and thus enable Sr. M. to dispose of the whole edition at once, pay her bills, and pay her for her trouble in the past?

Those sending money now due, address Mrs. Abigail Mussey, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Those who wish for books, address H. P. Rockland (Crisis Box), Boston, Mass.

To do good, be good to do.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, May 2, 1866.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year; but if delayed six months beyond the time of payment, the price is $3.00 a year. Thus 50 cents a year is saved by paying in advance.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, Geo. T. Adams.

THE HYMN BOOK.

The Jubilee Harp is now nearly ready for the printer, and will be in his hands at once. From a hasty examination, we think the church of Christ will be delighted with the book. We think no other book, of its size, can be found that contains so many hymns that are free from unscriptural expressions. This matter has received very careful attention. We would also say, we doubt whether any other book has a more choice selection of music adapted to christian worship. Much credit is due Bro. A. T. Gorham, of Castleton, Vt., for his labors in arranging and editing the work.

A STORM COMING.

The present aspect of affairs on both continents indicates a terrible political storm near at hand. Observing statesmen are well satisfied that it will be terrible, and involve the whole civilized world. The opening scene is dreaded, and causes men's hearts to tremble. While they may "say peace and safety," the nations are making great preparations for war. Says "The Catholic," a Roman Catholic paper, of April 12, 1866, under the heading—"The lull before the storm:"—

"In glancing over the condition of the nations, as they appear on the surface, at the present moment, one is struck by the universal aspect of what might be called "a masterly inactivity." This means of course the very opposite of inactivity, under a seeming repose, and not unfrequently the contrary of peace in the garb of friendship, diplomatically styled entente cordiale. We would venture to assert that such a state of things is nothing better as a guarantee of public tranquility, than the ominous quiet which pervades the heavens, wrapping them, as it were, in a manifold garment of security until the very moment when they are rent by the storm matured in that which seemed but a moment before, a very mantle of peace. Such is the case with almost the whole of Europe at this moment. Such is the condition of South America; and it is fortunate indeed for us, if such be not also the condition of the United States. We see no better grounds of hope for future peace and prosperity to our Union than in a return to the original principles of the Constitution, and iron firmness and prompt decision on the part of the Executive. No entangling alliances with foreign nations should be thought of for a moment, and the spirit of radicalism, like the kindred one of rebellion, should be crushed with an untrembling hand. We feel not the slightest doubt that the President will be sustained by the major and sounder portion of our people in any measures he may deem it necessary to adopt for [illegible] the Catholic church progresses with quiet and silent advance, gathering into the fold of Christ, through the storm, no less successfully than in the calm, "as many as shall be saved."

IS IT RIGHT?

A faithful preaching brother in the west, writes:—

"For the last twenty-five days of faithful labor, I have received $10 in money, one pair of stockings, and a little stocking yarn. Out of the $10 I have paid out on the cars $3.45, leaving $6.55 to take home to my family. But I have had such an anxiety to get the light before the people, I have been willing to suffer myself. I do not say this to complain. My anxiety is to continue in the field till Jesus comes; but this I cannot do unless I have more assistance. I am willing to work; but if I cannot be sustained, I must leave for some employment. I am in the Lord's hands,—his willing servant, for Jesus' sake."

Is it right to serve the faithful, self-denying preacher in this way? Only $10 for twenty-five days' labor, when even the most common day laborer would not be willing to work for less than $40 or $50 dollars for the same time. Only $6.55 to take home to pay for house rent, fuel, lights, clothing, food, for an entire family for twenty-five days! We say again, is this RIGHT?

Truly, men must feel "an anxiety to get the light before the people," or they would not go out a second time for such a mere pittance as many receive. Is it not true that covetousness is a heavy sin of these last days? Jesus says, "Beware of covetousness."

VOLCANIC ERUPTION.

Not only is the world in a state of "unrest" politically, morally, and socially, but physically. Every thing seems to be uneasy and "groaning" for a change. Expectation is on tiptoe looking for wonderful developments in all these departments. Every day the multitudes that read the news of the day expect to see an account of some startling event. Every thing seems to be crowding for a grand focal point, now close at hand. Men may try to throw off the growing impression that some terrible scenes are about to be witnessed; but, as in the approaching tempest, every hour only makes the event appear more certain,—the storm must come. As in the days of Noah, a long warning has been given to a guilty world, in order that they might prepare if they would; but most seem as careless as the Antediluvians or Sodomites the day before their destruction; "even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed."—Luke 17: 30. What a solemn hour is this in which we are living!

But we took up our pen to notice the following account of a volcanic eruption:—

"Wonderful Scene.—A writer in the Honolulu Friend was an eye witness to the eruption of the volcanic mountain Manua Loa, on the Island of Hawaii. It commenced near the summit, and sent down its burning floods along the north-western slope for two days, and then suddenly ceased. After thirty-six hours the lava burst out vertically about half way down the mountain, sending a column of glowing liquid fire one thousand feet into the air. This jet was about one hundred feet in diameter, and continued for twenty days to rise into the air to a height varying from five hundred to one thousand feet. This terrific fusilade was accompanied with explosions which shook the hills, and the thunder of its progress was heard at the distance of forty miles. At its first issue from the orifice it was at a white heat; as it ascended higher and higher it changed to deep blood red, and finally fell almost black to the earth.

In a few days a cone nearly three hundred feet high was raised, a vast heap of glowing coals hotter than all the fiery furnaces of the world, and awfully suggestive of the destructive force of the great chemical laboratory of nature. From this molten fountain, a mile in circumference, a broad river of fire went rushing down the mountain side, filling up valleys, tumbling over precipices burning through the woods and evaporating the water of the streams and pools in great wreaths of murky steam and vapor which filled all the sky. All Eastern Hawaii was a sheet of light, and night was turned into day. At sea the light was visible for two hundred miles, the point from which the fire issued being ten thousand feet above the level of the ocean. The rivers of fire from this mountain flowed about thirty-five miles and stopped within ten miles of the coast. In the daytime the atmosphere for many square miles was filled with a murky haze, through which the sun beams shed a pale and ghastly light. The air was filled with the little filaments called Pelo's hair, and with stifling ashes. It was a scene such as few would care to witness, and one which the dweller in more temperate climes would not wish to run the risk of for all the beauties and rare productions of the tropics.—Boston Journal.

We should be no more surprised than now, to hear that Rome was but the mouth of a terrible volcano. When speaking to John about the judgment of that city, the angel "took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all."—Rev. 18; 21.

WHO WANTS A JOB?

Bro. Grant:—I wish some one would tell how much money the king of Assyria sent to the king of Israel to get Naaman the leper cured of his leprosy, as found in 2 Kings 5: 5. It will show how much great men desire to be healed in a popular way, rather than obey God by going under water. This history is a good glass to look into, and a text to preach from in this age of pride, when God's prophets are sought last for help.

H. Munger.

If the "pieces of gold" are shekels, as they are called in the Arabic, then the whole value of the silver and gold, not including the changes of raiment, would amount to $69,990.93¾, about sixty-nine thousand, nine hundred and ninety dollars, and ninety-three and three-fourth cents, in gold.

The Cholera.—There seems to be no doubt but that the United States will be visited by the cholera this year. The best defense against it will be a pure heart and a clean body sanctified to the Lord. Such a one has nothing to fear.

THE WONDERFUL DOGS.

There are some who claim that animals do [illegible] by instinct. But facts are abundant to prove that animals may be educated; and that many of them know more than some human beings; consequently, if matter can not be so organized as to think, how do beasts think? Have they immortal spirits that do the thinking for them?

It requires much more effort to sustain a false than a true theory. The Lord can cause organized matter to think as well as to feel. We know that animals feel pain as truly as men. But the same organism that feels pain, feels sorrow, joy, love, hatred, etc.; but there would be no pain if there was not a physical organism; consequently there could be no joy or love without the same. It is an absurdity, we think, to suppose that a man has any sensations whatever, when his physical form is dead. What can be more self-evident than the declaration of the Bible,—"The dead know not any thing."

We give the following from Messrs. Chambers "Tracts," for the benefit of those who assume that animals do nothing only as they are prompted by instinct. We are confident that a company of idiots could not have been taught to do as much. If intelligence is what makes man immortal, then the idiot and the infant are without it, while dogs and other animals possess it.

"An aged gentlemen has mentioned to us that about fifty years ago, a Frenchman brought to London from eighty to a hundred dogs, chiefly poodles, the remainder spaniels, but all nearly of the same size, and of the smaller kind. On the education of these animals their proprietor had bestowed an immense deal of pains. From puppyhood upwards, they had been taught to walk on their hind legs, and maintain their footing with surprising ease in that unnatural position. They had likewise been drilled into the best possible behavior towards each other; no snarling, barking, or indecorous conduct took place when they were assembled in company. But what was most surprising of all, they were able to perform in various theatrical pieces of the character of pantomines, representing various transactions in heroic and familiar life, with wonderful fidelity. The object of their proprietor was, of course, to make money by their performances, which the public were accordingly invited to witness in one of the minor theatres. Amongst their histrionic performances was the representation of a siege. On the rising of the curtain, there appeared three ranges of ramparts, one above the other, having salient angles and a moat, like a regularly constructed fortification. In the centre of the fortress arose a tower, on which a flag was flying; while in the distance behind appeared the buildings and steeples of a town. The ramparts were guarded by soldiers in uniform, each armed with a musket or sword, of an appropriate size. All these were dogs, and their duty was to defend the walls from an attacking party, consisting also of dogs, whose movements now commence the operations of the siege. In the foreground of the stage were rude buildings and irregular surfaces, from among which there issued a reconnoitering party; the chief, habited as an officer of rank, with great circumspection surveyed the fortification; and his sedate movements, and his consultation with the troops that accompanied him, implied that an attack was determined upon. But these consultations did not pass unobserved by the defenders of the garrison. The party was noticed by a sentinel, and this seemed to be the signal to call every man to his post at the embrasures. Shortly after, the troops advanced to the escalade; but to cross the moat, and get at the bottom of the walls, it was necessary to bring up some species of pontoon, and accordingly several soldiers were seen engaged in pushing before them wicker-work scaffoldings, which moved on castors towards the fortifications. The drums beat to arms, and the fearful bustle of warfare opened in earnest. Smoke was poured out in volleys from shot-holes; the besieging forces pushed forward in masses, regardless of the fire; the moat was then filled with the crowd; and amid much confusion and scrambling, ladders were raised against the walls. Then was the grand tug of war. The leaders of the forlorn-hope who first ascended, were opposed with great gallantry by the defenders; and this was perhaps the most interesting part of the exhibition. The chief of the assailants did wonders; he was seen now here, now there, animating his men, and was twice hurled, with ladder and followers, from the second gradation of ramparts; but he was invulnerable, and seemed to receive an accession of courage on every fresh repulse. The scene became of an exciting nature. The rattle of the miniature cannon, the roll of the drums, the sound of trumpets, and the heroism of the actors on both sides, imparted an idea of reality that for the moment made the spectator forget that he was looking on the performance of dogs. Not a bark was heard in the struggle. After numerous hairbreadth escapes, the chief surmounted the third line of fortifications, followed by his troops; the enemy's standard was hurled down, and the British flag hoisted in its place; the ramparts were manned by the conquerors, and the smoke cleared away—to the tune of "God save the king."

MESSIANIC BANNER.

The following "Prospectus of the Messianic Banner, will give the reader some idea of its character:—

Men and brethren! We have thrown our Banner to the breeze, determined to do battle for our Lord, the Messiah. With reference to this publication, we can, with all truth and humility say that we thought long and prayed earnestly before resolving to engage in the enterprise. We have not done it hastily nor unadvisedly. The conviction has been growing and deepening upon our mind for several years, and has now assumed a controlling power, that we had a duty to perform to the living generation before going hence. This duty, in the fear and by the help of the Lord, we now intend to discharge. We have many things to say, and the time is short; consequently they must be uttered speedily. We have passed the noon of life and the shadows of evening begin to show themselves. What we do, therefore, must be done quickly.

In the conduct of this periodical we shall make the word of God our alpha and omega; to it we shall make our first and last appeal. Whatever can be sustained by it we shall advocate; and whatever is contrary to it we shall oppose with all our strength.

1. We shall advocate the Bible, and the Bible alone, as the only rule of faith and practice.

2. We shall advocate the faithful translation and circulation of the word of God among all nations.

3. Our work will be devoted to primitive christianity, as it stands revealed on the living pages of God's truth.

4. We shall oppose the traditions of men, as nullifying and making void the commandments of God.

5. We shall hold up Christ as the great head of the church, and as our only Lawgiver and King.

6. We shall expose the apostasy in the aggregate, and in all its various phases, divisions, and subdivisions.

7. We shall advocate the union and hearty co-operation of all immersed believers, who are walking in the commandments of the Lord.

8. And, finally, we shall urge upon all christians the duty of loyalty and true faith to the civil governments under which they may live; and that it is incompatible with the laws of Christ, the spirit of the gospel, and the genius of christianity, for them to appeal to the sword under any circumstances.

And now, brethren and friends, lend us your aid in this work. Send us at once your own names and those of your friends, with the amount of subscription for the work. Subscribe yourselves, and try and induce others to do so.

Our terms are two dollars per annum, one dollar for six months, and twenty cents for a single number; cash always in advance.

Address Dr. John T. Walsh,
540 Lexington Street, Baltimore, M. D.

☞ The meetings here are still continued, with little abatement of interest. Bro. S. G. Mathewson was with us last Sabbath, and gave two good discourses. Two were buried with Christ in baptism. The meeting in the evening was especially interesting. The labors of Bro. Hook, both in New Bedford and here, have been incessant and long-continued, and he has gone home sick, yet hoping to return soon to the work. Pray for him, brethren, and for the work of salvation. W. B. H.

For the World's Crisis.

MISTAKE OF REFORMERS.

It consists in the fact that while they are engaged in the praiseworthy work of reforming their fellowmen, they neglect to present the true gospel motive, viz., the coming of Jesus and the resurrection Now this is not only a mistake, but a fatal one. Reformers should remember that unconverted people reason on the great subject of salvation, as well as christians, and if they are told that the world is growing better, and will soon be converted, what wonder if they fail to see the danger of enjoying the friendship of the world.

If the premises are true, then the conclusion is also true,—Jesus is ruling the world by his Spirit. Therefore the world must be improving. And as the world (morally considered) is made up of several divisions, then it must improve in those divisions, and consequently sinful acts, and sinful amusements are not as dangerous as the Bible declares them to be.

And again, they fail to see the danger of laying up treasures on earth, if Jesus is ruling it by his Spirit, and his meek are inheriting it now. Friend reformer, if the foregoing is the kind of doctrine you teach, wonder not that your converts and disciples resemble the three classes spoken of by Jesus in his parable of the sower, Mark 4: 15–19. Neither of the three brought forth fruit. The first were hindered by Satan; in the second, the word did not take root; and the third is so so opposite, I will give it in full: "And the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful."

Brother reformer, whoever you are, let me exhort you in the language of Paul to Timothy, "I charge thee, therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, preach the word."

New York. Samuel Curry.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

For the Free Distribution of Tracts.

Previous acknowledgments	$2023.32
Arabine Wright	1.00
Amelia Andrews	1.00

POOR FUND DONATIONS.

To send the Crisis to the Poor.

Whole number sent free, 560. Ann'l Expense, $1400,00

Previous acknowledgments	$297.65
Geo. Storer	5.00
Sarah A. Moore	2.00
H. P. B.	1.00
Moses Smith	10.00

The American Advent Mission Society.

All communications relating to the business of the Society, and all applications for situations as teachers or missionaries, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, William B. Herron, "Crisis" Office, Boston.

All donations of money, or clothing, or other supplies for the Freedmen, should be sent to the Treasurer, George T. Adams, 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

In sending supplies, enclose in a letter to the same address a notice and list of the articles sent.

FREEDMEN'S MISSION FUND.

Previous acknowledgments	1934.69
Y. P. Fund	.65
W. O. Smith	.50
M. A. Park	.50
Moses Smith	30.00
N. W. Wait	60.00

YOUNG PILGRIM POOR FUND.

To send the Young Pilgrim to the Poor.

200 copies are sent free to Mission Schools and elsewhere.

Previous acknowledgments	$61.83
A. Fike	.30

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$434.45
H. P. B.	1.00
Moses Smith	30.00
N. W. Wait	10.00

FOR THE NEW HYMN BOOK.

N. W. Wait, Sandy Hill, N. Y.	50.00

For the World's Crisis.

MISSIONARY LIFE AMONG THE FREEDMEN.

One month in this mission, and in Memphis. What have been the results? First, weariness, trials, labor; and then success. The former were permitted and endured; the latter was given and rejoiced in.

I was never more worn out and exhausted than when I reached here just one month ago. I had made the journey from Tennessee home; spent two weeks there in incessant labor, getting ready for the mission; and returned here, all in the space of a little more than four weeks. The journeying, excitement, care, labor and anxiety had been so severe and great, that both body and mind were prostrated, and for two weeks after I reached here I was unfit to labor either mentally or physically. I however did what I could, going out among the colored people as my strength and the weather permitted; wrote to friends and the officers of the society, informing them of our safe arrival, and whatever seemed worthy of note.

The last two weeks have been more especially occupied in an examination into the condition and wants of the Freedmen in and around this city; and ascertaining if anywhere there were those unprovided for in relation to schools and the preaching of the gospel. The result of this effort has been that, both in the city proper and its environs, I have found many hundreds who attend no school, meeting, or Sabbath School. I was told before I left Nashville that Memphis was well provided with schools, and that the ground here was fully occupied by the many and different missions. But this is not the case. Although much has been and is being done, yet a large proportion of the colored population are out of doors, as it relates to schools, meetings, and Sabbath Schools. True, much of the ground in the city itself is claimed by the different missions, and they will say there is no room for more; while, at the same time, full one half of the children, in the limits which they claim as theirs, are not in their schools, nor can they accommodate them.

This jealousy and sectarian selfishness is to be denounced, and held up to the scorn of good men. This letting men, women and children starve for knowledge and the bread of life, rather than to let another feed them, is cruelty and wickedness. But such is sectarianism.

There are, then, localities in the city where new schools should be established for the very poor, and for those who cannot pay as much as these missions are charging. Large schools could be gathered and congregations had by any society who could afford to make the school comparatively free, or charge only those who can pay, and let all pay what they can. This should be done; for not one half of these poor people can be otherwise reached.

There is a field open for us in the city, where, if we had the means, a good and great work could be done. But the great field here lying uncared for by anybody is in the northern part of the city, extending a mile and a half out into its suburbs. Here are many colored people in a condition demanding all that christian hearts and hands can give them. They are wretched, miserable, and perishing for want of light, knowledge, and the pure gospel of Christ. It would pain the heart of every reader of this, if he could see, as I have, the sad state and condition of these poor children of God. They are thirsting for knowledge; but there is no one to open the fountain to them. They are begging for a "school and church," as they say; and as I go among them I am everywhere importuned to "go on and begin the school and have a meeting."

I might relate many incidents of interest which have come under my notice, in traveling day after day over this abandoned ground. I will state one, which occurred to-day.

In passing a cabin, I looked in at the door and saw a group of colored children with books in their hands, and a woman of the same race seated among them. All looked disconcerted at my steady and astonished gaze, for just then, I had no words at my command. At length I said to the woman,

"And so you are teaching them to read?"

"Yes," said she, "I am learning them all I know, and that is n't much."

"How well can they read?"

"O, some of them can read right smart, and some of them don't know the letters yet."

"You can read, then, yourself?"

"Yes, I can read some; but I don't know so much about it as I want to."

"You have been to school, I suppose?"

"No, sir, I never went to school at all."

"How did you learn to read?"

"I learnt hearing the white children. They told me the names of the letters, and I listened how they put them together, and remembered hard; and so I learnt to read."

"Are all these children yours?"

"O no, I have but two here; the rest belong over yonder in those houses," pointing across the lot.

"Would you like to go to school?" I said, addressing the children.

"Yes," said the woman, "they are going next Monday. They say there has been a man all about saying he was going to have a school, and wanted all the children to come. I don't know where the school is going to be, but I suppose some where in these parts."

"Have you never seen him?"

"No, but Mrs. Sterling over there on the hill says he has been there, and he is a real missionary. She has been with white missionaries among the Indians, and knows what missionaries are. She said when he came there again she would tell him to come over here."

"I was just going over there."

"Are you the man?"

"Yes, I suppose I am."

Upon this all arose, and I was asked to come in, and the best chair brought from the farther side of the room for me to sit in. We were all acquainted now; and so I heard one of the children read, and asked the woman to go on with the exercises, which she did in quite an original and correct manner.

Just then I saw a young woman who was washing clothes in the yard, start and run over across the way with a somewhat rapid pace. Presently she returned and said that I was wanted over in those houses. I looked towards where she pointed, and saw a number of people standing inside the fence, looking towards where I was; and concluded that I was surely wanted. So I started and went over. Before, however, I had fairly arrived there, one of the number, a young mulatto woman, said in a very earnest but musical voice,

"Are you the teacher?"

"Yes, I suppose I am."

"Well, what do you ask?"

"I ask all you can afford to give. I shall ask a dollar a month, if you can afford to give it."

"O yes, I can give that."

"You know some cannot give anything, and others can; so those that can pay must do so to help the poor who have nothing to give, and that all may come and learn to read."

With this they all seemed pleased, and promised to give all they could; and with smiles on their countenances I left them and returned to the teacher's house. Here I found her still earnestly engaged teaching the children. After she got through, I laid before her my plans in regard to the work which I hoped to do among them, one of which was to build a chapel, in which to hold a Sunday school and meeting on the Sabbath, and where they could all go and be taught the word of God, and hear the gospel preached. Also that a school during the week should be kept in the chapel, to which all could come, or as many as it could contain, and be taught to read and write. She said she had heard that this was what I wanted to do, and she had told her husband about it, and he said that if I would let her come to school, he would help me build the house; "for," said she, "he is a good carpenter, and works at his trade all the time." Here, thought I, is the Lord at work again; and so after assuring her that I would do all in my power to help her to a better education, and to the light which she was so anxious to obtain, I took my leave and went on, thinking of this and a score of incidents as strange, and wondering at the ways of God in which he leads his people.

From here I went over to my friend Sterling's "on the hill." He is a man of perhaps sixty years. He is not a professed christian, but possesses a noble heart; and, although he has no children himself, and thinks he is too old to learn to read, he will do all he can to have a school and meeting established here. He is an energetic man; hires a plantation, and employs a number of men constantly in carrying it on. He has sent a number of bales of cotton to New York this season, which has been pronounced the finest and best produced in this State. His wife is a good christian woman. She says she knows what a missionary's life is, for she was with the white missionaries among the Cherokee Indians a number of years. She went as cook and nurse. She says we have got a great work to do here, and it is a missionary work. Said she to me, the first time I saw her,

"I knew you was a missionary as soon as I heard you speak to my husband, for you spoke just as the missionaries did to the Indians."

I am becoming acquainted with more of them every day, and gaining their confidence; which is the first thing to be done. Without this you can do little for them. They will not listen to your voice, nor follow you unless you can satisfy them of your disinterestedness, and that you did not come here for your own benefit, but entirely for their good. If you can make them believe this, then you can lead, guide and direct them.

It requires all the wisdom God can give to deal with this people in such a manner as to secure their efforts for their own spiritual enlightenment and salvation. It is easy to cut off their ears, and make them run from you like a flock of sheep. They can see when you are trying to proselyte them to a new faith or creed for the sake of gain, and they will not hear you; but when you present to them God's word, pure and free from sectarian appellations, making them understand and feel that without faith in and obedience to this word they cannot be saved, then you have advanced a step towards securing their confidence in your teachings and in the truth of your doctrine. They want the substance, the principles of truth first; the name, if necessary, will come after. Christ took no name for his followers. The world called him a Nazarene, and his followers were called, by the heathen, Christians; but neither were chosen or assumed. Let us teach and preach all the word of God to these poor perishing creatures, making them believe that a firm faith in it and a strict obedience to it will insure their salvation, and that nothing else will;—that they must live upon and by this word in all its parts, and not upon the husks of theology, or by theological names.

This people want a religion of the heart, which will produce good and holy living. They have got a religion of feeling, which does not reform their lives, or make them pure and holy in conduct. They have feeling enough, but little or no knowledge of God with it. They believe in God, but they don't know him, nor what he requires of them; consequently they cannot obey him. They have no positive, confident knowledge of his character and commands; nor will they until they can read, study, mark, and inwardly digest, the letter he has sent them from heaven.

We may talk about others not needing to know how to read the word of God in order to be guided by it; but let us ask ourselves if we should be likely to be guided by it if we could not read it ourselves, but had to depend upon others to read it to us? I have no confidence in getting this people to believe and fully confide in the Bible, without at least persuading and helping them to learn to read it.

Who would not teach this people to read the Bible? Where is there a heart with a due appreciation of God's word that would not teach a poor colored man, woman or child to read the letter which God has sent them? If there was one sin in slavery greater than all others, it was the preventing this people to learn to read God's precious Word. O the condemnation of the men who have hindered this people from knowing the will of God by making his word a dead letter to them. How could I stand in the judgment with this charge against me?

Our first work here, then, is to make this people believe that they are wretched and perishing, because they are destitute of the knowledge of the Bible; and that they must have this knowledge, and live as the word of God directs, or they cannot be saved; and that their religion, without a knowledge of and obedience to this Word, is a sham, and will not stand the test in the day of Christ, now at the doors. Having convinced them of this, then any and all parts of that Word can be presented to them, and they will necessarily receive it, and live by it, and in accordance with it. Such are my convictions of duty, and of the true course here to pursue.

I. I. Leslie.

Memphis, Tenn., Apr. 4th, 1866.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

Bro. Grant:—In connection with Bro A. E. Babcock, of Jonesville, Mich., we commenced a series of meetings near Delta, O., on the evening of March 1st, and, blessed be God, a shower of good cheer fell upon us as the meetings continued, and increased our interest. One year ago I was invited there by our dear Bro. and Sister Watkins, who are christians of the genuine stamp. I preached eleven discourses to a crowded house, and at the last meeting I took an expression of the congregation, touching what they had been hearing, and about two-thirds of the audience arose, expressing themselves favorably disposed. Four put on Christ in baptism. No more meetings were held till the month of May, when, a conference was called, a good attendance was secured, and a good meeting enjoyed. One put on Christ in baptism.

Then in the month of August, we enjoyed another meeting of the same kind, but more interesting, as five were buried in baptism into the death of Christ, and some twenty covenanted to walk together in church relation, taking the Holy Scriptures as their only rule of faith and practice; Brn. Fox and Watkins being appointed Elders, to take the oversight of the body. A weekly meeting was established and sustained through to our present meeting, when five more stood ready for baptism at the commencement of the meeting, and on Saturday we had the pleasure of immersing them into Christ. The meeting increased in interest from first to last.

On Wednesday, after the first baptismal scene, we once more repaired to the water, and had the satisfaction of planting ten more dear souls into the death of Christ, and raising them to a new life in Christ, with the ever blessed hope of eternal life and immortality in the kingdom of God, or world to come.

On Friday afternoon, we called a meeting for the purpose of prayer and conference, and to give all who wished the privilege to unite with the body of Christ. We enjoyed a heavenly feast. We requested all, who desired to walk in church relation, to take a seat by themselves, when sixteen came forward, after which I addressed them for fifteen or twenty minutes on the importance of faithfulness to God and his truth, under all circumstances, ever manifesting the spirit of Jesus in all the relations of life. They were then requested to join hands, when Bro. Babcock extended to Bro. Wesley Watkins the right hand of fellowship, making appropriate remarks, and extending to them the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice.

As soon as he had finished, the church commenced singing one of the songs of Zion, when all the body proceeded to the head of the class, and one after another extended to each the right hand of fellowship, and for ten or fifteen minutes, what rejoicing, what gratitude, what sympathy, what love, what greetings, what tears; almost all eyes were filled with a flood of tears. Our souls were truly knit together in love. We felt in our hearts that we were being sealed and registered for the kingdom of God. Oh, may this dear people maintain their present position, growing in faith, hope, zeal, and favor with God and man, till the Master bids them welcome to the marriage supper of the Lamb. God speed them in the good cause.

On Saturday morning, I left the meeting in the hands of Jesus and those of Bro. Babcock, for my appointments five and six miles west of Toledo, with the expectation that five or six more would put on Christ in baptism on Lord's day, or before the meetings closed.

Yours in hope, A. N. Seymour.

Hillsdale, Mich.

From Bro. J. T. Dixon.

Bro. Grant:—I feel it duty, for the information of the church, and to provoke others to similar good works, to notice the labors of Sr. L. R. Otis, in this part of "Little Rhody," as I know about them. She has been preaching almost constantly for the last three months in places where our preaching brethren have never been. Baptists of different kinds (first and seventh day) have invited her into their places of worship, in chapels and halls, and her faithful ministrations have been much blessed. Clark's hall has been crowded with attentive listeners; and in that vicinity, under her labors, faithfully assisted by Eld. J. Northup and Sr. Ellen Crumb, a precious revival has followed. Bro. Northup has baptized some thirty, and many of the backsliden have returned to Father's house.

Bro. Northup has held a series of meetings here at Rocky Brook with good results. Some backsliders were reclaimed, two were baptized, and some others professed to have found peace in Christ. I wish I could report a far better state of the cause here, and christian union, but to stir up the churches, I must say that the Sabbath school in R. B. is decidedly a success. I was much pleased this morning in noticing so large an attendance,—nearly one hundred, including two female and one male adult Bible classes, with interested teachers. The singing was delightful, nearly all the little children participating. The Superintendent, Eld. N. R. Gould, told me that fifty of the Young Pilgrims, and fifty Child's Temperance Advocates were taken, and they need more papers.

I write this about schools to stir up the churches, which I find in my travels criminally negligent in these things. Bro. S. P. Clark, and a few brethren and sisters, have an interesting school in the summer. They will soon commence, and will try to increase the circulation of the Pilgrim and "Christian." I drew their attention to these things last Sunday, when I was with them. It is some eight miles from Rocky Brook.

I would speak somewhat of my labors, as some wish to hear; but I forbear. I would simply say, I am trying to do my duty, and not be a religious loafer, to curse the church. Sr. Otis knows nothing of this communication. I would like to speak more in detail of her labors, but don't believe in burdening our paper week after week with accounts of my labors. J. T. DIXON.

From Bro. J. C. Wheeler.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to say, through your benevolent paper, my three weeks' visit to Lawrence, Mass., was one of interest to me, and I trust to many others. I found part of the church in working order; others cold in things of God, but had the pleasure (through the help of God) of hearing the most of them confess to Christ. I must say, the church in Lawrence is the best working church I have ever become acquainted with. The real labor is there, living faith is there, that will take no denial. Bro. Geo. and Joseph Churchill have borne the burden in the heat of the day, and delighted so to do. They are whole-hearted in the cause. Of late God has been blessing them by bringing in other men of talent. May the Lord send many more, is my prayer and desire.

The kindness received from those children will never be erased from my memory while time shall last. In every time of need God is sure to remember his people, for which I feel to thank his name. The last week of my stay I had the pleasure of seeing a number of the brethren in the ministry, which I enjoyed very much.

I would just say, in conclusion, to those of the church of Christ who are scattered abroad, the elder Brother is about to return. He has been long absent from the rest of the family, but not forgotten by his bride. May God help us to appreciate the nearness of his coming. The signs speak it now. There is no mistaking. Brethren, watch, lest you be found sleeping.

I would say to my ministering brethren, be faithful, and not seek your ease, but the peace of others. Our work is about accomplished. Let us work while the day lasts.

QUESTION:—What shall we answer when we come to the judgment? Have we done all we could? Have we tried to be great? or have we tried to be good? How is it with us? Brethren, are we doing what we can? If so, never cease doing. Let every weight that hinders us from running be cut off, so we shall not get weary, but run with patience the race, and win the crown. May we be examples to the flock; not like a sign-board—point, but never go. God says, feed my sheep and lambs.

My prayer is that I may not only preach to others, but practise what I preach, or it will not avail anything. I mean, by the help of God, to be real good. J. C. WHEELER.

Carthage, Me.

From Bro. O. D. Gibson.

BRO. GRANT:—It being now some time since the readers of the Crisis have heard from me, I will give some account of my wanderings up and down, trying to seek a bride for the Master. Having been for some three or four years mostly confined in the vicinity of home, I felt last fall that I could endure it no longer; that I must go into a more extended field of labor. I therefore made a push in that direction, which caused the sacrifice of considerable of this world; but I thereby, thank God, purchased my liberty, and have ever since felt free from shackles. Having, for some years, an anxiety to visit the west, I started last Dec. for Ill., to spend the winter in that field, according to previous arrangement made with Bro. D. S. Clark, at Wilbraham campmeeting.

Having seen a request from Bro. John Chambers, of Chambersburg, O., for some one to come there and preach the word, I concluded to take that in my course, as I went out. It is situated in the south-east corner of the State, in Gallia Co., on the bank of the Ohio river, ten miles south from Gallipolis, the county seat. This is an entirely new field; there never having been a living preacher in all that section of country before. Bro. C. had got a few of his neighbors interested, by reading his paper and tracts; so that there were a few ready to hear this "new doctrine," as it was termed. I stayed there and in the vicinity about seven weeks, and gave them some forty-seven discourses, in five meeting houses and two school houses, within the circle of six or seven miles. I had full and attentive congregations; and that too when the weather and traveling were very bad. I had the privilege of preaching to three Campbellite, and four Methodist preachers, including the presiding Elder of the district. There was a good deal of opposition, as is most always the case; but, thank God, his truth has not yet lost its saving power. Quite a little company embraced the truth of the soon coming and kingdom of our Lord, and its kindred truths, of "life and death." They are in an isolated place, and need help. Is there not some one who can go occasionally and feed these lambs? Is there not some one who can reach them without great cost? as they are mostly poor in this world; yet they will do what they can.

Here is a large field of labor for some self-sacrificing person. There are large and thriving towns on both sides of this noble river, for three or four hundred miles up from Cincinnati; and, strange to say, I was the first one to proclaim these grand truths to the people of that region. Where is there a missionary for this field? I think this a better field to occupy than further south. Here our funds can be spent more advantageously in a direct application of the truth, than to be frittered away in teaching men their A. B. C.'s, before the can know whether we preach them the truth or not.

I took my leave of the friends in O., and arrived in Rutland, Ill., Jan. 26th, and spent about two weeks in this vicinity; after which, until Mar. 20th, I spent in Amboy, Lee Co., Ill., in a protracted effort with Bro. D. S. Clark, and the church in that place. The effort was blest to their reviving, and the adding to their numbers of a few who, we trust, may be saved. I am about moving my family to that place, to preach for them one half the time the ensuing year, and in the vicinity as God may open the way. Your Bro., waiting for the blessed hope, O. D. GIBSON.

From Bro. A. Dewey.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been taking the Crisis awhile on trial, and can truly say that I have been highly entertained, instructed, and I think benefited, by reading and meditating upon the many different, interesting, and important subjects with which its pages have been filled from week to week; and though belonging to a church (Christian or Disciple) that recognizes no name not known in the Bible as belonging to the followers of Christ, yet I will say that I have become thoroughly convinced that the immortal-soul theory, and the God-dishonoring doctrine of eternal misery, had their origin somewhere outside the word of God. I do not feel at liberty (of conscience) to order the Crisis discontinued, and therefore renew my subscription. Your Bro. in Christ, ADDISON DEWEY.

Sullivan, Pa.

BRO. D. T. TAYLOR writes:—"The church in Massena, N. Y., holds on her way. I immersed three more Sunday, March 18th, making eighteen who have been immersed during the winter. The meetings are well attended, and very profitable. One of the most interesting features of the revival is the establishment of a young people's prayer meeting, held once a week, and variously attended by from twenty to forty of the dear souls, recently blessed, and by other serious minded persons,—all youth. Elder Levi Dudley was at M. for a week, holding and enjoying excellent meetings, at which I also attended. The old veteran was delighted with the special prayer meeting I have above mentioned. I trust that church will remain a united, loving, and holy people, till Jesus comes."

Married.

In Kennebunkport, April 19th, 1866, by Eld. W. H. Mitchell, ALBERT O. HUFF and JANE D. HOBBS, both of Kennebunkport.

Obituaries.

PERKINS. Died in Malden, Mass., April 6th, 1866, of consumption, Bro. Charles H. Perkins, aged thirty-four years and thirty days.

Bro. Perkins embraced the Savior and made profession of his faith in him in early life, and connected himself with the Baptists; but on hearing the Second Adventists, he embraced their faith, and was ordained at Wilbraham Campmeeting. He labored a number of years in preaching the word, but his voice became so weak he gave up preaching, but lived a holy life; and often said, after reading the Crisis, he wished he was able to preach. He loved the work, and the people of God.

He was very patient in his last sickness. His wife often would ask him how he felt. He would say he was calmly trusting in the Lord. And when she told him the doctor said he could not live more than two or three days, he appeared very happy, and said, "The Lord's will be done. Praise, praise the Lord," and asked the blessing of God to rest upon his wife and little daughter. He died as he desired to, by falling asleep and never waking. His wife tried to arouse him, but he said, "Let me go, I shall awake in the morning." She asked what morning? He said, "In the morning of the resurrection."

The funeral services were held at the house, by Eld. D. W. Faunce, of the Baptist church.

RICE. Died in Hillsburgh, N. S., March 24th, 1866, my dear brother, Joseph C. Rice, aged thirty years.

Bro. Joseph was a devoted christian, and a kind and affectionate brother. Thus in a few short weeks have we been called to part with our dear father and our kind brother; but the hope that the Life-giver will soon come to raise his sleeping saints from the gloomy grave, is a solace to our aching hearts; while we feel the assurance our dear father and brother will come again from the land of the enemy. Then we hope to meet him in the paradise of God, never more to be parted by the cruel enemy death. O blissful hope! Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord. Farewell, brother Joseph, till Jesus shall come.

ASAPH RICE.

HAMBLEN. Died in Clifton, Wis., April 8th, 1865, after a protracted illness of nearly a year, Oscar S. Hamblen, son of Allen and Mary Hamblen, aged nineteen years.

And on the 8th of March, 1866, after a sickness of only twenty hours, his youngest sister, Esther M., wife of Ellsworth D. Child, aged twenty-two years.

The deceased gave evidence some time before they were taken from us, that they had passed "from death unto life"; and while we mourn their loss for a season, yet we mourn not as those without hope, for we feel that in God's own good time, we shall meet again to part no more for ever.

C. D. C.

RECKORD. Died in Carthage, Me., April 12th, 1866, Sister Mary Reckord, aged twenty-five years.

She fell asleep sweetly in the arms of Jesus, with the blessed hope of being awakened soon to enjoy the society of loved ones again in the immortal state. May God comfort the mourning ones.

Dear sister, sleep, and take thy rest,
For sorrow here did fill thy breast,
But now your sorrows all are o'er,
God grant we meet on that bless'd shore.

J. C. WHEELER.

LIBBY. Died in Concord, N. H., April 11th, 1866, Mary P., wife of Charles Libby, aged twenty-two years.

Also, April 7th, an infant.

Discourse suitable for the occasion by Bro. J. W. Brown, from Rom. 13: 9.

Thus in less than one short week our young brother's family ties are all sundered by that cruel monster death. Thank God, he will soon have to give up all the faithful ones. We are glad our brother sorrows not as those that have no hope. It is also comforting to him to know all is well with her; and it is "well with the child." This sad affliction falls heavily on our young brother.

J. T. KIMBALL.

SARGENT. Died in Nashua, N. H., April 1st, Bro. Dana Sargent, aged sixty-five years.

He had been a believer in the coming of Christ since its first proclamation. He fell asleep with the assurance that he should soon rise to die no more.

Bro. H. L. Hastings attended the funeral. Every one seemed gratified with the comforting address.

F. A. W. C.

ELKINS. Died in Fisherville, N. H., April 15th, 1866, Mrs. Mary B. Elkins, aged ninety-one years and six months.

The subject of this notice embraced the christian religion at an early age. She was an exemplary christian. Her funeral services were performed by the pastor of the Baptist church and were well adapted to comfort the afflicted.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool April 12th, Queenstown 13th.

The Times Paris correspondent says Marshal Neil, who commands one of the greatest French military divisions, had interviews with the Emperor in Paris. It is inferred that if a war breaks out between Prussia and Austria, a corps of observation would be found on the Rhine, Marshal Neil commanding. Neil was sent to Turin just before the last Italian war commenced.

AUSTRIA AND PRUSSIA.

The Prussian reply to the Austrian note created extremely unfavorable impressions at Vienna. Austria reiterates her demand in the note of the 31st ult., and her hope that Prussia will explain the meaning of warlike preparations.

The Italian Ambassador at Berlin in a dispatch to Florence describes war as inevitable. Italy is preparing in the event of a war to attack Austria in Venetia.

An extraordinary sitting of the Federal Diet had taken place. Prussia proposes a convocation of the German Parliament with universal suffrage and direct elections for the purpose of confirming the "Bund."

Liverpool April 14th, Queenstown 15th.

Austria and Prussia affairs continue in undiminished uncertainty, causing great depression in funds and commerce generally. The Times of the 12th in its city article, says: "The only fact before the public is that all proceedings between Austria and Prussia are from day to day identical with those which have usually preceded every modern war between powerful nations."

Constantinople advices say that an army of 6000 men was watching the Christian provinces of Turkey, and would enter the principalities if any disturbance arise.

Alluding to the panic on the Paris Bourse the Paris correspondent of the London Times says: "One of the disquieting rumors was that the relations of the French and United States governments were such as to justify the very worst fears. All, of course, on account of Mexico."

The same writer says that hopes of peace in Germany were rapidly disappearing, and he insinuates that the semblance of neutrality by France few believe to be sincere.

Southampton, 15th ult.

The stowing away of the new Atlantic cable in the tanks on Board the Great Eastern commenced on the 14th. The laying of the cable commences in July.

The news from Germany is less threatening. Vienna intelligence says the state of affairs continues very serious.

An attempt has been made to assassinate the Czar of Russia, but the bullet missed its aim.

DOMESTIC.

CHOLERA IN NEW YORK.—The New York correspondent of the Boston Journal writes under date of April 24th:—

"Disguise it as we may, this great scourge is among us. The lower bay is full of it, and it will not be long before it will break out in the pestilential quarters in New York.

THE PAPAL ARMY has been recruited so that it now reaches the number of 12,000. Among the new levies are a considerable number of young men from good families in France and Belgium who serve for the sake of their religion, and consider the cause a sort of holy crusade. A second battalion is to be formed from the elite of the new volunteers. No officer is appointed to command who does not subscribe heartily to the faith.—Boston Journal.

THE POPE ROBBED.—Somebody has stolen the autograph letters addressed by foreign sovereigns to the Pope, who kept them in a drawer. Among them were letters by Louis Napoleon, which compromised that imperial gentleman, and which the Pope, it is said, intended eventually to publish. Perhaps such a suspicion led to the robbery.

THE IMAGINATION AND THE CHOLERA.—The New Albany (Ind.) Ledger has an account of an individual who had doubtless been reading about the cholera, who presented himself before a physician the other day expressing apprehensions lest he should have it. In a few hours he was attacked with every symptom of the disease, and the next morning was almost hopelessly ill, having passed through the various stages of the disease. It is a plain case of probable death from morbid imagination.

THE FENIAN "HEAD CENTRE."—"Head Centre" Stephens is thus described by the Paris Opinione Nationale:

"He is of middle height and of distinguished manners. He wears a long, fair beard, and with long hair of a somewhat darker hue, and his features, though delicately formed, indicate energy. His forehead shows uncommon intelligence, and a firmness of will made more remarkable by his prominent eyebrows. His eyes though keen and sparkling, have something of the softness of the north, and testify to the sharpness of the intellect, rendered enthusiastic at the idea of Irish emancipation. In a word, everything in the physiognomy and appearance of Mr. Stephens proves the man who devotes himself to generous ideas, and who does not shrink from the responsibility of carrying them out."

A CLERICAL DEMAND.—A singular incident has just taken place at Neufchatel, in Switzerland. At the death of a merchant of that city, on the credit side of his books the name of "God" was found to be inscribed for a considerable sum. No one knew of such a creditor, and on investigation evidence was obtained that deceased, who was a man of great piety, had opened an account to the Father of all, and entered to it each year a share of his profits. The clergy have claimed the sum, on the ground that they represent God upon earth, while their demand is opposed by the authorities of the canton. The affair will probably be brought before the tribunals.

New York, April 24. A Washington dispatch says official advices received from Commodore Rogers state that he, in conjunction with the British admiral, have protested against the bombardment of Valparaiso by the Spanish fleet, and that ample time will be given for the removal of neutral property and the women and children. In case of refusal they will resist the bombardment with force. The Commodore has the double turreted monitor Monadnock and five other ships of war with him.

ITEMS.

☞ A wide awake minister, who found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before be had fairly commenced, suddenly stopped and exclaimed: "Brethren, this isn't fair; it isn't giving a man half a chance. Wait till I get along a piece, and then if I ain't worth listening to, go to sleep; but don't go before I get commenced; give a man a chance."

☞ A phenomenon was lately observed at Tournay, France. A post-mortem examination of a young non-commissioned officer, who died in the military hospital, showed that all the internal organs were reversed—the heart was on the right side and the liver on the left, etc.

☞ Smuggling is so extensively practiced on the Russio-Prussian frontier that it has been calculated the loss of revenue, in a district covering about one-third of the whole frontier, amounted in 1860 to 11,410,000 troubles and in 1861 to 10,490,000 roubles.

☞ It appears from the reports of the physicians who have had the cholera cases in New York harbor in charge, that the ravages of that disease have nearly ceased.

☞ Mail routes are being rapidly reopened throughout all parts of Florida.

European news to the 4th inst. states that serious Fenian riots prevailed in Bradford, England, in which the Queen was denounced, and the English residents had to lock themselves indoors for safety. Several arrests were made.

☞ There have been six hundred balls in New York this winter, the cost of which is estimated at seven million dollars.

☞ The Great Eastern is to commence laying the Atlantic Cable next June.

☞ In May, interest to the amount of $22,000,000 in gold will be due from the government.

☞ A disease, similar to the cholera among men, is raging among the poultry in the vicinity of St. Louis.

☞ The highest inhabited place on the globe is at Ancomars, Peru, which is 16,000 feet above the sea.

☞ When I see a young man neglecting the house of God, or riding upon the Sabbath for pleasure, or spending sacred time in reading tales of fiction, I wish most earnestly I could beg him to heed the words of the wise man: "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death."

☞ A cross husband and father at the head of the table makes the best dinner unpalatable and indigestible.

Notices.

Notice.

Preaching brethren wishing to come to Concord, N. H. (Angelos Hall), will please correspond with T. H. Ford, A. H. Saltmarsh, or J. T. Kimball.

We take this opportunity to inform the preaching brethren and those interested, that we intend, by the help of the Lord, to have a free meeting,—free for all that love and serve Jesus,—making christian character the only test of fellowship. We wish it distinctly understood that we make no point of doctrine the test. We hope this will satisfy all that we have no hobby horse to ride. If you do not believe it, come and see. So we will say to all those preaching the gospel of the kingdom, Come over and help us. We will try and do you good. We hope and pray that we may be the means, in the hands of the Lord, of doing some little good. We will try to love and fellowship all that love the Lord Jesus Christ.

T. H. FORD,
For the Brethren, A. H. SALTMARSH,
J. T. KIMBALL.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held in Woodstock, N. H., commencing June 7th, Thursday, P. M., and hold over the following Lord's day. Brs. Couch, Ross, and others are expected to be present to preach the word of life. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer, that God may give us the victory through Christ, and that great good may be accomplished in his name.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the New York State Christian Conference will be held at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, June 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. As churches can only be represented by delegates, let delegates be appointed by every church. Let there be a good representation at this meeting. Arrangements of trains, etc., will be advertised in due time. For the Board, C. B. TURNER.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. WM. SHELDON.

Notice of the Iowa Miss. Tent.

Those in the West who wish Tent meetings will please make arrangements without delay. There is to be a Tent meeting in Butler and Floyd Co., Iowa, and I am to visit Minn. I can be engaged by the different kinds of Adventists who need Tent meetings till the tent is paid for, whether I preach much or not. Address Elder PETER S. DETO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N.Y. CLINTON COLGROVE, Bap. Minister.

Notice.

I would say to those that have desired my labors, and to others who may desire them, that I expect to be able to comply with their requests as the Lord may direct. My address will be for the present, Sandisfield, Mass. GEO. L. TEPLE.

Notice.

Eld C. Goodrich has changed his residence in East Boston. He now resides at No. 69 Marion Street. Will correspondents please direct their letters to No. 69 Marion Street, East Boston, Mass?

Notice.

Brethren writing to me will please bear in mind that I have removed to 392 Broome Street, New York City. J. K. BELLOWS.

Notice.

Preaching brethren desiring to preach to the church in Yalesville, Conn., will correspond with Geo. A. Marble, that there may be no conflicting appointments. GEO. A. MARBLE.

THE MILLENNIUM!

TO BE PUBLISHED IN PARTS, BY

Dr. John T. Walsh.

Formerly Professor of Anatomy and Physiology in the Eclectic Medical College of Penn., and Author of "The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment," "What shall I do to be Saved, etc.

The Author will put to Press the first part of a work on the above subject so soon as a sufficient number of subscribers are obtained to justify its publication. The subject has engaged the attention of the writer for more than twenty years, and the work now to be offered to the public is the result of a patient, careful, and thorough investigation of the whole subject. The following items will give a pretty full idea of the contents of the book:

1. A Millennium the Faith of Christendom. 2. Different views with reference to it. 3. Will the Second Advent of Christ be Pre-Millennial? 4. The question argued and answered. 5. The conversion of the world. 6. The Conversion of the Jews. 7. Israel's Future. 8. The Apostasy. 9. God's judgments upon the nations. 10. The Battle of Armageddon. 11. The coming of Christ. 12. The resurrection of the righteous dead, and the change of the living saints. 13. The dispensation of the fullness of times. 14. The times of the Gentiles. 15. The fullness of the Gentiles. 16. The Politics of the nations fail. 17. The problem of man's capability of self-government demonstrated a failure. 18. Jerusalem to be the metropolis of the world. 19. Christ the Supreme Ruler, and the saints raised from the dead associated with him in the administration of the affairs of his kingdom. 20. The saints, now glorified, will sustain the same relation to the millennial age that the angels have done to past ages. 21. The day of judgment. 22. The end of the Millennium. 23. The final conflict between good and evil. 24. The resurrection of the wicked and their final disposition. 25. Christ delivers up the kingdom to the Father, and God is all in all.

These are soul-stirring themes, and in their discussion many new thoughts will be presented. The work will be worthy of the perusal of all classes, and it should be prayerfully read by all who profess the religion of Christ.

We cannot now state the price of the entire book, but presume it will not exceed $2.

Editors giving this prospectus one insertion, and calling attention to it, will receive a copy of the work as soon as issued. We request all who desire a copy to send in their names immediately, with the money.

The work will be published in parts, suitable for binding when the work is completed.

Address DR. J. T. WALSH, 540 Lexington, St., Baltimore, Md.

The Christian.

The third number of this periodical, a paper about the size of the Crisis, has been sent out to the subscribers. It contains, "A workman that needeth not to be ashamed,"—the substance of a sermon preached at the ordination of Dr. Daniel A. Jones, Jan. 29th, 1861; "A thousand guineas"; "Why don't you shout?" "You can't pray now"; "One single verse"; "Seeking Jesus";—also Poetry, "The brazen serpent," "Invitation," "My Father, let me live," with music;—all by H. L. Hastings. Also, "Infidel testimony to the truth of the Bible," by Dr. Keith, (continued); "God's way of peace," by Dr. H. Bonar; "Two stories in one, or the young deliverer and the patriarch's blessing"; "Thomas Hownham, or the miser's gift"; and other selected matters. "Reading for the sailor," and "Can't kill God," by E. A. A.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER has the following stories by E. A. A., with pictures: "I went to pray," "The two Bibles," "The two bird's nests," etc.

It also contains a full catalogue of twenty-five different new tracts, one hundred thousand copies of which have been printed for "The Scriptural Tract Repository" during the month of April.

Price of the Christian for a volume of twelve numbers, 60 cts. single; ten copies to one address for $5.00. Ten copies for free distribution in mission Sunday schools and elsewhere, $4.00. To the British Provinces 60 cts. per copy; ten copies for $6.00, post paid. To Great Britain 84 cts. per copy, or 3s. 6d. sterling, to be paid to M. A. F. PORTER, at WM. YAPP'S, 70 Welbank St., Cavendish Square, London.

To preachers, missionaries, teachers, and the poor, with or WITHOUT PRICE, as they please.

Single numbers for distribution, $3 per 100; post paid, $4 per 100; and at the same rates for larger or smaller quantities. Specimens sent free to any address when ordered.

Only a few copies of No. 1 remain. Those wishing complete setts must order soon. When No. 1 is exhausted, the tracts it contained will be forwarded instead of the paper. Address all orders to H. L. HASTINGS, Scriptural Tract Repository, 19 Lindall Street, Boston.

P. S.—No. 4 is nearly ready for issue.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON.
J. G. Hook .... Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, May 6th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M. WM. C. THURMAN.

Oceanport, N. J. .... May 6th. MILES GRANT.

EAST BOSTON.
C. Goodrich .... Sunday, May 6th

Plymouth, Mass. .... Sunday, May 6th
Carver .... Sunday, May 13th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Woodstock, N. H. .... Sunday, May 13th
East Landaff, N. H. .... Sunday, May 20th
A. W. SIBLEY.

Warner, (Schoodac school-house) .... Sunday, May 13th
Waterloo, (school-house), Tuesday evening, 7 o'clock, May 15th.
Danbury, (Knowlton school-house), Lord's day, May 20th.
East Canaan .... Lord's day, May 27th
North Sutton, (at Bro. I. Andrews), Tuesday evening, May 29th. B. F. MANNING.

CONCORD, N. H., (ANGELOS HALL.)
J. Pinkham .... Sunday, May 6th
A. Simpson .... Sunday, May 13th
J. G. Smith .... Sunday, May 20th
H. Pratt .... Sundays, May 27th and June 3d

Wrightsville, Ct. .... Sunday, May 13th
South Windsor, Ct. .... Friday evening, May 18th and over Sunday, the 20th.
Hope to see a large gathering of the friends at these meetings. Will Bro. R. J. Whitehead arrange so as to be with me at South Windsor? C. GOODRICH.

LEE, N. H.
C. S. Emerson .... Sunday, May 6th
H. M. Bryant .... Sunday, May 13th

Pittsfield, N. H. .... Sunday, May 13th
Worcester, Mass. .... May 20th and 27th
J. COUCH.

Alton Corner, N. H. .... Sunday, May 6th
J. H. F. VARNEY.

West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y. .... Sunday, May 6th
East Springwater, N. Y., 10½ A. M., Sunday, May 13th
Tabor's Corners, 4 P. M. .... Sunday, May 13th
Conesus, (Webster school-house), 10½ A. M., May 20th
Conesus Center, 4 P. M. .... Sunday, May 20th
Seneca Falls .... Sunday, May 27th
Annual Conference .... June 3d
Dansville .... June 10th
Bristol and Honeoye .... June 17th
P. BURR.

Newhampton, N. H., (at Pike's) .... Sunday, May 13th
P. S. RANSOM.
J. KNOWLTON.

Pittsfield, N. H., (communion) .... Sunday, May 6th
London Ridge, N. H. .... Sunday, May 13th
Concord, (Angelos Hall) .... Sunday, May 20th
J. G. SMITH.

Bristol, Ct. .... Sunday, May 6th
DR. A. DECKER.

Newhampton, N. H., (at the Veasey school-house), Sunday, May 6th. A. SIMPSON.

Pittsfield, (Town Hall) .... Sunday, May 13th
JOSEPH T. LANGLEY.

Brimfield, Mass. .... Sunday, May 6th
Holliston, Mass. .... Sunday, May 13th
West Abington, Mass. .... Sunday, May 20th
WM. H. FISHER.

BARNES' HALL, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
John G. Hook .... Sundays, May 20th and 27th

Stafford, Ct., (Free Church) .... Sunday, May 6th
Goshen, Mass. .... Sunday, May 13th
Albany, N. Y. .... Sunday, May 20th
H. PRATT.

Walbridge, (communion day) .... Sunday, May 6th
Chapin District .... May 13th
Square Pond .... May 20th
Settleo .... May 27th
Springfield .... June 3d
A. M. HIGGINS.

Newfield, Ct .... Sunday, May 6th
W. N. PILE.

Kennebunkport, Me .... Sunday, May 6th
RUFUS WENDELL.

WEST FALMOUTH, ME.
C. Goud .... Sunday, May 6th
L. C. Wellcome .... Sunday, May 20th
R. R. York .... Sunday, May 27th

Yarmouth, Me. .... Sunday, May 6th
L. C. WELLCOME.

Worcester, Mass. .... May 6th and 13th
H. MUNGER.

New Boston, N. H., (at Bro. Frederick Dodge's house), Tuesday evening, May 8th.
North Barrington, (where Bro. Preston may appoint), Sunday, May 13th.
Gorie Village, (at Bro. D. Varney's house), Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, May 14th, 16th, 17th, 18th.
Alton Corner .... Sunday, May 20th
J. PINKHAM.

CONCORD, N. H.
John Couch .... Sunday, May 6th
Geo. W. Brown, from Elliot, Me .... Sunday, May 13th
Miles Grant .... Sunday, May 20th
Charles Ramsey .... Sunday, May 27th
Timothy Cole .... June 3d and 10th

Concord N. H., (corner of Centre and Green streets) Sunday, May 13th.
Warner, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 15th and 16th.
Bradford, (Pond meeting-house), Thursday and Friday evenings, May 17th and 18th.
Canaan .... Sunday, May 20th
GEO. W. BROWN, of Portsmouth, N. H.

[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request. Brethren will please bear in mind that there are two George W. Browns, and this is not the other one. H. MUNGER.

and longer if duty requires.
Schoodac (school-house) .... Sunday, May 6th
C. W. SARGENT.

Bradford, N. H., (Pond meeting-house) .... May 6th
WM. WALKER, 2d.

River Point, R. I. .... Sunday, May 6th
J. T. DIXON.

Belgrade (meeting-house) .... May 13th
Rome (Town House) .... May 20th
H. B. SEVEY.

Raccoonborough .... Saturday eve, May 5th and over the Lord's day.
Exeter, N. H. .... Lord's day, May 13th
A. ROSS.

Abington, Ct. .... May 6th
Danielsonville, Ct. .... May 13th
Bristol, Ct .... May 20th
Hartford, Ct .... May 27th
If any in the vicinity of Bristol or Hartford desire evening appointments while I am in Western Connecticut, write me at Danielsonville, Ct.
H. P. CARPENTER.

Cheshire, Ct .... Sundays, May 6th and 13th
CHAS. B. PIPER.

RICHMOND, R. I., (CLARK'S HALL.)
M. R. Phetteplace .... Sunday, May 13th
Augustus Durfee .... Sunday, May 27th

South Windsor, Ct. .... May 5th and over Sunday.
Agawam, Mass. .... May 13th
GEO. A. STREETER.

Warner, N. H., Sunday, May 13th, at the school-house in Bro. Hamphill's District, about one mile from Waterloo school-house. SIMEON HOYT.

Pleasant Valley .... Sunday, May 6th
Yalesville, Ct. .... Sunday, May 13th
Bristol, Ct. .... Sunday, May 20th
Cheshire Street, Ct. .... Sunday, May 27th
S. WOODRUFF.

PLEASANT VALLEY, CT.
Seth Woodruff .... May 6th
R. Williams .... May 20th
Lovely Street, Ct. .... May 13th
WM. J. RIPLEY.

East Farnham, (Ball school-house), Friday, 4 P. M., May 11th.
Stukeley, (near Lewis Brown's), Saturday, 4 P. M., May 12th.
At the Sargeant school-house, 10½ A. M., Sabbath, May 13th.
At the Lake, a quarterly meeting, commencing on Saturday, at 2 P. M., May 19th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Let all interested attend.
C. P. DOW.

EAST BOWDOINHAM.
R. R. York .... Sunday, May 6th
H. D. Reed .... Sunday, May 20th

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house, with Bro. H D Reed), Sunday, May 13th. R. R. YORK.

Winslow [illegible] .... May 6th
[illegible] .... May 13th
[illegible]

Manchester .... Friday evening, May 4th
East Canaan, N. H., (baptism) .... Lord's day, May 6th
Manchester .... Lord's day, May 13th
C. C. BROWN.

New Haven, (at Bro. Wm. [illegible] may appoint), Sunday, May 13th.
Redfield Square, N. Y. .... May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburg, N. Y. .... May 22d and 23d
Copenhagen, N. Y. .... May 24th
C. H. WILLIAMS.

Springfield, Mass., (Barnes' Block), Lord's days, May 6th and 13th, and through the week intervening.
SAMUEL CURRY.

Parsonsfield, (where Bro. Moulton may appoint), May 6th.
Moultonborough .... May 13th
T. W. PIPER.

New Haven, Ct. .... May 6th
Hartford, Ct. .... May 13th
New Haven, Ct. .... May 20th
New Britain, Ct. .... May 27th
New Haven, Ct. .... June 3d
Hartford, Ct. .... June 10th
Warehouse Point .... June 17th
J. S. WHITE.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) .... May 6th
Rochester, N. H., (McDuffee District, where Bro. Smith may appoint) .... Sunday, April 15th
JOSEPH PINKHAM.

Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) .... May 6th
Levant, (Emmerson's Mills) .... May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's) .... May 27th
I. K. LOMBARD.

Salem, Mass. .... Sunday, May 6th
L. BOUTELL.

Pomfret, Vt., (as J. Hastings may appoint), May 6th
L. C. GLAZIER.

Montreal, C. E. .... May 6th
G. W. STETSON.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. Harley, Jun.,—the Earnest Christian is published by B. T. Roberts, in Rochester, N. Y., No. 62 Buffalo street. The Witness is published by J. Inglis, New York, 26 Cooper Institute. They are both excellent papers.

J. Downing—Have no mission reference Bibles.

H. J. Hale—The price will be the same for the present.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 552. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—I W Aiken 582, L E Gillespie 580, W Sterling 570, S L Julian 574, W Merrell 568, J Hiestand 571, D Newton 576.

$1.25 each—W Perkins 570, O Lyon 533, A Richardson 571, S W Bartlett 571, J Scoville 576, L A Speed 576, R Burgess 532, W Johnson 574, W Colbath 600, E Bachelder 530, F Schellinger 605, B Woodford 621, N Cowger 560, M A Park 573, S Potter 579, D Tripp 558, C Andrews 570, G F Chapman 527, N M Dowd 576, O A Hartford 573, B Hill 576, P Howard 598, H J Hopkins 613, W Cook 573.

$2.00 each—H F Massey 510, R Town 519, J Birch 553, S A Prescott 582, A F Williams 530, J C Bastian 590, J Greety 555, A Hamblin 568, A Field 572, M S Berson 577, H Deyo 531, I M Small 585.

$2.50 each—M G Pickering 603, C Tillottson 580, A P Moore 587, C C Pickering 533, L A Bartlett 602, S A Quick 602, P Sweny 593, M G Page 603, M Keller 602, S B Collins 602, S B Ensign 553, G G Lovenguod 564, G W Bush 591, T Fry 603, T Orton 602, M G Bush 602, W O. Smith 602, E. Hamblin 602, S. E. Pattey 602, S. P. Sweny 602, O Lewis 602, J F Horton 602, W H Mitchell 572, H W Button 587, D J Smith 601, H Pratt 624, D. Q. Kent 596, J Murray 602, J D Nichols 552, A E Colton 563, H Smith 604.

$3.00 each—F D Field 540, C Sawyer 610, G R Hodgdon 536, A Ruse 572, W Leakey 527, J M Gove 590, A. Pierce 597, S Reynolds 606.

Various sums—J. B. Torgus $1.50, 605; S. Holland $1.40, 582; B. W. Tibbetts 70c, 550; W. Colley $5.00, 552; J. Barnheimer 62c, 564; G W Barnes $5.00, 617; J Buckingham 50c, 531; S. A. Pierson 50c, 561; J Basle 25c, 577; B. L. White 53c, 553; M. Parsons 50c (what P. O.?); J. Beverley $1.25, 597; J. B. Wetherell $1.50, 577; D M Kellogg 50c, 536; I Andrew (Bradford, N. H.) $1.50, 550.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

G. L. Williams 50c, J Scoville 25c, J W Purdy 30c, M Parsons 50c, O. Lewis 50c, K W Macomber $2.00, D F Small $1.25, W Watson $5.00.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.—G L Williams, J Scoville, L. Beecraft, E. A Prescott, F Camen, I C Wellcome, J W Purdy, D F Small, W Watson, H Pratt.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M D W, M M Weaver, S Fowler, J Elkins, A E Smith, W Sheldon, I Leslie, J N Berry, H J Hale, L D Grosvenor, L Boutell, F Curtis, S Lane.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Dr. I. I. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
H. K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francelia F. Curtis—149 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
F. H. Burbeck, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
Anna E. Smith—Missionary among the colored people. After May 1st, No. 492 Second Avenue, between 27th and 28th streets, New York City.
H. P. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
J. B. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Oagley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—392 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cosmos, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
Wm. A. Penn—Pulaski, Oswego Co., N. Y.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. P. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—[illegible] Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 57 Cedar St.
L. O. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. I. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.

FOR SALE, BAGSTER'S BIBLE.

ENGLISH VERSION.

Interleaved Greek New Testament, half morocco, gilt. Price postpaid, $4.25. Only one copy.
Address E. P. WOODWARD, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1.	I don't believe in Religion	12 pp., 3c.
2.	Did the World make itself?	16 pp., 4c.
3.	Is God Everybody, and Everybody God?	16 pp., 4c.
4.	Have we any need of the Bible?	24 pp., 4c.
5.	Who wrote the New Testament?	16 pp., 4c.
6.	Is the Gospel Fact or Fable?	16 pp., 4c.
7.	Can we believe Christ and his Apostles?	16 pp., 4c.
8.	Prophecy	32 pp., 5c.
9.	Moses and the Prophets	28 pp., 5c.
10.	Infidelity among the Stars	28 pp., 5c.
11.	Daylight before Sunrise	28 pp., 5c.
12.	Telescopic Views of Scripture	32 pp., 5c.
13.	Science, or Faith?	32 pp., 4c.

For the SET, (making 304 pp.) .... 40c., postpaid.

FOR A GREATER QUANTITY.

By mail, 500 pp. .... $1.00.
By express, 1000 pp. .... $1.00.
Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1.	Home	16 pp.
2.	Life Insurance	16 pp.
3.	Lost! Lost!	8 pp.
4.	Brother, shall we meet?	8 pp.
5.	About God (for children)	4 pp.
6.	Worth Knowing	4 pp.
7.	Peace in Christ	4 pp.
8.	Now	4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent postpaid.
One set (64 pp.) .... $[illegible]
[illegible]

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 50c.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 9c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsay, D. D. 20c.

THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c; by mail, 15c.

THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 5c.

THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $5.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.

CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.

ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 28c.

RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.

GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.

IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c; by mail, 8c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. [illegible]; by mail, 4c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c; by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS: A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.86.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 29c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid; $2.00 per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 19c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 8c. on every three copies.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 80c; by mail, 88c.

HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.

COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS of a Bruised Reed. By F. H. Chamberlain. By mail, 17c.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.

NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 3c. single; by mail, 5c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 30c; $3.00 per dozen. Paper 20c, $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of the "cities of the nations." By Wm. Shepherd. 10c., postpaid; 85c. a dozen.

THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Jolliffe. 5c; by mail, 7c.

OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the American Advent Mission Society, its Constitution, Officers, Addresses, etc. 5c.

EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a Slave for forty-three years. 25c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 15c. per dozen; $1.00 per hundred. Single 1c., postpaid.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank, and Titles, their Ministry and Works of Office in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. [illegible]

better state of the cause here, and christian union, but to stir up the churches, I must say that the Sabbath school in R. B. is decidedly a success. I was much pleased this morning in noticing so large an attendance,—nearly one hundred, including two female and one male adult Bible classes, with interested teachers. The singing was delightful, nearly all the little children participating. The Superintendent, Eld. N. R. Gould, told me that fifty of the Young Pilgrims, and fifty Child's Temperance Advocates were taken, and they need more papers.

I write this about schools to stir up the churches, which I find in my travels criminally negligent in these things. Bro. S. P. Clark, and a few brethren and sisters, have an interesting school in the summer. They will soon commence, and will try to increase the circulation of the Pilgrim and "Christian." I drew their attention to these things last Sunday, when I was with them. It is some eight miles from Rocky Brook.

I would speak somewhat of my labors, as some wish to hear; but I forbear. I would simply say, I am trying to do my duty, and not be a religious loafer, to curse the church. Sr Otis knows nothing of this communication. I would like to speak more in detail of her labors, but don't believe in burdening our paper week after week with accounts of my labors. J. T. Dixon.

From Bro. J. C. Wheeler.

Bro. Grant:—Permit me to say, through your benevolent paper, my three weeks' visit to Lawrence, Mass., was one of interest to me, and I trust to many others. I found part of the church in working order; others cold in things of God, but had the pleasure (through the help of God) of hearing the most of them confess to Christ. I must say, the church in Lawrence is the best working church I have ever become acquainted with. The real labor is there, living faith is there, that will take no denial. Brn. Geo. and Joseph Churchill have borne the burden in the heat of the day, and delighted so to do. They are whole-hearted in the cause. Of late God has been blessing them by bringing in other men of talent. May the Lord send many more, is my prayer and desire.

The kindness received from those children will never be erased from my memory while time shall last. In every time of need God is sure to remember his people, for which I feel to thank his name. The last week of my stay I had the pleasure of seeing a number of the brethren in the ministry, which I enjoyed very much.

I would just say, in conclusion, to those of the church of Christ who are scattered abroad, the elder Brother is about to return. He has been long absent from the rest of the family, but not forgotten by his bride. May God help us to appreciate the nearness of his coming. The signs speak it now. There is no mistaking. Brethren, watch, lest you be found sleeping.

I would say to my ministering brethren, be faithful, and not seek your ease, but the peace of others. Our work is about accomplished. Let us work while the day lasts.

Question:—What shall we answer when we come to the judgment? Have we done all we could? Have we tried to be great? or have we tried to be good? How is it with us? Brethren, are we doing what we can? If so, never cease doing. Let every weight that hinders us from running be cut off, so we shall not get weary, but run with patience the race, and win the crown. May we be examples to the flock; not like a sign-board—point, but never go. God says, feed my sheep and lambs.

My prayer is that I may not only preach to others, but practise what I preach, or it will not avail anything. I mean, by the help of God, to be real good. J. C. Wheeler.

Carthage, Me.

From Bro. O. D. Gibson.

Bro. Grant:—It being now some time since the readers of the Crisis have heard from me, I will give some account of my wanderings up and down, trying to seek a bride for the Master. Having been for some three or four years mostly confined in the vicinity of home, I felt last fall that I could endure it no longer; that I must go into a more extended field of labor. I therefore made a push in that direction, which caused the sacrifice of considerable of this world; but I thereby, thank God, purchased my liberty, and have ever since felt free from shackles. Having, for some years, an anxiety to visit the west, I started last Dec. for Ill., to spend the winter in that field, according to previous arrangement made with Bro. D. S. Clark, at Wilbraham campmeeting.

Having seen a request from Bro. John Chambers, of Chambersburg, O., for some one to come there and preach the word, I concluded to take that in my course, as I went out. It is situated in the south-east corner of the State, in Gallia Co., on the bank of the Ohio river, ten miles south from Gallipolis, the county seat. This is an entirely new field; there never having been a living preacher in all that section of country before. Bro C. had got a few of his neighbors interested, by reading his paper and tracts; so that there were a few ready to hear this "new doctrine," as it was termed. I stayed there and in the vicinity about seven weeks, and gave them some forty-seven discourses, in five meeting houses and two school houses, within the circle of six or seven miles. I had full and attentive congregations; and that too when the weather and traveling were very bad. I had the privilege of preaching to three Campbellite, and four Methodist preachers, including the presiding Elder of the district. There was a good deal of opposition, as is most always the case; but, thank God, his truth has not yet lost its saving power. Quite a little company embraced the truth of the soon coming and kingdom of our Lord, and its kindred truths, of "life and death." They are in an isolated place, and need help. Is there not some one who can go occasionally and feed these lambs? Is there not some one who can reach them without great cost? as they are mostly poor in this world; yet they will do what they can.

Here is a large field of labor for some self-sacrificing person. There are large and thriving towns on both sides of this noble river, for three or four hundred miles up from Cincinnati; and, strange to say, I was the first one to proclaim these grand truths to the people of that region. Where is there a missionary for this field? I think this a better field to occupy than further south. Here our funds can be spent more advantageously in a direct application of the truth, than to be frittered away in teaching men their A. B. C.'s, before they can know whether we preach them the truth or not.

I took my leave of the friends in O., and arrived in Rutland, Ill., Jan. 20th, and spent about two weeks in this vicinity; after which, until Mar. 20th, I spent in Amboy, Lee Co., Ill., in a protracted effort with Bro. D. S. Clark, and the church in that place. The effort was blest to their reviving, and the adding to their numbers of a few who, we trust, may be saved. I am about moving my family to that place, to preach for them one half the time the ensuing year, and in the vicinity as God may open the way. Your Bro., waiting for the blessed hope. O. D. Gibson.

From Bro. A. Dewey.

Bro. Grant:—I have been taking the Crisis awhile on trial, and can truly say that I have been highly entertained, instructed, and I think benefited, by reading and meditating upon the many different, interesting, and important subjects with which its pages have been filled from week to week; and though belonging to a church (Christian or Disciple) that recognizes no name not known in the Bible as belonging to the followers of Christ, yet I will say that I have become thoroughly convinced that the immortal-soul theory, and the God-dishonoring doctrine of eternal misery, had their origin somewhere outside the word of God. I do not feel at liberty (of conscience) to order the Crisis discontinued, and therefore renew my subscription. Your Bro. in Christ, Addison Dewey.

Sullivan, Pa.

Bro. D. T. Taylor writes:—"The church in Massena, N. Y., holds on her way. I immersed three more Sunday, March 18th, making eighteen who have been immersed during the winter. The meetings are well attended, and very profitable. One of the most interesting features of the revival is the establishment of a young people's prayer meeting, held once a week, and variously attended by from twenty to forty of the dear souls, recently blessed, and by other serious minded persons,—all youth. Elder Levi Dudley was at M. for a week, holding and enjoying excellent meetings, at which I also attended. The old veteran was delighted with the special prayer meeting I have above mentioned. I trust that church will remain a united, loving, and holy people, till Jesus comes."

Married.

In Kennebunkport, April 19th, 1866, by Eld. W. H. Mitchell, Albert G. Huff and Jane D. Hobbs, both of Kennebunkport.

Obituaries.

Perkins. Died in Malden, Mass., April 6th, 1866, of consumption, Bro. Charles H. Perkins, aged thirty-four years and thirty days.

Bro. Perkins embraced the Savior and made profession of his faith in him in early life, and connected himself with the Baptists; but on hearing the Second Adventists, he embraced their faith, and was ordained at Wilbraham Campmeeting. He labored a number of years in preaching the word, but his voice became so weak he gave up preaching, but lived a holy life; and often said, after reading the Crisis, he wished he was able to preach. He loved the work, and the people of God.

He was very patient in his last sickness. His wife often would ask him how he felt. He would say he was calmly trusting in the Lord. And when she told him the doctor said he could not live more than two or three days, he appeared very happy, and said, "The Lord's will be done. Praise, praise the Lord;" and asked the blessing of God to rest upon his wife and little daughter. He died as he desired to, by falling asleep and never waking. His wife tried to arouse him, but he said, "Let me go, I shall awake in the morning." She asked what morning? He said, "In the morning of the resurrection."

The funeral services were held at the house, by Eld. D. W. Faunce, of the Baptist church.

Rice. Died in Hillsburgh, N. S., March 24th, 1866, my dear brother, Joseph C. Rice, aged thirty years.

Bro. Joseph was a devoted christian, and a kind and affectionate brother. Thus in a few short weeks have we been called to part with our dear father and our kind brother; but the hope that the Life-giver will soon come to raise his sleeping saints from the gloomy grave, is a solace to our aching hearts; while we feel the assurance our dear father and brother will come again from the land of the enemy. Then we hope to meet him in the paradise of God, never more to be parted by the cruel enemy death. O blissful hope! Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord. Farewell, brother Joseph, till Jesus shall come. Asaph Rice.

Hamblen. Died in Clifton, Wis., April 8th, 1865, after a protracted illness of nearly a year, Oscar S. Hamblen, son of Allen and Mary Hamblen, aged nineteen years.

And on the 5th of March, 1866, after a sickness of only twenty hours, his youngest sister, Esther M., wife of Ellsworth D. Child, aged twenty-two years.

The deceased gave evidence some time before they were taken from us, that they had passed "from death unto life"; and while we mourn their loss for a season, yet we mourn not as those without hope, for we feel that in God's own good time, we shall meet again to part no more for ever. C. D. C.

Reckord. Died in Carthage, Me., April 12th, 1866, Sister Mary Reckord, aged twenty-five years.

She fell asleep sweetly in the arms of Jesus, with the blessed hope of being awakened soon to enjoy the society of loved ones again in the immortal state. May God comfort the mourning ones.

> Dear sister, sleep, and take thy rest,
> For sorrow here did fill thy breast;
> But now your sorrows all are o'er,
> God grant we meet on that bless'd shore.

J. C. Wheeler.

Libby. Died in Corcord, N. H., April 11th, 1866, Mary P., wife of Charles Libby, aged twenty-two years.

Also, April 7th, an infant.

Discourse suitable for the occasion by Bro. J. W. Brown, from Rom. 13: 9.

Thus in less than one short week our young brother's family ties are all sundered by that cruel monster death. Thank God, he will soon have to give up all the faithful ones. We are glad our brother sorrows not as those that have no hope. It is also comforting to him to know all is well with her; and it is "well with the child." This sad affliction falls heavily on our young brother. J. T. Kimball.

Sargent. Died in Nashua, N. H., April 1st, Bro. Dana Sargent, aged sixty-five years.

He had been a believer in the coming of Christ since its first proclamation. He fell asleep with the assurance that he should soon rise to die no more.

Bro. H. L. Hastings attended the funeral. Every one seemed gratified with the comforting address. F. A. W. C.

Elkins. Died in Fisherville, N. H., April 15th, 1866, Mrs. Mary B. Elkins, aged ninety-one years and six months.

The subject of this notice embraced the christian religion at an early age. She was an exemplary christian. Her funeral services were performed by the pastor of the Baptist church and were well adapted to comfort the afflicted.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool April 12th, Queenstown 13th.

The Times Paris correspondent says Marshal Neil, who commands one of the greatest French military divisions, had interviews with the Emperor in Paris. It is inferred that if a war breaks out between Prussia and Austria, a corps of observation would be found on the Rhine, Marshal Neil commanding. Neil was sent to Turin just before the last Italian war commenced.

AUSTRIA AND PRUSSIA.

The Prussian reply to the Austrian note created extremely unfavorable impressions at Vienna. Austria reiterates her demand in the note of the 31st ult., and her hope that Prussia will explain the meaning of warlike preparations.

The Italian Ambassador at Berlin in a dispatch to Florence describes war as inevitable. Italy is preparing in the event of a war to attack Austria in Venetia.

An extraordinary sitting of the Federal Diet had taken place. Prussia proposes a convocation of the German Parliament with universal suffrage and direct elections for the purpose of confirming the "Bund."

Liverpool April 14th, Queenstown 15th.

Austria and Prussia affairs continue in undiminished uncertainty, causing great depression in funds and commerce generally. The Times of the 12th in its city article, says: "The only fact before the public is that all proceedings between Austria and Prussia are from day to day identical with those which have usually preceded every modern war between powerful nations."

Constantinople advices say that an army of 6000 men was watching the Christian provinces of Turkey, and would enter the principalities if any disturbances arise.

Alluding to the panic on the Paris Bourse the Paris correspondent of the London Times says: "One of the disquieting rumors was that the relations of the French and United States governments were such as to justify the very worst fears. All, of course, on account of Mexico."

The same writer says that hopes of peace in Germany were rapidly disappearing, and he insinuates that the semblance of neutrality by France few believe to be sincere.

Southampton, 13th ult.

The stowing away of the new Atlantic cable in the tanks on Board the Great Eastern commenced on the 14th. The laying of the cable commences in July.

The news from Germany is less threatening. Vienna intelligence says the state of affairs continues very serious.

An attempt has been made to assassinate the Czar of Russia, but the bullet missed its aim.

DOMESTIC.

Cholera in New York.—The New York correspondent of the Boston Journal writes under date of April 24th:—

"Disguise it as we may, this great scourge is among us. The lower bay is full of it, and it will not be long before it will break out in the pestilential quarters in New York.

The Papal Army has been recruited so that it now reaches the number of 12,000. Among the new levies are a considerable number of young men from good families in France and Belgium who serve for the sake of their religion, and consider the cause a sort of holy crusade. A second battalion is to be formed from the elite of the new volunteers. No officer is appointed to command who does not subscribe heartily to the faith.—Boston Journal.

The Pope Robbed.—Somebody has stolen the autograph letters addressed by foreign sovereigns to the Pope, who kept them in a drawer. Among them were letters by Louis Napoleon, which compromised that imperial gentleman, and which the Pope, it is said, intended eventually to publish. Perhaps such a suspicion led to the robbery.

The Imagination and the Cholera.—The New Albany (Ind.) Ledger has an account of an individual who had doubtless been reading about the cholera, who presented himself before a physician the other day expressing apprehensions lest he should have it. In a few hours he was attacked with every symptom of the disease, and the next morning was almost hopelessly ill, having passed through the various stages of the disease. It is a plain case of probable death from morbid imagination.

The Fenian "Head Centre."—"Head Centre" Stephens is thus described by the Paris Opinione Nationale:

"He is of middle height and of distinguished manners. He wears a long, fair beard, and with long hair of a somewhat darker hue, and his features, though delicately formed, indicate energy. His forehead shows uncommon intelligence, and a firmness of will made more remarkable by his prominent eyebrows. His eyes though keen and sparkling, have something of the softness of the north, and testify to the sharpness of the intellect, rendered enthusiastic at the idea of Irish emancipation. In a word, everything in the physiognomy and appearance of Mr. Stephens proves the man who devotes himself to generous ideas, and who does not shrink from the responsibility of carrying them out."

A Clerical Demand.—A singular incident has just taken place at Neufchatel, in Switzerland. At the death of a merchant of that city, on the credit side of his books the name of "God" was found to be inscribed for a considerable sum. No one knew of such a creditor, and on investigation evidence was obtained that deceased, who was a man of great piety, had opened an account to the Father of all, and entered to it each year a share of his profits. The clergy have claimed the sum, on the ground that they represent God upon earth, while their demand is opposed by the authorities of the canton. The affair will probably be brought before the tribunals.

New York, April 24. A Washington dispatch says official advices received from Commodore Rogers state that he, in conjunction with the British admiral, have protested against the bombardment of Valparaiso by the Spanish fleet, and that ample time will be given for the removal of neutral property and the women and children. In case of refusal they will resist the bombardment with force. The Commodore has the double turreted monitor Monadnock and five other ships of war with him.

ITEMS.

☞ A wide awake minister, who found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before he had fairly commenced, suddenly stopped and exclaimed: "Brethren, this isn't fair; it isn't giving a man half a chance. Wait till I get along a piece, and then if I ain't worth listening to, go to sleep; but don't go before I get commenced; give a man a chance."

☞ A phenomenon was lately observed at Tournay, France. A post-mortem examination of a young non-commissioned officer, who died in the military hospital, showed that all the internal organs were reversed—the heart was on the right side and the liver on the left, etc.

☞ Smuggling is so extensively practiced on the Russio-Prussian frontier that it has been calculated the loss of revenue, in a district covering about one-third of the whole frontier, amounted in 1860 to 11,410,000 roubles and in 1861 to 10,490,000 roubles.

☞ It appears from the reports of the physicians who have had the cholera cases in New York harbor in charge, that the ravages of that disease have nearly ceased.

☞ Mail routes are being rapidly reopened throughout all parts of Florida.

European news to the 4th inst. states that serious Fenian riots prevailed in Bradford, England, in which the Queen was denounced, and the English residents had to lock themselves indoors for safety. Several arrests were made.

☞ There have been six hundred balls in New York this winter, the cost of which is estimated at seven million dollars.

☞ The Great Eastern is to commence laying the Atlantic Cable next June.

☞ In May, interest to the amount of $22,000,000 in gold will be due from the government.

☞ A disease, similar to the cholera among men, is raging among the poultry in the vicinity of St. Louis.

☞ The highest inhabited place on the globe is at Ancomaro, Peru, which is 16,000 feet above the sea.

☞ When I see a young man neglecting the house of God, or riding upon the Sabbath for pleasure, or spending sacred time in reading tales of fiction, I wish most earnestly I could beg him to heed the words of the wise man: "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death."

☞ A cross husband and father at the head of the table makes the best dinner unpalatable and indigestible.

Notices.

Notice.

Preaching brethren wishing to come to Concord, N. H. (Angelos Hall), will please correspond with T. H. Ford, A. H. Saltmarsh, or J. T. Kimball.

We take this opportunity to inform the preaching brethren and those interested, that we intend, by the help of the Lord, to have a free meeting,—free for all that love and serve Jesus,—making christian character the only test of fellowship. We wish it distinctly understood that we make no point of doctrine the test. We hope this will satisfy all that we have no hobby horse to ride. If you do not believe it, come and see. So we will say to all those preaching the gospel of the kingdom, Come over and help us. We will try and do you good. We hope and pray that we may be the means, in the hands of the Lord, of doing some little good. We will try to love and fellowship all that love the Lord Jesus Christ.

T. H. Ford,
For the Brethren, A. H. Saltmarsh,
J. T. Kimball.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held in Woodstock, N. H., commencing June 7th, Thursday, P. M., and hold over the following Lord's day. Brn. Couch, Ross, and others are expected to be present to preach the word of life. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer, that God may give us the victory through Christ, and that great good may be accomplished in his name.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the New York State Christian Conference will be held at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, June 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. As churches can only be represented by delegates, let delegates be appointed by every church. Let there be a good representation at this meeting. Arrangements of trains, etc., will be advertised in due time. For the Board, C. B. Turner.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. Wm. Sheldon.

Notice of the Iowa Miss. Tent.

Those in the West who wish Tent meetings will please make arrangements without delay. There is to be a Tent meeting in Butler and Floyd Co., Iowa, and I am to visit Minn. I can be engaged by the different kinds of Adventists who need Tent meetings till the tent is paid for, whether I preach much or not. Address Elder Peter S. Deyo, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N.Y. Clinton Colegrove, Bap. Minister.

Notice.

I would say to those that have desired my labors, and to others who may desire them, that I expect to be able to comply with their requests as the Lord may direct. My address will be for the present, Sandisfield, Mass. Geo. L. Teeple.

Notice.

Eld C. Goodrich has changed his residence in East Boston. He now resides at No. 69 Marion Street. Will correspondents please direct their letters to No. 69 Marion Street, East Boston, Mass?

Notice.

Brethren writing to me will please bear in mind that I have removed to 392 Broome Street, New York City. J. K. Bellows.

Notice.

Preaching brethren desiring to preach to the church in Yalesville, Conn., will correspond with Geo. A. Marble, that there may be no conflicting appointments. Geo. A. Marble.

THE MILLENNIUM!

TO BE PUBLISHED IN PARTS, BY

Dr. John T. Walsh.

Formerly Professor of Anatomy and Physiology in the Eclectic Medical College of Penn., and Author of "The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment," "What shall I do to be Saved, etc.

The Author will put to Press the first part of a work on the above subject so soon as a sufficient number of subscribers are obtained to justify its publication. The subject has engaged the attention of the writer for more than twenty years, and the work now to be offered to the public is the result of a patient, careful, and thorough investigation of the whole subject. The following items will give a pretty full idea of the contents of the book:

1. A Millennium the Faith of Christendom. 2. Different views with reference to it. 3. Will the Second Advent of Christ be Pre-Millennial? 4. The question argued and answered. 5. The conversion of the world. 6. The Conversion of the Jews. 7. Israel's Future. 8. The Apostasy. 9. God's judgments upon the nations. 10. The Battle of Armageddon. 11. The coming of Christ. 12. The resurrection of the righteous dead, and the change of the living saints. 13. The dispensation of the fullness of times. 14. The times of the Gentiles. 15. The fullness of the Gentiles. 16. The Politics of the nations fail. 17. The problem of man's capability of self-government demonstrated a failure. 18. Jerusalem to be the metropolis of the world. 19. Christ the Supreme Ruler, and the saints raised from the dead associated with him in the administration of the affairs of his kingdom. 20. The saints, now glorified, will sustain the same relation to the millennial age that the angels have done to past ages. 21. The day of judgment. 22. The end of the Millennium. 23. The final conflict between good and evil. 24. The resurrection of the wicked and their final disposition. 25. Christ delivers up the kingdom to the Father, and God is all in all.

These are soul-stirring themes, and in their discussion many new thoughts will be presented. The work will be worthy of the perusal of all classes, and it should be prayerfully read by all who profess the religion of Christ.

We cannot now state the price of the entire book, but presume it will not exceed $2.

Editors giving this prospectus one insertion, and calling attention to it, will receive a copy of the work as soon as issued. We request all who desire a copy to send in their names immediately, with the money.

The work will be published in parts, suitable for binding when the work is completed.

Address Dr. J. T. Walsh, 540 Lexington, St., Baltimore, Md.

The Christian.

The third number of this periodical, a paper about the size of the Crisis, has been sent out to the subscribers. It contains, "A workman that needeth not to be ashamed,"—the substance of a sermon preached at the ordination of Dr. Daniel A. Jones, Jan. 29th, 1861; "A thousand guineas"; "Why don't you shout?" "You can't pray now"; "One single verse"; "Seeking Jesus";—also Poetry, "The brazen serpent," "Invitation," "My Father, let me live," with music;—all by H. L. Hastings. Also, "Infidel testimony to the truth of the Bible," by Dr. Keith, (continued); "God's way of peace," by Dr. H. Bonar; "Two stories in one, or the young deliverer and the patriarch's blessing"; "Thomas Hownham, or the miser's gift"; and other selected matters. "Reading for the sailor," and "Can't kill God," by E. A. A.

The Children's Corner has the following stories by E. A. A., with pictures: "I went to pray," "The two Bibles," "The two bird's nests," etc.

It also contains a full catalogue of twenty-five different new tracts, one hundred thousand copies of which have been printed for "The Scriptural Tract Repository" during the month of April.

Price of the Christian for a volume of twelve numbers, 60 cts. single; ten copies to one address for $5.00. Ten copies for free distribution in mission Sunday schools and elsewhere, $4.00. To the British Provinces 60 cts per copy; ten copies for $6.00, post paid. To Great Britain 84 cts. per copy, or 3s. 6d. sterling, to be paid to M. A. F. Porter, at Wm. Yapp's, 70 Welbank St., Cavendish Square, London.

To preachers, missionaries, teachers, and the poor, with or without price, as they please.

Single numbers for distribution, $3 per 100; post paid, $4 per 100; and at the same rates for larger or smaller quantities. Specimens sent free to any address when ordered.

Only a few copies of No. 1 remain. Those wishing complete setts must order soon. When No. 1 is exhausted, the tracts it contained will be forwarded instead of the paper. Address all orders to H. L. Hastings, Scriptural Tract Repository, 19 Lindall Street, Boston.

P. S. No. 4 is nearly ready for issue.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston.
J. G. Hook .... Sunday, March 11th and onward as the Lord directs.

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, May 6th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 and 7 P. M. Wm. C. Thurman.

Oceanport, N. J. .... May 6th. Miles Grant.

East Boston.
C. Goodrich .... Sunday, May 6th

Plymouth, Mass. .... Sunday, May 6th
Carver .... Sunday, May 13th
W. S. Campbell.

Woodstock, N. H. .... Sunday, May 13th
East Landaff, N. H. .... Sunday, May 20th
A. W. Sibley.

Warner, (Schoodoc school-house) .... Sunday, May 13th
Waterloo, (school-house), Tuesday evening, 7 o'clock, May 15th.
Danbury. (Knowlton school-house), Lord's day, May 20th.
East Canaan .... Lord's day, May 27th
North Sutton, (at Bro. I. Andrews), Tuesday evening, May 29th. B. P. Manning.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall.)
J. Pinkham .... Sunday, May 6th
A. Simpson .... Sunday, May 13th
J. G. Smith .... Sunday, May 20th
H. Pratt .... Sundays, May 27th and June 3d

Wrightville, Ct. .... Sunday, May 13th
South Windsor, Ct. .... Friday evening, May 18th and over Sunday, the 20th.
Hope to see a large gathering of the friends at these meetings. Will Bro. R. J. Whitehead arrange so as to be with me at South Windsor? C. Goodrich.

Lee, N. H.
C. S. Emerson .... Sunday, May 6th
H. M. Bryant .... Sunday, May 13th

Pittsfield, N. H. .... Sunday, May 13th
Worcester, Mass .... May 20th and 27th
J. Couch.

Alton Corner, N. H. .... Sunday, May 6th
J. H. P. Varney.

West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y. .... Sunday, May 6th
East Springwater, N. Y., 10½ A. M., Sunday, May 13th
Tabor's Corners, 4 P. M. .... Sunday, May 13th
Conesus, (Webster school-house), 10½ A. M., May 20th
Conesus Center, 4 P. M. .... Sunday, May 20th
Seneca Falls .... Sunday, May 27th
Annual Conference .... June 3d
Dansville .... June 10th
Bristol and Honeoye .... June 17th
P. Burr.

Newhampton, N. H., (at Pike's) ... Sunday, May 13th
F. S. Ranson.
J. Knowlton.

Pittsfield, N. H., (communion) .... Sunday, May 6th
London Ridge, N. H. .... Sunday, May 13th
Concord, (Angelos Hall) .... Sunday, May 20th
J. G. Smith.

Bristol, Ct. .... Sunday, May 6th
Dr. A. Decker.

Newhampton, N. H., (at the Veasey school-house), Sunday, May 6th. A. Simpson.

Pittsfield, (Town Hall) .... Sunday, May 13th
Joseph T. Langley.

Brimfield, Mass. .... Sunday, May 6th
Holliston, Mass .... Sunday, May 13th
West Abington, Mass .... Sunday, May 20th
Wm. H. Fisher.

Barnes' Hall, Springfield, Mass.
John G. Hook .... Sundays, May 20th and 27th

Stafford, Ct., (Free Church) .... Sunday, May 6th
Goshen, Mass .... Sunday, May 13th
Albany, N. Y. .... Sunday, May 20th
H. Pratt.

Walbridge, (communion day) .... Sunday, May 6th
Chapin District .... May 13th
Square Pond .... May 23d
Scitico .... May 27th
Springfield .... June 3d
A. M. Higgins.

Newfield, Ct. .... Sunday, May 6th
W. N. Pile.

Kennebunkport, Me .... Sunday, May 6th
Rufus Wendell.

West Falmouth, Me.
C. Goud .... Sunday, May 6th
I. C. Wellcome .... Sunday, May 20th
R. R. York .... Sunday, May 27th

Yarmouth, Me. .... Sunday, May 6th
I. C. Wellcome.

Worcester, Mass. .... May 6th and 13th
H. Munger.

New Boston, N. H., (at Bro. Frederick Dodge's house), Tuesday evening, May 8th.
North Barrington, (where Bro. Preston may appoint), Sunday, May 13th.
Gerie Village, (at Bro. D. Varney's house), Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, May 14th, 16th, 17th, 18th.
Alton Corner .... Sunday, May 20th
J. Pinkham.

Concord, N. H.
John Couch .... Sunday, May 6th
Geo. W. Brown, from Elliot, Me. .... Sunday, May 13th
Miles Grant .... Sunday, May 20th
Charles Ramsey .... Sunday, May 27th
Timothy Cole .... June 3d and 10th

Concord N. H., (corner of Centre and Green streets) Sunday, May 13th.
Warner, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 15th and 16th.
Bradford, (Pond meeting-house), Thursday and Friday evenings, May 17th and 18th.
Canaan .... Sunday, May 20th
Geo. W. Brown, of Portsmouth, N. H.

[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request. Brethren will please bear in mind that there are two George W. Browns, and this is not the other one. H. Munger.

and longer if duty requires.
Schoodac (school-house) .... Sunday, May 6th
C. W. Sargent.

Bradford, N. H., (Pond meeting-house) .... May 6th
Wm. Walker, 2d.

River Point, R. I. .... Sunday, May 6th
J. T. Dixon.

Belgrade (meeting-house) .... May 13th
Rome (Town House) .... May 20th
H. B. Sevey.

Baconsborough .... Saturday eve, May 5th and over the Lord's day.
Exeter, N. H. .... Lord's day, May 13th
A. Ross.

Abington, Ct. .... May 6th
Danielsonville, Ct. .... May 13th
Bristol, Ct .... May 20th
Hartford, Ct .... May 27th
If any in the vicinity of Bristol or Hartford desire evening appointments while I am in Western Connecticut, write me at Danielsonville, Ct.
H. P. Carpenter.

Cheshire, Ct .... Sundays, May 6th and 13th
Chas. E. Piper.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall.)
M. R. Phetteplace .... Sunday, May 13th
Augustus Durfee .... Sunday, May 27th

South Windsor, Ct. .... May 5th and over Sunday.
Agawam, Mass. .... May 12th
Geo. A. Streeter.

Warner, N. H., Sunday, May 13th, at the school-house in Bro. Hamphill's District, about one mile from Waterloo school-house. Simeon Hoyt.

Pleasant Valley .... Sunday, May 6th
Yalesville, Ct. .... Sunday, May 13th
Bristol, Ct. .... Sunday, May 20th
Cheshire Street, Ct. .... Sunday, May 27th
S. Woodruff.

Pleasant Valley, Ct.
Seth Woodruff .... May 6th
R. Williams .... May 20th
Lovely Street, Ct. .... May 13th
Wm. J. Ripley.

East Farnham, (Bell school-house), Friday, 4 P. M., May 11th.
Stukeley, (near Lewis Brown's), Saturday, 4 P. M., May 12th.
At the Sargeant school-house, 10½ A. M., Sabbath, May 13th.
At the Lake, a quarterly meeting, commencing on Saturday, at 2 P. M., May 19th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Let all interested attend.
C. P. Dow.

East Bowdoinham.
R. R. York .... Sunday, May 6th
H. D. Reed .... Sunday, May 20th

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house, with Bro. H. D. Reed), Sunday, May 13th. R. R. York.

Winsted .... [illegible] May 6th
[illegible] .... May 13th
R. Wilkinson.

Manchester .... Friday evening, May 4th
East Canaan, N. H., (baptism) .... Lord's day, May 6th
Manchester .... Lord's day, May 13th
G. C. Stevens.

[illegible], (at Bro. Wm. [illegible] appoint), Sunday, May 6th.
Rochdale Square, N. Y. .... May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburgh, N. Y. .... May 23d and 25d
Copenhagen, N. Y. .... May 26th
G. H. Williams.

Springfield, Mass., (Barnes' Block), Lord's days, May 6th and 13th, and through the week intervening.
Samuel Curry.

Parsonsfield, (where Bro. Moulton may appoint), May 6th.
Moultonborough .... May 13th
T. W. Piper.

New Haven, Ct. .... May 6th
Hartford, Ct. .... May 13th
New Haven, Ct. .... May 20th
New Britain, Ct. .... May 27th
New Haven, Ct. .... June 3d
Hartford, Ct. .... June 10th
Warehouse Point .... June 17th
J. S. White.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall) .... May 6th
Rochester, N. H., (McDuffee District, where Bro. Smith may appoint) .... Sunday, April 15th
Joseph Pinkham.

Brewer, (as brethren may arrange) .... May 6th
Levant, (Emmerson's Mills) .... May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's) .... May 27th
I. K. Lombard.

Salem, Mass. .... Sunday, May 6th
L. Boutell.

Pomfret, Vt., (as J. Hetington may appoint), May 6th
L. C. Glazier.

Montreal, C. E. .... May 6th
G. W. Stetson.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. Harley, Jun., the Earnest Christian is published by B. T. Roberts, in Rochester, N. Y., No. 63 Buffalo street. The Witness is published by J. Inglis, New York, 20 Cooper Institute. They are both excellent papers.

J. Downing—Have no minion reference Bibles.

H. J. Hale—The price will be the same for the present.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 582. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each—I W Aiken 582, L E Gillespie 580, W Sterling 570, S L Julian 574, W Morrell 568, J Hierstand 571, D Newton 576.

$1.24 each—W Perkins 570, G Lyon 533, A Richardson 571, S W Bartlett 572, J Scoville 576, L A Speed 576, R Burgess 533, W Johnson 574, W Colbath 600, R Bookmiller 590, F Scheffimer 555, B Woodford 531, N Cowger 560, M A Park 573, S Potter 579, D Tripp 558, C Andrews 570, G F Chapman 557, N M Dowd 576, O A Hartford 573, B Hill 578, P Howard 596, H J Hopkins 613, W Cook 573.

$2.00 each—H P Massey 519, E Town 519, J Birch 555, E A Prescott 582, A P Williams 529, J C Bassion 596, J Orcott 555, A Hamblin 568, A Field 573, M S Berean 577, C H Deyo 531, I M Small 565.

$2.50 each—M G Pickering 603, C Tillotson 590, A P Moore 587, C C Pickering 553, L A Bartlett 607, S A Quick 603, P Sweet 595, M G Page 603, E Keller 602, S B Collins 602, S S Emans 583, G G Lavengood 584, G W Bush 601, T Fry 608, T Orton 601, M G Bush 602, W G. Smith 602, E. Hamblin 602, S. E. Pattey 601, S. P. Shwey 602, O Lewis 602, J P Horton 602, W H Mitchell 572, H W Button 587, D J Smith 601, H Pratt 634, D. Q. Kent 596, J. Murray 602, J D Nichols 532, A E Colton 563, H Smith 604.

$3.00 each—F D Field 540, C Sawyer 610, G R Hodgdon 536, A Russ 572, W Laskey 522, J M Gove 590, A. Pierce 507, S Reynolds 608.

Various sums—J. B. Torque $1.50, 605; S. Holland $1.40, 562; B. W. Tibbetts 70c, 550; W. Colley $1.00, 532; J. Barnheimer 62c, 564; G W Barnes $3.00, 617; J Buckingham 50c, 531; S. A. Pierson 50c, 561; J Searle 25c, 577; B. L. White 63c, 563; M. Parsons 50c (what P. O.?); J. Beverley $2.25, 597; J. B. Wetherell $1.50, 577, D M Kellogg 50c, 536; I Andrew (Bradford, N. H.) $1.00, 558.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

G. L. Williams 50c, J Scoville 25c, J W Pardy 30c, M Parsons 50c, O. Lewis 80c, E W Manchester $2.00, D F Small $2.25, W Watson $3.00.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.—G L Williams, J Scoville, L. Beecraft, E. A Prescott, F Camera, I C Wellcome, J W Purdy, D F Small, W Watson, H Pratt.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M. D. W., M M Weaver, S Fowler, J Elkins, A E Smith, W Sheldon, I Leslie, J N Berry, H J Hale, L D Grosvenor, L Boutell, F Curtis, S Lane.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Dr. I. I. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
H. K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francelia F. Curtis—169 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
F. H. Burbeck, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
Anna E. Smith—Missionary among the colored people. After May 1st, No. 492 Second Avenue, between 27th and 28th streets, New York City.
H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
J. R. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
John T. Ougley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—392 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Musser—Boston, Mass., Crisis Box.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
Wm. A. Fenn—Pulaski, Oswego Co., N. Y.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver.—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. F. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—[illegible] Falls, N. H.
H Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 67 Cedar St.
L. C. McKinstry—for a week, Boston, Mass.
C. L. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.

FOR SALE, BAGSTER'S BIBLE.

English Version.

Interleaved Greek New Testament, half morocco, gilt. Price postpaid, $4.25. Only one copy.

Address E. P. Woodward, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion .... 12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make itself? .... 16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God? .... 16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible? .... 24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament? .... 16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable? .... 16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles? .... 16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy .... 32 pp., 5c.
9. Moses and the Prophets .... 28 pp., 5c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars .... 32 pp., 5c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise .... 28 pp., 5c.
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture .... 32 pp., 5c.
13. Science, or Faith? .... 32 pp., 5c.

For the Set, (making 304 pp.) .... 40c. postpaid.

FOR A GREATER QUANTITY.

By mail, 800 pp. .... $1.00.
By express, 1000 pp. .... $1.00.

Address all orders to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home .... 16 pp.
2. Life Insurance .... 16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost! .... 8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet? .... 8 pp.
5. About God (for children) .... 8 pp.
6. Worth Knowing .... 8 pp.
7. Peace in Christ .... 8 pp.
8. Now .... 8 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent postpaid.

One set (64 pp.) .... [illegible]
1000 pp. .... [illegible]
1000 pp. (by express, not prepaid) .... [illegible]

Address all orders to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 60c.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. H. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions relative to His Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 15c; by mail, 20c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 9c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 11c; by mail, 12c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 11c; by mail, 12c.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 20c.

THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 15c; by mail, 18c.

THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 5c.

THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers; by express; $3.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.

CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. Clayton. 60c; by mail, 70c.

ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Lick. 5c; by mail, 20c.

RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 30c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.

GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.

IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Skepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 8c; by mail, 8c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 3c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 3c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 4c; by mail, 6c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 4c; by mail, 6c.

REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 5c; by mail, 7c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS: A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 10c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36. Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.35. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $3.00; by mail, $3.50.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. P. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 30c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; Its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid; $1.00 per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 18c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 3c. on every three copies.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 50c; by mail, 60c.

HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 25c. postpaid.

COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 18c.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS of a Bruised Reed. By F. H. Chamberlain. 8c; by mail, 12c.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc., etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.36. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.86. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.36.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.

NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 25c.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.

GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 5c. single; by mail, 6c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 10c. eight copies for $1.00.

BETHLEHEM; a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 30c; $3.00 per dozen. Paper 20c, $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

HAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line (in the) [illegible] of the [illegible]. By Wm. [illegible]. 30c. a dozen, postpaid.

THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Smith. 5c; by mail, 7c.

OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the Advent Christian [illegible], its Constitution, [illegible] Address, etc. 3c.

EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a Slave for forty-three years. 12c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS, or the Lost [illegible] .... [illegible]

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS [illegible]

LINES ON THE PRESENT AND FUTURE STATE OF THE CHURCH.

BY A WORKING MAN OF DERBY.

Wherever the true church may be
On earth, she is but one;
The marks at present are not seen
By which she may be known.

But still a church there does exist,
If hid from human view,
For God hath said it shall not fail,
Though there be but a few.

In Babylon she long hath been
Confined by crowds of men,
But is there not a secret voice
Which calls, "Come forth again."

Escape without her city walls,
Her plagues will quickly come
And all who are within her found,
Shall share her awful doom.

The church again shall be redeemed
From all proud Babel's ways,
And when her great Deliverer comes,
Then she will sing his praise.

But oh! the furnace will be hot
In which she will be cast,
To purge her from all earthly dross,
But long it will not last;

For He will keep his eye on her
While she is in the flame,
And when the dross is purged away,
Will bring her forth again.

Then she will sing that heavenly song
In which none else can join,
And oh! the music will be sweet,
For it will be divine.

In prospect of that happy day,
May I, O Lord, endure
That holy cross thou dost appoint,
Till I the crown ensure.

And when I leave this earthly scene,
My spirit then will be
For ever freed from Satan's power
Throughout eternity.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF MISSIONARY WORK.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—By the request of some who read the Crisis, I write my second report. To write all would be impossible, for it would make a large book. But there are many things which might be written, that would be interesting to many of you, had I the opportunity of writing; but my time is nearly all taken up in the field of laboring; and when I do write, it is always when I ought to be asleep, or else some rainy day. Again I hold back, because, as Sister Jennings remarked at one of our meetings, "it looks so much like boasting of what you do." But in our mission work here, we have to write our reports every month for those who employ us, so they may know what we are doing,—all the visits made, all meetings held, how many Bibles we distribute, Testaments, etc.

To meet the request of some of you, I shall write some of the proceedings of the past year, and do it as short as possible, and leave it with the wisdom of the editor whether he will put it in the paper or not. If he thinks it will glorify God and encourage the hearts of those who are interested in mission work, it is at his disposal; if he thinks otherwise, he must do as he thinks best; and I feel for one to thank God that we have that confidence in our editor to be willing to submit to his better judgment, feeling satisfied that he knows best what to put in and what to keep out. So I am always satisfied, whether my pieces are put in the paper or not. It is only from a sense of duty, and the love of the cause, and to encourage others, that you ever get a letter from me, either through the paper or otherwise.

First, then, I shall say nothing about persecution, for that my heavenly Father knoweth right well. Second. I need say nothing about my shortcomings, for they have been many; for my dear Father knows I am only flesh, and frail and weak at the best; but I trust through Jesus they will all be forgiven. Thank God for the provision that has been been made for our sins, either of omission or commission. Every day I live, I find something I do, or leave undone, that I need the blood of Jesus to pardon and blot out my sins. O blessed be God for the gift of his beloved Son. O that I could love him more and serve him better. With the great wickedness around me, and the Judge right at the door, I often fear I am not instant in season and out of season, as I ought to be. Lord help me to be more so, for Jesus' sake.

The first thing of interest which I will bring before you is my visits. I have made eighteen hundred and twenty-five visits and calls among the poor and neglected, in the courts and alleys and garrets and cellars, and in by-places of this wicked city. Three hundred and twelve of these have been in sick rooms. O what scenes of destitution and suffering I have seen in these places. The Lord and those who visit them only know. Some without food, some without fire, some without clothing, or any thing to cover their nakedness, and very many of them without a hope in Christ to console them in their afflictions; and I have never had a cent to relieve any of their wants, but our own pockets, till the Wilbraham campmeeting. It is hard to go into a house of suffering, and say, "Be ye clothed, be ye fed, be ye warmed," and have nothing to do it with. Hour after hour I have cried as I have walked the streets, because of the suffering of those I have visited; but could do but little except pray for them, and then run all about to hunt up the missionary of the district, without finding him; then call on the rich, and they would only say, you must get them a permit and send them to the almshouse, or to the home of the friendless, or some other place. We pay taxes to support these public institutions, and that is the place for them. Then we go away with our feelings hurt, and our hearts almost broken, and make them some gruel, and hunt up what we can find to feed those that are sick; and that is all we can do, saying nothing about clothing or fire.

Sometimes we go to some to assist us, and they tell us they are out of our district; or they are colored, or some excuse is always ready. So we go almost discouraged, almost ready to give up; and then we go at it again. I might mention several cases that I do believe died from starvation; and when we took them something to eat they were too weak to take it.

There was a woman who sent for us to come and pray with her, for she knew she must die, and she was not ready. She had the consumption. I could not go. Sr. Bolde went down town to see her; found she had lain there without care or nursing three days. She had had nothing to eat. Her husband was a wretch, living with another woman, and this true wife was left to wash and iron to support herself and one child, and pay her rent. She worked as long as she could, till she became so weak and prostrate she could work no longer; and then laid down to suffer and die. She had been in that condition some time, when her sister, who was living at service, heard of her whereabouts, went down with Sister B. and brought her up town, where she could do something for her. But the moving was more than she could bear. A doctor was called, but he said she was too far gone to do her any good. Sister B. came home, made her some soup, and took it to her; and oh, to see her eat that soup would melt the stoutest heart. She was earnestly seeking the Savior, but was so weak she could scarcely pray. We prayed with her; told her of the precious promise of God to those who called upon his name; and went to our homes. She lay prostrate in weakness one or two days. When she would revive, she would pray very earnestly. One night she asked for us to pray for her; but her sister told her we had gone home. She cried and prayed very loudly for a few minutes, fell back and said, Lord have mercy on my soul, and died. O what a book might be written of just such cases; but let this suffice.

Next in our mission work, we organized the Providence Mission here, December 14th, 1864. During a six weeks' meeting, day and night, forty souls were converted. At the close of this meeting I was sent to Philadelphia, to assist in starting Mission No. 2. I arrived there on the 5th, and commenced Sunday evening, Dec. 6th, and labored every night till the 20th, Sunday evening, finishing up my work, as usual, with a love-feast. Truly the Lord was with us at this meeting. Thirty-three souls were converted, and we left many crying for mercy. The cries of the mourners could be heard along the street, as their friends took them home. The work continued some time after I left. I think, if I remember right, there were some sixty souls converted in all. We had at that time two Bible readers there, supported by this mission. Then the number was increased to three, and now only one. But that one, Sister Helginson, is doing a good work. Bless the Lord that there are some women that can work in the vineyard of the Lord, as well as brethren. And now, as the Advent friends have taken hold of this work, may the Lord bless and encourage their hearts, and in the day of his coming, say well done good and faithful servants, enter into the joy of your Lord.

On my return from Philadelphia I started a two weeks' meeting in the Bethel M. E. church, at 37th street and Broadway. We had good meetings. Four souls were converted, and no doubt we should have had a revival, but they wanted the church to hold a donation for their preacher, where they had every thing to eat and drink, and every thing sung but hymns; and as I am opposed to all such things, I would have no more to do with the meeting. So there was no more of it.

Next I went to Hackensack, N. J., and took with me seven good workers, staid nine days, and the Lord gave us thirty-one souls for our hire. Then we returned home. In two weeks they sent for us again to come over and help them. I went on the 10th of February, and staid till the 14th. I took Bro. Wilkins with me. We had a glorious time. The devil got mad. There were ten converted, and we went home happy in the Lord. Went down again on the 26th, and organized a mission of forty-four members, called the Olive Branch Mission, No. 3. The Lord is blessing this mission. We have a most excellent Sabbath School there, of both children and adults; though opposition is strong, yet the Lord Jehovah is the strongest. Bless his name.

I have held three hundred and fifty-six religious meetings, preached one hundred and sixty sermons, given seventy addresses and exhortations, and have distributed myself, and those laboring with me (three of us), twenty-seven thousand, nine hundred and fifty tracts. Some of these were Advent tracts,—a good number were sent us by Bro. Hastings in the Spring.

I have distributed fifty-four Bibles, nineteen Testaments, fourteen Silent Comforters, to hang up in sick rooms, twenty-six religious books and pamphlets. Some of these books are lent about, and each book is read by many persons. Any of our friends who have books that they are done with, which treat on the Lord's coming and his kingdom, can have them put in use, and read over again and again, by sending them to me post paid, and these people will be glad to get them. And any person who has cast off clothing, in any shape or form, either for boys or girls, men or women, hats, caps, boots, or shoes, please remember my colored people in New York.

Your sister looking and waiting for Jesus,
ANNA E. SMITH.
No. 128 East 27th Street, New York City.

[This report has had an unexpected delay.—ED.]

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER VI.—The Marginal Readings.

Any one who opens a common Reference Bible may observe that, besides the references in the margin, there are also marginal readings. These were thought necessary, by King James' revisers, to explain some things that are not sufficiently made known in the text. They give the meaning of a proper name, or give the spelling of the original name without its definition; define a measure, or the weight and value of a coin; give the literal rendering of some word or phrase of the original; or present another translation of some word or phrase. In some instances, the translation placed in the margin is now found to be superior to that in the text. See, for example, Matt. 1: 20; 4: 12; 5: 29; 6: 1; 9: 16; 10: 10; 12: 14; John 16: 8. And for the better spelling of a proper name, see Matt. 10: 25; 12: 24; Heb. 4: 8.

In the Revised New Testament, the marginal reading is resorted to only when the information it conveys could not be embraced in the main text. When it is employed, it explains some term; gives a "various reading," of such authority as to be deemed worthy of attention; or, when the Greek word or phrase is ambiguous, as occasionally occurs, exhibits what is considered by the revisers the inferior rendering.

Thus the Syriac term "Raca," Matt. 5: 22, is explained in the margin, "a term of angry reproach;" "Bar-jonah," 16: 17, "Son of Jonah;" and "Maranatha," 1 Cor. 16: 22, "The Lord comes!" The Hebrew word "Hosanna" in Matt. 21: 9, "Save now!" The Greek name "Peter," Matt. 16: 18, "rock." And the term "underworld," Gr. hades, like the Heb. sheol, Matt. 11: 23, "the abode of the dead, represented (figuratively, as in the Old Testament) as underneath, in contrast with heaven above." See Phil. 2: 10; Rev. 5: 3, 13; [illegible].

"Various readings" are thus given: Matt. 2: 18,—"A voice was heard in Ramah, weeping," etc.; margin, "In some ancient copies; lamentation and weeping." 5: 11,—"Shall say all evil against you falsely;" margin, "Some ancient copies omit, falsely." 12: 22,—"He healed him, so that the blind and dumb both spoke and saw;" margin, The oldest copies omit, blind and both."

An alternative rendering is thus expressed: Matt. 5: 5,—"they shall inherit the earth;" margin, "Or, the land." Vs. 21, 33,—said to those of old;" margin, "Or, by those" 6: 27,—"add one cubit to his stature;" margin, "Or, to his age."

It is the object of the learned and able revisers, by the aid of a thoroughly revised text, and a sparing and judicious use of the margin, to place the English reader as nearly as possible on the vantage-ground of the Greek scholar; so that he may have the means of judging for himself what is the particular instruction, or truth, in any given passage, which, for his good, the great Author of revelation would impart to him.

C. W. WATERHOUSE.

For the World's Crisis.

RESPECTABLE SIN.

When you go to stand before God, my friends, it will not be your dress, or your house, or your titles, or your wealth; no, nor even your virtues, however much commended here, that will give you an entrance among the glorified. "Respectable sin" will not pass then and there as here. The honor, the nobility of it, is now gone by. The degrees, indeed, of sin are many, but the kind is one, and that a poor, dejected, emptied form of shame and sorrow. How appalling the thought to any one who is capable of thought, and not absolutely brutalized by his guilt.

Furthermore, as sin is sin everywhere and in all forms, the respectable and the irrespectable are the same in principle, and when the appearances are the same in criminality, the world of future retribution must of course be a world of strange companionships. We are expressly told, and it seems a matter of reason also to suppose, that guilty men will not be assorted by their tastes, but by their character and demerits. Death is the end and limit of mere conventionalities. The fictitious assortments of the earthly state never pass that limit; rank, caste, fashion, disgust, slander, fastidiousness, delicacy of sin,—these are able to draw their social lines no longer. Proximity is now held to the stern, impartial principle of inward demerit, that all may receive according to the deeds done in the body. This is the level of adjustment, and there appears to be no other. The standing of high priests, the Scribes and Pharisees, and of those who these many years persecuted the true church of God, calling them heretics, may be inverted now, as they may all take their rank together. And so also many of you, that are now pleasing yourselves in the dignity of your virtues, and honors of your social standing, may fall there into group and gradation with such as you ever look away from with profoundest distaste or revulsion.

The subject is painful. What will be the reward of the professed embassadors of Christ, who for paltry gold are countenancing contention? Oh, the remorse! I will not pursue it. I will only remind you that where the lines of justice lead, there you must yourselves follow; and if that just award of respectable sin yields you only the promise of a scale of companionship, from which your soul recoils with disgust, there is no wisdom for you but to weep and wail. Then at once draw yourselves to him who is purity and peace; repent and do thy first work, and eternal life is yours.

L. O. GAGE.
West Brattleboro', Vt.

THE PRESENT STATE OF AFFAIRS.

Under the above heading an interesting article appears in an English monthly, from which we extract the following:—ED.

"The treaty of extradition being revoked, all conspirators, whether Fenian or otherwise, will find from henceforth shelter in France, or in every French colony, such as Martinique—or even on board of a French ship. Not political conspirators only—for that was the case before—but criminals guilty of murder or incendiarism. We cannot but think that the American general has been sent to Paris with some reference to this revocation of the treaty. No doubt the American government may be free from blame as to Gen. Schofield's mission; but we know that there is a very strong war-party in America, quite willing to despatch a military agent to negociate with the French government at Paris, and probably quite strong enough to make good all their engagements hereafter. Gen. Schofield may probably be an agent of the war-party, if not of the American government itself.

Some conspiracy is brewing, we may almost feel certain. This is no libel or calumny directed against America. For the toleration in New York of an organized conspiracy against a friendly power—the sufferance more than granted to the Fenians—is in itself as criminal an act as a direct conspiracy. And this act has been undeniably brought home to the American government. And now we may add, that putting all things together, and comparing one thing with another, there seems to be mischief preparing against us on the other side of the Atlantic, and equally so in Paris! The Emperor is justified in a human sense, in doing all that lies in his power to break us down, for our conduct in the affair of Bernard was equal to an act of wilful murder—a capital felony—chargeable upon a nation! And there can be no doubt that the Fenians are more formidable than we foolishly imagine. Their numbers, their organization, their revenues—above all, their perseverance, are ominous of some well-concerted attack. It cannot be imagined that so vast a conspiracy can end in child's play. The conspirators are too much in earnest to be soon baffled or tired out; and as for the invasion of Ireland, it was only a military stratagem to divert our eyes from Canada, the real point of attack. Above all, and by far the most formidable element of Fenianism is this—that it is in close connexion with a powerful war-party in America, of which it may be supposed it is only the instrument; and if once the Fenians begin an invasion, it will be a miracle indeed if the American army do not follow within a month. The Fenians have also their two ablest men residing in Paris, to carry on communications with the French government, day after day, and conspiracy after conspiracy! Stop them you cannot—and, like the three witches on the Scottish heath, Fenianism, America and France, will prepare between them a charm of powerful trouble! It is this visible connexion of Fenianism with the French and American war-parties which makes it so important; while our public journals, looking at it in its simple unaided strength, very unwisely turn into ridicule what may soon prove to be most formidable. We cannot imagine so vast and elaborate a movement as that of Fenianism put out like a spark of fire, without first having kindled a conflagration.

"The cruel oppression of Ireland for five hundred years can never be atoned for by thirty years' of good government, still less so since that good government was not a willing deed, but forced upon us by the threatening attitude of O'Connell and of the Irish nation itself. Nor can the Orsini conspiracy ever be forgotten or forgiven; and we are accomplices in that conspiracy by our sympathy with the vile conspirators. We were guilty before Europe of a capital felony. It appears from the latest accounts, that, in the first place, Gen. Schofield has, certainly, an important and secret mission of one kind or another, whatever it may be. His presence in Paris has produced manifest excitement, owing to the conviction that he has not been sent for nothing. But, as we said before, the Mexican affair is no secret, nor is it to be imagined that there can be the slightest necessity for an ambassador-extraordinary to convey to the French government a message which the American envoy at Paris could have conveyed equally well. There must be some secret scheme which could not have safely been committed to paper, and which is therefore carried on by word of mouth. It appears, also, secondly, that the Fenians in America are more actively employed than ever, in every department of military preparation; and that they are incessantly collecting arms, "material of war," and money. It appears that their principal officers are, almost without exception, not raw volunteers, but veteran officers of the American army; men thoroughly accustomed to hardship and danger, as well as to military service in the field. And, lastly, we must not pass by a singular manifesto published throughout Ireland by the Secret Committee of the Fenians in Dublin. That fierce document exhorts the people of Ireland to wait patiently, 'for the time of deliverance is fast approaching'—the favorable moment will soon arrive. And this manifesto then proceeds in the following strain:—'There is a power at hand for your country's salvation, and it shall cast defiance into the teeth of your enemy.' But what is meant by the 'power at hand?' The Fenians can hardly mean to say that they themselves are at hand to themselves; and therefore the sentence just quoted, sounds very like a hint that there is some foreign power at hand, and ready to co-operate with a Fenian insurrection in Ireland, or a Fenian invasion of Canada. This dark hint is worthy of being dwelt upon. Still more may it be dwelt upon when we observe that all the efforts of the English government have proved thoroughly insufficient. In the midst of the prosecutions for high treason, the Fenian Committee is quietly sitting in Dublin, and issuing manifestoes more treasonable than ever, while in the provincial parts of Ireland men are seen drilling at night in defiance of the late prosecutions. Simultaneously with all this, the French government, suddenly, and without any visible cause, revokes the treaty of extradition, and thus enables itself to grant full shelter and protection to every Fenian who can once land on a French island or get on board of a French ship. We may be too suspicious; but we cannot avoid thinking that there is a secret connexion between all these proceedings, in France, America, and Ireland. But it is only just to remark that the American government itself may be as innocent as the 'child unborn.' And the designs of which we have spoken may have originated from the war-party in the United States.

Yet we must by no means overlook the fact that the President's speech is far from being so pacific as some persons pretend to think it. On the contrary it is highly the reverse. It first expressly states that we are acting unjustly towards America, and then advises Congress not to seek for redress immediately. That is to say, in plain words—'Do not quarrel with England just at this moment; but wait till you can find a convenient time—wait for a Fenian insurrection, or an understanding with France.' The President's speech is not a reprieve, but only a respite; and is far from being satisfactory.

If we put all things together, we can hardly avoid coming to the following conclusion: that between France and the American war-party some secret design is being carried out, of which Fenianism is made the instrument, and the accomplice. That the Fenians are the advanced guard of a more formidable enemy; and that as such they are anything but despicable, however inefficient they may be when left to their own resources. Such a heaping up of inflammable materials cannot be intended for nothing; nor can it end in nothing but smoke. Fenianism is too widely spread, too active, and too persevering, to prove a mere empty show. It has earnestness and reality at its heart; and our very contempt for its machinations will only stimulate its exertions, while the same contempt will serve to parylyze our own. . . .

To conclude for the present, it appears as if preparations were being made over all the world, for some great and universal convulsion. It seems hard to conceive that things can settle down into the stagnation of the last few years. The Pope must within a year be brought to a stern trial as to the stability of his throne. And what will follow should that throne be overturned? . . .

Lastly—We cannot conclude without dwelling for a moment on the singular resemblance, so often remarked, between the two names Napoleon and "Apollyon" (Rev. 9th.) Let us suppose that "Apollyon" is not intended for a proper name, but only a designation; as we say William the "Conqueror." We should then have "Napoleon the "Apollyon," in such a form that the name and the designation would almost be the same word; Napoleon would suggest Apollyon, and Apollyon would suggest Napoleon! This appears to us a most powerful argument for believing that the Apollyon of Scripture will be found now, or hereafter, in the Napoleonic race. Napoleon the Apollyon! 'Napoleon the destroyer!'"

For the World's Crisis.

CREATION OF MAN.

"And God said let us make man in our own image, after our likeness."—GEN. 1: 26.

The above text of Scripture, I am confident, is not generally understood. Popular theology explains it on this wise: by the expression image and likeness, we are to understand that man was created in righteousness and true holiness. We are also told that in this consists man's immortality. Let us try this assertion. It is, I believe, generally conceded on all hands, by those who believe the Bible, that man has fallen from his original state; and if so, he must have lost that image and likeness, if it consisted in righteousness and holiness. None will deny this, I think; and if this is admitted, what becomes of man's natural immortality? And how is he to be restored to that state of happiness except through Jesus Christ?

But I assert that man has never lost that image and likeness in which he was created, whatever it may be. "For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, inasmuch as he is the image and glory of God" (1 Cor. 11: 7), not was, in the past tense, but is, in the present tense. Here let me ask (and it is a pretty close question for my orthodox friends), did man possess that image and likeness before the breath of life was breathed into him? or before he became a living soul? Most certainly he did. Proof. Gen. 1: 27. "So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him."

Man could have had no moral character before the breath of life was breathed into him; and yet he was in the image of God. This is a death blow to orthodoxy, on this point, and ought forever to silence those who are continually speaking about man's being created in righteousness and true holiness. Man must be so situated as to form a moral character, before he can be said to be righteous or holy. In such a condition our first parents were placed. How could man form a character unless good and evil were set before him? If only good be placed before him, man becomes but a mere machine. This was not the case with our first parents, but the tree of life and the tree of knowledge were within their reach. They might have taken of the tree of life and lived for ever, or been made immortal. This shows that man was not made immortal (which means exempt from death, or deathless), if so, why place the tree of life within his reach, and why pronounce the sentence of death upon what could not die? If man had been mortal, why pronounce the sentence of death upon that which was bound to die? Thus we see man could not have been either mortal or immortal, but was on probation for immortality. Life and death were placed before him. He chose death, and hence death was "passed upon all men."

ALLEN LEWIS.
Ottawa, Minn.

For the World's Crisis.

"AND WHEN YE WILL YE MAY DO THEM GOOD."—JESUS.

Do all the good that you can do,
By all the means afforded you;
In every way, and time, and place;
To whom? To all the human race.
Or just as many everywhere
As you can reach by faith and prayer,
By word or deed, by voice or pen,
Through all your life—amen, amen.

LORENZO D. GROSVENOR.

For the World's Crisis.

THE LEADING JOKER OF THE BAR-ROOM.

"If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain."—JAMES 1. 26.

Did you ever happen into a place where loafers "most do congregate," and did you notice one in the crowd who seemed to be more "gifted" than the rest,—one who could tell the most vulgar story, and set it out in most complete style, to suit the taste of the obscene company? If you were a stranger in the place, and happened to inquire for a prayer meeting, and find one, you would be surprised to see this same leading joker coming in quite late,—though the surprise is not on account of the lateness, so much as to see him in such a place at all. But your surprise reaches a climax, when the pastor calls upon this same person,—Brother X., will you lead in prayer?

Can such a man pray? Having heard such vulgarity and obscenity from those lips, you think there must be some mistake in the identity of the person. It must be some one else, but the resemblance seems very striking indeed. So you try to lay aside your prejudices and join in the prayer. But it is hard to describe the attempt. It seemed very difficult for the person to clear his throat to begin; and the difficulty did not seem to grow less as he proceeded. The strange work he makes, —the blunders, the break-downs, the slips of the tongue and the utter lack of all the humility and faith which to you seem indispensable in prayer, all go to convince you that you were right in supposing this man to be the one you saw taking the lead in the vulgar crowd; but he is not in his element in the prayer meeting. All that glibness of tongue, all that ready wit, and that complete self-possession are gone; and he seems to be aware of his failure, and sneaks away as though ashamed to be seen in such a place. "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain."

Sutton, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

SATURDAYS AND SUNDAYS.

SATURDAY.

Snow, rain, wind and mud!

"John, it is a very unpleasant morning; you must wrap up well, and take care of yourself."

"O, never fear for me; I shall put on a water-proof and thick boots, and trudge through it; if Saturdays will be wet, there is nothing for it but to put up with them."

SUNDAY.

Snow, rain, wind and mud!

"John, it is a very unpleasant morning again; I suppose you will not venture out this morning."

"No; I don't think it would be right. It is such catch-cold weather; really one needs to take care of one's self, and it would be wrong to brave such a morning as this."

SATURDAY.

"You look very tired this morning, John."

"O no, nothing to speak of. Besides, we must not give way to it; I have a busy day. There will be a good market, and I must make the most of it."

SUNDAY.

"You look very tired this morning, John."

"Yes, I am tired. I shall rest to-day, I think, instead of going to church, a nap on the sofa will do me good. It's a special sermon, I remember, but that can't be helped."

SATURDAY.

"O, Mr. Smith, I'm sorry to come so late. But here's a gentleman wants to give you an order. You're tired to-night, I dare say; but"

"O, not at all, not at all. I'll be with you in a minute. O, no, never felt less tired. Certainly, most happy to come."

SUNDAY.

"O, Mr. Smith, sorry to disturb you; but we are very much in want of a teacher this afternoon. Could you oblige us? You are tired, no doubt; but it is in a good cause."

"Well, really, no, I cannot; I am thoroughly tired out. You must try and find some one who is not so much engaged during the week."

SATURDAY.

"Mr. Smith, there is a meeting of townsmen to night, to talk over some improvement; the Mayor hopes you will be there."

"Thank you; yes. I shall be happy to attend, though it is my busiest evening."

SUNDAY.

"Mr. Smith, there is a prayer meeting to-night; we are told to meet the Master at the mercy-seat; shall we have the pleasure of seeing you?"

"Thank you; no. I shall be unable to attend—Christian World.

TO MAKE ROPE PLIABLE.—Considerable difficulty is sometimes experienced in handling new rope, on account of stiffness. This is especially the case when it is wanted for halter and cattle ties. Every farmer is aware how inconvenient a new, stiff rope halter is to put on and tie up a horse with. New ropes for tying cattle are frequently unsafe, for the reason that they are not pliable enough to knot securely. All this can be remedied, and new rope made as limber and soft at once as after a year's constant use, by simply boiling it for two hours in water. Then hang it in a warm room and let it dry out thoroughly. It retains its stiffness until dry, when it becomes perfectly pliable.

☞ Small faults indulged, are little thieves that let in greater.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE [illegible] COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the World's Crisis.

THE POOR PLOW-BOY.

At Hykeham Moor, near Lincoln, England, was born June 13th, 1812, John Hunt, the son of a farmer in lowly circumstances, and at one time so poor that they had well-nigh become inmates of the poor-house.

Until the age of ten, John had the privilege of attending a school considerable portion of the time; then his education was considered finished, and he was put to work on a farm. But John's mind was not adapted to this kind of employment, and such was his lack of interest, that one of his masters remarked, "John is just as likely to put the cart before the horse, as the horse before the cart."

There was a wandering idiot boy, and John was nicknamed for him, both being of pitiful bodily proportions. His father was advised to apprentice him to a tailor, because, said the neighbor, "he'll be good for warming the goose, and smoothing down seams." All these sneers he bore with patience. His parents were not christians, and neither could read. Yet they trained their children in the path of morality, and taught them to say their prayers regularly.

John had great faith in Divine Providence, and asked God to preserve him whenever he was frightened by thunder, dogs, bad boys, or anything that alarmed him. When about sixteen years old, he fell sick with brain fever, and in view of death, he prayed earnestly for recovery, promising God that if he would restore him, he would devote the remainder of his days to his service. Unlike very many, he was true to his vow, and immediately upon his restoration to health, he began to devote himself to God. He was soon happily converted, and began to apply himself closely to the study of God's word, and the perusal of what few books he could have access to.

For two years after his conversion, a copy of Pilgrim's Progress, part of the Methodist Magazine for 1812, and a few tracts, constituted his whole library. When about twenty years old, he hired himself to a man, where he found the works of Wesley, Paley, and Dwight, and a copy of Horne's Introduction. These he eagerly devoured, and new light dawned upon his mind. A copy of Mason on Self-Knowledge fell into his hands, and that took thorough hold upon him; and probably did much towards the formation of his future character.

One morning his master gave him orders to take a load of corn to Newark. He made all due preparation for the journey, feeding the horses, and when they had eaten enough, he set off to market with an empty wagon. His mind was probably deeply occupied with something that interested him far more than the business in which he was engaged. Yet he was not unfaithful to his master. This was but a solitary case of neglect, but he was invariably prompt and active. By and by, the way opened for him to address the people, and he did so with much earnestness and depth of love. When twenty-three years of age, through the influence of friends, he was placed in a Theological Institute. While there, the institution was favored with a glorious revival, and John was eminently successful in directing inquirers to the Lamb of God. After a time to feel his heart moved to engage in the missionary work, and he thought of going to Africa. But just then a cry from the Pacific reached his ear. In that great Ocean there lay a group of islands, where the revolting cruelties of cannibalism were almost universally practiced.

Perhaps all of you, my little readers, may not know what cannibalism means. I will tell you. A cannibal is one who eats people. They will cook and eat men, women and children, and eat them with as much relish as you do the nice steak mother prepares for your dinner. This made people much afraid to go there, lest they, too, might be killed and eaten up by these cruel savages. But the good christians pitied them, and they desired to have them taught about Jesus Christ, and how to be saved, and so they decided to send missionaries to those Fiji islands; and John Hunt was asked if he would go. After reflection and prayer, he said he would go. He suffered a good deal while there, and his life, with that of those with him, was often threatened; but he was spared a violent death. He saw bodies of men cut up, cooked and eaten very near the mission house. But the faithful labors of the missionaries were not in vain. Some of the chiefs, and a Queen of one of the islands, became converts, and through their influence others were led to Christ. These were persecuted, and threatened with death, but God preserved them. Revivals increased, converts multiplied, and on the first day of Dec. 1847, the number belonging to the church was 1,730, with 159 on trial. Nearly all of these were the fruit of seven years' toil.

And now there are in that Fijian group, where the once unlettered plow-boy sowed the good seed for eight years, and then rested from his labors, more than 20,000 converts to christianity. Thus we see afforded another evidence that God often chooses the weak, base, and despised ones of earth to accomplish his mighty and glorious work.

M. D. W.

KITTY AND "PLEASE."

Kitty had of late got a bad tone to her voice. It was a tone of command, very unbecoming a little girl. Instead of saying, "Will you be kind enough to do this or that?" or "Please do this," or "Will you?" in a gentle tone, she said, "Do this," or "Do that," like a little tyrant. Her mother, as you may well think, was very sorry, and talked with her little girl about this new fault.

One day her shoe came off while she was playing. When it was near dinner-time, she called Bridget to put it on.

"Bridget," she said, "I want my shoe on. Put it on quick; for papa will come soon."

Bridget was doing something in the closet, and did not immediately come out.

"Bridget," she called again, "don't you hear me? Come and put my shoe on."

Her mother was in the next room, and, overhearing her little daughter, said,—

"Say 'Please,' Kitty, and Bridget shall put your shoe on."

Kitty pouted, but did not speak. She took her shoe, sat down on the floor, and tried to put it on herself; which was all very well, had she not done it angrily; for children ought always to try to help themselves. Kitty tugged and tugged at her shoe; but, her little fat foot having grown fatter since the shoe was bought, it fitted in hardly; in fact, Kitty could not get the shoe on.

Soon she heard her papa's step in the entry, and began to cry.

"Bridget will help you, Kitty," said her mother, looking into the chamber. "Ask her, my child."

But Kitty looked, "No, I shan't," though she did not say so in so many words. The dinner-bell rang.

"You can stay here, Kitty, until you ask Bridget properly to put on your shoe:" and her mother went down stairs.

Kitty turned very red, and burst out into a hard, angry fit of crying. Then she got up, ran into a little dressing-room, and shut the door. O naughty, foolish Kitty! how much trouble she was making herself! and how grieved her parents were to see no dear little Kitty in her own high chair at the table! And for such a reason too!—that was the worst of it!

By and by her papa came up stairs, and, not finding her in mother's room, went to the little room.

"Where is my Kitty?" he asked, in a sad, sorry tone.

The little girl jumped up from the corner, and, going towards him, said,—

"O papa! Please' wouldn't come out of my throat; it staid there; it almost choked me; but maybe it will now."

She took her father's hand, and picking up the shoe, went to find Bridget; and, when she found Bridget, she said,—

"Please, Bridget, put my shoe on a naughty little girl's foot.

Bridget did very willingly. Then she ran down stairs, and, throwing her arms round her mother's neck, said, with a sorry-and-glad tear in her eye,—

"Mamma, 'Please' did stay in my throat so long; it felt big, and almost choked me; but, mamma, it's out, and I think it will come out quick next time. Please kiss me, mamma. I'm very sorry."

Kitty did not get choked so again. She found it easy to say "Please" afterwards, and "Please" made the little girl a great many friends.—Well Spring.

MAN-TRAPS.

I suppose most persons have seen some kind of a trap. Country boys generally know how to set a steel trap, and enjoy the sport of capturing musk-rats, minks, woodchucks, and even larger game; but I presume few New England boys have seen a man-trap, and would be as much surprised as I was, while abroad, when riding past green fields, to see placarded in large letters, "Man-traps set here." Still no traps were in sight. They were concealed by the tall grass, or carefully placed near a gap in the hedge, or hid by some bushes, so that no one could know just where they were, and avoid them; yet the placards were a warning to trespassers that there was danger in that field. I was told that sometimes a person was injured for life by being caught in one of these traps. I never read one of those placards without thinking of the devices of Satan to entrap the unwary.

When I see a young man entering a saloon, or making friends of profane companions, I long to whisper, "Beware! you are being entangled in the snares of the great Trapper of souls."

When I see a boy stay away from the Sabbath school, or disregard the good advice of his mother, because he imagines he is too old to need such influence, I think that boy is near a trap that may destroy him.

When I see a young man learning to smoke, or sipping intoxicating drinks, I long to say, "Don't you see the snare you are falling into?—a snare from which you can hardly escape unharmed."

When I see young people put off making their peace with God, waiting for some more convenient season to serve him, I yearn to warn them that procrastination is one of Satan's most effectual devices to beguile farther and farther away from the highway of holiness, until the Spirit is grieved, and their souls are entrapped and bound over to eternal death.—Christian Banner.

DENY YOURSELF.

"Arthur," said Mrs. Campbell one Saturday afternoon to her son, a boy of nine years old, "can you deny yourself a gratification in order to give another pleasure?"

"I don't know, mother; but at all events I can try. What is it you mean?" said Arthur, who was buttoning his boots.

"Why, you know little Susan Gray wishes to go to Sunday School, Arthur; and you also know she cannot go in her old clothes, and that I am making her a frock, and tippet, and bonnet, in order that she may go. I shall have to work till late this evening to get them done, and your father has just sent in a long account to cast up before tea, which would take me at least an hour. What is to be done, Arthur? Is Susan to go without her clothes for another week?"

Arthur hesitated a moment, then ran up stairs to his bedroom, and burst into tears. "What should he do? he only came home from school on Saturdays, and went back Mondays; if he gave up flying his kite this afternoon, he would have to wait a whole week before he would be able to fly it. It was a new one too, and such a beautiful breezy day for it, and so many of his schoolfellows were going on the downs with their kites, and he wanted to show them his; and yet poor Susan would be so disappointed, and she had looked forward to going to the school to-morrow." And this last thought quite decided him. He put away his kite, and returned to his mother; he told her that "rather than little Susan should be disappointed, he would stay at home and attend to the accounts." He felt he had done right when he met his mother's approving smile.

Next day at church, Arthur looked towards the Sunday school children, and there, in the second row, sat little Susan in her new clothes looking as pleased and happy as could be. The sight quite rewarded him, and the knowledge too that he had done a kind action.

He thought he never spent such a happy day before, and when he was just going to sleep at night, his dear mother came and told him how pleased she was with his conduct, and added, "I am sure, my dear Arthur, you were rewarded to-day, when you saw little Susan among the school children."

"O yes, dear mother, that I was fully."

"Kind actions bring their own rewards, my dear boy, and may you go on as you have begun, and always be willing in the future to deny yourself."—Children's Friend.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance.....$2.50 a year.
If not paid within six months.....$3.00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address.....$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address.....$10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.

CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY, the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all letters, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to [illegible], Boston, Mass.

LINES ON THE PRESENT AND FUTURE STATE OF THE CHURCH.

BY A WORKING MAN OF DERBY.

Wherever the true church may be
On earth, she is but one;
The marks at present are not seen
By which she may be known.

But still a church there does exist,
If hid from human view,
For God hath said it shall not fail,
Though there be but a few.

In Babylon she long hath been
Confined by creeds of men,
But is there not a secret voice
Which saith, "Come forth again."

Escape without her city walls,
Her plagues will quickly come
And all who are within her found,
Shall share her awful doom.

The church again shall be redeemed
From all proud Babel's ways,
And when her great Deliverer comes,
Then she will sing his praise.

But oh! the furnace will be hot
In which she will be cast,
To purge her from all earthly dross,
But long it will not last;

For He will keep his eye on her
While she is in the flame,
And when the dross is purged away,
Will bring her forth again.

Then she will sing that heavenly song
In which none else can join,
And oh! the music will be sweet,
For it will be divine.

In prospect of that happy day,
May I, O Lord, endure
That holy cross thou dost appoint,
Till I the crown ensure.

And when I leave this earthly scene,
My spirit then will be
For ever freed from Satan's power
Throughout eternity.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF MISSIONARY WORK.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—By the request of some who read the Crisis, I write my second report. To write all would be impossible, for it would make a large book. But there are many things which might be written, that would be interesting to many of you, had I the opportunity of writing; but my time is nearly all taken up in the field of laboring; and when I do write, it is always when I ought to be asleep, or else some rainy day. Again I hold back, because, as Sister Jennings remarked at one of our meetings, "it looks so much like boasting of what you do." But in our mission work here, we have to write our reports every month for those who employ us, so they may know what we are doing,—all the visits made, all meetings held, how many Bibles we distribute, Testaments, etc.

To meet the request of some of you, I shall write some of the proceedings of the past year, and do it as short as possible, and leave it with the wisdom of the editor whether he will put it in the paper or not. If he thinks it will glorify God and encourage the hearts of those who are interested in mission work, it is at his disposal; if he thinks otherwise, he must do as he thinks best; and I feel for one to thank God that we have that confidence in our editor to be willing to submit to his better judgment, feeling satisfied that he knows best what to put in and what to keep out. So I am always satisfied, whether my pieces are put in the paper or not. It is only from a sense of duty, and the love of the cause, and to encourage others, that you ever get a letter from me, either through the paper or otherwise.

First, then, I shall say nothing about persecution, for that my heavenly Father knoweth right well. Second. I need say nothing about my shortcomings, for they have been many; for my dear Father knows I am only flesh, and frail and weak at the best; but I trust through Jesus they will all be forgiven. Thank God for the provision that has been been made for our sins, either of omission or commission. Every day I live, I find something I do, or leave undone, that I need the blood of Jesus to pardon and blot out my sins. O blessed be God for the gift of his beloved Son. O that I could love him more and serve him better. With the great wickedness around me, and the Judge right at the door, I often fear I am not instant in season and out of season, as I ought to be. Lord help me to be more so, for Jesus' sake.

The first thing of interest which I will bring before you is my visits. I have made eighteen hundred and twenty-five visits and calls among the poor and neglected, in the courts and alleys and garrets and cellars, and in by-places of this wicked city. Three hundred and twelve of these have been in sick rooms. O what scenes of destitution and suffering I have seen in these places. The Lord and those who visit them only know. Some without food, some without fire, some without clothing, or any thing to cover their nakedness, and very many of them without a hope in Christ to console them in their afflictions; and I have never had a cent to relieve any of their wants, but our own pockets, till the Wilbraham campmeeting. It is hard to go into a house of suffering, and say, "Be ye clothed, be ye fed, be ye warmed," and have nothing to do it with. Hour after hour I have cried as I have walked the streets, because of the suffering of those I have visited; but could do but little except pray for them, and then run all about to hunt up the missionary of the district, without finding him; then call on the rich, and they would only say, you must get them a permit and send them to the almshouse, or to the home of the friendless, or some other place. We pay taxes to support these public institutions, and that is the place for them. Then we go away with our feelings hurt, and our hearts almost broken, and make them some gruel, and hunt up what we can find to feed those that are sick, and that is all we can do, saying nothing about clothing or fire.

Sometimes we go to some to assist us, and they tell us they are out of our district; or they are colored, or some excuse is always ready. So we go almost discouraged, almost ready to give up; and then we go at it again. I might mention several cases that I do believe died from starvation; and when we took them something to eat they were too weak to take it.

There was a woman who sent for us to come and pray with her, for she knew she must die, and she was not ready. She had the consumption. I could not go. Sr. Bolde went down town to see her; found she had lain there without care or nursing three days. She had had nothing to eat. Her husband was a wretch, living with another woman, and this true wife was left to wash and iron to support herself and one child, and pay her rent. She worked as long as she could, till she became so weak and prostrate she could work no longer; and then laid down to suffer and die. She had been in that condition some time, when her sister, who was living at service, heard of her whereabouts, went down with Sister B. and brought her up town, where she could do something for her. But the moving was more than she could bear. A doctor was called, but he said she was too far gone to do her any good. Sister B. came home, made her some soup, and took it to her; and oh, to see her eat that soup would melt the stoutest heart. She was earnestly seeking the Savior, but was so weak she could scarcely pray. We prayed with her; told her of the precious promise of God to those who called upon his name; and went to our homes. She lay prostrate in weakness one or two days. When she would revive, she would pray very earnestly. One night she asked for us to pray for her; but her sister told her we had gone home. She cried and prayed very loudly for a few minutes, fell back and said, Lord have mercy on my soul, and died. O what a book might be written of just such cases; but let this suffice.

Next in our mission work, we organized the Providence Mission here, December 14th, 1864. During a six weeks' meeting, day and night, forty souls were converted. At the close of this meeting I was sent to Philadelphia, to assist in starting Mission No. 2. I arrived there on the 5th, and commenced Sunday evening, Dec. 6th, and labored every night till the 20th, Sunday evening, finishing up my work, as usual, with a love-feast. Truly the Lord was with us at this meeting. Thirty-three souls were converted, and we left many crying for mercy. The cries of the mourners could be heard along the street, as their friends took them home. The work continued some time after I left. I think, if I remember right, there were some sixty souls converted in all. We had at that time two Bible readers there, supported by this mission. Then the number was increased to three, and now only one. But that one, Sister Helginson, is doing a good work. Bless the Lord that there are some women that can work in the vineyard of the Lord, as well as brethren. And now, as the Advent friends have taken hold of this work, may the Lord bless and encourage their hearts, and in the day of his coming, say well done good and faithful servants, enter into the joy of your Lord.

On my return from Philadelphia I started a two weeks' meeting in the Bethel M. E. church, at 37th street and Broadway. We had good meetings. Four souls were converted, and no doubt we should have had a revival, but they wanted the church to hold a donation for their preacher, where they had every thing to eat and drink, and every thing sung but hymns; and as I am opposed to all such things, I would have no more to do with the meeting. So there was no more of it.

Next I went to Hackensack, N. J., and took with me seven good workers, staid nine days, and the Lord gave us thirty-one souls for our hire. Then we returned home. In two weeks they sent for us again to come over and help them. I went on the 10th of February, and staid till the 14th. I took Bro. Wilkins with me. We had a glorious time. The devil got mad. There were ten converted, and we went home happy in the Lord. Went down again on the 26th, and organized a mission of forty-four members, called the Olive Branch Mission, No. 3. The Lord is blessing this mission. We have a most excellent Sabbath School there, of both children and adults; though opposition is strong, yet the Lord Jehovah is the strongest. Bless his name.

I have held three hundred and fifty-six religious meetings, preached one hundred and sixty sermons, given seventy addresses and exhortations, and have distributed myself, and those laboring with me (three of us), twenty-seven thousand, nine hundred and fifty tracts. Some of these were Advent tracts,—a good number were sent us by Bro. Hastings in the Spring.

I have distributed fifty-four Bibles, nineteen Testaments, fourteen Silent Comforters, to hang up in sick rooms, twenty-six religious books and pamphlets. Some of these books are lent about, and each book is read by many persons. Any of our friends who have books that they are done with, which treat on the Lord's coming and his kingdom, can have them put in use, and read over again and again, by sending them to me post paid, and these people will be glad to get them. And any person who has cast off clothing, in any shape or form, either for boys or girls, men or women, hats, caps, boots, or shoes, please remember my colored people in New York.

Your sister looking and waiting for Jesus,

Anna E. Smith.

No. 128 East 27th Street, New York City.

[This report has had an unexpected delay.—Ed.]

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

Letter VI.—The Marginal Readings.

Any one who opens a common Reference Bible may observe that, besides the references in the margin, there are also marginal readings. These were thought necessary, by King James' revisers, to explain some things that are not sufficiently made known in the text. They give the meaning of a proper name, or give the spelling of the original name without its definition; define a measure, or the weight and value of a coin; give the literal rendering of some word or phrase of the original; or present another translation of some word or phrase. In some instances, the translation placed in the margin is now found to be superior to that in the text. See, for example, Matt. 1: 20; 4: 12; 5: 29; 6: 1; 9: 16; 10: 10; 12: 14; John 16: 8. And for the better spelling of a proper name, see Matt. 10: 25; 12: 24; Heb. 4: 8.

In the Revised New Testament, the marginal reading is resorted to only when the information it conveys could not be embraced in the main text. When it is employed, it explains some term; gives a "various reading," of such authority as to be deemed worthy of attention; or, when the Greek word or phrase is ambiguous, as occasionally occurs, exhibits what is considered by the revisers the inferior rendering.

Thus the Syriac term "Raca," Matt. 5: 22, is explained in the margin, "a term of angry reproach;" "Bar-jonah," 16: 17, "Son of Jonah;" and "Maranatha," 1 Cor. 16: 22, "The Lord comes!" The Hebrew word "Hosanna," in Matt. 21: 9, "Save now!" The Greek name "Peter," Matt. 16: 18, "rock." And the term "underworld," Gr. hades, like the Heb. sheol, Matt. 11: 23, "the abode of the dead, represented (figuratively, as in the Old Testament) as underneath, in contrast with heaven above." See Phil. 2: 10; Rev. 5: 3, 13; Lk. 16: 23.

"Various readings" are thus given: Matt. 1: 18,—"A voice was heard in Ramah, weeping," etc.; margin, "In some ancient copies: lamentation and weeping." 5: 11,—"Shall say all evil against you falsely;" margin, "Some ancient copies omit, falsely." 12: 22,—"He healed him, so that the blind and dumb both spake and saw;" margin, The oldest copies omit, blind and both."

An alternative rendering is thus expressed: Matt. 5: 5,—"they shall inherit the earth;" margin, "Or, the land." Vs. 21, 33,—said to those of old;" margin, "Or, by those" 6: 27,—"add one cubit to his stature;" margin, "Or, to his age."

It is the object of the learned and able revisers, by the aid of a thoroughly revised text, and a sparing and judicious use of the margin, to place the English reader as nearly as possible on the vantage-ground of the Greek scholar; so that he may have the means of judging for himself what is the particular instruction, or truth, in any given passage, which, for his good, the great Author of revelation would impart to him.

C. W. Waterhouse.

For the World's Crisis.

RESPECTABLE SIN.

When you go to stand before God, my friends, it will not be your dress, or your house, or your titles, or your wealth; no, nor even your virtues, however much commended here, that will give you an entrance among the glorified. "Respectable sin" will not pass then and there as here. The honor, the nobility of it, is now gone by. The degrees, indeed, of sin are many, but the kind is one, and that a poor, dejected, emptied form of shame and sorrow. How appalling the thought to any one who is capable of thought, and not absolutely brutalized by his guilt.

Furthermore, as sin is sin everywhere and in all forms, the respectable and the irrespectable are the same in principle, and when the appearances are the same in criminality, the world of future retribution must of course be a world of strange companionships. We are expressly told, and it seems a matter of reason also to suppose, that guilty men will not be assorted by their tastes, but by their character and demerits. Death is the end and limit of mere conventionalities. The fictitious assortments of the earthly state never pass that limit; rank, caste, fashion, disgust, slander, fastidiousness, delicacy of sin,—these are able to draw their social lines no longer. Proximity is now held to the stern, impartial principle of inward demerit, that all may receive according to the deeds done in the body. This is the level of adjustment, and there appears to be no other. The standing of high priests, the Scribes and Pharisees, and of those who these many years persecuted the true church of God, calling them heretics, may be inverted now, as they may all take their rank together. And so also many of you, that are now pleasing yourselves in the dignity of your virtues, and honors of your social standing, may fall there into group and gradation with such as you ever look away from with profoundest distaste or revulsion.

The subject is painful. What will be the reward of the professed embassadors of Christ, who for paltry gold are countenancing contention? Oh, the remorse! I will not pursue it. I will only remind you that where the lines of justice lead, there you must yourselves follow; and if that just award of respectable sin yields you only the promise of a scale of companionship, from which your soul recoils with disgust, there is no wisdom for you but to weep and wail. Then at once draw yourselves to him who is purity and peace; repent and do thy first work, and eternal life is yours.

L. O. Gage.

West Brattleboro', Vt.

THE PRESENT STATE OF AFFAIRS.

Under the above heading an interesting article appears in an English monthly, from which we extract the following:—Ed.

"The treaty of extradition being revoked, all conspirators, whether Fenian or otherwise, will find from henceforth shelter in France, or in every French colony, such as Martinique —or even on board of a French ship. Not political conspirators only—for that was the case before—but criminals guilty of murder or incendiarism. We cannot but think that the American general has been sent to Paris with some reference to this revocation of the treaty. No doubt the American government may be free from blame as to Gen. Schofield's mission; but we know that there is a very strong war-party in America, quite willing to despatch a military agent to negociate with the French government at Paris, and probably quite strong enough to make good all their engagements hereafter. Gen. Schofield may probably be an agent of the war-party, if not of the American government itself.

Some conspiracy is brewing, we may almost feel certain. This is no libel or calumny directed against America. For the toleration in New York of an organized conspiracy against a friendly power—the sufferance more than granted to the Fenians—is in itself as criminal an act as a direct conspiracy. And this act has been undeniably brought home to the American government. And now we may add, that putting all things together, and comparing one thing with another, there seems to be mischief preparing against us on the other side of the Atlantic, and equally so in Paris! The Emperor is justified in a human sense, in doing all that lies in his power to break us down, for our conduct in the affair of Bernard was equal to an act of wilful murder —a capital felony—chargeable upon a nation! And there can be no doubt that the Fenians are more formidable than we foolishly imagine. Their numbers, their organization, their revenues—above all, their perseverance, are ominous of some well-concerted attack. It cannot be imagined that so vast a conspiracy can end in child's play. The conspirators are too much in earnest to be soon baffled or tired out; and as for the invasion of Ireland, it was only a military stratagem to divert our eyes from Canada, the real point of attack. Above all, and by far the most formidable element of Fenianism is this—that it is in close connexion with a powerful war-party in America, of which it may be supposed it is only the instrument; and if once the Fenians begin an invasion, it will be a miracle indeed if the American army do not follow within a month. The Fenians have also their two ablest men residing in Paris, to carry on communications with the French government, day after day, and conspiracy after conspiracy! Stop them you cannot—and, like the three witches on the Scottish heath, Fenianism, America and France, will prepare between them a charm of powerful trouble! It is this visible connexion of Fenianism with the French and American war-parties which makes it so important; while our public journals, looking at it in its simple unaided strength, very unwisely turn into ridicule what may soon prove to be most formidable. We cannot imagine so vast and elaborate a movement as that of Fenianism put out like a spark of fire, without first having kindled a conflagration.

The cruel oppression of Ireland for five hundred years can never be atoned for by thirty years' of good government, still less so since that good government was not a willing deed, but forced upon us by the threatening attitude of O'Connell and of the Irish nation itself. Nor can the Orsini conspiracy ever be forgotten or forgiven; and we are accomplices in that conspiracy by our sympathy with the vile conspirators. We were guilty before Europe of a capital felony. It appears from the latest accounts, that, in the first place, Gen. Schofield has, certainly, an important and secret mission of one kind or another, whatever it may be. His presence in Paris has produced manifest excitement, owing to the conviction that he has not been sent for nothing. But, as we said before, the Mexican affair is no secret, nor is it to be imagined that there can be the slightest necessity for an ambassador-extraordinary to convey to the French government a message which the American envoy at Paris could have conveyed equally well. There must be some secret scheme which could not have safely been committed to paper, and which is therefore carried on by word of mouth. It appears, also, secondly, that the Fenians in America are more actively employed than ever, in every department of military preparation; and that they are incessantly collecting arms, "material of war," and money. It appears that their principal officers are, almost without exception, not raw volunteers, but veteran officers of the American army; men thoroughly accustomed to hardship and danger, as well as to military service in the field. And, lastly, we must not pass by a singular manifesto published throughout Ireland by the Secret Committee of the Fenians in Dublin. That fierce document exhorts the people of Ireland to wait patiently, 'for the time of deliverance is fast approaching'—the favorable momont will soon arrive. And this manifesto then proceeds in the following strain:—'There is a power at hand for your country's salvation, and it shall cast defiance into the teeth of your enemy.' But what is meant by the 'power at hand?' The Fenians can hardly mean to say that they themselves are at hand to themselves; and therefore the sentence just quoted, sounds very like a hint that there is some foreign power at hand, and ready to co-operate with a Fenian insurrection in Ireland, or a Fenian invasion of Canada. This dark hint is worthy of being dwelt upon. Still more may it be dwelt upon when we observe that all the efforts of the English government have proved thoroughly insufficient. In the midst of the prosecutions for high treason, the Fenian Committee is quietly sitting in Dublin, and issuing manifestoes more treasonable than ever, while in the provincial parts of Ireland men are seen drilling at night in defiance of the late prosecutions. Simultaneously with all this, the French government, suddenly, and without any visible cause, revokes the treaty of extradition, and thus enables itself to grant full shelter and protection to every Fenian who can once land on a French island or get on board of a French ship. We may be too suspicious; but we cannot avoid thinking that there is a secret connexion between all these proceedings, in France, America, and Ireland. But it is only just to remark that the American government itself may be as innocent as the 'child unborn.' And the designs of which we have spoken may have originated from the war-party in the United States.

Yet we must by no means overlook the fact that the President's speech is far from being so pacific as some persons pretend to think it. On the contrary it is highly the reverse. It first expressly states that we are acting unjustly towards America, and then advises Congress not to seek for redress immediately. That is to say, in plain words—'Do not quarrel with England just at this moment; but wait till you can find a convenient time—wait for a Fenian insurrection, or an understanding with France.' The President's speech is not a reprieve, but only a respite; and is far from being satisfactory.

If we put all things together, we can hardly avoid coming to the following conclusion: that between France and the American war-party some secret design is being carried out, of which Fenianism is made the instrument, and the accomplice. That the Fenians are the advanced guard of a more formidable enemy; and that as such they are anything but despicable, however inefficient they may be when left to their own resources. Such a heaping up of inflammable materials cannot be intended for nothing; nor can it end in nothing but smoke. Fenianism is too widely spread, too active, and too persevering, to prove a mere empty show. It has earnestness and reality at its heart; and our very contempt for its machinations will only stimulate its exertions, while the same contempt will serve to parylyze our own. . . .

To conclude for the present, it appears as if preparations were being made over all the world, for some great and universal convulsion. It seems hard to conceive that things can settle down into the stagnation of the last few years. The Pope must within a year be brought to a stern trial as to the stability of his throne. And what will follow should that throne be overturned? . . .

Lastly—We cannot conclude without dwelling for a moment on the singular resemblance, so often remarked, between the two names Napoleon and "Apollyon" (Rev. 9th.) Let us suppose that "Apollyon" is not intended for a proper name, but only a designation; as we say William the "Conqueror." We should then have "Napoleon the "Apollyon," in such a form that the name and the designation would almost be the same word; Napoleon would suggest Apollyon, and Apollyon would suggest Napoleon! This appears to us a most powerful argument for believing that the Apollyon of Scripture will be found now, or hereafter, in the Napoleonic race. Napoleon the Apollyon! 'Napoleon the destroyer!'"

For the World's Crisis.

CREATION OF MAN.

"And God said let us make man in our own image, after our likeness."—Gen. 1. 26.

The above text of Scripture, I am confident, is not generally understood. Popular theology explains it on this wise: by the expression image and likeness, we are to understand that man was created in righteousness and true holiness. We are also told that in this consists man's immortality. Let us try this assertion. It is, I believe, generally conceded on all hands, by those who believe the Bible, that man has fallen from his original state; and if so, he must have lost that image and likeness, if it consisted in righteousness and holiness. None will deny this, I think; and if this is admitted, what becomes of man's natural immortality? And how is he to be restored to that state of happiness except through Jesus Christ?

But I assert that man has never lost that image and likeness in which he was created, whatever it may be. "For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, inasmuch as he is the image and glory of God" (1 Cor. 11: 7), not was, in the past tense, but is, in the present tense. Here let me ask (and it is a pretty close question for my orthodox friends), did man possess that image and likeness before the breath of life was breathed into him? or before he became a living soul? Most certainly he did. Proof, Gen. 1: 27. "So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him."

Man could have had no moral character before the breath of life was breathed into him; and yet he was in the image of God. This is a death blow to orthodoxy, on this point, and ought forever to silence those who are continually speaking about man's being created in righteousness and true holiness. Man must be so situated as to form a moral character, before he can be said to be righteous or holy. In such a condition our first parents were placed. How could man form a character unless good and evil were set before him? If only good be placed before him, man becomes but a mere machine. This was not the case with our first parents, but the tree of life and the tree of knowledge were within their reach. They might have taken of the tree of life and lived for ever, or been made immortal. This shows that man was not made immortal (which means exempt from death, or deathless), if so, why place the tree of life within his reach, and why pronounce the sentence of death upon what could not die? If man had been mortal, why pronounce the sentence of death upon that which was bound to die? Thus we see man could not have been either mortal or immortal, but was on probation for immortality. Life and death were placed before him. He chose death, and hence death was "passed upon all men."

Allen Lewis.

Ottawa, Minn.

For the World's Crisis.

"AND WHEN YE WILL YE MAY DO THEM GOOD."—Jesus.

Do all the good that you can do,
By all the means afforded you;
In every way, and time, and place;
To whom? To all the human race.
Or just as many everywhere
As you can reach by faith and prayer,
By word or deed, by voice or pen,
Through all your life—amen, amen.

Lorenzo D. Grosvenor.

For the World's Crisis.

THE LEADING JOKER OF THE BAR-ROOM.

"If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain."—James 1. 26.

Did you ever happen into a place where loafers "most do congregate," and did you notice one in the crowd who seemed to be more "gifted" than the rest,—one who could tell the most vulgar story, and set it out in most complete style, to suit the taste of the obscene company? If you were a stranger in the place, and happened to inquire for a prayer meeting, and find one, you would be surprised to see this same leading joker coming in quite late,—though the surprise is not on account of the lateness, so much as to see him in such a place at all. But your surprise reaches a climax, when the pastor calls upon this same person,—Brother X., will you lead in prayer?

Can such a man pray? Having heard such vulgarity and obscenity from those lips, you think there must be some mistake in the identity of the person. It must be some one else, but the resemblance seems very striking indeed. So you try to lay aside your prejudices and join in the prayer. But it is hard to describe the attempt. It seemed very difficult for the person to clear his throat to begin; and the difficulty did not seem to grow less as he proceeded. The strange work he makes, —the blunders, the break-downs, the slips of the tongue and the utter lack of all the humility and faith which to you seem indispensable in prayer, all go to convince you that you were right in supposing this man to be the one you saw taking the lead in the vulgar crowd; but he is not in his element in the prayer meeting. All that glibness of tongue, all that ready wit, and that complete self-possession are gone; and he seems to be aware of his failure, and sneaks away as though ashamed to be seen in such a place. "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain."

Sutton, Mass. F. H. Chamberlain.

SATURDAYS AND SUNDAYS.

SATURDAY.

Snow, rain, wind and mud!

"John, it is a very unpleasant morning; you must wrap up well, and take care of yourself."

"O, never fear for me; I shall put on a water-proof and thick boots, and trudge through it; if Saturdays will be wet, there is nothing for it but to put up with them."

SUNDAY.

Snow, rain, wind and mud!

"John, it is a very unpleasant morning again; I suppose you will not venture out this morning."

"No; I don't think it would be right. It is such catch-cold weather; really one needs to take care of one's self, and it would be wrong to brave such a morning as this."

SATURDAY.

"You look very tired this morning, John."

"O no, nothing to speak of. Besides, we must not give way to it; I have a busy day. There will be a good market, and I must make the most of it."

SUNDAY.

"You look very tired this morning, John."

"Yes, I am tired. I shall rest to-day, I think, instead of going to church, a nap on the sofa will do me good. It's a special sermon, I remember, but that can't be helped."

SATURDAY.

"O, Mr. Smith, I'm sorry to come so late. But here's a gentleman wants to give you an order. You're tired to-night, I dare say; but"

"O, not at all, not at all. I'll be with you in a minute. O, no, never felt less tired. Certainly, most happy to come."

SUNDAY.

"O, Mr. Smith, sorry to disturb you; but we are very much in want of a teacher this afternoon. Could you oblige us? You are tired, no doubt; but it is in a good cause."

"Well, really, no, I cannot; I am thoroughly tired out. You must try and find some one who is not so much engaged during the week."

SATURDAY.

"Mr. Smith, there is a meeting of townsmen to night, to talk over some improvement; the Mayor hopes you will be there."

"Thank you; yes. I shall be happy to attend, though it is my busiest evening."

SUNDAY.

"Mr. Smith, there is a prayer meeting to-night; we are told to meet the Master at the mercy-seat; shall we have the pleasure of seeing you?"

"Thank you; no. I shall be unable to attend."—Christian World.

To Make Rope Pliable.—Considerable difficulty is sometimes experienced in handling new rope, on account of stiffness. This is especially the case when it is wanted for halter and cattle ties. Every farmer is aware how inconvenient a new, stiff rope halter is to put on and tie up a horse with. New ropes for tying cattle are frequently unsafe, for the reason that they are not pliable enough to knot securely. All this can be remedied, and new rope made as limber and soft at once as after a year's constant use, by simply boiling it for two hours in water. Then hang it in a warm room and let it dry out thoroughly. It retains its stiffness until dry, when it becomes perfectly pliable.

☞ Small faults indulged, are little thieves that let in greater.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE [illegible] COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the World's Crisis.

THE POOR PLOW-BOY.

At Hykeham Moor, near Lincoln, England, was born June 13th, 1812, John Hunt, the son of a farmer in lowly circumstances, and at one time so poor that they had well-nigh become inmates of the poor-house.

Until the age of ten, John had the privilege of attending a school considerable portion of the time; then his education was considered finished, and he was put to work on a farm. But John's mind was not adapted to this kind of employment, and such was his lack of interest, that one of his masters remarked, "John is just as likely to put the cart before the horse, as the horse before the cart."

There was a wandering idiot boy, and John was nicknamed for him, both being of pitiful bodily proportions. His father was advised to apprentice him to a tailor, because, said the neighbor, "he'll be good for warming the goose, and smoothing down seams." All these sneers he bore with patience. His parents were not christians, and neither could read. Yet they trained their children in the path of morality, and taught them to say their prayers regularly.

John had great faith in Divine Providence, and asked God to preserve him whenever he was frightened by thunder, dogs, bad boys, or anything that alarmed him. When about sixteen years old, he fell sick with brain fever, and in view of death, he prayed earnestly for recovery, promising God that if he would restore him, he would devote the remainder of his days to his service. Unlike very many, he was true to his vow, and immediately upon his restoration to health, he began to devote himself to God. He was soon happily converted, and began to apply himself closely to the study of God's word, and the perusal of what few books he could have access to.

For two years after his conversion, a copy of Pilgrim's Progress, part of the Methodist Magazine for 1812, and a few tracts, constituted his whole library. When about twenty years old, he hired himself to a man, where he found the works of Wesley, Paley, and Dwight, and a copy of Horne's Introduction. These he eagerly devoured, and new light dawned upon his mind. A copy of Mason on Self-Knowledge fell into his hands, and that took thorough hold upon him; and probably did much towards the formation of his future character.

One morning his master gave him orders to take a load of corn to Newark. He made all due preparation for the journey, feeding the horses, and when they had eaten enough, he set off to market with an empty wagon. His mind was probably deeply occupied with something that interested him far more than the business in which he was engaged. Yet he was not unfaithful to his master. This was but a solitary case of neglect, but he was invariably prompt and active. By and by, the way opened for him to address the people, and he did so with much earnestness and depth of love. When twenty-three years of age, through the influence of friends, he was placed in a Theological Institute. While there, the institution was favored with a glorious revival, and John was eminently successful in directing inquirers to the Lamb of God. After a time to feel his heart moved to engage in the missionary work, and he thought of going to Africa. But just then a cry from the Pacific reached his ear. In that great Ocean there lay a group of islands, where the revolting cruelties of cannibalism were almost universally practiced.

Perhaps all of you, my little readers, may not know what cannibalism means. I will tell you. A cannibal is one who eats people. They will cook and eat men, women and children, and eat them with as much relish as you do the nice steak mother prepares for your dinner. This made people much afraid to go there, lest they, too, might be killed and eaten up by these cruel savages. But the good christians pitied them, and they desired to have them taught about Jesus Christ, and how to be saved, and so they decided to send missionaries to those Fiji islands; and John Hunt was asked if he would go. After reflection and prayer, he said he would go. He suffered a good deal while there, and his life, with that of those with him, was often threatened; but he was spared a violent death. He saw bodies of men cut up, cooked and eaten very near the mission house. But the faithful labors of the missionaries were not in vain. Some of the chiefs, and a Queen of one of the islands, became converts, and through their influence others were led to Christ. These were persecuted, and threatened with death, but God preserved them. Revivals increased, converts multiplied, and on the first day of Dec. 1847, the number belonging to the church was 1,730, with 159 on trial. Nearly all of these were the fruit of seven years' toil.

And now there are in that Fijian group, where the once unlettered plow-boy sowed the good seed for eight years, and then rested from his labors, more than 20,000 converts to christianity. Thus we see afforded another evidence that God often chooses the weak, base, and despised ones of earth to accomplish his mighty and glorious work.

M. D. W.

KITTY AND "PLEASE."

Kitty had of late got a bad tone to her voice. It was a tone of command, very unbecoming a little girl. Instead of saying, "Will you be kind enough to do this or that?" or "Please do this," or "Will you?" in a gentle tone, she said, "Do this," or "Do that," like a little tyrant. Her mother, as you may well think, was very sorry, and talked with her little girl about this new fault.

One day her shoe came off while she was playing. When it was near dinner-time, she called Bridget to put it on.

"Bridget," she said, "I want my shoe on. Put it on quick; for papa will come soon."

Bridget was doing something in the closet, and did not immediately come out.

"Bridget," she called again, "don't you hear me? Come and put my shoe on."

Her mother was in the next room, and, overhearing her little daughter, said,—

"Say 'Please,' Kitty, and Bridget shall put your shoe on."

Kitty pouted, but did not speak. She took her shoe, sat down on the floor, and tried to put it on herself; which was all very well, had she not done it angrily; for children ought always to try to help themselves. Kitty tugged and tugged at her shoe; but, her little fat foot having grown fatter since the shoe was bought, it fitted so hardly, in fact, Kitty could not get the shoe on.

Soon she heard her papa's step in the entry, and began to cry.

"Bridget, will help you, Kitty," said her mother, looking into the chamber. "Ask her, my child."

But Kitty looked, "No, I shan't," though she did not say so in so many words. The dinner-bell rang.

"You can stay here, Kitty, until you ask Bridget properly to put on your shoe:" and her mother went down stairs.

Kitty turned very red, and burst out into a hard, angry fit of crying. Then she got up ran into a little dressing-room, and shut the door. O naughty, foolish Kitty! how much trouble she was making herself! and how grieved her parents were to see no dear little Kitty in her own high chair at the table! And for such a reason too!—that was the worst of it!

By and by her papa came up stairs, and, not finding her in mother's room, went to the little room.

"Where is my Kitty?" he asked, in a sad, sorry tone.

The little girl jumped up from the corner, and, going towards him, said,—

"O papa! Please' wouldn't come out of my throat; it staid there; it almost choked me; but maybe it will now."

She took her father's hand, and picking up the shoe, went to find Bridget; and, when she found Bridget, she said,—

"Please, Bridget, put my shoe on a naughty little girl's foot.

Bridget did very willingly. Then she ran down stairs, and, throwing her arms round her mother's neck, said, with a sorry-and-glad tear in her eye,—

"Mamma, 'Please' did stay in my throat so long; it felt big, and almost choked me; but, mamma, it's out, and I think it will come out quick next time. Please kiss me, mamma. I'm very sorry."

Kitty did not get choked so again. She found it easy to say "Please" afterwards; and "Please" made the little girl a great many friends.—Well Spring.

MAN-TRAPS.

I suppose most persons have seen some kind of a trap. Country boys generally know how to set a steel trap, and enjoy the sport of capturing musk-rats, minks, woodchucks, and even larger game; but I presume few New England boys have seen a man-trap, and would be as much surprised as I was, while abroad, when riding past green fields, to see placarded in large letters, "Man-traps set here." Still no traps were in sight. They were concealed by the tall grass, or carefully placed near a gap in the hedge, or hid by some bushes, so that no one could know just where they were, and avoid them; yet the placards were a warning to trespassers that there was danger in that field. I was told that sometimes a person was injured for life by being caught in one of these traps. I never read one of those placards without thinking of the devices of Satan to entrap the unwary.

When I see a young man entering a saloon, or making friends of profane companions, I long to whisper, "Beware! you are being entangled in the snares of the great Trapper of souls."

When I see a boy stay away from the Sabbath school, or disregard the good advice of his mother, because he imagines he is too old to need such influence, I think that boy is near a trap that may destroy him.

When I see a young man learning to smoke, or sipping intoxicating drinks, I long to say, "Don't you see the snare you are falling into? —a snare from which you can hardly escape unharmed."

When I see young people put off making their peace with God, waiting for some more convenient season to serve him, I yearn to warn them that procrastination is one of Satan's most effectual devices to beguile farther and farther away from the highway of holiness, until the Spirit is grieved, and their souls are entrapped and bound over to eternal death.—Christian Banner.

DENY YOURSELF.

"Arthur," said Mrs. Campbell one Saturday afternoon to her son, a boy of nine years old, "can you deny yourself a gratification in order to give another pleasure?"

"I don't know, mother; but at all events I can try. What is it you mean?" said Arthur, who was buttoning his boots.

"Why, you know little Susan Gray wishes to go to Sunday School, Arthur; and you also know she cannot go in her old clothes, and that I am making her a frock, and tippet, and bonnet, in order that she may go. I shall have to work till late this evening to get them done, and your father has just sent in a long account to cast up before tea, which would take me at least an hour. What is to be done, Arthur? Is Susan to go without her clothes for another week?"

Arthur hesitated a moment, then ran up stairs to his bedroom, and burst into tears. "What should he do? he only came home from school on Saturdays, and went back Mondays; if he gave up flying his kite this afternoon, he would have to wait a whole week before he would be able to fly it. It was a new one too, and such a beautiful breezy day for it, and so many of his schoolfellows were going on the downs with their kites, and he wanted to show them his; and yet poor Susan would be so disappointed, and she had looked forward to going to the school to-morrow." And this last thought quite decided him. He put away his kite, and returned to his mother; he told her that "rather than little Susan should be disappointed, he would stay at home and attend to the accounts." He felt he had done right when he met his mother's approving smile.

Next day at church, Arthur looked towards the Sunday school children, and there, in the second row, sat little Susan in her new clothes looking as pleased and happy as could be. The sight quite rewarded him, and the knowledge too that he had done a kind action.

He thought he never spent such a happy day before, and when he was just going to sleep at night, his dear mother came and told him how pleased she was with his conduct, and added, "I am sure, my dear Arthur, you were rewarded to-day, when you saw little Susan among the school children."

"O yes, dear mother, that I was fully."

"Kind actions bring their own rewards, my dear boy, and may you go on as you have begun, and always be willing in the future to deny yourself."—Children's Friend.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance	$2.50 a year.
If not paid within six months	$3.00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address	$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address	$10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.

CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all letters, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to [illegible], Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 553. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 8.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL,
JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS,
S. S. BREWER, J. O. HAMBLIN,
D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"NONE OTHER NAME."

O, tender, loving heart,
Whereon are written dear and precious names,
Sweet ties which earthly friendship fondly claims,—
These all may have their part;
But thou must write above all others there,
Jesus—"none other name" so wondrous fair!

Thou weary, longing heart!
Yearning for some to cheer thee here below,
Mourning for joys thou ne'er again shalt know,
That name bids care depart!
Thou wilt not find thy comfort seeking here;
"None other name" can hush each trembling fear!

Thou joyous merry heart!
Earth's sweetness will not always last for thee;
Dark clouds will come and bid the sunshine flee,
All earthly joys depart.
And thou must look beyond to higher things;
"None other name" true joy and gladness brings!

O burdened, sinful heart!
Heavy with woe, bowed down with guilt and fear,
Salvation waits for thee, but only here!
From all else thou must part,
And come the promised blessing here to claim,
To Jesus—"for there is none other name!"

O, world of needy hearts!
Why will ye ever seek where naught is found?
Why ache and yearn when such sweet things abound?
This Name all grace imparts;
All love, all joy, all mercy soundeth here—
"None other name" so great, so rich, so dear!

A LIVING SACRIFICE.

The success of any enterprise depends largely upon the manner in which it is commenced. It is impossible to build a firm edifice upon an unstable foundation. In all probability he will make the best scholar who is most thoroughly drilled in the fundamentals of learning. It is generally easiest as well as safest to go to the root of a difficulty. The failure to live religion is occasioned by the want of religion. The lack of practical piety results from a defect in experimental piety. The quality of the stream depends upon the fountain. To lead a life of devotedness to God, we must ourselves be devoted to God. In the twelfth chapter of Romans, we are enjoined to perform many important duties, which largely affect our welfare, and that of others. But the apostle very properly commences his injunctions with an exhortation to consecrate ourselves first of all to God.

"I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." If this first duty is promptly performed, all the others can be easily fulfilled. But if we fail here, our struggles, however earnest, to meet the other requirements, will be to no purpose.

1. We are required to present our BODIES to God. It is not enough to give him our hearts. . . . They are to be given to him to be used exclusively in his service. They are to work for HIM, and for no one else. No matter how great the wages proffered, they are to be engaged in no avocation which has a tendency to make men vicious or irreligious.—On the contrary, they must be employed in doing good. They must be incessantly engaged in promoting the welfare of our fellow beings. The direct tendency of all we do, must be to make somebody happier or better. If our bodies belong to God, then their earnings will belong to him also. These must be expended as he directs. To use the money which we earn, as we please, is to commit a breach of trust. To divert it from the purpose to which he would have it appropriated, to our own use, is to be guilty of robbing God. He positively forbids his servants to lay up treasures on earth. They are prohibited from expending their means to gratify either the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, or the pride of life. They must consecrate their gains to doing good.

If our bodies are presented to God, they must be dressed as he directs. Every earthly power prescribes the dress its soldiers are to wear. Our apparel should be comfortable and plain. If we are not of the world, we must not appear to be of the world. We must adorn ourselves "in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh those professing godliness) with good works."

In our eating and drinking we must limit ourselves to that quality and quantity, both of food and drink, which makes the body most vigorous and leaves the mind most cool and active. The servant of God is invariably a temperance man. He religiously abstains from all that injures, and so, of course, from all that intoxicates. Much of physical suffering, and of poor health, results from neglecting this exhortation of the apostle.

2. We are to present our bodies a LIVING SACRIFICE. They are to be no longer ours. All ownership over them is to be renounced. It is implied in the idea of a sacrifice that they may be completely used up in the service of God. The victim was not only brought to the Jewish altar, but it was there slain and utterly consumed. To be a sacrifice to God, we must have the martyr spirit, and be ready to suffer any thing, up to death itself, in his blessed cause.

This sacrifice should be a LIVING one. We should not wait till our bodies are worn out by indulgence, or disease, or age, and then present them to the Lord; the offering should be made when they are full of vigor. Would you employ a sick man, who refused, when he was in health, the most tempting offers to enter your service?

A living stream is one that never ceases to flow. So a living sacrifice is a perpetual one. It is offered continually. It is constantly renewed. Each day and each moment witnesses the entire consecration of the body and all its powers to God. Our government made but little headway in subduing the rebellion, with the services of men who enlisted for only a year. With the same class of men, pledged to never leave the field till the war was ended, they swept every thing before them. So the soldiers of Jesus must stand fully committed, never to retire from the conflict until death, the last enemy, is conquered. He that puts his hand to the plow and looks back is not fit for the Kingdom of God. In this service the various fluctuations of feeling are not to be regarded. The existence of that army would be short-lived whose soldiers never stood on guard or marched to battle except when they "felt like it." In these days of spiritual declension, when cold-heartedness and lukewarmness are so characteristic of the professed followers of Jesus, men are needed to push on the battle of the Lord who know know no interests but those of the cause of God, and who will not regard their own lives or reputations in defence of the pure doctrines of the gospel.

3. We must present our bodies a holy sacrifice. The bodies may be of themselves impure, but the sacrifice, if made as directed, is holy. Whatever is taken from common use and set apart to the service of the Lord, does, by such an act of consecration becomes holy. It derives its character from the sacredness of the use to which it is appropriated. If it needs moral purification, which God alone can bestow, he will make no delay in imparting it. An offering thus presented is acceptable to God. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, saith the Lord Almighty." Can any one be so stupid as to think that God does not know if there is any lack in the completeness of the offering which we bring to him? Any reservation on our part, no matter how slight it may be, will utterly vitiate the whole proceeding. You need not try so hard to believe that God receives you, while you are conscious that in some particulars, at least, you are determined to have your own way. The effort is unavailing. While you keep back part of the price God does not receive you, and if you imagine he does, you but too fatally deceive yourself. To those who present their bodies a living sacrifice to God, it is not so very difficult to exercise a saving faith in him.

Secondly, look at the reasonableness of this sacrifice.

1. Reason highly approves of our giving to every one his due. No matter how great the sum, or how protracted and unselfish the service paid to another, if a full equivalent has been received, it is entirely proper. By the common law, the son is required to serve his father for twenty-one years, or, on an average, one-third of his lifetime. No one complains of this requirement as unreasonable. But are we not a thousand times more indebted to our Heavenly Father than to our earthly parents? He gave us all our friends. Our continued existence from day to day depends upon his sovereign will alone. Every gift that we enjoy comes directly from his beneficent hand. In rendering him all the service in our power, we are but giving him back his own.

2. Reason approves of all well directed efforts to promote the welfare of mankind. The names of public benefactors are held in grateful remembrance. But God calls us to an unselfish service,—to do good, as far as possible to all mankind. Each one is required, according to his ability, to do what he can to swell the aggregate of human happiness.

3. It is reasonable for us to make proper provision for our happiness. God not only allows, but requires it. Moses, one of the most eminent of saints, had respect to the recompense of reward. But can we, by all our labor and all our pains, render ourselves happy? Without the permission of Providence, even the lowest form of happiness cannot be enjoyed. Disease in a thousand forms awaits his bidding. Death stands ready by night or by day to come at his call. How much trouble have those who live for themselves in providing for their wants! How many anxious forebodings for the future! But he who belongs to the Lord has the promise of being taken care of by one whose infinite resources can never fail. "Bread shall be given him, and his waters shall be sure." Isa. 33: 16. "The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger, but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing." Ps. 34: 10. He knows that the word of the Lord can never fail, and relying upon that he is saved from consuming care.

We are exhorted by the mercies of God to make this sacrifice. Who can resist such an appeal? The mercies of God are lavished upon us in one ceaseless shower. We can claim nothing good at the hand of God.* * * Mercy has opened for us a way of life and salvation. It has given the Son of God to make an atonement for all our sins. It has sent the Holy Spirit to warn us of our peril, lead us to repentance and newness of life. All the happiness we enjoy is the mere mercy of God.

Heed the exhortation. Make haste to present your bodies a living sacrifice to God. Let nothing be kept back. Tell the Lord he shall have all. Every faculty, every energy, is henceforth to be employed as He directs. You cannot keep yourself, but God can and will guard his own. And continue giving yourself to the Lord. The great trouble with many is, they give themselves for a time to the Lord, and then take back the offering they have made. Let it not be so with you. Every day reckon yourself to be dead indeed unto sin and alive to God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Then shall your pathway be that of the just, shining more and more unto the perfect day.—Earnest Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TIME OF THE END.

Some people are greatly agitated and seem to be offended if you speak of definite time. Why is this? I suppose I may be allowed to give my opinion on this point, and I think the reason of this agitation is simply because they do not want the Lord to come; and if such an event must take place, they are very anxious to have it postponed until their day is past. They assert their positive belief that the end will not come "in my day," but they do not give any good reason for such opinion.

Many devout and learned men have long and patiently studied this subject, and they tell us that we have been living for many years in the "time of the end," and that very soon the last hour of time will close, and the saints will take the kingdom, and possess it forever and ever. And those who thus believe "comfort one another with these words."

The evidence of the near approach of that day is not of the kind to be readily observed and acknowledged, except by those who "love His appearing." Those who do not love the Lord will say, "Where is the promise of His coming?" They do not want to see the evidence of his coming, and obstinately shut their eyes to the light. But we believe that great day is near.

Do any ask how near? We believe many who are now living with us on the earth, will be living when the Lord comes. Not only young people, but the middle aged, and even those who have long since passed their three score years and ten. People who were living at the time the sun was darkened, we believe will live (at least some of them), until that day. As the number grows smaller of those who were living at that time, our faith grows stronger that the day is near "and hasteth greatly."

But one little main thing is to be ready." Yes, that is true. A mere theoretical belief in the near approach of his coming will not avail, unless we are found of him without spot, and blameless, at his appearing. Let us, one and all, strive to be ready, having on the whole armor, being at peace with GOD, and filled with love to him and his people, and having no hard or unkind feelings toward even our worst enemies.

Some of us are passing through severe trials, and the time seems long; but it will soon be over. The glorious day is much nearer now than when we first believed. Lord, help us to "hold fast the beginning of our confidence, steadfast unto the end."

The word of Jesus is true, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself." "HE which testifieth these things saith, surely I come quickly." Amen "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Dear brethren, pray for me, for I deeply feel the need of your prayers.

Sutton, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

"MY LEANNESS, MY LEANNESS."

Jesus says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Dear brethren and sisters:—How many years have we lived in a state of unrest, laboring and being heavy laden, crying, "My leanness, my leanness," instead of finding rest to our souls, as Jesus declares we shall, if we come unto him. I must acknowledge, I have been a dull scholar to learn in the school of Christ. Forty years of my life passed before I entered this rest of faith, although a professor about twenty years previous to that time. (I speak it to my shame.) I wandered about like the children of Israel, journeying through the wilderness, full of unbelief; and should have been there to-day, had I not heeded the exhortation of the apostle Jude, to contend earnestly "for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints," and resolved on victory or death. Since which time, about ten years have elapsed. O, such powerful temptations as I then had! Said the devil, who goeth about "as a roaring lion, . . . seeking whom he may devour," There is no use in trying to get out of this state of bondage; you have tried so many times, and are now forty years old, just about to die,—will live but a little longer, will be overcome just as much; you had better stop trying—you won't succeed. But I have proved him a liar, according to the words of Christ.

So long as we remain in a state of unrest, there is something wrong; either Jesus neglects to fulfill on his part, or we neglect to come unto him. Let us search out the cause. We had better try ourselves by the word now, and square up our accounts, than to be tried by it in the last day, to our shame and everlasting contempt. Jesus says, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be be full." Fulness of joy is promised, if we keep all his commandments, which are joyous and not grievous, when we have on the gospel yoke, and do not fret and worry because we have to wear it, and run every way but the right way, like an ox unaccustomed to the yoke. When we do thus, we in like manner have to be whipped and scourged till we get into the right path and keep it.

The Scripture saith, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Perhaps a little of the love of the world has crept in, so that we need to be guarded at that point. Jesus says, "How can ye believe, which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" Perhaps we have erred in that respect, seeking honor from men, and need to set a watch there. Jesus says, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will forgive you: but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Perhaps we have indulged ourselves in harboring an unforgiving spirit, so that we cannot be forgiven according to the word. Again, Jesus says, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and follow me." Perhaps we denied ourselves, took up our cross on the Sabbath, but neglected to do the same on Monday; and spoke unadvisedly with our lips, so that those beholding us had occasion to say, What do ye more than others? that is just as I do, return railing for railing, instead of overcoming and giving a soft answer which turns away wrath, having a meek and quiet spirit like our Master. Thus we make infidels; neither entering in ourselves, nor suffering those who would to enter.

Again, Jesus says, "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." Perhaps we have been trying all this long time to pull out the mote out of our brother's eye, with a beam so large, we could not see to perform the operation. The word says, "Fret not thyself because of evil doers." We may have indulged in fretting till we have broken still another command, "Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned." Are any of us ready to say, I don't know as I am breaking any of these commandments; what more can I do? Jesus may be saying to us, "One thing thou lackest," only believe. "According to your faith be it unto you." We may have laid all on the altar, but the enemy may keep telling us, You would be exceedingly happy and joyous if you had done so. We may be in heaviness through manifold temptations; remember, the trial of your faith is more precious than gold. Let us endure hardness as good soldiers a little longer, fight the good fight of faith, and reckon ourselves dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Trust, if every thing looks dark ahead, no matter; Jesus is at the helm. None ever trusted in him and was confounded. Courage, my soul; but a few more battles to be fought, and victory is ours. C. CASE.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER VII.—Scripture Proper Names.

The oldest version of the Scriptures is the Septuagint Greek of the Old Testament, which was translated from the Hebrew original, in the third century, it is believed, before the christian era. In rendering the proper names into Greek, some change was made in the spelling; especially in the vowels, causing them to differ from those we now have in the Hebrew. The Latin, and several other early versions, followed the Septuagint in the spelling of the names. So did Wickliff's English Version, and the Douay, which were translated from the Latin Vulgate; as well as the early versions in the French, Spanish, and Italian. In these versions there is a consistency in the spelling; because they all followed, with little variation, the Greek orthography. Luther's German Version is also consistent with itself.

The learned and pious William Tyndale, having translated the New Testament into English from the original Greek, printed it in the year 1525, following the orthography of his Greek original. But afterwards, when he and his associates translated the Old Testament from the Hebrew, and there followed the Hebrew orthography, they caused a discrepancy between the spelling of several names in the Old Testament and that of the same names in the New. And this discrepancy, having been thus introduced, was not removed in the subsequent revisions; but remains to this day, in the Common Version.

For example: Noah in the Old Testament, becomes in the New Testament Noe; Boaz, Booz; and Korah, Core; each of which a person not informed might erroneously pronounce in one syllable, Noe, Booz, Core, and not understand who was meant. Shem becomes Sem; Peleg, Phalec; Reu, Ragau; Serug, Saruch; Terah, Thara; Hezron, Esrom; Nahshon, Naasson; Abijah, Abia; Uzziah, Ozias. (Luke 3: 32–36; Jude 11; Matt. 1: 3–9.) The prophet Jeremiah becomes Jeremy and Jeremias; Isaiah, Esaias; Elijah, Elias; Elisha, Eliseus; Hosea, Osee, which those not instructed would be likely to pronounce in two syllables, O-see. (Matt. 2: 17; 3: 3; 16: 14; Luke 4: 27; Rom. 9: 25.) The name Naphtali becomes Nephthalim; Zarephath, Sarepta; and Haran, Charran. (Matt. 4: 13; Luke 4: 26; Acts 7: 4.)

There is also an inconsistency in the spelling of some New Testament proper nouns. Thus the Greek names of three somewhat prominent persons, Markos, Loukas, Timotheos, are sometimes properly spelled, Mark, Luke, Timothy; and at other times are Latinized into Marcus, Lucas, Timotheus. (Col. 4: 10, 14; 2 Tim. 1: 2; 4: 11; Philem. 24; Rom. 16: 21.)

These are some of the instances of discordant spelling in the proper names of our Common English Version; and they may serve to show how desirable it is that a feature thus unpleasant and perplexing, and yet needless, should be removed. And as we have now become familiar with the Hebrew names of the Old Testament, the most suitable course would seem to be to preserve their form throughout the Bible, except where we have corresponding English names, like Eve and Job.

In the Revised New Testament this principle has been carried out; so that the Isaiah of the Old Testament, is Isaiah in the New; and Noah, Hosea, and Korah, of the Old Testament, are the same in the New. In this respect, then, while in other versions the benefit has been long enjoyed, intelligibility and consistency have now been secured in the Revised English Version of God's holy and precious Book. W. WATERHOUSE.

THE CRUSE THAT FAILETH NOT.

Is thy cruse of comfort wasting?
Rise and share it with another,
And through all thy years of famine,
It shall serve thee and thy brother.

Love divine will fill thy storehouse,
Or thy handful still renew;
Scanty fare for one will often
Make a royal feast for two.

For the heart grows rich in giving;
All its wealth is living grain,
Seeds which mildew in the garner,
Scattered, fill with gold the plain.

Is thy burden hard and heavy?
Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to bear thy brother's burden;
God will bear both it and thee.

Numb and weary on the mountains,
Would'st thou sleep amidst the snow?
Chafe the frozen form beside thee,
And together both shall glow.

Is the heart a well left empty?
None but God its void can fill;
Nothing but a ceaseless fountain
Can its ceaseless longings still.

Is the heart a living power?
Self-entwined its strength sinks low;
It can only live in loving;
And by serving, love will grow.

—Selected.

For the World's Crisis.

BE IN EARNEST.

The world is in earnest, terribly in earnest, on its downward road to perdition. There is an excited interest in speculations, in plans for the future, in politics and literature, arts, and every diabolical scheme of murder, robbery, theft, lying, cheating, slandering, and frothy babbling, with every other honest or unhallowed thing.

The world is in earnest, much more so than the church generally seems to be. Why? Is there more in these things to make people earnest? What has two men engaged in a lawsuit, or intent on a money-making speculation, to make them more in earnest than to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. That faith is particularly interesting and valuable as a legacy to the church in these days. It is put in trust of God's people as a jewel to be kept free from the rubbish of "the traditions of men" It is to be set in the phylactery of every christian, and made prominent as a thing to be kept in his memory.

Truth is involved in the christian's work, in his heart and among the people. He has a crown to win or loose, a crown of eternal life; he must fight with the world, the flesh, and the devil, to gain that crown. If he ceases to fight, it is irrecoverably lost. A thousand motives urge him to be earnestly interested, when the world has but one motive.

Why should one sit with arms folded and claim discipleship, when he lacks the quality of earnestness? The very deficiency is proof of unbelief. He does not heartily believe in the value of the truth Jesus uttered, which is always true with men everywhere, when he said, "According to your faith be it unto you." So did Solomon when he said, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," i. e., he acts out the proportion of his faith. We are living in a grand and awful time, in earnest days,—right in the bent of the lift, where it is "lift or die." Is not that enough to excite every power, natural and God-given, to the greatest degree of exercise?

David expressed this idea of earnestness when he said, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." So did Isaiah when he declared, "My heart is hot within me." That is precisely what we mean. We do not want fanaticism, that runs wild on visionary religion, but we do love the spirit of even enthusiastic earnestness in the cause of practical godliness; a lively interest in the work, which does not get to sleep and lose the stretch of the cable in drawing the load.

Come, now, brethren and sisters, take hold all together, and be alive with earnest interest, that the truth may spread, and that you may be all right yourselves. Then you will appreciate the truth better than you possibly can otherwise. Oh! for a lively interest in the work of the Lord. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

THE LAST TIMES.

Remarks of the Bishop of Oxford at a late Missionary Meeting in England.

I have no doubt myself that the last attempt upon the truth of Christ will come in, not with any open denial of its verity, but with a courteous admission of its truth. At the same time there will be a sapping of its distinctive features. I think that the aspect of men's minds at the present time shows us that this will be the form of the danger, universal toleration, toleration not only amongst christian sects, one towards another, but a deep respect for religiousness everywhere, always providing that it is not that troublesome thing which, by being believed, affects men's conduct, is any limitation upon their thoughts, or even troubles what is called the course of society. That they will all agree together to put out. I have no doubt myself that unbelief contains within itself the seed of the most intensely hating persecution the world has ever yet seen. Instead of being tolerant, I believe it is the very perfection of intolerance. I believe that the very moment it has achieved its own victory, toleration will be the thing above all others it will hate with an intensity short only of the hatred the evil spirit himself has for the simple faith of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. It must be so, I think, because unbelief in whatever form it comes, is the exaltation of the human intellect and the human will, over the voice of revelation and revealed knowledge. It is thwarted to the utmost the very moment that it is met and confronted by the mighty rock of revealed truth. The stream flows on with the most delicious smoothness when there is nothing to thwart it.

Let us all love one another. Let us be tolerant of each other's views. If you choose to worship the devil, worship him if you only do it quietly. If you choose to worship an anti-devil, do so if you do so quietly. Let us go on altogether in our worldly ways and worldly thoughts, holding nothing that may be troublesome or disagreeable. Anything disagreeable in religion is such a shocking thing. Well, then comes the most disagreeable thing possible, the revelation of an absolute truth, which says, "We will have nothing to do with this fellowship of evil. You are leading men into absolute destruction; you are promising them liberty and making them slaves; you are handing them over to the devil under the pretence of liberty and emancipation from their shackles," and forthwith these men turn upon this stern declaration of the eternal verity of God with all the hatred of the human heart which the great rebel himself can stir up within it. Believing then, as I do, that there may be heard upon the winds these footfalls of the coming of the great Antichrist; that this which we hear whispered thus, and see spreading, we know not how, through the air, is just the precursing atmosphere which comes before his advent, I say it is the time, if ever the time was, for those who fear and love the Lord to rouse themselves up and to be working mightily that they may establish indeed the hiding-places of his faith throughout the earth. Yea, the very desires of spiritual men point to the same thing. I suppose one of the greatest desires with those who are in earnest in religion, and which is altogether new to the present times, is the longing for greater unity in Christendom.—Guardian.

WORDS OF COUNSEL.

Be moderate in your estimates and desires of worldly goods.—It may seem necessary and important to you, but it is [illegible] little while. It is vanity, and may only do you mischief, instead of rendering you profit. It was a christian exhortation which the poet gave when he said,—

"Lean not on earth; 'twill pierce thee to the heart;
A broken reed at best, and oft a spear
On whose sharp point peace bleeds, and hope expires."

If you have position, influence, means, use them wisely for God, and set not your heart on them, nor be proud of them, nor glory in them. And if you are among the less favored in these respects, do not murmur nor complain, but be content with such things as you have. They that hasten to be rich pierce themselves with many sorrows; and the devotees of pleasure, while they are gay and joyous for a time, soon find, as Solomon found, that all is vanity and vexation of spirit.—Wealth is good, and all the proper pleasures of life are good, but they all perish in the using, and fail when our brief race on earth is run. Learn, then, to call them by their right names, and be not captivated by their specious show.

Seek after that which is abiding and precious.—The things of this world are vanity; but there is a world of reality and substance. There is that which can fill the soul, and make it glad, even amid privations and sufferings, and satisfy it with enduring happiness. "This is eternal life, to know the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent." "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter:—Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." With the soul anchored on the Almighty and Immutable, with the heart set to meet his will, with the life solemnly consecrated to his service, we become linked to his eternal Majesty, so as to share somewhat in his imperishable excellencies, and become "partakers of a divine nature," being the sons and heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus, with a reserved inheritance, incorruptible and unfading. Having laid hold upon the refuge set before us in the Gospel, we plant ourselves on the immutable things of God, and find strong consolation in the hope of a future of blessedness, high as heaven, changeless as God, and enduring as eternity. And why should any one cheat himself out of that glorious portion for the trifles and vanities of earth? Why should you waste your precious life running after shadows, and let go the bliss of eternal realities? What have you ever gained by neglect of God and his service and commands? What comfort does it give you as you look forward to death, judgment, and eternity? Lift up your heart, then, and pray that God may turn away your eyes from beholding vanity. Look about you, and see that the truth of God is all that is really worth your possessing, and pursue it, and hold to it at any price.

Fix your mind upon the coming again of the Lord Jesus.—He has said that he will come again. Angels have said that he will come again. The Holy Ghost, in the hearts of prophets and apostles, has given us the repeated assurance that he will come again. There is nothing that can prevent his coming; and every thing demands that he should come speedily. All the prophetic dates, at the end of which his advent is fixed, are almost run out. The signs which characterize the world when near its end are manifesting themselves on all sides. The most devout and earnest-hearted in the church, in all lands, are becoming aroused and expectant, with reference to the speedy fulfilment of all that the Scriptures have spoken. Be not indifferent, then, to the solemn subject and the blessed hope. If the indications of the nearness of that day were even far less than they are, our hearts should still be set upon it, and our lives disposed with reference to it, as freighted with all that we may covet or dread, as we are prepared or unprepared. The fewest weeds floating on the sea of time, showing that we are nearing the continent of glory—the smallest flowers, here and there, however few or fragile, heralding the approaching summer of the promised blessedness,—ought to impress us most deeply, and incite to all manner of earnest endeavor, that we may be found waiting and ready when the grand crisis comes. And though no angel from heaven be sent to you, nor any startling token like that which flashed Belshazzar's doom along his banquet halls, be made to herald to you the Savior's nearness, believe, nevertheless, that his coming is at hand, and that it is now late in the Saturday evening of this world.

Be firm and unyielding in your faith and adherence to Christ, whatever may occur.—By taking fast hold on Jesus, and making him your hope and life, you take hold of what cannot fail you, and find sanctuary amid the changeless verities of God. And if you should be reproached by the world for such oddities, care not for it. If you suffer, let it be as a christian, with meekness and forbearance, that the trial of your faith may be found unto praise, and honor, and glory. And if others mock, and continue to be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, and give themselves to vanity, let it be your part to follow the Master, to deny yourself, and to wait for your recompense at the resurrection of the just.—Prophetic Times.

For the World's Crisis.

DID THE 144,000 GO TO HEAVEN WITH CHRIST?

As truth is desirable, a few words on this point may be in place. Notice the following facts:

1. Christ is the antitypical "High Priest" (Heb. 9: 11), and has entered "into the holy place" (v. 12), which is "heaven itself" (v. 24); and since in the type "the high priest ALONE" entered the holy place, it positively follows that in the antitype Christ "ALONE" entered heaven,—not 144,000 with him; and this conclusion is in harmony with the record concerning Christ's ascension. Christ was not [illegible]

Should it be claimed that Christ might have gone with them previous to his final ascension, the following inconsistencies would be involved: (1) Christ "entered in ONCE into the holy place" (v. 12), not twice, but "once" for all; and (2) long after Christ left the earth Paul affirmed that Christ should appear the "second time," thus locating the second appearing of Christ then future, whereas this claim places his "second" coming in the past; if Christ really went to heaven with the 144,000, and returned to earth again previous to his final ascension, that would certainly constitute his second coming. As Christ was to enter the holy place, heaven itself, but "once," and as the coming out of the antitypical high Priest is still future, when did he take the 144,000 to heaven?

We are often referred to Eph. 4: 8; "When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive"; or, as the margin reads, "a multitude of captives." Certainly, resurrected saints could not be called "captives" while on their way to heaven with Christ at their head. Whiting's Translation doubtless gives the true idea: "He led the captives captive"; and a captor is one who takes a prisoner, instead of being a prisoner or captive: thus Christ triumphed over his captors; and this agrees with what the Psalmist uttered just before making the statement which Paul here quotes: "The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels; the Lord is among them" (Ps. 68: 17). At the resurrection of Christ, one angel rolled away the stone, two were seen in the sepulchre, and how many others were present we know not, but we are expressly told that at his ascension "thousands of angels" (not saints) were with him. Christ's "captors" were then led captive in his triumphant resurrection and majestic ascension, having "all power given into his hand," being surrounded with angelic legions—a triumph over death and the devil in his own case, furnishing a pledge for the same victory to all his saints. Did the 144,000 capture Christ? Then Christ did not lead them captive.

2. The 144,000, instead of going to heaven 1800 years ago, are not sealed till the opening of the sixth seal. This fact cannot be obscured. (See Rev. 7.) This fact, in connection with the foregoing considerations, should satisfy every one that the 144,000 are not now in heaven, nor are they yet sealed; but they are yet to be "redeemed from the earth" by a resurrection, not from the ranks of the Gentiles, but "out of all the tribes of the children of Israel," not being the entire Israelite harvest, but "the first fruits," having embraced christianity at an early date.

WM. SHELDON.

A SOLEMN TESTIMONY.—Dr. Spring, reviewing his long ministerial career, gives the following testimony, which is instructive, solemn, and full of warning:

"I have seen Universalists and infidels die, and during a ministry of fifty-five years I have not found a single instance of peace and joy in their new views of eternity. No, nothing but an accusing conscience, and the terrors of apprehension. I have seen men die who were men of mercurial temperament, men of pleasure and fun, men of taste and literature, lovers of the opera and theatre rather, than the house of God, and I never saw an instance in which such persons died in peace. They died as they lived. Life was a blank, and death the king of terrors,—a wasted life, an undone eternity."

☞ The man who is perplexed by religious doubts, should be advised to cure himself, not by the physic of reading and controversy, but by the diet of holy living.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 553. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 8.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON. WM. H. MITCHELL. JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER. H. V. DAVIS.
S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN,
D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth, especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart, the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"NONE OTHER NAME."

O, tender, loving heart,
Whereon are written dear and precious names,
Sweet ties which earthly friendship fondly claims,—
These all may have their part;
But thou must write above all others there,
Jesus—"none other name" so wondrous fair!

Thou weary, longing heart!
Yearning for some to cheer thee here below,
Mourning for joys thou ne'er again shalt know,
That name bids care depart!
Thou wilt not find thy comfort seeking here;
"None other name" can hush each trembling fear!

Thou joyous merry heart!
Earth's sweetness will not always last for thee;
Dark clouds will come and bid the sunshine flee,
All earthly joys depart.
And thou must look beyond to higher things;
"None other name" true joy and gladness brings!

O burdened, sinful heart!
Heavy with woe, bowed down with guilt and fear,
Salvation waits for thee, but only here!
From all else thou must part,
And come the promised blessing here to claim,
To Jesus—"for there is none other name!"

O, world of needy hearts!
Why will ye ever seek where naught is found?
Why ache and yearn when such sweet things abound?
This Name all grace imparts;
All love, all joy, all mercy soundeth here—
"None other name" so great, so rich, so dear!

A LIVING SACRIFICE.

The success of any enterprise depends largely upon the manner in which it is commenced. It is impossible to build a firm edifice upon an unstable foundation. In all probability he will make the best scholar who is most thoroughly drilled in the fundamentals of learning. It is generally easiest as well as safest to go to the root of a difficulty. The failure to live religion is occasioned by the want of religion. The lack of practical piety results from a defect in experimental piety. The quality of the stream depends upon the fountain. To lead a life of devotedness to God, we must ourselves be devoted to God. In the twelfth chapter of Romans, we are enjoined to perform many important duties, which largely affect our welfare, and that of others. But the apostle very properly commences his injunctions with an exhortation to consecrate ourselves first of all to God.

"I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." If this first duty is promptly performed, all the others can be easily fulfilled. But if we fail here, our struggles, however earnest, to meet the other requirements, will be to no purpose.

1. We are required to present our BODIES to God. It is not enough to give him our hearts. . . . They are to be given to him to be used exclusively in his service. They are to work for HIM, and for no one else. No matter how great the wages proffered, they are to be engaged in no avocation which has a tendency to make men vicious or irreligious.—On the contrary, they must be employed in doing good. They must be incessantly engaged in promoting the welfare of our fellow beings. The direct tendency of all we do, must be to make somebody happier or better. If our bodies belong to God, then their earnings will belong to him also. These must be expended as he directs. To use the money which we earn, as we please, is to commit a breach of trust. To divert it from the purpose to which he would have it appropriated, to our own use, is to be guilty of robbing God. He positively forbids his servants to lay up treasures on earth. They are prohibited from expending their means to gratify either the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, or the pride of life. They must consecrate their gains to doing good.

If our bodies are presented to God, they must be dressed as he directs. Every earthly power prescribes the dress its soldiers are to wear. Our apparel should be comfortable and plain. If we are not of the world, we must not appear to be of the world. We must adorn ourselves "in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh those professing godliness) with good works."

In our eating and drinking we must limit ourselves to that quality and quantity, both of food and drink, which makes the body most vigorous and leaves the mind most cool and active. The servant of God is invariably a temperance man. He religiously abstains from all that injures, and so, of course, from all that intoxicates. Much of physical suffering, and of poor health, results from neglecting this exhortation of the apostle.

2. We are to present our bodies a LIVING SACRIFICE. They are to be no longer ours. All ownership over them is to be renounced. It is implied in the idea of a sacrifice that they may be completely used up in the service of God. The victim was not only brought to the Jewish altar, but it was there slain and utterly consumed. To be a sacrifice to God, we must have the martyr spirit, and be ready to suffer any thing, up to death itself, in his blessed cause.

This sacrifice should be a LIVING one. We should not wait till our bodies are worn out by indulgence, or disease, or age, and then present them to the Lord; the offering should be made when they are full of vigor. Would you employ a sick man, who refused, when he was in health, the most tempting offers to enter your service?

A living stream is one that never ceases to flow. So a living sacrifice is a perpetual one. It is offered continually. It is constantly renewed. Each day and each moment witnesses the entire consecration of the body and all its powers to God. Our government made but little headway in subduing the rebellion, with the services of men who enlisted for only a year. With the same class of men, pledged to never leave the field till the war was ended, they swept every thing before them. So the soldiers of Jesus must stand fully committed, never to retire from the conflict until death, the last enemy, is conquered. He that puts his hand to the plow and looks back is not fit for the Kingdom of God. In this service the various fluctuations of feeling are not to be regarded. The existence of that army would be short-lived whose soldiers never stood on guard or marched to battle except when they "felt like it." In these days of spiritual declension, when cold-heartedness and lukewarmness are so characteristic of the professed followers of Jesus, men are needed to push on the battle of the Lord who know know no interests but those of the cause of God, and who will not regard their own lives or reputations in defence of the pure doctrines of the gospel.

3. We must present our bodies a holy sacrifice. The bodies may be of themselves impure, but the sacrifice, if made as directed, is holy. Whatever is taken from common use and set apart to the service of the Lord, does, by such an act of consecration becomes holy. It derives its character from the sacredness of the use to which it is appropriated. If it needs moral purification, which God alone can bestow, he will make no delay in imparting it. An offering thus presented is acceptable to God. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, saith the Lord Almighty." Can any one be so stupid as to think that God does not know if there is any lack in the completeness of the offering which we bring to him? Any reservation on our part, no matter how slight it may be, will utterly vitiate the whole proceeding. You need not try so hard to believe that God receives you, while you are conscious that in some particulars, at least, you are determined to have your own way. The effort is unavailing. While you keep back part of the price God does not receive you, and if you imagine he does, you but too fatally deceive yourself. To those who present their bodies a living sacrifice to God, it is not so very difficult to exercise a saving faith in him.

Secondly, look at the reasonableness of this sacrifice.

1. Reason highly approves of our giving to every one his due. No matter how great the sum, or how protracted and unselfish the service paid to another, if a full equivalent has been received, it is entirely proper. By the common law, the son is required to serve his father for twenty-one years, or, on an average, one-third of his lifetime. No one complains of this requirement as unreasonable. But are we not a thousand times more indebted to our Heavenly Father than to our earthly parents? He gave us all our friends. Our continued existence from day to day depends upon his sovereign will alone. Every gift that we enjoy comes directly from his beneficent hand. In rendering him all the service in our power, we are but giving him back his own.

2. Reason approves of all well directed efforts to promote the welfare of mankind. The names of public benefactors are held in grateful remembrance. But God calls us to an unselfish service,—to do good, as far as possible to all mankind. Each one is required, according to his ability, to do what he can to swell the aggregate of human happiness.

3. It is reasonable for us to make proper provision for our happiness. God not only allows, but requires it. Moses, one of the most eminent of saints, had respect to the recompense of reward. But can we, by all our labor and all our pains, render ourselves happy? Without the permission of Providence, even the lowest form of happiness cannot be enjoyed. Disease in a thousand forms awaits his bidding. Death stands ready by night or by day to come at his call. How much trouble have those who live for themselves in providing for their wants! How many anxious forebodings for the future! But he who belongs to the Lord has the promise of being taken care of by one whose infinite resources can never fail. "Bread shall be given him, and his waters shall be sure." Isa. 33: 16. "The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger, but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing." Ps. 34: 10. He knows that the word of the Lord can never fail, and relying upon that he is saved from consuming care.

We are exhorted by the mercies of God to make this sacrifice. Who can resist such an appeal? The mercies of God are lavished upon us in one ceaseless shower. We can claim nothing good at the hand of God.* * * Mercy has opened for us a way of life and salvation. It has given the Son of God to make an atonement for all our sins. It has sent the Holy Spirit to warn us of our peril, lead us to repentance and newness of life. All the happiness we enjoy is the mere mercy of God.

Heed the exhortation. Make haste to present your bodies a living sacrifice to God. Let nothing be kept back. Tell the Lord he shall have all. Every faculty, every energy, is henceforth to be employed as He directs. You cannot keep yourself, but God can and will guard his own. And continue giving yourself to the Lord. The great trouble with many is, they give themselves for a time to the Lord, and then take back the offering they have made. Let it not be so with you. Every day reckon yourself to be dead indeed unto sin and alive to God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Then shall your pathway be that of the just, shining more and more unto the perfect day.—Earnest Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TIME OF THE END.

Some people are greatly agitated and seem to be offended if you speak of definite time. Why is this? I suppose I may be allowed to give my opinion on this point, and I think the reason of this agitation is simply because they do not want the Lord to come; and if such an event must take place, they are very anxious to have it postponed until their day is past. They assert their positive belief that the end will not come "in my day," but they do not give any good reason for such opinion.

Many devout and learned men have long and patiently studied this subject, and they tell us that we have been living for many years in the "time of the end," and that very soon the last hour of time will close, and the saints will take the kingdom, and possess it forever and ever. And those who thus believe "comfort one another with these words."

The evidence of the near approach of that day is not of the kind to be readily observed and acknowledged, except by those who "love His appearing." Those who do not love the Lord will say, "Where is the promise of His coming?" They do not want to see the evidence of his coming, and obstinately shut their eyes to the light. But we believe that great day is near.

Do any ask how near? We believe many who are now living with us on the earth, will be living when the Lord comes. Not only young people, but the middle aged, and even those who have long since passed their three score years and ten. People who were living at the time the sun was darkened, we believe will live (at least some of them), until that day. As the number grows smaller of those who were living at that time, our faith grows stronger that the day is near "and hasteth greatly."

[illegible] ready." Yes, that is true. A mere theoretical belief in the near approach of his coming will not avail, unless we are found of him without spot, and blameless, at his appearing. Let us, one and all, strive to be ready, having on the whole armor, being at peace with GOD, and filled with love to him and his people, and having no hard or unkind feelings toward even our worst enemies.

Some of us are passing through severe trials, and the time seems long; but it will soon be over. The glorious day is much nearer now than when we first believed. Lord, help us to "hold fast the beginning of our confidence, steadfast unto the end."

The word of Jesus is true, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself." "He which testifieth these things saith, surely I come quickly." Amen "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Dear brethren, pray for me, for I deeply feel the need of your prayers.

Sutton, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

"MY LEANNESS, MY LEANNESS."

Jesus says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Dear brethren and sisters:—How many years have we lived in a state of unrest, laboring and being heavy laden, crying, "My leanness, my leanness," instead of finding rest to our souls, as Jesus declares we shall, if we come unto him. I must acknowledge, I have been a dull scholar to learn in the school of Christ. Forty years of my life passed before I entered this rest of faith, although a professor about twenty years previous to that time. (I speak it to my shame.) I wandered about like the children of Israel, journeying through the wilderness, full of unbelief; and should have been there to-day, had I not heeded the exhortation of the apostle Jude, to contend earnestly "for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints," and resolved on victory or death. Since which time, about ten years have elapsed. O, such powerful temptations as I then had! Said the devil, who goeth about "as a roaring lion, . . . seeking whom he may devour," There is no use in trying to get out of this state of bondage; you have tried so many times, and are now forty years old, just about to die,—will live but a little longer, will be overcome just as much; you had better stop trying—you won't succeed. But I have proved him a liar, according to the words of Christ.

So long as we remain in a state of unrest, there is something wrong; either Jesus neglects to fulfill on his part, or we neglect to come unto him. Let us search out the cause. We had better try ourselves by the word now, and square up our accounts, than to be tried by it in the last day, to our shame and everlasting contempt. Jesus says, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." Fulness of joy is promised, if we keep all his commandments, which are joyous and not grievous, when we have on the gospel yoke, and do not fret and worry because we have to wear it, and run every way but the right way, like an ox unaccustomed to the yoke. When we do thus, we in like manner have to be whipped and scourged till we get into the right path and keep it.

The Scripture saith, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Perhaps a little of the love of the world has crept in, so that we need to be guarded at that point. Jesus says, "How can ye believe, which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" Perhaps we have erred in that respect, seeking honor from men, and need to set a watch there. Jesus says, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will forgive you: but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Perhaps we have indulged ourselves in harboring an unforgiving spirit, so that we cannot be forgiven according to the word. Again, Jesus says, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and follow me." Perhaps we denied ourselves, took up our cross on the Sabbath, but neglected to do the same on Monday; and spoke unadvisedly with our lips, so that those beholding us had occasion to say, What do ye more than others? that is just as I do, return railing for railing, instead of overcoming and giving a soft answer which turns away wrath, having a meek and quiet spirit like our Master. Thus we make infidels; neither entering in ourselves, nor suffering those who would to enter.

Again, Jesus says, "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." Perhaps we have been trying all this long time to pull out the mote out of our brother's eye, with a beam so large, we could not see to perform the operation. The word says, "Fret not thyself because of evil doers." We may have indulged in fretting till we have broken still another command, "Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned." Are any of us ready to say, I don't know as I am breaking any of these commandments; what more can I do? Jesus may be saying to us, "One thing thou lackest," only believe. "According to your faith be it unto you." We may have laid all on the altar, but the enemy may keep telling us, You would be exceedingly happy and joyous if you had done so. We may be in heaviness through manifold temptations; remember, the trial of your faith is more precious than gold. Let us endure hardness as good soldiers a little longer, fight the good fight of faith, and reckon ourselves dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Trust, if every thing looks dark ahead. [illegible] Jesus is at the helm. None ever trusted in him and was confounded. Courage, my soul; but a few more battles to be fought, and victory is ours.

C. CASE.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER VII.—Scripture Proper Names.

The oldest version of the Scriptures is the Septuagint Greek of the Old Testament, which was translated from the Hebrew original, in the third century, it is believed, before the christian era. In rendering the proper names into Greek, some change was made in the spelling; especially in the vowels, causing them to differ from those we now have in the Hebrew. The Latin, and several other early versions, followed the Septuagint in the spelling of the names. So did Wickliff's English Version, and the Douay, which were translated from the Latin Vulgate; as well as the early versions in the French, Spanish, and Italian. In these versions there is a consistency in the spelling; because they all followed, with little variation, the Greek orthography. Luther's German Version is also consistent with itself.

The learned and pious William Tyndale, having translated the New Testament into English from the original Greek, printed it in the year 1525, following the orthography of his Greek original. But afterwards, when he and his associates translated the Old Testament from the Hebrew, and there followed the Hebrew orthography, they caused a discrepancy between the spelling of several names in the Old Testament and that of the same names in the New. And this discrepancy, having been thus introduced, was not removed in the subsequent revisions; but remains to this day, in the Common Version.

For example: Noah in the Old Testament, becomes in the New Testament Noe; Boaz, Booz; and Korah, Core; each of which a person not informed might erroneously pronounce in one syllable, Noe, Booz, Core, and not understand who was meant. Shem becomes Sem; Peleg, Phalec; Reu, Ragau; Serug, Saruch; Terah, Thara; Hezron, Esrom; Nahshon, Naasson; Abijah, Abia; Uzziah, Ozias. (Luke 3: 32–36; Jude 11; Matt. 1: 3–9.) The prophet Jeremiah becomes Jeremy and Jeremias; Isaiah, Esaias; Elijah, Elias; Elisha, Eliseus; Hosea, Osee, which those not instructed would be likely to pronounce in two syllables, O-see. (Matt. 2: 17; 3: 3; 16: 14; Luke 4: 27; Rom. 9: 25.) The name Naphtali becomes Nephthalim; Zarephath, Sarepta; and Haran, Charran. (Matt. 4: 13; Luke 4: 26; Acts 7: 4.)

There is also an inconsistency in the spelling of some New Testament proper nouns. Thus the Greek names of three somewhat prominent persons, Markos, Loukas, Timotheos, are sometimes properly spelled, Mark, Luke, Timothy; and at other times are Latinized into Marcus, Lucas, Timotheus. (Col. 4: 10, 14; 2 Tim. 1: 2; 4: 11; Philem. 24; Rom. 16: 21.)

These are some of the instances of discordant spelling in the proper names of our Common English Version; and they may serve to show how desirable it is that a feature thus unpleasant and perplexing, and yet needless, should be removed. And as we have now become familiar with the Hebrew names of the Old Testament, the most suitable course would seem to be to preserve their form throughout the Bible, except where we have corresponding English names, like Eve and Job.

In the Revised New Testament this principle has been carried out; so that the Isaiah of the Old Testament, is Isaiah in the New; and Noah, Hosea, and Korah, of the Old Testament, are the same in the New. In this respect, then, while in other versions the benefit has been long enjoyed, intelligibility and consistency have now been secured in the Revised English Version of God's holy and precious Book.

W. WATERHOUSE.

THE CRUSE THAT FAILETH NOT.

Is thy cruse of comfort wasting?
Rise and share it with another,
And through all thy years of famine,
It shall serve thee and thy brother.

Love divine will fill thy storehouse,
Or thy handful still renew;
Scanty fare for one will often
Make a royal feast for two.

For the heart grows rich in giving;
All its wealth is living grain,
Seeds which mildew in the garner,
Scattered, fill with gold the plain.

Is thy burden hard and heavy?
Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to bear thy brother's burden;
God will bear both it and thee.

Numb and weary on the mountains,
Would'st thou sleep amidst the snow?
Chafe the frozen form beside thee,
And together both shall glow.

Is the heart a well left empty?
None but God its void can fill;
Nothing but a ceaseless fountain
Can its ceaseless longings still.

Is the heart a living power?
Self-entwined its strength sinks low;
It can only live in loving;
And by serving, love will grow.

—Selected.

For the World's Crisis.

BE IN EARNEST.

The world is in earnest, terribly in earnest, on its downward road to perdition. There is an excited interest in speculations, in plans for the future, in politics and literature, arts, and every diabolical scheme of murder, robbery, theft, lying, cheating, slandering, and frothy babbling, with every other honest or unhallowed thing.

The world is in earnest, much more so than the church generally seems to be. Why? Is there more in these things to make people earnest? What has two men engaged in a lawsuit, or intent on a money-making speculation, to make them more in earnest [illegible] nestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. That faith is particularly interesting and valuable as a legacy to the church in these days. It is put in trust of God's people as a jewel to be kept free from the rubbish of "the traditions of men" It is to be set in the phylactery of every christian, and made prominent as a thing to be kept in his memory.

Truth is involved in the christian's work, in his heart and among the people. He has a crown to win or loose, a crown of eternal life; he must fight with the world, the flesh, and the devil, to gain that crown. If he ceases to fight, it is irrecoverably lost. A thousand motives urge him to be earnestly interested, when the world has but one motive.

Why should one sit with arms folded and claim discipleship, when he lacks the quality of earnestness? The very deficiency is proof of unbelief. He does not heartily believe in the value of the truth Jesus uttered, which is always true with men everywhere, when he said, "According to your faith be it unto you." So did Solomon when he said, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," i. e., he acts out the proportion of his faith. We are living in a grand and awful time, in earnest days,—right in the bent of the lift, where it is "lift or die." Is not that enough to excite every power, natural and God-given, to the greatest degree of exercise?

David expressed this idea of earnestness when he said, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." So did Isaiah when he declared, "My heart is hot within me." That is precisely what we mean. We do not want fanaticism, that runs wild on visionary religion, but we do love the spirit of even enthusiastic earnestness in the cause of practical godliness; a lively interest in the work, which does not get to sleep and lose the stretch of the cable in drawing the load.

Come, now, brethren and sisters, take hold all together, and be alive with earnest interest, that the truth may spread, and that you may be all right yourselves. Then you will appreciate the truth better than you possibly can otherwise. Oh! for a lively interest in the work of the Lord.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

THE LAST TIMES.

Remarks of the Bishop of Oxford at a late Missionary Meeting in England.

I have no doubt myself that the last attempt upon the truth of Christ will come in, not with any open denial of its verity, but with a courteous admission of its truth. At the same time there will be a sapping of its distinctive features. I think that the aspect of men's minds at the present time shows us that this will be the form of the danger, universal toleration, toleration not only amongst christian sects, one towards another, but a deep respect for religiousness everywhere, always providing that it is not that troublesome thing which, by being believed, affects men's conduct, is any limitation upon their thoughts, or even troubles what is called the course of society. That they will all agree together to put out. I have no doubt myself that unbelief contains within itself the seed of the most intensely hating persecution the world has ever yet seen. Instead of being tolerant, I believe it is the very perfection of intolerance. I believe that the very moment it has achieved its own victory, toleration will be the thing above all others it will hate with an intensity short only of the hatred the evil spirit himself has for the simple faith of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. It must be so, I think, because unbelief in whatever form it comes, is the exaltation of the human intellect and the human will, over the voice of revelation and revealed knowledge. It is thwarted to the utmost the very moment that it is met and confronted by the mighty rock of revealed truth. The stream flows on with the most delicious smoothness when there is nothing to thwart it.

Let us all love one another. Let us be tolerant of each other's views. If you choose to worship the devil, worship him if you only do it quietly. If you choose to worship an anti-devil, do so if you do so quietly. Let us go on altogether in our worldly ways and worldly thoughts, holding nothing that may be troublesome or disagreeable. Anything disagreeable in religion is such a shocking thing. Well, then comes the most disagreeable thing possible, the revelation of an absolute truth, which says, "We will have nothing to do with this fellowship of evil. You are leading men into absolute destruction; you are promising them liberty and making them slaves; you are handing them over to the devil under the pretence of liberty and emancipation from their shackles," and forthwith these men turn upon this stern declaration of the eternal verity of God with all the hatred of the human heart which the great rebel himself can stir up within it. Believing then, as I do, that there may be heard upon the winds these footfalls of the coming of the great Antichrist; that this which we hear whispered thus, and see spreading, we know not how, through the air, is just the precursing atmosphere which comes before his advent, I say it is the time, if ever the time was, for those who fear and love the Lord to rouse themselves up and to be working mightily that they may establish indeed the hiding-places of his faith throughout the earth. Yea, the very desires of spiritual men point to the same thing. I suppose one of the greatest desires with those who are in earnest in religion, and which is altogether new to the present times, is the longing for greater unity in Christendom.—Guardian.

WORDS OF COUNSEL.

Be moderate in your estimates and desires of worldly goods.—It may seem necessary and important to you, but it [illegible] little while. It is vanity, and may only do you mischief, instead of rendering you profit. It was a christian exhortation which the poet gave when he said,—

"Lean not on earth; 'twill pierce thee to the heart;
A broken reed at best, and oft a spear
On whose sharp point peace bleeds, and hope expires."

If you have position, influence, means, use them wisely for God, and set not your heart on them, nor be proud of them, nor glory in them. And if you are among the less favored in these respects, do not murmur nor complain, but be content with such things as you have. They that hasten to be rich pierce themselves with many sorrows; and the devotees of pleasure, while they are gay and joyous for a time, soon find, as Solomon found, that all is vanity and vexation of spirit.—Wealth is good, and all the proper pleasures of life are good, but they all perish in the using, and fail when our brief race on earth is run. Learn, then, to call them by their right names, and be not captivated by their specious show.

Seek after that which is abiding and precious.—The things of this world are vanity; but there is a world of reality and substance. There is that which can fill the soul, and make it glad, even amid privations and sufferings, and satisfy it with enduring happiness. "This is eternal life, to know the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent." "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter:—Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." With the soul anchored on the Almighty and Immutable, with the heart set to meet his will, with the life solemnly consecrated to his service, we become linked to his eternal Majesty, so as to share somewhat in his imperishable excellencies, and become "partakers of a divine nature," being the sons and heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus, with a reserved inheritance, incorruptible and unfading. Having laid hold upon the refuge set before us in the Gospel, we plant ourselves on the immutable things of God, and find strong consolation in the hope of a future of blessedness, high as heaven, changeless as God, and enduring as eternity. And why should any one cheat himself out of that glorious portion for the trifles and vanities of earth? Why should you waste your precious life running after shadows, and let go the bliss of eternal realities? What have you ever gained by neglect of God and his service and commands? What comfort does it give you as you look forward to death, judgment, and eternity? Lift up your heart, then, and pray that God may turn away your eyes from beholding vanity. Look about you, and see that the truth of God is all that is really worth your possessing, and pursue it, and hold to it at any price.

Fix your mind upon the coming again of the Lord Jesus.—He has said that he will come again. Angels have said that he will come again. The Holy Ghost, in the hearts of prophets and apostles, has given us the repeated assurance that he will come again. There is nothing that can prevent his coming; and every thing demands that he should come speedily. All the prophetic dates, at the end of which his advent is fixed, are almost run out. The signs which characterize the world when near its end are manifesting themselves on all sides. The most devout and earnest-hearted in the church, in all lands, are becoming aroused and expectant, with reference to the speedy fulfilment of all that the Scriptures have spoken. Be not indifferent, then, to the solemn subject and the blessed hope. If the indications of the nearness of that day were even far less than they are, our hearts should still be set upon it, and our lives disposed with reference to it, as freighted with all that we may covet or dread, as we are prepared or unprepared. The fewest weeds floating on the sea of time, showing that we are nearing the continent of glory—the smallest flowers, here and there, however few or fragile, heralding the approaching summer of the promised blessedness,—ought to impress us most deeply, and incite to all manner of earnest endeavor, that we may be found waiting and ready when the grand crisis comes. And though no angel from heaven be sent to you, nor any startling token like that which flashed Belshazzar's doom along his banquet halls, be made to herald to you the Savior's nearness, believe, nevertheless, that his coming is at hand, and that it is now late in the Saturday evening of this world.

Be firm and unyielding in your faith and adherence to Christ, whatever may occur.—By taking fast hold on Jesus, and making him your hope and life, you take hold of what cannot fail you, and find sanctuary amid the changeless verities of God. And if you should be reproached by the world for such oddities, care not for it. If you suffer, let it be as a christian, with meekness and forbearance, that the trial of your faith may be found unto praise, and honor, and glory. And if others mock, and continue to be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, and give themselves to vanity, let it be your part to follow the Master, to deny yourself, and to wait for your recompense at the resurrection of the just.—Prophetic Times.

For the World's Crisis.

DID THE 144,000 GO TO HEAVEN WITH CHRIST?

As truth is desirable, a few words on this point may be in place. Notice the following facts:

1. Christ is the antitypical "High Priest" (Heb. 9: 11), and has entered "into the holy place" (v. 12), which is "heaven itself" (v. 24); and since in the type "the high priest ALONE" entered the holy place, it positively follows that in the antitype Christ "ALONE" entered heaven,—not 144,000 with him; and this conclusion is in harmony with the record concerning Christ's ascension. Christ was not then [illegible]

Should it be claimed that Christ might have gone with them previous to his final ascension, the following inconsistencies would be involved: (1) Christ "entered in ONCE into the holy place" (v. 12), not twice, but "once" for all; and (2) long after Christ left the earth Paul affirmed that Christ should appear the "second time," thus locating the second appearing of Christ then future, whereas this claim places his "second" coming in the past; if Christ really went to heaven with the 144,000, and returned to earth again previous to his final ascension, that would certainly constitute his second coming. As Christ was to enter the holy place, heaven itself, but "once," and as the coming out of the antitypical high Priest is still future, when did he take the 144,000 to heaven?

We are often referred to Eph. 4: 8; "When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive"; or, as the margin reads, "a multitude of captives." Certainly, resurrected saints could not be called "captives" while on their way to heaven with Christ at their head. Whiting's Translation doubtless gives the true idea: "He led the captives captive"; and a captor is one who takes a prisoner, instead of being a prisoner or captive: thus Christ triumphed over his captors; and this agrees with what the Psalmist uttered just before making the statement which Paul here quotes: "The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels; the Lord is among them" (Ps. 68: 17). At the resurrection of Christ, one angel rolled away the stone, two were seen in the sepulchre, and how many others were present we know not, but we are expressly told that at his ascension "thousands of angels" (not saints) were with him. Christ's "captors" were then led captive in his triumphant resurrection and majestic ascension, having "all power given into his hand," being surrounded with angelic legions—a triumph over death and the devil in his own case, furnishing a pledge for the same victory to all his saints. Did the 144,000 capture Christ? Then Christ did not lead them captive.

2. The 144,000, instead of going to heaven 1800 years ago, are not sealed till the opening of the sixth seal. This fact cannot be obscured. (See Rev. 7.) This fact, in connection with the foregoing considerations, should satisfy every one that the 144,000 are not now in heaven, nor are they yet sealed; but they are yet to be "redeemed from the earth" by a resurrection, not from the ranks of the Gentiles, but "out of all the tribes of the children of Israel," not being the entire Israelite harvest, but "the first fruits," having embraced christianity at an early date.

WM. SHELDON.

A SOLEMN TESTIMONY.—Dr. Spring, reviewing his long ministerial career, gives the following testimony, which is instructive, solemn, and full of warning:

"I have seen Universalists and infidels die, and during a ministry of fifty-five years I have not found a single instance of peace and joy in their new views of eternity. No, nothing but an accusing conscience, and the terrors of apprehension. I have seen men die who were men of mercurial temperament, men of pleasure and fun, men of taste and literature, lovers of the opera and theatre rather, than the house of God, and I never saw an instance in which such persons died in peace. They died as they lived. Life was a blank, and death the king of terrors; a wasted life, an undone eternity."

☞ The man who is perplexed by religious doubts, should be advised to cure himself, not by the physic of reading and controversy, but by the diet of holy living.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 553. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 8.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
161 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S G MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL, JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H F CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS, S S BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN, D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth, especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart, the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"NONE OTHER NAME."

O, tender, loving heart,
Whereon are written dear and precious names,
Sweet ties which earthly friendship fondly claims,—
These all may have their part;
But thou must write above all others there,
Jesus—"none other name" so wondrous fair!

Thou weary, longing heart!
Yearning for some to cheer thee here below,
Mourning for joys thou ne'er again shalt know,
That name bids care depart!
Thou wilt not find thy comfort seeking here;
"None other name" can hush each trembling fear!

Thou joyous merry heart!
Earth's sweetness will not always last for thee;
Dark clouds will come and bid the sunshine flee,
All earthly joys depart.
And thou must look beyond to higher things,
"None other name" true joy and gladness brings!

O burdened, sinful heart!
Heavy with woe, bowed down with guilt and fear,
Salvation waits for thee, but only here!
From all else thou must part,
And come the promised blessing here to claim,
To Jesus—"for there is none other name!"

O, world of needy hearts!
Why will ye ever seek where naught is found?
Why ache and yearn when such sweet things abound?
This Name all grace imparts;
All love, all joy, all mercy soundeth here—
"None other name" so great, so rich, so dear!

A LIVING SACRIFICE.

The success of any enterprise depends largely upon the manner in which it is commenced. It is impossible to build a firm edifice upon an unstable foundation. In all probability he will make the best scholar who is most thoroughly drilled in the fundamentals of learning It is generally easiest as well as safest to go to the root of a difficulty. The failure to live religion is occasioned by the want of religion. The lack of practical piety results from a defect in experimental piety. The quality of the stream depends upon the fountain. To lead a life of devotedness to God, we must ourselves be devoted to God. In the twelfth chapter of Romans, we are enjoined to perform many important duties, which largely affect our welfare, and that of others But the apostle very properly commences his injunctions with an exhortation to consecrate ourselves first of all to God.

"I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." If this first duty is promptly performed, all the others can be easily fulfilled. But if we fail here, our struggles, however earnest, to meet the other requirements, will be to no purpose.

1. We are required to present our BODIES to God. It is not enough to give him our hearts. . . . They are to be given to him to be used exclusively in his service. They are to work for HIM, and for no one else. No matter how great the wages proffered, they are to be engaged in no avocation which has a tendency to make men vicious or irreligious.—On the contrary, they must be employed in doing good. They must be incessantly engaged in promoting the welfare of our fellow beings. The direct tendency of all we do, must be to make somebody happier or better. If our bodies belong to God, then their earnings will belong to him also. These must be expended as he directs. To use the money which we earn, as we please, is to commit a breach of trust. To divert it from the purpose to which he would have it appropriated, to our own use, is to be guilty of robbing God. He positively forbids his servants to lay up treasures on earth. They are prohibited from expending their means to gratify either the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, or the pride of life. They must consecrate their gains to doing good.

If our bodies are presented to God, they must be dressed as he directs. Every earthly power prescribes the dress its soldiers are to wear. Our apparel should be comfortable and plain. If we are not of the world, we must not appear to be of the world. We must adorn ourselves "in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh those professing godliness) with good works."

In our eating and drinking we must limit ourselves to that quality and quantity, both of food and drink, which makes the body most vigorous and leaves the mind most cool and active. The servant of God is invariably a temperance man. He religiously abstains from all that injures, and so, of course, from all that intoxicates. Much of physical suffering, and of poor health, results from neglecting this exhortation of the apostle.

2. We are to present our bodies a LIVING SACRIFICE. They are to be no longer ours. All ownership over them is to be renounced. It is implied in this idea of a sacrifice that they may be completely used up in the service of God. The victim was not only brought to the Jewish altar, but it was there slain and utterly consumed. To be a sacrifice to God, we must have the martyr spirit, and be ready to suffer any thing, up to death itself, in his blessed cause.

This sacrifice should be a LIVING one. We should not wait till our bodies are worn out by indulgence, or disease, or age, and then present them to the Lord; the offering should be made when they are full of vigor. Would you employ a sick man, who refused, when he was in health, the most tempting offers to enter your service?

A living stream is one that never ceases to flow. So a living sacrifice is a perpetual one. It is offered continually. It is constantly renewed. Each day and each moment witnesses the entire consecration of the body and all its powers to God. Our government made but little headway in subduing the rebellion, with the services of men who enlisted for only a year. With the same class of men, pledged to never leave the field till the war was ended, they swept every thing before them. So the soldiers of Jesus must stand fully committed, never to retire from the conflict until death, the last enemy, is conquered. He that puts his hand to the plow and looks back is not fit for the Kingdom of God. In this service the various fluctuations of feeling are not to be regarded. The existence of that army would be short-lived whose soldiers never stood on guard or marched to battle except when they "felt like it." In these days of spiritual declension, when cold-heartedness and lukewarmness are so characteristic of the professed followers of Jesus, men are needed to push on the battle of the Lord who know know no interests but those of the cause of God, and who will not regard their own lives or reputations in defence of the pure doctrines of the gospel.

3. We must present our bodies a holy sacrifice. The bodies may be of themselves impure, but the sacrifice, if made as directed, is holy. Whatever is taken from common use and set apart to the service of the Lord, does, by such an act of consecration becomes holy. It derives its character from the sacredness of the use to which it is appropriated. If it needs moral purification, which God alone can bestow, he will make no delay in imparting it. An offering thus presented is acceptable to God. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, saith the Lord Almighty." Can any one be so stupid as to think that God does not know if there is any lack in the completeness of the offering which we bring to him? Any reservation on our part, no matter how slight it may be, will utterly vitiate the whole proceeding. You need not try so hard to believe that God receives you, while you are conscious that in some particulars, at least, you are determined to have your own way. The effort is unavailing. While you keep back part of the price God does not receive you, and if you imagine he does, you but too fatally deceive yourself To those who present their bodies a living sacrifice to God, it is not so very difficult to exercise a saving faith in him.

Secondly, look at the reasonableness of this sacrifice.

1. Reason highly approves of our giving to every one his due. No matter how great the sum, or how protracted and unselfish the service paid to another, if a full equivalent has been received, it is entirely proper. By the common law, the son is required to serve his father for twenty-one years, or, on an average, one-third of his lifetime. No one complains of this requirement as unreasonable. But are we not a thousand times more indebted to our Heavenly Father than to our earthly parents? He gave us all our friends. Our continued existence from day to day depends upon his sovereign will alone. Every gift that we enjoy comes directly from his beneficent hand. In rendering him all the service in our power, we are but giving him back his own.

2. Reason approves of all well directed efforts to promote the welfare of mankind. The names of public benefactors are held in grateful remembrance. But God calls us to an unselfish service,—to do good, as far as possible to all mankind. Each one is required, according to his ability, to do what he can to swell the aggregate of human happiness.

3. It is reasonable for us to make proper provision for our happiness. God not only allows, but requires it. Moses, one of the most eminent of saints, had respect to the recompense of reward. But can we, by all our labor and all our pains, render ourselves happy? Without the permission of Providence, even the lowest form of happiness cannot be enjoyed. Disease in a thousand forms awaits his bidding. Death stands ready by night or by day to come at his call. How much trouble have those who live for themselves in providing for their wants! How many anxious forebodings for the future! But he who belongs to the Lord has the promise of being taken care of by one whose infinite resources can never fail. "Bread shall be given him, and his waters shall be sure." Isa. 33: 16. "The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger, but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing." Ps. 34: 10. He knows that the word of the Lord can never fail, and relying upon that he is saved from consuming care.

We are exhorted by the mercies of God to make this sacrifice. Who can resist such an appeal? The mercies of God are lavished upon us in one ceaseless shower. We can claim nothing good at the hand of God.* * * Mercy has opened for us a way of life and salvation. It has given the Son of God to make an atonement for all our sins. It has sent the Holy Spirit to warn us of our peril, lead us to repentance and newness of life. All the happiness we enjoy is the mere mercy of God.

Heed the exhortation. Make haste to present your bodies a living sacrifice to God. Let not [illegible] shall have all. Every faculty, every energy, is henceforth to be employed as He directs.

You cannot keep yourself, but God can and will guard his own. And continue giving yourself to the Lord. The great trouble with many is, they give themselves for a time to the Lord, and then take back the offering they have made. Let it not be so with you. Every day reckon yourself to be dead indeed unto sin and alive to God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Then shall your pathway be that of the just, shining more and more unto the perfect day.—Earnest Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TIME OF THE END.

Some people are greatly agitated and seem to be offended if you speak of definite time. Why is this? I suppose I may be allowed to give my opinion on this point, and I think the reason of this agitation is simply because they do not want the Lord to come; and if such an event must take place, they are very anxious to have it postponed until their day is past. They assert their positive belief that the end will not come "in my day," but they do not give any good reason for such opinion.

Many devout and learned men have long and patiently studied this subject, and they tell us that we have been living for many years in the "time of the end," and that very soon the last hour of time will close, and the saints will take the kingdom, and possess it forever and ever. And those who thus believe "comfort one another with these words."

The evidence of the near approach of that day is not of the kind to be readily observed and acknowledged, except by those who "love His appearing." Those who do not love the Lord will say, "Where is the promise of His coming?" They do not want to see the evidence of his coming, and obstinately shut their eyes to the light. But we believe that great day is near

Do any ask how near? We believe many who are now living with us on the earth, will be living when the Lord comes. Not only young people, but the middle aged, and even those who have long since passed their three score years and ten. People who were living at the time the sun was darkened, we believe will live (at least some of them), until that day. As the number grows smaller of those who were living at that time, our faith grows stronger that the day is near "and hasteth greatly."

But, says one, "the main thing is to be ready." Yes, that is true. A mere theoretical belief in the near approach of his coming will not avail, unless we are found of him without spot, and blameless, at his appearing. Let us, one and all, strive to be ready, having on the whole armor, being at peace with GOD, and filled with love to him and his people, and having no hard or unkind feelings toward even our worst enemies.

Some of us are passing through severe trials, and the time seems long; but it will soon be over. The glorious day is much nearer now than when we first believed. Lord, help us to "hold fast the beginning of our confidence, steadfast unto the end."

The word of Jesus is true, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself." "HE which testifieth these things saith, surely I come quickly." Amen "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Dear brethren, pray for me, for I deeply feel the need of your prayers.

Sutton, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

"MY LEANNESS, MY LEANNESS."

Jesus says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Dear brethren and sisters:—How many years have we lived in a state of unrest, laboring and being heavy laden, crying, "My leanness, my leanness," instead of finding rest to our souls, as Jesus declares we shall, if we come unto him. I must acknowledge, I have been a dull scholar to learn in the school of Christ. Forty years of my life passed before I entered this rest of faith, although a professor about twenty years previous to that time. (I speak it to my shame.) I wandered about like the children of Israel, journeying through the wilderness, full of unbelief; and should have been there to-day, had I not heeded the exhortation of the apostle Jude, to contend earnestly "for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints," and resolved on victory or death. Since which time, about ten years have elapsed. O, such powerful temptations as I then had! Said the devil, who goeth about "as a roaring lion, . . . seeking whom he may devour," There is no use in trying to get out of this state of bondage; you have tried so many times, and are now forty years old, just about to die,—will live but a little longer, will be overcome just as much; you had better stop trying—you won't succeed. But I have proved him a liar, according to the words of Christ.

So long as we remain in a state of unrest, there is something wrong; either Jesus neglects to fulfill on his part, or we neglect to come unto him. Let us search out the cause. We had better try ourselves by the word now, and square up our accounts, than to be tried by it in the last day, to our shame and everlasting contempt. Jesus says, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." Fulness of joy is promised, if we keep all his commandments, which are joyous and not grievous, when we have on the gospel yoke, and do not fret and worry because we have to wear it, and run every way but the right way, like an ox unaccustomed to the yoke. When we do thus, we in like manner have to be whipped and [illegible] till we get into the right path and keep it. The Scripture saith, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

Perhaps a little of the love of the world has crept in, so that we need to be guarded at that point. Jesus says, "How can ye believe, which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" Perhaps we have erred in that respect, seeking honor from men, and need to set a watch there. Jesus says, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will forgive you: but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Perhaps we have indulged ourselves in harboring an unforgiving spirit, so that we cannot be forgiven according to the word. Again, Jesus says, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and follow me." Perhaps we denied ourselves, took up our cross on the Sabbath, but neglected to do the same on Monday; and spoke unadvisedly with our lips, so that those beholding us had occasion to say, What do ye more than others? that is just as I do, return railing for railing, instead of overcoming and giving a soft answer which turns away wrath, having a meek and quiet spirit like our Master. Thus we make infidels; neither entering in ourselves, nor suffering those who would to enter.

Again, Jesus says, "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." Perhaps we have been trying all this long time to pull out the mote out of our brother's eye, with a beam so large, we could not see to perform the operation. The word says, "Fret not thyself because of evil doers." We may have indulged in fretting till we have broken still another command, "Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned." Are any of us ready to say, I don't know as I am breaking any of these commandments; what more can I do? Jesus may be saying to us, "One thing thou lackest," only believe. "According to your faith be it unto you." We may have laid all on the altar, but the enemy may keep telling us, You would be exceedingly happy and joyous if you had done so. We may be in heaviness through manifold temptations; remember, the trial of your faith is more precious than gold. Let us endure hardness as good soldiers a little longer, fight the good fight of faith, and reckon ourselves dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Trust, if every thing looks dark ahead. No matter if the waves roll mountain high, if Jesus is at the helm. None ever trusted in him and was confounded. Courage, my soul; but a few more battles to be fought, and victory is ours. C. CASE.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ON REVISION.

LETTER VII.—Scripture Proper Names.

The oldest version of the Scriptures is the Septuagint Greek of the Old Testament, which was translated from the Hebrew original, in the third century, it is believed, before the christian era. In rendering the proper names into Greek, some change was made in the spelling; especially in the vowels, causing them to differ from those we now have in the Hebrew. The Latin, and several other early versions, followed the Septuagint in the spelling of the names. So did Wickliff's English Version, and the Douay, which were translated from the Latin Vulgate; as well as the early versions in the French, Spanish, and Italian. In these versions there is a consistency in the spelling; because they all followed, with little variation, the Greek orthography. Luther's German Version is also consistent with itself.

The learned and pious William Tyndale, having translated the New Testament into English from the original Greek, printed it in the year 1525, following the orthography of his Greek original. But afterwards, when he and his associates translated the Old Testament from the Hebrew, and there followed the Hebrew orthography, they caused a discrepancy between the spelling of several names in the Old Testament and that of the same names in the New. And this discrepancy, having been thus introduced, was not removed in the subsequent revisions; but remains to this day, in the Common Version.

For example: Noah in the Old Testament, becomes in the New Testament Noe; Boaz, Booz; and Korah, Core; each of which a person not informed might erroneously pronounce in one syllable, Noe, Booz, Core, and not understand who was meant. Shem becomes Sem; Peleg, Phalec; Reu, Ragau; Serug, Saruch; Terah, Thara; Hezron, Esrom; Nahshon, Naasson; Abijah, Abia; Uzziah, Ozias. (Luke 3: 32–36; Jude 11; Matt. 1: 3–9.) The prophet Jeremiah becomes Jeremy and Jeremias; Isaiah, Esaias; Elijah, Elias; Elisha, Eliseus; Hosea, Osee, which those not instructed would be likely to pronounce in two syllables, O-see. (Matt. 2: 17; 3: 3; 16: 14; Luke 4: 27; Rom, 9: 25.) The name Naphtali becomes Nephthalim; Zarephath, Sarepta; and Haran, Charran. (Matt. 4: 13; Luke 4: 26; Acts 7: 4.)

There is also an inconsistency in the spelling of some New Testament proper nouns. Thus the Greek names of three somewhat prominent persons, Markos, Loukas, Timotheos, are sometimes properly spelled, Mark, Luke, Timothy; and at other times are Latinized into Marcus, Lucas, Timotheus. (Col. 4: 10, 14; 2 Tim. 1: 2; 4: 11; Philem. 24; Rom. 16: 21.)

These are some of the instances of discordant spelling in the proper names of our Common English Version; and they may serve to show how desirable it is that a feature thus unpleasant and perplexing, and yet needless, should be removed. And as we have now become familiar with the Hebrew names of the Old Testament, the most suitable course would seem to be to preserve their form throughout the Bible, except where we have corresponding English names, like Eve and Job.

In the Revised New Testament this principle has been carried out; so that the Isaiah of the Old Testament, is Isaiah in the New; and Noah, Hosea, and Korah, of the Old Testament, are the same in the New. In this respect, then, while in other versions the benefit has been long enjoyed, intelligibility and consistency have now been secured in the Revised English Version of God's holy and precious Book. C. W. WATERHOUSE.

THE CRUSE THAT FAILETH NOT.

Is thy cruse of comfort wasting?
Rise and share it with another,
And through all thy years of famine,
It shall serve thee and thy brother.

Love divine will fill thy storehouse,
Or thy handful still renew;
Scanty fare for one will often
Make a royal feast for two.

For the heart grows rich in giving;
All its wealth is living grain,
Seeds which mildew in the garner,
Scattered, fill with gold the plain.

Is thy burden hard and heavy?
Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to bear thy brother's burden;
God will bear both it and thee.

Numb and weary on the mountains,
Would'st thou sleep amidst the snow?
Chafe the frozen form beside thee,
And together both shall glow.

Is the heart a well left empty?
None but God its void can fill;
Nothing but a ceaseless fountain
Can its ceaseless longings still.

Is the heart a living power?
Self-entwined its strength sinks low;
It can only live in loving;
And by serving, love will grow.
—Selected.

For the World's Crisis.

BE IN EARNEST.

The world is in earnest, terribly in earnest, on its downward road to perdition. There is an excited interest in speculations, in plans for the future, in politics and literature, arts, and every diabolical scheme of murder, robbery, theft, lying, cheating, slandering, and frothy babbling, with every other honest or unhallowed thing.

The world is in earnest, much more so than the church generally seems to be. Why? Is there more in these things to make people earnest? What has two men engaged in a lawsuit, or intent on a money-making speculation, to make them more in earnest than the christian? His special direction is to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. That faith is particularly interesting and valuable as a legacy to the church in these days. It is put in trust of God's people as a jewel to be kept free from the rubbish of "the traditions of men" It is to be set in the phylactery of every christian, and made prominent as a thing to be kept in his memory.

Truth is involved in the christian's work, in his heart and among the people. He has a crown to win or loose, a crown of eternal life; he must fight with the world, the flesh, and the devil, to gain that crown. If he ceases to fight, it is irrecoverably lost. A thousand motives urge him to be earnestly interested, when the world has but one motive.

Why should one sit with arms folded and claim discipleship, when he lacks the quality of earnestness? The very deficiency is proof of unbelief. He does not heartily believe in the value of the truth Jesus uttered, which is always true with men everywhere, when he said, "According to your faith be it unto you." So did Solomon when he said, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," i. e., he acts out the proportion of his faith. We are living in a grand and awful time, in earnest days,—right in the bent of the lift, where it is "lift or die." Is not that enough to excite every power, natural and God-given, to the greatest degree of exercise?

David expressed this idea of earnestness when he said, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." So did Isaiah when he declared, "My heart is hot within me." That is precisely what we mean. We do not want fanaticism, that runs wild on visionary religion, but we do love the spirit of even enthusiastic earnestness in the cause of practical godliness; a lively interest in the work, which does not get to sleep and lose the stretch of the cable in drawing the load.

Come, now, brethren and sisters, take hold all together, and be alive with earnest interest, that the truth may spread, and that you may be all right yourselves. Then you will appreciate the truth better than you possibly can otherwise. Oh! for a lively interest in the work of the Lord. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

THE LAST TIMES.

Remarks of the Bishop of Oxford at a late Missionary Meeting in England.

I have no doubt myself that the last attempt upon the truth of Christ will come in, not with any open denial of its verity, but with a courteous admission of its truth. At the same time there will be a sapping of its distinctive features. I think that the aspect of men's minds at the present time shows us that this will be the form of the danger, universal toleration, toleration not only amongst christian sects, one towards another, but a deep respect for religiousness everywhere, always providing that it is not that troublesome thing which, by being believed, affects men's conduct, is any limitation upon their thoughts, or even troubles what is called the course of society. That they will all agree together to put out. I have no doubt myself that unbelief contains within itself the seed of the most intensely hating persecution the world has ever yet seen. Instead of being tolerant, I believe it is the very perfection of intolerance. I believe that the very moment it has achieved its own victory, toleration will be the thing above all others it will [illegible] the hatred [illegible] spirit himself has for the simple faith of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. It must be so, I think, because unbelief in whatever form it comes, is the exaltation of the human intellect and the human will, over the voice of revelation and revealed knowledge. It is thwarted to the utmost the very moment that it is met and confronted by the mighty rock of revealed truth. The stream flows on with the most delicious smoothness when there is nothing to thwart it.

Let us all love one another. Let us be tolerant of each other's views. If you choose to worship the devil, worship him if you only do it quietly. If you choose to worship an anti-devil, do so if you do so quietly. Let us go on altogether in our worldly ways and worldly thoughts, holding nothing that may be troublesome or disagreeable. Anything disagreeable in religion is such a shocking thing. Well, then comes the most disagreeable thing possible, the revelation of an absolute truth, which says, "We will have nothing to do with this fellowship of evil. You are leading men into absolute destruction; you are promising them liberty and making them slaves; you are handing them over to the devil under the pretence of liberty and emancipation from their shackles," and forthwith these men turn upon this stern declaration of the eternal verity of God with all the hatred of the human heart which the great rebel himself can stir up within it. Believing then, as I do, that there may be heard upon the winds these footfalls of the coming of the great Antichrist; that this which we hear whispered thus, and see spreading, we know not how, through the air, is just the precursing atmosphere which comes before his advent, I say it is the time, if ever the time was, for those who fear and love the Lord to rouse themselves up and to be working mightily that they may establish indeed the hiding-places of his faith throughout the earth. Yea, the very desires of spiritual men point to the same thing. I suppose one of the greatest desires with those who are in earnest in religion, and which is altogether new to the present times, is the longing for greater unity in Christendom.—Guardian.

WORDS OF COUNSEL.

Be moderate in your estimates and desires of worldly goods.—It may seem necessary and important to you, but it is not. At best it can serve you but imperfectly, and only for a little while. It is vanity, and may only do you mischief, instead of rendering you profit. It was a christian exhortation which the poet gave when he said,—

"Lean not on earth; 'twill pierce thee to the heart;
A broken reed at best, and oft a spear
On whose sharp point peace bleeds, and hope expires."

If you have position, influence, means, use them wisely for God, and set not your heart on them, nor be proud of them, nor glory in them. And if you are among the less favored in these respects, do not murmur nor complain, but be content with such things as you have. They that hasten to be rich pierce themselves with many sorrows; and the devotees of pleasure, while they are gay and joyous for a time, soon find, as Solomon found, that all is vanity and vexation of spirit.—Wealth is good, and all the proper pleasures of life are good, but they all perish in the using, and fail when our brief race on earth is run. Learn, then, to call them by their right names, and be not captivated by their specious show.

Seek after that which is abiding and precious.—The things of this world are vanity; but there is a world of reality and substance. There is that which can fill the soul, and make it glad, even amid privations and sufferings, and satisfy it with enduring happiness. "This is eternal life, to know the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent." "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter:—Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." With the soul anchored on the Almighty and Immutable, with the heart set to meet his will, with the life solemnly consecrated to his service, we become linked to his eternal Majesty, so as to share somewhat in his imperishable excellencies, and become "partakers of a divine nature," being the sons and heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus, with a reserved inheritance, incorruptible and unfading. Having laid hold upon the refuge set before us in the Gospel, we plant ourselves on the immutable things of God, and find strong consolation in the hope of a future of blessedness, high as heaven, changeless as God, and enduring as eternity. And why should any one cheat himself out of that glorious portion for the trifles and vanities of earth? Why should you waste your precious life running after shadows, and let go the bliss of eternal realities? What have you ever gained by neglect of God and his service and commands? What comfort does it give you as you look forward to death, judgment, and eternity? Lift up your heart, then, and pray that God may turn away your eyes from beholding vanity. Look about you, and see that the truth of God is all that is really worth your possessing, and pursue it, and hold to it at any price.

Fix your mind upon the coming again of the Lord Jesus.—He has said that he will come again. Angels have said that he will come again. The Holy Ghost, in the hearts of prophets and apostles, has given us the repeated assurance that he will come again. There is nothing that can prevent his coming; and every thing demands that he should come speedily. All the prophetic dates, at the end of which his advent is fixed, are almost run out. The signs which characterise the world when near its end are manifesting themselves on all sides. The most devout and earnest-hearted in the church, in all lands, are becoming aroused and expectant, with reference to [illegible] even far less than they are, our hearts should still be set upon it, and our lives disposed with reference to it, as freighted with all that we may covet or dread, as we are prepared or unprepared. The fewest weeds floating on the sea of time, showing that we are nearing the continent of glory—the smallest flowers, here and there, however few or fragile, heralding the approaching summer of the promised blessedness,—ought to impress us most deeply, and incite to all manner of earnest endeavor, that we may be found waiting and ready when the grand crisis comes. And though no angel from heaven be sent to you, nor any startling token like that which flashed Belshazzar's doom along his banquet halls, be made to herald to you the Savior's nearness, believe, nevertheless, that his coming is at hand, and that it is now late in the Saturday evening of this world.

Be firm and unyielding in your faith and adherence to Christ, whatever may occur.—By taking fast hold on Jesus, and making him your hope and life, you take hold of what cannot fail you, and find sanctuary amid the changeless verities of God. And if you should be reproached by the world for such oddities, care not for it. If you suffer, let it be as a christian, with meekness and forbearance, that the trial of your faith may be found unto praise, and honor, and glory. And if others mock, and continue to be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, and give themselves to vanity, let it be your part to follow the Master, to deny yourself, and to wait for your recompense at the resurrection of the just.—Prophetic Times.

For the World's Crisis.

DID THE 144,000 GO TO HEAVEN WITH CHRIST?

As truth is desirable, a few words on this point may be in place. Notice the following facts:

1. Christ is the antitypical "High Priest" (Heb. 9: 11), and has entered "into the holy place" (v. 12), which is "heaven itself" (v. 24); and since in the type "the high priest ALONE" entered the holy place, it positively follows that in the antitype Christ "ALONE" entered heaven,—not 144,000 with him; and this conclusion is in harmony with the record concerning Christ's ascension. Christ was not then accompanied by the 144,000, for the record gives no such intimation.

Should it be claimed that Christ might have gone with them previous to his final ascension, the following inconsistencies would be involved: (1) Christ "entered in ONCE into the holy place" (v. 12), not twice, but "once" for all; and (2) long after Christ left the earth Paul affirmed that Christ should appear the "second time," thus locating the second appearing of Christ then future, whereas this claim places his "second" coming in the past; if Christ really went to heaven with the 144,000, and returned to earth again previous to his final ascension, that would certainly constitute his second coming. As Christ was to enter the holy place, heaven itself, but "once," and as the coming out of the antitypical high Priest is still future, when did he take the 144,000 to heaven?

We are often referred to Eph. 4: 8; "When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive"; or, as the margin reads, "a multitude of captives." Certainly, resurrected saints could not be called "captives" while on their way to heaven with Christ at their head. Whiting's Translation doubtless gives the true idea: "He led the captives captive"; and a captor is one who takes a prisoner, instead of being a prisoner or captive: thus Christ triumphed over his captors; and this agrees with what the Psalmist uttered just before making the statement which Paul here quotes: "The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels; the Lord is among them" (Ps. 68: 17). At the resurrection of Christ, one angel rolled away the stone, two were seen in the sepulchre, and how many others were present we know not, but we are expressly told that at his ascension "thousands of angels" (not saints) were with him. Christ's "captors" were then led captive in his triumphant resurrection and majestic ascension, having "all power given into his hand," being surrounded with angelic legions—a triumph over death and the devil in his own case, furnishing a pledge for the same victory to all his saints. Did the 144,000 capture Christ? Then Christ did not lead them captive.

2. The 144,000, instead of going to heaven 1800 years ago, are not sealed till the opening of the sixth seal. This fact cannot be obscured. (See Rev. 7.) This fact, in connection with the foregoing considerations, should satisfy every one that the 144,000 are not now in heaven, nor are they yet sealed; but they are yet to be "redeemed from the earth" by a resurrection, not from the ranks of the Gentiles, but "out of all the tribes of the children of Israel," not being the entire Israelite harvest, but "the first fruits," having embraced christianity at an early date.

WM. SHELDON.

A SOLEMN TESTIMONY.—Dr. Spring, reviewing his long ministerial career, gives the following testimony, which is instructive, solemn, and full of warning:

"I have seen Universalists and infidels die, and during a ministry of fifty-five years I have not found a single instance of peace and joy in their new views of eternity. No, nothing but an accusing conscience, and the terrors of apprehension. I have seen men die who were men of mercurial temperament, men of pleasure and fun, men of taste and literature, lovers of the opera and theatre rather than the house of God, and I never saw an instance in which [illegible] died in peace. They died as they lived. Life was a blank, and death the king of terrors, a wasted life, an undone eternity."

☞ [illegible] by the diet of holy living.

THE WORK TO BE DONE.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS—LIBRARIES—THE PILGRIM—AND THE POOR.

A stirring appeal to the friends of Sunday-schools, appears in the Christian Advocate, from the pen of Rev. Dr. Wise, Corresponding Secretary of the Sunday-School Union. We make an extract, which we commend to the consideration of those readers of the Crisis who may have a duty to do in the matter:

"PREPARE FOR ACTION!"

"Spring is come. The short days and chilling frosts are gone. Nature helps the Sabbath-school. The gatherings of children, which were next to impossible during winter, are practicable once more. Let the friends of children in the country rally and reopen their Sunday-schools. Let city and village schools seek enlargement and recuperation.

The seamen, after running by log and compass for a few days, is careful to make sure of his latitude and longitude by taking an observation of the sun at noon or of a star at night. His safety depends upon such observations. Let Sunday-school men in schools which have been working all winter imitate him. Let them pause and take an observation.

What has been accomplished during the past six months? Has the school been full and orderly? The singing spirited? Have the recitations been satisfactory? The teachers harmonious? These are excellent things, but they are not the standards of real success. The true measure of Sunday-school success is the number of its conversions! All other gain is loss unless it results in the conversion of the children. Tried by this standard, has your Sunday-school been successful? If so, rejoice; if not, search out the cause of the failure and strive for its removal. Your scholars must be converted before they enter their teens, or most of them will be lost to the church and to Christ for ever!

In the country, schools which have been closed should be reopened as early as practicable. In both city and country a general canvass should be organized for an increase of scholars. No child should be left outside who can be gathered in. Mission schools should be established wherever they are needed. In short, the churches should enter thoroughly upon their Sunday-school work, and cultivate their schools as spiritual nurseries from which they confidently expect to shortly transplant every scholar into their own grounds."

These suggestions of a veteran in the Sunday-school cause, are applicable, not to one denomination alone, but to all. They are worthy of serious consideration, and ought to stir to immediate action every friend of the young, and especially those who are looking for the Lord. It is our duty, and ought to be our delight, to feed his lambs, and do all we can for their instruction and salvation, until he comes; and our labor in that direction should be so much the more diligently and faithfully done, as we see the day approaching.

A new and greater effort is very much needed among us, in behalf of the children and youth in our homes and neighborhoods, and in behalf of Sunday-schools. Shall we make it? We ought to have more than twice as many Sunday-schools as we now have, and twice as many scholars in them. We have been criminally negligent in these matters. Let us be so no longer. In hundreds of places, where there are no schools now, there ought to be, might be, and would be, if brethren and sisters would only make an effort. WILL THEY?

Scholars should be hunted up, and persuaded to come in; schools established and enlarged; libraries examined and put in order, the character of the works ascertained, improper ones thrown out, worn volumes rebound, torn ones replaced, and suitable additions made to those already on hand.

The Sunday-school paper should be renewed and its circulation increased, and the Young Pilgrim placed in every Sunday-school in the land, and in every family where there are children under sixteen. Without a good Sunday-school paper and good libraries, scholars cannot be attracted nor retained. Good books and papers give interest and impetus to the school. They are great helps in the work of instructing the young in truth and righteousness, and, in this reading age, they cannot be dispensed with; no Sunday-school can afford to do without them.

Poor churches, which cannot purchase libraries and Sunday-school papers for the young, are invited to let their wants and circumstances be known, and we will see what can be done for them. The Lord has the money, and he will call upon his stewards to help, where help is needed. We will give $5.00, if need be, to start the Sunday-school Fund again, for the help of Sunday-schools in destitute places. Who will give another? We have just had a call for thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim for a poor Mission School in the vicinity of New York, and have sent them. The poor and needy cry for bread, and the ignorant and benighted for light and truth. Who will give it?

Friends of the little ones—friends of Jesus—prepare for action! Go to work at once. Time is short! Do what you can, by family and Sunday-school instruction, to guard your own from the errors and perils of the last days, and to lead others into the way of truth and righteousness,—to Christ and life eternal. Do it now! God will prosper and bless you—angels rejoice over repentant sinners—and the children, when they and you shall have reached the kingdom of heaven, will rise up and call you blessed.

WILLIAM B. HERRON,
Editor Young Pilgrim.

For the World's Crisis

THE WORK IN BATH, ME.

BRO. GRANT:—Thinking my friends would like to know where I am, and how I am prospering, I occupy the present opportunity to say a word through the medium of the Crisis. I have been in Bath some over a fortnight. The meetings for the past week have been quite interesting. I have not met with so zealous a people before, who were so fully given up to the work of the Lord. Their number is small, and circumstances trying, but their zeal is great in the work of the Lord. The meetings were well attended Sunday afternoon and evening. Attention good. Several from other connections were there and took an active part in the meeting, testifying to the truth.

May God help those who are almost persuaded to receive the truth, to be not only almost, but altogether persuaded. I believe the Lord is with the church in this place, and that they will soon see the fruit of their labors,—the salvation of a few more souls.

Brethren, I am but a "bruised reed" at best, not worth much. I feel I can do but little, but what I do, I mean to do to the glory of God; and strive, if by any means I may win Christ, and attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

W. B. PERKINS.

Bath, Me.

☞ Be regular in the disposal of time; be careful of moments.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, May 9, 1866.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.00 a year; but if delayed six months beyond the time of payment, the price is $2.50 a year. Thus 50 cents a year is saved by paying in advance.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

OUR MISSIONS.

We have received very encouraging reports from the mission at St. Louis, Mo., under the care of Bro. H. K. Flagg. A hall has been dedicated for the worship of the Lord, a church organized, an evening school commenced, besides a Sabbath school. The school is under the care of Srs. Prescott and Curtiss, who are faithful servants of the Lord.

We think this mission should receive a hearty support from the friends of Jesus.

The mission at Memphis, Tenn., is in the care of Bro. I. I Leslie, and Sr. M. Butler, who are filled with the true missionary spirit, ready to suffer any thing for the good of the poor freedmen, that they are able to endure. Their situation is a trying one, because of the very strong opposition from the people against freedmen's schools. No place can be hired for a school room. One must be built or the idea of having a school abandoned in that city.

Our conviction is quite strong that the preaching of "the gospel of the kingdom" should precede the establishment of the schools, as in St. Louis; or in other words, that our great work in these last moments of time is not so much to teach the freedmen and their children to read, as to preach to them the coming of Christ and his kingdom. While they were in bondage they were deprived of the privilege of hearing about the speedy coming of the Son of man. And even now, it is no slander to say that the other missionary societies, who are laboring among the freedmen, do not teach them the immediate personal coming of our Savior, because they do not believe it themselves; hence if we do not preach this glorious truth to them, who will? If consistent with our professed faith, we think our great effort should be to get the light to them on the coming kingdom and the necessary preparation for the event.

We suggest, whether it would not be better, with our limited means, to spend our strength mostly for the conversion of the freedmen, by sending out faithful men to preach the glad tidings, that the King of glory is about to appear? Is not this in harmony with the instruction of our Savior,—"Seek ye first the the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." What is done, we think must be done quickly. We hope those who are interested in the salvation of the freedmen will send in their gifts as fast as possible, that the work may be forwarded wish renewed energy.

The Italian mission affords encouraging reports. We think there is not another man among us better prepared to fill that place than Bro. Czechowski. His heart is evidently in the work, and we trust much good will result from his labors. He has had a hard time, as we learn from private information received from one who is acquainted with the facts; but he does not murmur. Let him be well sustained in his efforts to warn the people of the approaching day of the Lord. We have reason to be thankful that there is a field opened for us to occupy, and that a man is provided to fill the station.

The Dorcas mission in Philadelphia, under the care of Bro. F. H. Burbank, also deserves the hearty support of all who love Jesus. He is doing a good work among a very needy class.

"THE LORD'S TREASURY."

It is a source of much joy to many hearts to see the treasury of the Lord filling up with the means to scatter the truth among the needy. We have now open before us a wide field for doing good. Never has there been such an effectual door open before as at the present time. The Tract Fund, Freedmen's Mission, European Mission, Poor Fund, Dorcas Mission, etc., are all important, and deserve our hearty co-operation and support. Many have done and are doing nobly for these benevolent objects. Those who give for these purposes may be sure that their money is not spent in paying salaries to agents. No one receives any pay for handling the funds sent to the Association.

As the calls for light and truth are increasing, let us make a more earnest effort to meet these calls, and sow with a liberal hand, and "in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Let us not forget that "he which soweth sparingly shall also reap sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."—2 Cor. 9: 10. There are many who are sowing "bountifully." It is well to consider that it is not the amount given that constitutes the bountiful sowing; but the amount in proportion to what one is able to do. The poor widow, who gave "two mites" "into the treasury," did "more than they all" who cast in "of their abundance," though "many that were rich cast in much." The Lord takes special notice of those who sacrifice for his cause. It often happens that the poor give much more than the rich, in the sight of the Lord, as did the poor widow to whom we have referred. We are satisfied that we often receive the widow's mite to aid us in scattering the light on the great truths we love so well. May the Lord bless them for their aid in this important work.

A Bro. M. S., from Marion, Ohio, has just sent the second hundred dollars for the benefit of the needy. He says:—

"I send another hundred dollars. I wish to place it in your hands to dispose of as you deem best for the glory of God; that the poor may be fed and clothed, and have the gospel preached to them; that souls may be converted to God, and be prepared with a wedding garment,—a robe of Christ's righteousness, that when the day and the hour shall arrive, that blessed hour when the great Deliverer shall come, they may be ready to rise and meet him with a shout of praise to God.

I wish to put this into the Lord's treasury. I think you can judge better than I where it is best to appropriate it, that it may do the most good. I know there are different ways in which it may be applied,—objects for which I would be glad to do more than I can. My heart bleeds for the southern Freedmen. I have great sympathy for the European Mission, the Dorcas mission, and the poor generally that need help.

I give this not on the Old Testament plan of giving one tenth; but rather on the instructions of the Lord Jesus, to "sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that fadeth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth." I feel much safer, and better satisfied, to give what I have above my present wants to the poor, than to try to lay it up, or keep it myself. For then I have the promise from my heavenly Father of a provision that cannot fail, for all temporal wants, and in the world to come life everlasting. I feel so much happier to trust wholly in God for these things, that I wish to give up all, and do all I can for Christ while I wait his appearing. And, with his blessing, I hope to do still more in this direction."

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16 3.

We do not see how any one can look over the world at the present time, and then read the Bible description of the state of things "in the last days," without being convinced that we are very near the end of the present dispensation. But as plain as are "the signs of the times," those who will not try to please the Lord by obeying his word, are much like the Egyptians when pursuing the Israelites,—the cloud that gave light to Israel was but darkness to Pharaoh and his hosts.

The world evidently occupies about the same position now as did the Egyptians in the midst of the Red Sea, when in pursuit of the children of the Lord for the purpose of their destruction. The enemies against the truth and its defenders are becoming very bold and defiant, and think they shall soon succeed in silencing them for ever. The Bible is daily becoming more and more an object of hate, and new efforts are being made to break the confidence of the people in its sacred teachings; but their final success will be no better than Pharaoh's when pursuing Israel. Thank the Lord for his "sure word of prophecy;" and let us all take heed to it, that we may see the bright light now shining upon the christian's pathway, showing beyond all doubt that we are almost to the day of the Lord, and the setting up of the everlasting kingdom.

Dear Brn. and Srs., this is the time to stand up for the right with lion boldness, if we do not wish to be overcome by the enemy of all righteousness. Let every soldier gird on his armor and shrink not from the most terrible charge of Satan. Our Captain is a conqueror, and victory is sure if we trust and obey him. Praise the Lord.

SACRED CONCERTS.

We very often see in the daily papers, of the different cities, notices for "Sacred Concerts." They are usually held on Sunday evening. The following is a sample:—

"SUNDAY CONCERT. Prof. Carnes will offer a rich programme of vocal and instrumental music at his sacred concert to-morrow evening at the Continental Theatre."

We think it would be just as proper to call a fashionable ball a sacred exercise, as to denominate such a musical performance a "sacred concert;" unless the day is what makes it sacred. Why should a theatre advertise for sacred concerts? For the purpose of making a kind of religious screen for those who wish to go to an opera, or some other performance at the theatre on Sunday evening. Instead of going to the theatre, they only go to a "sacred concert." As well might we call the seducer the friend of virtue, or the rumseller a public benefactor, as to call such concerts "sacred." A more appropriate term would be blasphemous concerts, where God is only mocked, instead of worshiped; and yet many professors of religion patronize these scenes of amusement, who have no time nor disposition to attend the house of prayer.

NAPOLEON AND MEXICO.

Napoleon finds it quite difficult to keep all parties quiet in relation to Mexico. The United States insist that he must withdraw his troops, and let Maximilian take care of himself, which, it is very evident, he cannot do, without some foreign aid. But if Napoleon withdraws his troops because the United States require it, it will be humiliating to France, and that will make their Emperor unpopular at home. Thus he is between two fires, and must get burnt more or less by one or the other; but we think he dreads the home fire the most, and will take measures to avoid it as much as possible. It is evident he must make some important changes soon.

Besides all this, he has the Pope's affairs in Italy to look after, and the movements of all the other political powers of the world. His great elevation is a giddy one; but he is still ascending. We think no man in modern times has had greater power than Napoleon III.; and yet he has gained it mostly by peace. He claims to be the patron of peace, and purposes to establish universal peace, as soon as he has gained a little more power; and thus make himself very popular, and receive the universal suffrage of the people, as their great leader. We are watching his movements with much interest.

A Paris correspondent of the New York Herald, under date of April 13th, writes:—

"I am enabled to state a fact which I know to be correct which may have an important bearing upon the future conduct of Napoleon in his Mexican policy. Baron Saillard, upon his return from Mexico, had several long interviews with the Emperor, and in them expressed freely to his Majesty the opinion gathered from a close observation in that country, that Maximilian had no chance of remaining in his present position any longer than he was supported by French troops, and that he believed it was the destiny of Mexico to be overrun as Texas was by emigrants from the United States.

As to the promise which the Emperor Napoleon has made to remove his troops within the next twenty months, but little is said here in the papers. Among the people throughout France there is, however, a greater feeling of impatience now than ever before at this prolonged occupation, and when the formal documents are presented to the Corps Legislatif it is expected that there will be a display of opposition on the part of Jules Favre and the other opposition members which will exceed any demonstration yet made in that body.

There was a regular panic at the Bourse yesterday, in anticipation of the speedy breaking out of war between Prussia and Austria. The Italian loan tumbled, as did all the German securities. There is no doubt expressed here that, notwithstanding the quasi denials of the Italian government, Italy is preparing for a union with Prussia as against Austria, and there is very little hope indulged in here that a war can be averted."

SPIRITUALISM EXPOSED.

Our new work on Spiritualism is now ready. Its object is to exhibit the true cause of the various phenomena of Spiritualism; also its morals, doctrines, and politics, showing that the whole system was devised by demons to overthrow the word of the Lord, and to deceive the people, for the purpose of "seducing" them away from a pure christianity and causing them to reject the Bible and the plan of salvation; as revealed in the scriptures. This has been published in compliance with the earnest solicitations of many. It contains 77 pp. Price, single copy 15 cts., 8 copies $1.00, and $10 per 100. For sale at the Crisis office.

WHAT IS THE SOUL?

W find a very honest and truthful confession from a writer in the Advent Herald, of Feb. 27th, 1866, concerning the soul of man. It reads as follows:—

"But as the soul is the life of the flesh, or the animal life, this it appears will be lost if the body is, because while the body is dead the soul is in a dormant and insensible state, thus the final destruction of the body will be the destruction of the soul, its living power. This, it appears, will be the portion of the wicked after they are raised, or the second death. That the soul is the animal life is made certain in the New Testament; and the living, mortal being, called man, is called a soul. This soul can die, and will die the second death, if the spirit of Christ is not in it, renewing the inner man. That there is nothing in the Bible about immortal souls is certain, for it is the natural and mortal man which is called a soul, and also his animal life as a part of him, man being a compound being."

The writer also very correctly remarks:—

"It is a truth that the words soul and spirit are never used interchangeably in the Bible, so they cannot mean the same; we therefore cannot understand the truth concerning these if we use them as having like import, as has been done by most writers."

We hope the writer may be led to advance another step in Bible light, where he may clearly see that the Scriptures no where teach that any thing else leaves man at death but "the breath," or spirit "of life," which "is in his nostrils." We can see no possible way to harmonize the Bible, if we attempt to make it teach that man has an 'immortal spirit,' which is the "real man," who goes to his reward or punishment at death. This view must be abandoned if we adhere to the word of the Lord; then, we think, all is harmonious, and consistent with good sense and sound philosophy.

CATHOLIC MIRACLES.

It is well known that the Catholics have claimed that some of the saints come and manifest themselves on certain occasions, and perform wonderful things. The following is a sample:

"The Florence correspondent of the Independence Belge says that a singular discovery has been made in a church in one of the faubourgs of Milan. A statue of Saint Magdelen, which has long been famous for weeping in the presence of unbelievers, was recently moved, in order to facilitate repairs for the church. It was found that the statue contained an arrangement for boiling water. The water thus produced made its way by a couple of pipes to the eyes, and trickled down upon the cheeks of the image. So the wonderful miracle was performed."

CZESHOWSKI'S THRILLING NARRATIVE.

A small edition of this work has been printed in paper covers, to be disposed of for the benefit of the European Mission. The book will be sent post-paid to every one who contributes $1.00 to the aid of the Mission. Bro. Czeschowski is in need of help. Let the friends take this means to aid him, and receive an interesting book in return. Address all orders to this office.

Lowell Street Chapel.

Meetings were held every evening last week, as usual, and the interest continues. Several were forward for prayers every night. The services were conducted through the week and last Sabbath by Eld. A. W. Sibley.

For the World's Crisis.

LITTLE WANDERER'S HOME.

Since my last article was written, we have received somewhat over a hundred dollars more toward our "Home."

$10.00 sent by a brother in Hoosick, $1.00 from North Newbury, Me., .75 from C. E. B., and .25 from her little son, of Edenboro, Pa., $1.00 from B. W., E. Boston, have been received, for which we thank them and the Lord.

We have four weeks to raise $1600.00, the sum needed in addition to what we have received and have had pledged. Pray for us.

Yours, etc., in the highways and hedges,
F. H. BURBANK.
S. W. Cor. 7th & Spring Garden Sts.

☞ Our meetings are increasing in interest, and we feel that the Lord has opened this door for us to occupy. The meeting-house has been lately repaired, is in good order and neatly arranged.
R. M'CORMICK.
Savoy, Mass.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

For the Free Distribution of Tracts.

Previous acknowledgments	$2025.33
John G. Putnam	1.00
E. M. Ripley	.75

POOR FUND DONATIONS.

To send the Crisis to the Poor.

Whole number sent free, 660. Ann'l Expense, $1400,00

Previous acknowledgments	$297.85
Geo. Storer	5.00
Sarah A. Moore	2.00
H. P. B.	1.00
Moses Smith	10.00

The American Advent Mission Society.

All communications relating to the business of the Society, and all applications for situations as teachers or missionaries, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, WILLIAM B. HERRON, "Crisis" Office, Boston.

All donations of money, or clothing, or other supplies for the Freedmen, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEORGE T. ADAMS, 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

In sending supplies, enclose in a letter to the same address a notice and list of the articles sent.

FREEDMEN'S MISSION FUND.

Previous acknowledgments	2015.34
P. M. Higgins	5.00
Wm. W. Wheeler	2.00
Wm. Ingham	1.00
Parker Dow	10.00

YOUNG PILGRIM POOR FUND.

To send the Young Pilgrim to the Poor.

200 copies are sent free to Mission School's and elsewhere.

Previous acknowledgments	$51.63
A. Fike	.30

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$475.45
J. G. Putnam	1.00

A MISSION HOUSE IN MEMPHIS.

AN APPEAL FROM THE BOARD.

To the Friends of the Freedmen:—In the providence of God, a new and most encouraging field for missionary labor is now open to our missionaries in Memphis, and calling loudly upon the Society and the brethren at large for help.

The field is wide, and entirely unoccupied and unprovided for. Extending for miles in the northern part of the city, it is filled with a large and much neglected population of freed people, who are without any means of moral and religious instruction, and anxious and pleading for "churches and schools."

This ground was had in view at the beginning of our mission work in Memphis, but could not then be obtained. Yet God, it seems, has reserved it for us; and now, by the hand and voice of his providence, he offers it to us and bids us "Occupy"!

In the whole South, there is no field more dark, and destitute, and needy, than this; and none where our missionaries and teachers will be received with more thankfulness and joy, or have a better opportunity of doing a great work for the Lord of Missions before he comes.

But the great hindrance to the work, for the present, is—the want of suitable buildings in which to teach and gather congregations and Sabbath schools. During the war, abandoned churches and unoccupied public buildings and residences were plenty, and easily to be had of the Freedmen's Bureau, for schools and mission purposes. But, since the close of the war, the return of pardoned rebels and the restoration of abandoned property has created a demand for buildings greater than the means of supply; few can be rented for any purpose, and none from the whites for Mission schools for the Freedmen. And such is the state of feeling there against Northerners, especially those who are in any way at work for the elevation of the colored people, that missionaries and teachers from the North are despised and shunned as the pariahs of society, and refused boarding in Southern families.

Our only alternative, therefore, is to build at once, on leased land, a Mission House and Chapel of our own, as kindred societies do, or abandon the field to others who are anxious to secure it. A cheap and substantial house, for meetings and schools, and for the mission family, can be put up there in a few weeks, at an expense of less than one thousand dollars; and if at any time, or for any cause, the Society should desire to dispose of it, which we do not anticipate, it can readily be sold for all it will cost.

So important and promising a field for missionary labor should not be lost to the Society by any indifference or delay. The Board have therefore instructed Bro. Leslie to lease a lot at once for the erection of a Mission House and Chapel, and have voted to appropriate $700 for that purpose. The rent of the land, and a portion of the amount required for building, it is expected, will be raised by the freedmen themselves; the remainder, by the friends of our Freedmen's Mission north.

The day and evening schools in Brown's Avenue have been put into the hands of the Misses Bywater, and Bro. Leslie and Sister Butler instructed to begin the mission work at once in the new field; occupying rooms for that purpose in a private house among the freedmen until the Chapel and Mission House shall be built. This they have done already, as appears from advices just received, and with the most encouraging prospects. Yet, limited and hindered in their operations as they are, by the want of suitable accommodations, they will not be able to accomplish the objects of the Society and the wishes of the Board, until the chapel is erected, and a place for meetings and schools provided.

The house is needed at once, and ought to be put up without delay. But the balance of funds now in the Treasury, if expended for this purpose, will not leave enough to meet the current salaries of our missionaries and teachers now in the field. Yet, believing that the Memphis Mission is of God, and that he will bless it to his glory, and to the salvation of many souls in the day of the Lord Jesus, we have determined to go on with the work, trusting in him, and in the stewards of his money, to furnish us with all the means that may be needed.

Friends of the Freedmen, we appeal to you for help. Shall the Chapel and Mission House go up, and a place be provided in which to teach and preach the gospel of the Kingdom, and instruct the poor freedmen in the ways of truth, righteousness, and salvation? What you do for them, you do for the Lord; and he will reward you when he comes. You cannot invest your monies better—be they dimes or dollars, tens or hundreds—than in the Lord's Bank, for the benefit of the Lord's poor. There they will be safe from the fires of the last day, and bring the largest dividends in the Great Day of Settlement.

The stock is good. Who will take a share in the Bank of the Lord's Freedmen? Who will aid in rearing a noble monument of christian love and benevolence at Memphis!—a monument more enduring and glorious than pillars of brass or marble,—a monument that will be remembered to your praise by hundreds of grateful hearts, when all earthly monuments and glories shall have perished forever? Who will help,—and HELP NOW?

By order of the Board,
WILLIAM B. HERRON, Sec'y.

Memphis Chapel & Mission House Fund.

We start a special fund for the above purpose, and shall be happy to receive contributions from any and all who are interested in our mission work,—even the widow's mite and the rich man's liberal offering. Who will be one of ten to give $100 each, and raise the whole at once?

Joshua V. Himes	$75.00
Solomon Hovey	25.00
William B. Herron	10.00
A. W. Sibley	3.00

For the World's Crisis.

LET EACH DO WHAT HE CAN.

No one can do every thing. God did not intend he should; for then the rest would be without employment and idle. God does not put all the work he would have done upon one man. He knows that one individual cannot do it. Even the Savior himself could not do every thing; and so he chose twelve, and then seventy apostles to assist him in the work. And even these did not do it all, for it is not all done yet.

Now there is in every age a great work to be done, and God calls upon all to help do it; and he has so proportioned the strength of the whole to the amount of work, that if each does all he can the work will be accomplished. Each then has a part to do, and that part is to do what he can. No more than this will be required; but this will be required. We can all do what we can. But while all can do this, how few there are that do it. How many are doing nothing, and how many are not doing half of what they might do. How often, too, is it the case that these persons find fault and complain that the work is not done. They look upon those who are doing all they can, and wonder why they do not do more. It seems to them that under such and such circumstances more might be accomplished. Now if these individuals would take hold of the work themselves, they might find that they could not do it all, nor perhaps more than those they now see toiling without, in their view, any great result.

Is it not also often true, that while we expect little result from our own labors, we look for and expect much from the labors of others? This should not be so. We should feel that if we are doing all we can, with a true motive and pure heart, the result may be as great as that attending the labors of others. That result may not be seen at once, by us or others. God may postpone, for some good reason, the giving of his blessing; and it may fall long after we have concluded none was to be given. The seed sown may not spring up at once; and we may conclude that it has perished in the earth; but in the great day we may find a harvest, and sheaves in the garner, having sprung from the very seed we thought was lost.

Dear brethren and sisters, you have sent us here to do a great work. You can have no greater desire than we have that it may be done. But we cannot do every thing. We cannot do all that we desire to. We are powerless only as God gives us strength and opens the way before us. You are expecting a great and glorious result from the Mission which you have sent us here to establish. Let us ask you if you are praying earnestly and in faith that what you desire and expect will be granted and accomplished. Are you still ready to do all you can to sustain us in this trying and difficult position? Will you do all you can, which is your part of this work? Do not leave it all for us to do. We will do what we can, but we cannot do it all. You can help by your prayers; you can aid by sending to the treasury what you can to carry forward the work here. All that you can give will be needed, and none of it will be wasted or spent unwisely. The work God has sent us here to do must be done by means, and that means we cannot create, but only use it as given for the accomplishment of the work. If souls are here saved, it must be by means. If they could have been saved without, our coming would have been unnecessary. We are only a part of the means required to save them. It costs the husbandman something to sow his field, and his harvest is in proportion to the expense of preparing and cultivating his land. If he plows and dresses his ground sparingly, he will reap sparingly, however good his seed may be. We are here now preparing the ground for the seed, and we need means with which to do it. This whole land is a "waste howling wilderness," and there is much to be done before it can be brought into that condition in which it will bear fruit. But it will not require a long time to do this. If the means can be had at once with which to commence the work, the seed will soon spring up, yielding a harvest satisfactory in the day of Christ.

Shall we all do what we can? God knows how much we can do, we do not; and only until after we have done what we can, shall we see what by us can be accomplished. With this we should be satisfied, and shall be when our work is done.

The most beautiful sentence ever uttered in the world was this: "She hath done what she could." God grant that he who uttered it when here in his humiliation, may repeat the same to us when he comes to be glorified. "You have done what you could."

Memphis, Tenn. I. I. LESLIE.

THE IMMORTAL SOUL.

It is a simple, spiritual essence; immortal, immaterial, intangible, indissoluble; having no exterior or interior surface; cannot be extended; it is analogous to God; cannot come in contact with matter, and does not occupy space; and, we might add, does not weigh anything.

Bishop Watson, the eminent Methodist writer, says: "I have read volumes on the nature of the soul; but I have no scruple in saying, I know nothing about it." (Watson's Memoirs, p. 24.)

He also says: "Some suppose that consciousness is an essential attribute of spirit, and the soul is naturally immortal; the former of which cannot be proved, while the latter is contradicted by the Bible, which makes our immortality a gift dependent on the will of the giver. (Institutes, v. p. 82–3.)

In his Institutes, v. 1, p. 22, he calls the doctrine of the immortality of the soul "a presumption."

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE CHURCH.

WHAT WE ARE, WHAT WE MAY BE, AND WHAT WE MUST BE.

"O Lord, revive thy work!" was the prayer of one of the holy prophets when his heart was made sad by the desolation of Zion, seeing cold formality taking the place of holy zeal; and such has been the prayer of all faithful servants of God in all ages of the world in time of declension in the church.

But the question often arises, Why are there declensions in the church, if it is the church of God? I answer, mankind are naturally inclined to walk after the imaginations of their own hearts, instead of obeying God. When God calls a people out from the world to be his peculiar people, he requires an implicit obedience to his laws, and an abiding faith in his word, and by this faith they are brought into a close union with him, who, though unseen, yet diffuses his Spirit through their hearts, causing them to rejoice in him, the God of their salvation. But, alas! we are too apt to forget God, to forget that it is by his strength we are upheld, and, falling back upon our own strength, we lose our hold upon our great supporter, and darkness and leanness of soul is the sure result; and the eye of our faith becoming dim, we cannot look up through the pillar of fire to our great Deliverer, but, like the Israelites, are too apt to desire gods that we can see with the naked eye.

We find while looking at the history of the church, back to the time of Moses, that she has been given to a perpetual backsliding, a losing sight of God, a lack of trust in the great Jehovah; and although God has watched over his church with a shepherd's care, and borne long and patiently with their wanderings, yet had it not been for a few faithful praying souls, like Moses, Elijah, and Daniel, and a weeping Jeremiah, and a little remnant of "like precious faith," all the way down through the church to the present time, God would have said long ago, as to Ephraim,—"Let her alone, she is joined to her idols." But, thank God, he has always heard the prayers of his people. He said he would be sought unto by the house of Israel, and in all times of darkness in the church, whenever there was fire enough to be kindled, it has been fanned into a flame in answer to the prayer of some pious soul who has cried mightily to God in faith—"O Lord, revive thy work!"

But revivals of the past will not suffice us. We want to see a thorough scriptural revival of pure religion in the church all over the land; and we want it now. For the past twenty years the church has been losing its power in an unusual degree. She has been uniting with the world, and instead of reforming the world and bringing it up to a level with the church, the church has lowered itself to the world. Instead of the church being the salt that preserved, the world's putrefaction has overspread the church.

Instead of our making aggressive movements upon the enemy, they have stealthily taken possession of our forts and arsenals. This is seen in our formal prayers, and our dry, theological discourses from the pulpit. Our weakness is fearfully apparent. Who avers that essays without much reference to christianity, and merely a text for a motto, with no life or power in it, is preaching Christ and him crucified? Who will claim that prayers cold and lifeless, without confession, supplication, or intercession, are ever wafted to the mercy seat? They are mockery in the sight of Jehovah. And as a result, the lives of church members proclaim a gospel robbed of its power; they are weak like other men.

This is terrible, yet terribly true. Every denomination is involved in this responsibility. All have catered to the world; all have more or less presented to the world a mutilated christianity, a sugar-coated gospel; all have adjusted Bible truths and Bible precepts to the time-serving and world-loving age.* Our prayers and praises have been suited to please the refined ear and tastes. The terrible denunciations of God's word against sin have been softened down so as not to disturb the consciences of a popular world. Sinai has ceased to thunder, and Calvary to groan. Christ, a living, risen Christ, is seldom preached and but little talked of. Many of those who have known his resurrection power have denied him by their practice. They no longer behold his bleeding hands and side, or own him as their risen Savior. It is true the excitement resulting from a bloody war in our midst for the last five years has so engrossed our minds that we have in a great degree lost sight of God; and while the war tempest has been rolling over us, we had well nigh forgotten that the Lord Jehovah liveth, and that he is the stronghold in the day of trouble. And thus a lack of confiding trust in him has resulted in bringing darkness and death into the church, making her appear weak in the sight of her enemies.

Infidelity, libertinism, and their kindred views, are prevailing, and what but a great change, an earnest seeking after God, can prevent our being carried down the stream and swallowed up in the vortex of ruin? We are living in an earnest age. Men are so full of action as to scarcely have time to think, and what thinking is done is all of earth. This generation seems to think that human reason should hold the sway, and that there is nothing higher than the human intellect. A sort of unacknowledged, unsuspected Pantheism is coming over us. God is by many shut out of his own world; nature is every-thing—its Creator nothing;—that man is accountable to no one outside of himself; thus removing God from the judgment seat, and placing man in his stead. And yet this last move of the arch enemy is so artful that we as christians are in danger of being infected by the prevailing spirit.

We never wanted more religion, nor wanted religion more, than we do now. Upon it depends whether the Supreme Being shall be any longer acknowledged by his creatures, or his very name sunk in oblivion. And yet we are not in the best state to resist the assault upon the foundations of our piety. Earnestness is going out of the church into the world; and unless it can be revived the church will go on sinking into a state of feebleness and decay. Earnest men of the world are crowding past, and thrusting aside professors of religion; and christians in such a state of things cannot stand their ground, much less advance, without a robust and athletic piety. They will be borne down as many have been already, lose their spirituality, and soon cast off their religion as a thing too lifeless for enjoyment.

But I forbear to dwell any longer on our

* I do not mean all christians, but churches as bodies.

THE WORK TO BE DONE.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS—LIBRARIES—THE PILGRIM—AND THE POOR.

A stirring appeal to the friends of Sunday-schools, appears in the Christian Advocate, from the pen of Rev. Dr. Wise, Corresponding Secretary of the Sunday-School Union. We make an extract, which we commend to the consideration of those readers of the Crisis who may have a duty to do in the matter:

"PREPARE FOR ACTION!"

"Spring is come. The short days and chilling frosts are gone. Nature helps the Sabbath-school. The gatherings of children, which were next to impossible during winter, are practicable once more. Let the friends of children in the country rally and reopen their Sunday-schools. Let city and village schools seek enlargement and recuperation.

The seamen, after running by log and compass for a few days, is careful to make sure of his latitude and longitude by taking an observation of the sun at noon or of a star at night. His safety depends upon such observations. Let Sunday-school men in schools which have been working all winter imitate him. Let them pause and take an observation.

What has been accomplished during the past six months? Has the school been full and orderly? The singing spirited? Have the recitations been satisfactory? The teachers harmonious? These are excellent things, but they are not the standards of real success. The true measure of Sunday-school success is the number of its conversions! All other gain is loss unless it results in the conversion of the children. Tried by this standard, has your Sunday-school been successful? If so, rejoice; if not, search out the cause of the failure and strive for its removal. Your scholars must be converted before they enter their teens, or most of them will be lost to the church and to Christ for ever!

In the country, schools which have been closed should be reopened as early as practicable. In both city and country a general canvass should be organized for an increase of scholars. No child should be left outside who can be gathered in. Mission schools should be established wherever they are needed. In short, the churches should enter thoroughly upon their Sunday-school work, and cultivate their schools as spiritual nurseries from which they confidently expect to shortly transplant every scholar into their own grounds."

These suggestions of a veteran in the Sunday-school cause, are applicable, not to one denomination alone, but to all. They are worthy of serious consideration, and ought to stir to immediate action every friend of the young, and especially those who are looking for the Lord. It is our duty, and ought to be our delight, to feed his lambs, and do all we can for their instruction and salvation, until he comes; and our labor in that direction should be so much the more diligently and faithfully done, as we see the day approaching.

A new and greater effort is very much needed among us, in behalf of the children and youth in our homes and neighborhoods, and in behalf of Sunday-schools. Shall we make it? We ought to have more than twice as many Sunday-schools as we now have, and twice as many scholars in them. We have been criminally negligent in these matters. Let us be so no longer. In hundreds of places, where there are no schools now, there ought to be, might be, and would be, if brethren and sisters would only make an effort. WILL THEY?

Scholars should be hunted up, and persuaded to come in; schools established and enlarged; libraries examined and put in order, the character of the works ascertained, improper ones thrown out, worn volumes rebound, torn ones replaced, and suitable additions made to those already on hand.

The Sunday-school paper should be renewed and its circulation increased, and the Young Pilgrim placed in every Sunday-school in the land, and in every family where there are children under sixteen. Without a good Sunday-school paper and good libraries, scholars cannot be attracted nor retained. Good books and papers give interest and impetus to the school. They are great helps in the work of instructing the young in truth and righteousness, and, in this reading age, they cannot be dispensed with; no Sunday-school can afford to do without them.

Poor churches, which cannot purchase libraries and Sunday-school papers for the young, are invited to let their wants and circumstances be known, and we will see what can be done for them. The Lord has the money, and he will call upon his stewards to help, where help is needed. We will give $5.00, if need be, to start the Sunday-school Fund again, for the help of Sunday-schools in destitute places. Who will give another? We have just had a call for thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim for a poor Mission School in the vicinity of New York, and have sent them. The poor and needy cry for bread, and the ignorant and benighted for light and truth. Who will give it?

Friends of the little ones—friends of Jesus—prepare for action! Go to work at once. Time is short! Do what you can, by family and Sunday-school instruction, to guard your own from the errors and perils of the last days, and to lead others into the way of truth and righteousness,—to Christ and life eternal. Do it now! God will prosper and bless you—angels rejoice over repentant sinners—and the children, when they and you shall have reached the kingdom of heaven, will rise up and call you blessed.

WILLIAM B. HERRON,
Editor Young Pilgrim.

For the World's Crisis.

THE WORK IN BATH, ME.

BRO. GRANT:—Thinking my friends would like to know where I am, and how I am prospering, I occupy the present opportunity to say a word through the medium of the Crisis. I have been in Bath some over a fortnight. The meetings for the past week have been quite interesting. I have not met with so zealous a people before, who were so fully given up to the work of the Lord. Their number is small, and circumstances trying, but their zeal is great in the work of the Lord. The meetings were well attended Sunday afternoon and evening. Attention good. Several from other connections were there and took an active part in the meeting, testifying to the truth.

May God help those who are almost persuaded to receive the truth, to be not only almost, but altogether persuaded. I believe the Lord is with the church in this place, and that they will soon see the fruit of their labors,—the salvation of a few more souls.

Brethren, I am but a "bruised reed" at best, not worth much. I feel I can do but little, but what I do, I mean to do to the glory of God; and strive, if by any means I may win Christ, and attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

W. B. PERKINS.

Bath, Me.

☞ Be regular in the disposal of time; be careful of moments.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, May 9, 1866.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year; but if delayed six months beyond the time of payment, the price is $2.80 a year. Thus 30 cents a year is saved by paying in advance.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

OUR MISSIONS.

We have received very encouraging reports from the mission at St. Louis, Mo., under the care of Bro. H. K. Flagg. A hall has been dedicated for the worship of the Lord, a church organized, an evening school commenced, besides a Sabbath school. The school is under the care of Srs. Prescott and Curtiss, who are faithful servants of the Lord.

We think this mission should receive a hearty support from the friends of Jesus.

The mission at Memphis, Tenn., is in the care of Bro. I. I Leslie, and Sr. M. Butler, who are filled with the true missionary spirit, ready to suffer any thing for the good of the poor freedmen, that they are able to endure. Their situation is a trying one, because of the very strong opposition from the people against freedmen's schools. No place can be hired for a school room. One must be built or the idea of having a school abandoned in that city.

Our conviction is quite strong that the preaching of "the gospel of the kingdom" should precede the establishment of the schools, as in St. Louis; or in other words, that our great work in these last moments of time is not so much to teach the freedmen and their children to read, as to preach to them the coming of Christ and his kingdom. While they were in bondage they were deprived of the privilege of hearing about the speedy coming of the Son of man. And even now, it is no slander to say that the other missionary societies, who are laboring among the freedmen, do not teach them the immediate personal coming of our Savior, because they do not believe it themselves; hence if we do not preach this glorious truth to them, who will? If consistent with our professed faith, we think our great effort should be to get the light to them on the coming kingdom and the necessary preparation for the event.

We suggest, whether it would not be better, with our limited means, to spend our strength mostly for the conversion of the freedmen, by sending out faithful men to preach the glad tidings, that the King of glory is about to appear? Is not this in harmony with the instruction of our Savior,—"Seek ye first the the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." What is done, we think must be done quickly. We hope those who are interested in the salvation of the freedmen will send in their gifts as fast as possible, that the work may be forwarded wish renewed energy.

The Italian mission affords encouraging reports. We think there is not another man among us better prepared to fill that place than Bro. Czechowski. His heart is evidently in the work, and we trust much good will result from his labors. He has had a hard time, as we learn from private information received from one who is acquainted with the facts; but he does not murmur. Let him be well sustained in his efforts to warn the people of the approaching day of the Lord. We have reason to be thankful that there is a field opened for us to occupy, and that a man is provided to fill the station.

The Dorcas mission in Philadelphia, under the care of Bro. F. H. Burbank, also deserves the hearty support of all who love Jesus. He is doing a good work among a very needy class.

"THE LORD'S TREASURY."

It is a source of much joy to many hearts to see the treasury of the Lord filling up with the means to scatter the truth among the needy. We have now open before us a wide field for doing good. Never has there been such an effectual door open before as at the present time. The Tract Fund, Freedmen's Mission, European Mission, Poor Fund, Dorcas Mission, etc., are all important, and deserve our hearty co-operation and support. Many have done and are doing nobly for these benevolent objects. Those who give for these purposes may be sure that their money is not spent in paying salaries to agents. No one receives any pay for handling the funds sent to the Association.

As the calls for light and truth are increasing, let us make a more earnest effort to meet these calls, and sow with a liberal hand, and "in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Let us not forget that "he which soweth sparingly shall also reap sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."—2 Cor. 9: 10. There are many who are sowing "bountifully." It is well to consider that it is not the amount given that constitutes the bountiful sowing; but the amount in proportion to what one is able to do. The poor widow, who gave "two mites" "into the treasury," did "more than they all" who cast in "of their abundance," though "many that were rich cast in much." The Lord takes special notice of those who sacrifice for his cause. It often happens that the poor give much more than the rich, in the sight of the Lord, as did the poor widow to whom we have referred. We are satisfied, that we often receive the widow's mite to aid us in scattering the light on the great truths we love so well. May the Lord bless them for their aid in this important work.

A Bro. M. S., from Marion, Ohio, has just sent the second hundred dollars for the benefit of the needy. He says:—

"I send another hundred dollars. I wish to place it in your hands to dispose of as you deem best for the glory of God; that the poor may be fed and clothed, and have the gospel preached to them; that souls may be converted to God, and be prepared with a wedding garment,—a robe of Christ's righteousness, that when the day and the hour shall arrive, that blessed hour when the great Deliverer shall come, they may be ready to rise and meet him with a shout of praise to God.

I wish to put this into the Lord's treasury. I think you can judge better than I where it is best to appropriate it, that it may do the most good. I know there are different ways in which it may be applied,—objects for which I would be glad to do more than I can. My heart bleeds for the southern Freedmen. I have great sympathy for the European Mission, the Dorcas mission, and the poor generally that need help.

I give this not on the Old Testament plan of giving one tenth; but rather on the instructions of the Lord Jesus, to "sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that fadeth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth." I feel much safer, and better satisfied, to give what I have above my present wants to the poor, than to try to lay it up, or keep it myself. For then I have the promise from my heavenly Father of a provision that cannot fail, for all temporal wants, and in the world to come life everlasting. I feel so much happier to trust wholly in God for these things, that I wish to give up all, and do all I can for Christ while I wait his appearing. And, with his blessing, I hope to do still more in this direction."

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16: 3.

We do not see how any one can look over the world at the present time, and then read the Bible description of the state of things "in the last days," without being convinced that we are very near the end of the present dispensation. But as plain as are "the signs of the times," those who will not try to please the Lord by obeying his word, are much like the Egyptians when pursuing the Israelites,—the cloud that gave light to Israel was but darkness to Pharaoh and his hosts.

The world evidently occupies about the same position now as did the Egyptians in the midst of the Red Sea, when in pursuit of the children of the Lord for the purpose of their destruction. The enemies against the truth and its defenders are becoming very bold and defiant, and think they shall soon succeed in silencing them for ever. The Bible is daily becoming more and more an object of hate, and new efforts are being made to break the confidence of the people in its sacred teachings; but their final success will be no better than Pharaoh's when pursuing Israel. Thank the Lord for his "sure word of prophecy;" and let us all take heed to it, that we may see the bright light now shining upon the christian's pathway, showing beyond all doubt that we are almost to the day of the Lord, and the setting up of the everlasting kingdom.

Dear Brn. and Srs., this is the time to stand up for the right with lion boldness, if we do not wish to be overcome by the enemy of all righteousness. Let every soldier gird on his armor and shrink not from the most terrible charge of Satan. Our Captain is a conqueror, and victory is sure if we trust and obey him. Praise the Lord.

SACRED CONCERTS.

We very often see in the daily papers, of the different cities, notices for "Sacred Concerts." They are usually held on Sunday evening. The following is a sample:—

"SUNDAY CONCERT. Prof. Carnes will offer a rich programme of vocal and instrumental music at his sacred concert to-morrow evening at the Continental Theatre."

We think it would be just as proper to call a fashionable ball a sacred exercise, as to denominate such a musical performance a "sacred concert;" unless the day is what makes it sacred. Why should a theatre advertise for sacred concerts? For the purpose of making a kind of religious screen for those who wish to go to an opera, or some other performance at the theatre on Sunday evening. Instead of going to the theatre, they only go to a "sacred concert." As well might we call the seducer the friend of virtue, or the rumseller a public benefactor, as to call such concerts "sacred." A more appropriate term would be blasphemous concerts, where God is only mocked, instead of worshiped; and yet many professors of religion patronize these scenes of amusement, who have no time nor disposition to attend the house of prayer.

NAPOLEON AND MEXICO.

Napoleon finds it quite difficult to keep all parties quiet in relation to Mexico. The United States insist that he must withdraw his troops, and let Maximilian take care of himself, which, it is very evident, he cannot do, without some foreign aid. But if Napoleon withdraws his troops because the United States require it, it will be humiliating to France, and that will make their Emperor unpopular at home. Thus he is between two fires, and must get burnt more or less by one or the other; but we think he dreads the home fire the most, and will take measures to avoid it as much as possible. It is evident he must make some important changes soon.

Besides all this, he has the Pope's affairs in Italy to look after, and the movements of all the other political powers of the world. His great elevation is a giddy one; but he is still ascending. We think no man in modern times has had greater power than Napoleon III.; and yet he has gained it mostly by peace. He claims to be the patron of peace, and purposes to establish universal peace, as soon as he has gained a little more power; and thus make himself very popular, and receive the universal suffrage of the people, as their great leader. We are watching his movements with much interest.

A Paris correspondent of the New York Herald, under date of April 13th, writes:—

"I am enabled to state a fact which I know to be correct which may have an important bearing upon the future conduct of Napoleon in his Mexican policy. Baron Gaillard, upon his return from Mexico, had several long interviews with the Emperor, and in them expressed freely to his Majesty the opinion gathered from a close observation in that country, that Maximilian had no chance of remaining in his present position any longer than he was supported by French troops, and that he believed it was the destiny of Mexico to be overrun as Texas was by emigrants from the United States.

As to the promise which the Emperor Napoleon has made to remove his troops within the next twenty months, but little is said here in the papers. Among the people throughout France there is, however, a greater feeling of impatience now than ever before at this prolonged occupation, and when the formal documents are presented to the Corps Legislatif it is expected that there will be a display of opposition on the part of Jules Favre and the other opposition members which will exceed any demonstration yet made in that body.

There was a regular panic at the Bourse yesterday, in anticipation of the speedy breaking out of war between Prussia and Austria. The Italian loan tumbled, as did all the German securities. There is no doubt expressed here that, notwitstanding the quasi denials of the Italian government, Italy is preparing for a union with Prussia as against Austria, and there is very little hope indulged in here that a war can be averted."

SPIRITUALISM EXPOSED.

Our new work on Spiritualism is now ready. Its object is to exhibit the true cause of the various phenomena of Spiritualism; also its morals, doctrines, and politics, showing that the whole system was devised by demons to overthrow the word of the Lord, and to deceive the people, for the purpose of "seducing" them away from a pure christianity and causing them to reject the Bible and the plan of salvation; as revealed in the scriptures. This has been published in compliance with the earnest solicitations of many. It contains 77 pp. Price, single copy 15 cts., 8 copies $1.00, and $10 per 100. For sale at the Crisis office.

WHAT IS THE SOUL?

W find a very honest and truthful confession from a writer in the Advent Herald, of Feb. 27th, 1866, concerning the soul of man. It reads as follows:—

"But as the soul is the life of the flesh, or the animal life, this it appears will be lost if the body is, because while the body is dead the soul is in a dormant and insensible state, thus the final destruction of the body will be the destruction of the soul, its living power. This, it appears, will be the portion of the wicked after they are raised, or the second death. That the soul is the animal life is made certain in the New Testament; and the living, mortal being, called man, is called a soul. This soul can die, and will die the second death, if the spirit of Christ is not in it, renewing the inner man. That there is nothing in the Bible about immortal souls is certain, for it is the natural and mortal man which is called a soul, and also his animal life as a part of him, man being a compound being."

The writer also very correctly remarks:—"It is a truth that the words soul and spirit are never used interchangeably in the Bible, so they cannot mean the same; we therefore cannot understand the truth concerning these if we use them as having like import, as has been done by most writers."

We hope the writer may be led to advance another step in Bible light, where he may clearly see that the Scriptures no where teach that any thing else leaves man at death but "the breath," or spirit "of life," which "is in his nostrils." We can see no possible way to harmonize the Bible, if we attempt to make it teach that man has an 'immortal spirit,' which is the "real man;" who goes to his reward or punishment at death. This view must be abandoned if we adhere to the word of the Lord; then, we think, all is harmonious, and consistent with good sense and sound philosophy.

CATHOLIC MIRACLES.

It is well known that the Catholics have claimed that some of the saints come and manifest themselves on certain occasions, and perform wonderful things. The following is a sample:

"The Florence correspondent of the Independence Belge says that a singular discovery has been made in a church in one of the faubourgs of Milan. A statue of Saint Magdelen, which has long been famous for weeping in the presence of unbelievers, was recently moved, in order to facilitate repairs for the church. It was found that the statue contained an arrangement for boiling water. The water thus produced made its way by a couple of pipes to the eyes, and trickled down upon the cheeks of the image. So the wonderful miracle was performed.

CZESHOWSKI'S THRILLING NARRATIVE.

A small edition of this work has been printed in paper covers, to be disposed of for the benefit of the European Mission. The book will be sent post-paid to every one who contributes $1.00 to the aid of the Mission. Bro. Czeschowski is in need of help. Let the friends take this means to aid him, and receive an interesting book in return. Address all orders to this office.

Lowell Street Chapel.

Meetings were held every evening last week, as usual, and the interest continues. Several were forward for prayers every night. The services were conducted through the week and last Sabbath by Eld. A. W. Sibley.

For the World's Crisis.

LITTLE WANDERER'S HOME.

Since my last article was written, we have received somewhat over a hundred dollars more toward our "Home."

$10.00 sent by a brother in Hoosick, $1.00 from North Newbury, Me., .75 from C. E. B., and .25 from her little son, of Edenboro, Pa., $1.00 from B. W., E. Boston, have been received, for which we thank them and the Lord.

We have four weeks to raise $1600.00, the sum needed in addition to what we have received and have had pledged. Pray for us.

Yours, etc., in the highways and hedges,
F. H. BURBANK.
S. W. Cor. 7th & Spring Garden Sts.

☞ Our meetings are increasing in interest, and we feel that the Lord has opened this door for us to occupy. The meeting-house has been lately repaired, is in good order and neatly arranged.

E. M'CULLOCK.
Savoy, Mass.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

For the Free Distribution of Tracts.

Previous acknowledgments	$2025.23
John G. Putnam	1.00
E. M. Ripley	.75

POOR FUND DONATIONS.

To send the Crisis to the Poor.

Whole number sent free, 660. Ann'l Expense, $1600,00

Previous acknowledgments	$797.65
Geo. Storer	5.00
Sarah A. Moore	2.00
B. P. B.	1.00
Moses Smith	10.00

The American Advent Mission Society.

All communications relating to the business of the Society, and all applications for situations as teachers or missionaries, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, WILLIAM B. HERRON, "Crisis" Office, Boston.

All donations of money, or clothing, or other supplies for the Freedmen, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEORGE T. ADAMS, 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

In sending supplies, enclose in a letter to the same address a notice and list of the articles sent.

FREEDMEN'S MISSION FUND.

Previous acknowledgments	2016.34
P. M. Higgins	5.00
Wm. W. Wheeler	2.00
Wm. Ingham	1.00
Parker Dow	10.00

YOUNG PILGRIM POOR FUND.

To send the Young Pilgrim to the Poor.

200 copies are sent free to Mission School's and elsewhere.

Previous acknowledgments	$61.53
A. Fike	.30

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$475.45
J. G. Putnam	1.00

A MISSION HOUSE IN MEMPHIS.

AN APPEAL FROM THE BOARD.

To the Friends of the Freedmen:—In the providence of God, a new and most encouraging field for missionary labor is now open to our missionaries in Memphis, and calling loudly upon the Society and the brethren at large for help.

The field is wide, and entirely unoccupied and unprovided for. Extending for miles in the northern part of the city, it is filled with a large and much neglected population of freed people, who are without any means of moral and religious instruction, and anxious and pleading for "churches and schools."

This ground was had in view at the beginning of our mission work in Memphis, but could not then be obtained. Yet God, it seems, has reserved it for us; and now, by the hand and voice of his providence, he offers it to us and bids us "Occupy"!

In the whole South, there is no field more dark, and destitute, and needy, than this; and none where our missionaries and teachers will be received with more thankfulness and joy, or have a better opportunity of doing a great work for the Lord of Missions before he comes.

But the great hindrance to the work, for the present, is—the want of suitable buildings in which to teach and gather congregations and Sabbath schools. During the war, abandoned churches and unoccupied public buildings and residences were plenty, and easily to be had of the Freedmen's Bureau, for schools and mission purposes. But, since the close of the war, the return of pardoned rebels and the restoration of abandoned property has created a demand for buildings greater than the means of supply; few can be rented for any purpose, and none from the whites for Mission schools for the Freedmen. And such is the state of feeling there against Northerners, especially those who are in any way at work for the elevation of the colored people, that missionaries and teachers from the North are despised and shunned as the pariahs of society, and refused boarding in Southern families.

Our only alternative, therefore, is to build at once, on leased land, a Mission House and Chapel of our own, as kindred societies do, or abandon the field to others who are anxious to secure it. A cheap and substantial house, for meetings and schools, and for the mission family, can be put up there in a few weeks, at an expense of less than one thousand dollars; and if at any time, or for any cause, the Society should desire to dispose of it, which we do not anticipate, it can readily be sold for all it will cost.

So important and promising a field for missionary labor should not be lost to the Society by any indifference or delay. The Board have therefore instructed Bro. Leslie to lease a lot at once for the erection of a Mission House and Chapel, and have voted to appropriate $700 for that purpose. The rent of the land, and a portion of the amount required for building, it is expected, will be raised by the freedmen themselves; the remainder, by the friends of our Freedmen's Mission north.

The day and evening schools in Brown's Avenue have been put into the hands of the Misses Bywater, and Bro. Leslie and Sister Butler instructed to begin the mission work at once in the new field; occupying rooms for that purpose in a private house among the freedmen until the Chapel and Mission House shall be built. This they have done already, as appears from advices just received, and with the most encouraging prospects. Yet, limited and hindered in their operations as they are, by the want of suitable accommodations, they will not be able to accomplish the objects of the Society and the wishes of the Board, until the chapel is erected, and a place for meetings and schools provided.

The house is needed at once, and ought to be put up without delay. But the balance of funds now in the Treasury, if expended for this purpose, will not leave enough to meet the current salaries of our missionaries and teachers now in the field. Yet, believing that the Memphis Mission is of God, and that he will bless it to his glory, and to the salvation of many souls in the day of the Lord Jesus, we have determined to go on with the work, trusting in him, and in the stewards of his money, to furnish us with all the means that may be needed.

Friends of the Freedmen, we appeal to you for help. Shall the Chapel and Mission House go up, and a place be provided in which to teach and preach the gospel of the Kingdom, and instruct the poor freedmen in the ways of truth, righteousness, and salvation? What you do for them, you do for the Lord; and he will reward you when he comes. You cannot invest your monies better—be they dimes or dollars, tens or hundreds—than in the Lord's Bank, for the benefit of the Lord's poor. There they will be safe from the fires of the last day, and bring the largest dividends in the Great Day of Settlement.

The stock is good. Who will take a share in the Bank of the Lord's Freedmen? Who will aid in rearing a noble monument of christian love and benevolence at Memphis!—a monument more enduring and glorious than pillars of brass or marble,—a monument that will be remembered to your praise by hundreds of grateful hearts, when all earthly monuments and glories shall have perished forever? Who will help,—and HELP NOW?

By order of the Board,
WILLIAM B. HERRON, Sec'y.

Memphis Chapel & Mission House Fund.

We start a special fund for the above purpose, and shall be happy to receive contributions from any and all who are interested in our mission work,—even the widow's mite and the rich man's liberal offering. Who will be one of ten to give $100 each, and raise the whole at once?

Joshua V. Himes	$75.00.
Solomon Hovey	25.00
William B. Herron	10.00
A. W. Sibley	3.00

For the World's Crisis.

LET EACH DO WHAT HE CAN.

No one can do every thing. God did not intend he should; for then the rest would be without employment and idle. God does not put all the work he would have done upon one man. He knows that one individual cannot do it. Even the Savior himself could not do every thing; and so he chose twelve, and then seventy apostles to assist him in the work. And even these did not do it all, for it is not all done yet.

Now there is in every age a great work to be done, and God calls upon all to help do it; and he has so proportioned the strength of the whole to the amount of work, that if each does all he can the work will be accomplished. Each then has a part to do, and that part is to do what he can. No more than this will be required; but this will be required. We can all do what we can. But while all can do this, how few there are that do it. How many are doing nothing, and how many are not doing half of what they might do. How often, too, is it the case that these persons find fault and complain that the work is not done. They look upon those who are doing all they can, and wonder why they do not do more. It seems to them that under such and such circumstances more might be accomplished. Now if these individuals would take hold of the work themselves, they might find that they could not do it all, nor perhaps more than those they now see toiling without, in their view, any great result.

Is it not also often true, that while we expect little result from our own labors, we look for and expect much from the labors of others? This should not be so. We should feel that if we are doing all we can, with a true motive and pure heart, the result may be as great as that attending the labors of others. That result may not be seen at once, by us or others. God may postpone, for some good reason, the giving of his blessing; and it may fall long after we have concluded none was to be given. The seed sown may not spring up at once; and we may conclude that it has perished in the earth; but in the great day we may find a harvest, and sheaves in the garner, having sprung from the very seed we thought was lost.

Dear brethren and sisters, you have sent us here to do a great work. You can have no greater desire than we have that it may be done. But we cannot do every thing. We cannot do all that we desire to. We are powerless only as God gives us strength and opens the way before us. You are expecting a great and glorious result from the Mission which you have sent us here to establish. Let us ask you if you are praying earnestly and in faith that what you desire and expect will be granted and accomplished. Are you still ready to do all you can to sustain us in this trying and difficult position? Will you do all you can, which is your part of this work? Do not leave it all for us to do. We will do what we can, but we cannot do it all. You can help by your prayers; you can aid by sending to the treasury what you can to carry forward the work here. All that you can give will be needed, and none of it will be wasted or spent unwisely. The work God has sent us here to do must be done by means, and that means we cannot create, but only use it as given for the accomplishment of the work. If souls are here saved, it must be by means. If they could have been saved without, our coming would have been unnecessary. We are only a part of the means required to save them. It costs the husbandman something to sow his field, and his harvest is in proportion to the expense of preparing and cultivating his land. If he plows and dresses his ground sparingly, he will reap sparingly, however good his seed may be. We are here now preparing the ground for the seed, and we need means with which to do it. This whole land is a "waste howling wilderness," and there is much to be done before it can be brought into that condition in which it will bear fruit. But it will not require a long time to do this. If the means can be had at once with which to commence the work, the seed will soon spring up, yielding a harvest satisfactory in the day of Christ.

Shall we all do what we can? God knows how much we can do, we do not; and only until after we have done what we can, shall we see what by us can be accomplished. With this we should be satisfied, and shall be when our work is done.

The most beautiful sentence ever uttered in the world was this: "She hath done what she could." God grant that he who uttered it when here in his humiliation, may repeat the same to us when he comes to be glorified. "You have done what you could."

Memphis, Tenn. I. I. LESLIE.

THE IMMORTAL SOUL.

It is a simple, spiritual essence; immortal, immaterial, intangible, indissoluble; having no exterior or interior surface; cannot be extended; it is analagous to God; cannot come in contact with matter, and does not occupy space; and, we might add, does not weigh anything.

Bishop Watson, the eminent Methodist writer, says: "I have read volumes on the nature of the soul; but I have no scruple in saying, I know nothing about it." (Watson's Memoirs, p. 24.)

He also says: "Some suppose that consciousness is an essential attribute of spirit, and the soul is naturally immortal; the former of which cannot be proved, while the latter is contradicted by the Bible, which makes our immortality a gift dependent on the will of the giver. (Institutes, v. p. 82–3.)

In his Institutes, v. 1, p. 22, he calls the doctrine of the immortality of the soul "a presumption."

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE CHURCH.

WHAT WE ARE, WHAT WE MAY BE, AND WHAT WE MUST BE.

"O Lord, revive thy work!" was the prayer of one of the holy prophets when his heart was made sad by the desolation of Zion, seeing cold formality taking the place of holy zeal; and such has been the prayer of all faithful servants of God in all ages of the world in time of declension in the church.

But the question often arises, Why are there declensions in the church, if it is the church of God? I answer, mankind are naturally inclined to walk after the imaginations of their own hearts, instead of obeying God. When God calls a people out from the world to be his peculiar people, he requires an implicit obedience to his laws, and an abiding faith in his word, and by this faith they are brought into a close union with him, who, though unseen, yet diffuses his Spirit through their hearts, causing them to rejoice in him, the God of their salvation. But, alas! we are too apt to forget God, to forget that it is by his strength we are upheld, and, falling back upon our own strength, we lose our hold upon our great supporter, and darkness and leanness of soul is the sure result; and the eye of our faith becoming dim, we cannot look up through the pillar of fire to our great Deliverer, but, like the Israelites, are too apt to desire gods that we can see with the naked eye.

We find while looking at the history of the church, back to the time of Moses, that she has been given to a perpetual backsliding, a losing sight of God, a lack of trust in the great Jehovah; and although God has watched over his church with a shepherd's care, and borne long and patiently with their wanderings, yet had it not been for a few faithful, praying souls, like Moses, Elijah, and Daniel, and a weeping Jeremiah, and a little remnant of "like precious faith," all the way down through the church to the present time, God would have said long ago, as to Ephraim,—"Let her alone, she is joined to her idols." But, thank God, he has always heard the prayers of his people. He said he would be sought unto by the house of Israel, and in all times of darkness in the church, whenever there was fire enough to be kindled, it has been fanned into a flame in answer to the prayer of some pious soul who has cried mightily to God in faith—"O Lord, revive thy work!"

But revivals of the past will not suffice us. We want to see a thorough scriptural revival of pure religion in the church all over the land; and we want it now. For the past twenty years the church has been losing its power in an unusual degree. She has been uniting with the world, and instead of reforming the world and bringing it up to a level with the church, the church has lowered itself to the world. Instead of the church being the salt that preserved, the world's putrefaction has overspread the church.

Instead of our making aggressive movements upon the enemy, they have stealthily taken possession of our forts and arsenals. This is seen in our formal prayers, and our dry, theological discourses from the pulpit. Our weakness is fearfully apparent. Who avers that essays without much reference to christianity, and merely a text for a motto, with no life or power in it, is preaching Christ and him crucified? Who will claim that prayers cold and lifeless, without confession, supplication, or intercession, are ever wafted to the mercy seat? They are mockery in the sight of Jehovah. And as a result, the lives of church members proclaim a gospel robbed of its power; they are weak like other men.

This is terrible, yet terribly true. Every denomination is involved in this responsibility. All have catered to the world; all have more or less presented to the world a mutilated christianity, a sugar-coated gospel; all have adjusted Bible truths and Bible precepts to the time-serving and world-loving age.* Our prayers and praises have been suited to please the refined ear and tastes. The terrible denunciations of God's word against sin have been softened down so as not to disturb the consciences of a popular world. Sinai has ceased to thunder, and Calvary to groan. Christ, a living, risen Christ, is seldom preached and but little talked of. Many of those who have known his resurrection power have denied him by their practice. They no longer behold his bleeding hands and side, or own him as their risen Savior. It is true the excitement resulting from a bloody war in our midst for the last five years has so engrossed our minds that we have in a great degree lost sight of God; and while the war tempest has been rolling over us, we had well nigh forgotten that the Lord Jehovah liveth, and that he is the stronghold in the day of trouble. And thus a lack of confiding trust in him has resulted in bringing darkness and death into the church, making her appear weak in the sight of her enemies.

Infidelity, libertinism, and their kindred views, are prevailing, and what but a great change, an earnest seeking after God, can prevent our being carried down the stream and swallowed up in the vortex of ruin? We are living in an earnest age. Men are so full of action as to scarcely have time to think, and what thinking is done is all of earth. This generation seems to think that human reason should hold the sway, and that there is nothing higher than the human intellect. A sort of unacknowledged, unsuspected Pantheism is coming over us. God is by many shut out of his own world; nature is every-thing—its Creator nothing;—that man is accountable to no one outside of himself; thus removing God from the judgment seat, and placing man in his stead. And yet this last move of the arch enemy is so artful that we as christians are in danger of being infected by the prevailing spirit.

We never wanted more religion, nor wanted religion more, than we do now. Upon it depends whether the Supreme Being shall be any longer acknowledged by his creatures, or his very name sunk in oblivion. And yet we are not in the best state to resist the assault upon the foundations of our piety. Earnestness is going out of the church into the world; and unless it can be revived the church will go on sinking into a state of feebleness and decay. Earnest men of the world are crowding past, and thrusting aside professors of religion; and christians in such a state of things cannot stand their ground, much less advance, without a robust and athletic piety. They will be borne down as many have been already, lose their spirituality, and soon cast off their religion as a thing too lifeless for enjoyment.

But I forbear to dwell any longer on our present situation as the professed people of God, but thought it necessary to search out our iniquities by the light of God's truth, believing that there is yet a balm in Gilead, and a fountain still open for sin and uncleanness. Yes, thank God, he has not utterly forsaken his people, although he has permitted them to walk in darkness for their sins. But methinks I see a little lifting of the cloud, and he reveals himself a God mighty to save, yea, long-suffering and waiting to be gracious. Light breaks forth, and already the glad news is heralded forth that there are tokens of great refreshing from the everlasting fountain; that the waters of salvation are beginning to flow, and some are getting ready for the coming of the Son of man.

* I do not mean all christians, but churches as bodies.

But what are we doing? Are we waiting for God to do the work? Hear we not the voice of God in stirring tones saying, "Awake! thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light"? O, professed christian, we have a work to do. We cannot excuse ourselves by saying we have no talent, and can do but little, or that we are so cold we do not feel; such excuses will avail us nothing in the day of judgment. Souls are perishing all around us; and shall we stand idle? God forbid.

There is such an agent in the church as the Holy Spirit of God; it is among us to testify for Christ; to be the great anointing Spirit of his missionary witness, the church; and its unlimited aid can be obtained by prayer. We can be baptized with the Holy Ghost and endued with power to work for the salvation of sinners. O, ye who preach the gospel, believe the promise of the Spirit and be saved. Ye, who love the Lord, keep not silence. Send up an earnest, long, united, and unsparing entreaty for his promised aid. This is what we want. This is what we must have. This must be the burden of the church's prayer, for God has suspended to a great extent the outpouring of his Spirit upon the supplications of his people. By this he honors himself in being thus publicly acknowledged as the author of good, and at the same time honors his church by making her the medium through which the blessing descends. What a tremendous responsibility, then, does this devolve upon the church.

Christian, the moral world is in darkness. Sin reigns, and Satan triumphs, through the want of your prayers and holy example. Think of this, and tremble at your responsibility; and tremble still more at your insensibility. What we want is more prayer; prayer that takes hold by faith upon the arm that moves the world; prayer that claims salvation, full and free, through the merits of a bleeding Jesus, as a promised blessing.

And again, we must work as well as pray. We must be in earnest for the salvation of souls. We must also expect it, and look for it. We must believe that there is enough truth in the promise, and power in the Spirit of God to accomplish the work and raise the church out of its comparatively low condition. We want a faith equal to the promise of God. He is able to give us any measure of grace we need. Nothing is too hard for him to accomplish. He can open the windows of heaven and pour salvation down. He can make the wilderness like Eden, and the desert like the garden of the Lord; and yet we were never in more danger of distrusting him than in this age of skepticism.

Religion is God's own cause in the world. It is his noblest production on earth; that in which he has the deepest interest. And when did he ever fail to bless the labors of a faithful, praying band of believers? Never! The whole history of the church does not furnish a single instance of united, vigorous, humble, and believing prayer, labor, and expectation, being disappointed. O, christian, throw off your despondency, then. Adopt the noble maxim of the renowned Cary, "Attempt great things, expect great things." Are you ready for the work? Have you been to God with the prayer of the Psalmist—"Create in me a clean heart," and had your prayer answered, and thus been prepared to teach transgressors His ways, that they may be converted? Examine yourselves, individually, for it is an individual work. There is a fatal propensity in the members of all communities to get rid of individual responsibility, and to depend upon the body to do the work. But God deals with individuals, and we must each be resolved that, God being our helper, we will think, speak and act as individuals, for as such we must live, and die, and stand before God to be judged; and he who acts for himself in this matter will certainly influence others. Every man acts upon some other man. Example is influence. The diffusion of religion is like the kindling of a fire, the lighting of so many tapers; and the flame, by coming in contact, will set the whole in a blaze.

O, then, ye praying ones, who want to see the work of God revived, get your souls on fire with the love of God, and go forth to the work; and as you come in contact with others, their souls will be fired up, and the work will spread from heart to heart, until the whole church is lit up with the fire of God's glory, and hungry, benighted souls shall be gathered into his fold. Wake up, brother. Wake up, sister. There is no time for reposing now. Signs portend the soon coming of the glorious Redeemer. Soon shall a guilty world be aroused from their lethargy by the voice of the archangel summoning them to judgment; when those awful words shall be spoken—"He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still." And shall we fold our hands and slumber while our friends are out of Christ, exposed to death? Shall they perish for the want of a holy, praying, living church? This must not be. Shall we not arise and go forth in the strength of Israel's God, and, clad in the armor of righteousness, form a holy union with all his people of every name, and throw our sectarian creeds to the winds? The word of God shall be a pillar of fire to guide us, and in one grand army, with Christ our great commander, we'll march out of the wilderness of sin and darkness towards the heavenly Canaan, the glorious land of rest. And though the hosts of Satan shall seek to oppose our march, under the artful leadership of the boasting arch fiend, and our ranks are thinned by his improved mode of warfare, yet we have the blessed assurance of a glorious victory over all our enemies. And when our warfare is ended, our Leader crowned King of kings and Lord of Lords, his church will be clothed in beauty; and on the holy hill of Zion shall ascend the triumphant song of victory, which shall resound throughout the bounds of the new earth with loud hallelujahs to the "Lamb who was slain, yet liveth again,"

and who hath redeemed us with his own precious blood, out of every kindred, tongue, and people. With this blessed prospect before us, shall we not unceasingly pray until Jesus comes, "O Lord, revive thy work"?

S. C. WELLCOME.

Garden City, Minn., Mar. 17th, '66.

Correspondence.

From Bro. D. Cogswell.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel thankful to my heavenly Father that there are a few bold, honest men in these last days, when the word of God is so shamefully perverted by those who pretend to be preachers of Christ. I say, glory to God, that there are a few whom I will call God's freemen, who will stand up for God's word, and speak the truth boldly, and contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. If God's prophets are not rewarded until the seventh angel sounds, and when the seventh angel sounds the dead are to be judged; then it follows that they were not judged when they died; and if not judged when they died, then of course they were not rewarded, unless God rewards men before they are judged.

Now, Bro. Grant, how much better are preachers that preach and mislead the people in this way,—how much better are they than those priests that Christ had to contend with in his day? He told them that they made void the law of God by their tradition. If the church stumbled over Christ in his first and, according to the word of God, they are to stumble over him in his second advent, and on account of their falling on that stone, they were broken; and that stone (Christ), according to the word, is to fall on the professed church in his second advent and grind them to powder, and this is all on account of their perverting his word and turning away from it and making it void by their tradition;—it seems to me sure that the time has about come when we can expect the stone to fall with a mighty crash, and put an end to this awful perverting and abusing of his word.

My prayer is, that God's watchmen may stand firm at their posts, and cry aloud and spare not, and warn the people of what is coming on the earth. O Lord, help thy children to keep on the christian armor, and fight manfully the good fight of faith; so that we may be accounted worthy to escape those things that are coming on the earth, and to stand before the Son of man.

We read in Rev. 2: 18, 19,—if any man shall add to or take from the word of God, that God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book. Now I want to ask these gospel perverters, who teach the people that the prophets went to heaven when they died, if they cannot see that they are making void the word of God by their tradition? If the prophets have been in heaven ever since they died, have they not been in a rewarded condition, and if so, how comes it about that they are to be rewarded when the seventh angel sounds? Do you not see that Paul was right when he says, "If the dead rise not, . . . then they also which are fallen asleep are perished"?—1 Cor. 15: 16–18. Those who are preaching this "shall not . . . . die" of the serpent (Gen. 3: 4), I beg of you, in Heaven's name, look this subject over once more, and I think you will see that you are misleading the people, and that God will hold you accountable.

O that men would learn to look to Christ for life, and that too at the time when He who is our life shall appear; and cease to teach any longer that the devil opened the door to glory. O, can it be that professing christian men will continue to rob Christ of the glory that belongs to him, and insist on giving the devil the honor of opening the door of death, so that we can all climb up a shorter way, and get to glory without following Christ, by a resurrection from the dead? I pray God that some may yet have their eyes opened to see this deception of the devil, before it is too late. On this key stone of all error is built all of the false systems of theology that we have in the world. O that men would stop and think, that they may see where this lie of Satan is leading them. This "not die" of the devil has now gone to seed in Spiritualism, and is leading thousands and thousands, even of the professed church, to "give heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils."

What is the use of holding union meetings and trying to get sinners to come to Christ, and then teach them the lie of the devil,—that they are now immortal, and then let the devil take the advantage of that untruth and lead them by his demons into Spiritualism; and then the next step is, they will deny the word of God, and deny the Lord God that bought them, and then all is lost. All this is brought about by these perverters of God's word. No wonder that the stone on which the first church fell, will fall on the Gentile church to grind it to powder. No wonder that when Christ comes and sets up his kingdom, and some will ask for admission, that he will say, I do not know you; and they will begin to say, we have cast out devils and "done many wonderful works" in thy name. Perhaps they will say, Master, we have read some splendid essays, and have preached a great many beautiful sermons, though perhaps some good lawyer might have written some of them; but the answer will come according to his word, "I never knew you." O my Lord, is it possible that we are so near that solemn and awful time? O Lord, help the honest ones not to be led away by blind leaders, and so with the blind leaders fall into the ditch and be lost. D. COGSWELL.

Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—Death has visited our mission at Hackensack and taken from us our sister, Sarah Johnson, who sweetly sleeps in Jesus. She was among our first converts in that place last January. From the time of her conversion till the day of her death she lived a christian. When she was converted she embraced the blessed truth of Jesus' soon coming. She loved the doctrine, and died in the blessed hope of sleeping but a little while, till she should hear the trump sound, when she should arise and see the King in his beauty. She was one of the first converted; the first to join the mission; the first to give her name as tract distributor; the first to volunteer to hunt up children for the Sabbath school; the first in her Bible class; the first one buried with Christ in baptism, and the first to fall asleep. Her work is done. How we miss her. She was one of the sweet singers of Israel. May we live so as to meet her right early in the morning.

By her request, I spoke to the family and friends at the Mission church from 1 Cor. 15: 51–55, striving to show her faith and the true doctrine of the Bible, that we do not receive our reward at death, but at the resurrection, and that at the coming of Jesus our Life-giver. The church was crowded inside and out with white and colored listeners.

I find this death has turned the tide of opposition. Some of our bitterest foes have said, "These must be christians," and say they will help us in our mission work. Pray for us, brethren and sisters, that the Lord may still be with us. Our Sabbath School has already subscribed for forty copies of the Young Pilgrim, and they are pleased with it.

Your sister in the highways and hedges,

ANNA E. SMITH.

No. 128 East 27th Street, New York City.

Obituaries.

MATHEWS. Died at Seneca Falls, N. Y., April 18th, 1866, Sr. Harriet Mathews, aged twenty-six years.

She was the only daughter of Bro. and Sister Mathews. Harriet was a great sufferer. For six long months she was confined to her bed with the consumption, but at last she had to yield to the power of the enemy, but not without a good hope of ere long triumphing over death and the grave. She exercised great patience in all her sickness, and her last breath (while she could talk) was spent in admonishing her friends to meet her in the kingdom. She died in full faith that she would rest in quiet slumber among the dead until the voice of the Son of God shall waken his sleeping saints.

"There'll be no more sorrow there."

Bro. and Sr. Mathews sorrow not without a good hope through grace, which they have cherished for many long years. May this affliction lead them to a closer walk with God, and may the four remaining brothers make haste in laying hold of the hope set before them in the gospel, that they too may live when God beautifies the earth and makes all things new.

Bro. S. S. Brewer preached the funeral discourse, from Job 14: 14. G. DILLABAUGH.

ACKERMAN. Died in Sharon, Ct., April 21st, 1866, Hattie, daughter of John and Jerusha Ackerman, aged thirteen years.

Our breath is but fleeting, our days are but few,
In the sadness of parting we bid friends adieu;
We watch them while yielding their last feeble breath,
And follow them slowly to the valley of death.
From there, as we leave them, we look to the morn
When the glory of God the new earth shall adorn;
Where no graveyard, or death, will again meet our view,
Oh, may we all meet when the earth is made new.

Sermon by B. St. John, from Matt. 14: 12.

WAUGH. Died in Morris, Ct., April 15th, from effects of cancer in the breast, Mrs. Lucy B. Waugh, aged forty-eight years.

Sister Maria was an affectionate wife and mother, and none knew her but to love her. For twenty-four years she was a member of the Congregational church, and several years before her death received new light from the Scriptures relative to the coming of Christ. Though she now sleeps unconscious in the tomb, we expect to meet her again in that "beautiful world" to come.

T. L. WAUGH.

BEADLE. Died in Savannah, Wayne Co., N. Y., March 20th, Sr. Maria, wife of Loami Beadle, aged fifty years.

Our dear sister has fallen. She had long stood at her post as a faithful sentinel. She rests from her labors. May her mantle fall on those she left behind to mourn her loss. We expect soon to meet her in the kingdom. Words of comfort administered on the occasion by the writer.

C. B. TURNER.

Married.

In Portsmouth, N. H., May 24, by Eld. J. W. White, Bro. WILLIAM E. WOODWORTH, of Fall River, Mass., to Sr. MATTIE S. RANDALL, of Portsmouth.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool April 22d.

The Washington Globe is authorized to state that the Government has received no information warranting belief in the statement published by the Times announcing a rupture of diplomatic intercourse between Austria and Prussia.

The Vienna journals reassert pacific arrangements between the two countries.

The Frankfort Diet had made a declaration of a peaceable character.

Great activity is reported in the Italian navy. All the vessels are being prepared for service.

Some apprehensions are felt of fresh disturbances in Spain.

The Portuguese Chamber of Deputies has approved the contract for a telegraph line to America by the Southern route.

Liverpool April 28th, Queenstown 29th.

It is stated that Austria has definitely determined upon adopting energetic military measures in Venetia.

The Reform bill has passed the House of Commons by a majority of five.

The German news is conflicting.

There is considerable uneasiness as to the relations between Austria and Italy, but the Italian Government denies having any warlike intention.

DOMESTIC.

New York, May 1. Valparaiso has been bombarded by the Spaniards. The town and $20,000,000 worth of property were destroyed. Great blame is attached to the British and American Admirals for not interfering with their ships to prevent such wholesale destruction of property, instead of leaving the harbor.

The Panama's Star's correspondence, after comments on the barbarity of the bombardment of Valparaiso, which was defenseless, without a gun to reply or a vessel to stand by it, states that from fifteen to twenty millions of dollars worth of property was destroyed, nearly all belonging to British, American and foreign merchants, including the commercial parts of the town, Custom House, government buildings, etc.

Valparaiso is the chief city of the Republic of Chili, and is built upon a narrow strip of land at the foot of a cliff at the head of the Bay of Valparaiso. It had a very extensive commerce, which was mainly in the hands of the Americans, English and French. It has a population of about one hundred and twenty thousand.

Memphis, Tenn., May 2. The negroes in South Memphis this morning fired on a citizen, wounding him, and assaulted a white woman. The Sheriff's posse attempted to disarm all the negroes, when they fled to Fort Pickering, firing as they ran. They were driven from the Fort this evening, and sought the woods. During the excitement seven negroes and one citizen were killed and a few houses burned. The military have been under arms all day. All is quiet to-night, but fears were entertained that the negroes will attempt to burn the city, but they are groundless. Up to the present time fifteen blacks and four whites have been killed.

Eastport, Me., May 2. A Custom House officer, just arrived from Lubec, reports that armed Fenians left there in a small fishing vessel this morning, but were put on board a large schooner back of Grand Menan, N. B.

The U. S. steamer Winooski has just left the harbor in pursuit of the Fenian privateer.

Wheeling, West Va., April 29. About three o'clock this morning six burglars entered the residence of the cashier of the Harrison National Bank of Cadis, Ohio, bucked and gagged that gentleman, and compelled his wife to deliver up the keys of the bank and safe. Proceeding thence to the bank, they effected an entrance without much difficulty, and robbed the safe of three hundred thousand dollars in United States bonds and about fifty thousand dollars in deposits. After locking the watchman in the safe they made good their escape on a hand car, cutting the telegraph in two places. The robbers abandoned the hand car at a station near Alexandria, on the Pittsburg and Columbus Railroad, and took to the woods. The surrounding country has been aroused, and a large force has been in pursuit. Twenty thousand dollars reward is offered for the arrest of the robbers.

☞ It is stated that within a month after the opening of the New York State Inebriate Asylum, over fifteen hundred applications were made by wealthy parents for the admission of their daughters, who had contracted intemperate habits from the use of liquors at fashionable parties.

HEAD CENTRE STEPHENS.—For the satisfaction of all friends of Irish freedom, and to dispose of a rumor that has reached my ears since arriving in New York, set afloat by some parties for their own reasons, that James Stephens, C. O. I. R., does not mean to visit this country, I have to state that I was directed by him, on leaving Paris, to announce that he would positively sail from Havre for this port, via Brest, on the steamship Napoleon III.—which left the latter port on Saturday, April 28th, and which will probably arrive here on Wednesday, May 9th—for the purpose of making a tour through the principal American cities. Matters of the utmost importance to the Irish republic alone prevented his leaving France by the steamship Lafayette, which reached this port on Saturday, and on which he was expected to arrive. He will address the friends of Irish independence at the several cities, which will be designated through the public press in a few days.

THOMAS J. KELLY, Adjutant Gen. I. R. A.

New York, April 26, 1866.

Halifax, N. S., May 7. The Merlin, from Newfoundland, reports that the ship William Penn, from Havre for N. York, touched at St. Johns on the 28th ult. Head Centre Stephens was on board.

LAWYERS IN REVIVAL WORK.—A Chicago dispatch says that among recent conversions by the preaching of Rev. Mr. Hammond, the revivalist, is Hon. John T. Lindsey of Peoria, Senator from that district, and one of the most distinguished lawyers in Illinois. Since his conversion he has addressed large meetings at Springfield, and other points, with great power and eloquence. Hon. W. O'Brien, a leading Democratic lawyer of Peoria, and heretofore a strong Roman Catholic, is also engaged in the same work with Mr. Lindsey.

In this city we have Mr. Durant, who is speaking with great success and presenting the truth in a manner which carries conviction to many hearts. We understand that at the close of a meeting held in Charlestown last evening, at which Mr. Durant spoke, there were nearly one hundred and fifty persons remained for religious conversation. Judge Smith of California, Mr. Durant's brother, who has also recently entered upon the christian life, is speaking with marked success at meetings in this vicinity.—Boston Journal.

AN INTERESTING RELIC.—Dr. Perkins exhibited at the missionary meeting at London last week a copy of the New Testament, which be found in Persia, which was seven hundred years old. It was written in the ancient Syriac language (the same spoken by Jesus Christ when on earth,) upon parchment, with a reed for a pen. Of course the volume was bulky, though not as large as we should suppose a Testament made in that way would be. It was not thicker than a Webster's unabridged, and not more than two-thirds as large. Dr. Perkins found three or four copies of the Testament in this form in that country, which were, if we understood him, the only written language for the Nestorians, and instructed them in it for nearly thirty years. Dr. Perkins said also that this New Testament, which had been transcribed in this rude manner several times, and handed down from the time of Christ, was, in every important respect, the same as the Word which we now have—a remarkable proof of the authenticity of our Bible.—Caledonian.

☞ The total receipts of the places of amusement in New York,—with the exception of Barnum's Museum and one other place which do not make complete returns,—for the six months ending with December, 1864, was six hundred thousand eight hundred and three dollars, and for the same period in 1865, six hundred and sixty-five thousand five hundred and fifty-one dollars, being an increase of nearly sixty-five thousand dollars over the same period last year.

☞ The Court of Rome stifles a rumor of an attempt at poisoning, of which the Holy Father appears to have been the object. The attempt is not imputed to the party of action, but to the Jesuits and reactionary fanatics, who fear that the Pope may return to a liberal policy, and come to an understanding with Italy.

☞ The fifty-eighth birthday of the Emperor of France was celebrated in Paris on the 20th ult.

Notices.

Notice.

Preaching brethren wishing to come to Concord, N. H. (Angelos Hall), will please correspond with T. H. Ford, A. H. Saltmarsh, or J. T. Kimball.

We take this opportunity to inform the preaching brethren and those interested, that we intend, by the help of the Lord, to have a free meeting,—free for all that love and serve Jesus,—making christian character the only test of fellowship. We wish it distinctly understood that we make no point of doctrine the test. We hope this will satisfy all that we have no hobby horse to ride. If you do not believe it, come and see. So we will say to all those preaching the gospel of the kingdom, Come over and help us. We will try and do you good. We hope and pray that we may be the means, in the hands of the Lord, of doing some little good. We will try to love and fellowship all that love the Lord Jesus Christ.

T. H. FORD,
For the Brethren, A. H. SALTMARSH,
J. T. KIMBALL.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held in Woodstock, N. H., commencing June 7th, Thursday, P. M., and hold over the following Lord's day. Brn. Couch, Ross, and others are expected to be present to preach the word of life. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer, that God may give us the victory through Christ, and that great good may be accomplished in his name.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Notice.

The Second Advent Church in Savoy will hold their meetings until further notice in the Methodist church in Savoy Hollow. Our preaching brethren making appointments for this place will please bear this in mind, and make their appointments accordingly. We invite our preaching brethren to give us a call, as the Lord may direct.

For the brethren, E. M'CULLOCK.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the New York State Christian Conference will be held at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, June 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. As churches can only be represented by delegates, let delegates be appointed by every church. Let there be a good representation at this meeting. Arrangements of trains, etc., will be advertised in due time. For the Board, C. B. TURNER.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. WM. SHELDON.

Notice of the Iowa Miss. Tent.

Those in the West who wish Tent meetings will please make arrangements without delay. There is to be a Tent meeting in Butler and Floyd Co., Iowa, and I am to visit Mim. I can be engaged by the different kinds of Adventists who need Tent meetings till the tent is paid for, whether I preach much or not. Address Elder PETER S. DEYO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N.Y.

CLINTON COLEGROVE, Bap. Minister.

Notice.

I would say to those that have desired my labors, and to others who may desire them, that I expect to be able to comply with their requests as the Lord may direct. My address will be for the present, Sandisfield, Mass. GEO. L. TEMPLE.

Notice.

Eld. J. M. Mubliz is holding meetings at Bro. J. Russell's, E. Central St., Natick, Mass. We desire brethren and sisters living in adjoining towns to come in and take part with us next Sunday, May 13th. J. N. SHATTUCK.

To Preachers.

Dear Bro.—When you come to Concord, N. H., to preach, and are not met at the depot by some one (as is often the case, as we do not know which train you are coming in), please call at Bro. Horace B. Abbot's, Union Street, and you will be provided for. Ministers, please copy the address.

THOS. B. [illegible]

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON.
John G. Hook..........Sunday, May 13th

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, May 13th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 P. M. A farewell address. Acts 20: 18-38.
WM. C. THURMAN.

Bradford, N. H., (Pond meeting-house), Sunday, May 13th.
WM. W. SUTHERLAND.

West Abington, Mass..........Sunday, May 13th
Holliston..........Sunday, May 20th
W. C. STONE.

Madison, Conn..........Sunday, May 13th
B. HITCHCOCK.

Durham, Ct..........Sunday, May 13th
O. D. WOODRUFF.

Vernon, Vt..........Sunday, May 13th
Savoy, Mass., (where Bro. McCulloch may appoint), Sunday, May 20th.
Goshen..........Sunday, May 27th
J. HEMENWAY.

Chichester, (Dover school-house)..........Sunday, May 13th
Nashua, N. H..........May 20th
Lawrence, Mass..........May 27th
Z. FORD.

Central, R. I..........May 13th
Natic R. I..........evenings, May 15th and 16th
Providence, R. I., (as Bro. Bard may arrange) May 17th and 18th.
Bristol, R. I..........May 20th
J. K. BELLOWS.

Freeport, Me., (Swamp school-house), evenings, May 9th and 10th.
Yarmouth..........Friday, May 11th, and over Sunday.
Cumberland, (Merrill school-house), May 14th and 15th
West Falmouth, (as Bro. Field may appoint), Wednesday evening, May 16th, through the week, and over the following Sunday.
Biddeford..........Sunday, May 27th
Dover, N. H..........Tuesday evening, May 29th
L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Charlemont..........Sunday, May 20th
Hawley..........Sunday, May 27th
W. J. BLANCHARD.

Carver..........Sunday, May 13th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Woodstock, N. H..........Sunday, May 13th
East Landaff, N. H..........Sunday, May 20th
A. W. SIBLEY.

Warner, (Schoodoc school-house)...Sunday, May 13th
Waterloo, (school-house), Tuesday evening, 7 o'clock, May 15th.
Danbury, (Knowlton school-house), Lord's day, May 20th.
East Canaan..........Lord's day, May 27th
North Sutton, (at Bro. L. Andrews), Tuesday evening, May 29th.
B. P. MANNING.

CONCORD, N. H., (ANGELOS HALL.)
A. Simpson..........Sunday, May 13th
J. G. Smith..........Sunday, May 20th
H. Pratt..........Sundays, May 27th and June 3d

Wrightville, Ct..........Sunday, May 13th
South Windsor, Ct..........Friday evening, May 18th and over Sunday, the 20th.
Hope to see a large gathering of the friends at these meetings. Will Bro. R. J. Whitehead arrange so as to be with me at South Windsor? C. GOODRICH.

LEE, N. H.
H. M. Bryant..........Sunday, May 13th

Pittsfield, N. H..........Sunday, May 13th
Worcester, Mass..........May 20th and 27th
J. COUCH.

East Springwater, N. Y., 10½ A. M., Sunday, May 13th
Tabor's Corners, 4 P. M..........Sunday, May 13th
Conesus, (Webster school-house), 10½ A. M., May 20th
Conesus Center, 4 P. M..........Sunday, May 20th
Seneca Falls..........Sunday, May 27th
Annual Conference..........June 2d
Dansville..........June 10th
Bristol and Honeoye..........June 17th
F. BEAN.

Newhampton, N. H., (at Bro. Pike's), Sunday, May 13th
P. S. RANSOM.
J. KNOWLTON.

Loudon Ridge, N. H..........Sunday, May 13th
Concord, (Angelos Hall)..........Sunday, May 20th
J. G. SMITH.

Holliston, Mass..........Sunday, May 13th
West Abington, Mass..........Sunday, May 20th
WM. H. FISHER.

BARNES' HALL, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
John G. Hook..........Sundays, May 20th and 27th

Goshen, Mass..........Sunday, May 13th
Albany, N. Y..........Sunday, May 20th
H. PRATT.

Chapin District..........May 13th
Square Pond..........May 20th
Scitico..........May 27th
Springfield..........June 3d
A. M. HIGGINS.

WEST FALMOUTH, ME.
I. C. Wellcome..........Sunday, May 20th
R. R. York..........Sunday, May 27th

Yarmouth, Me..........Sunday, May 6th
I. C. WELLCOME.

Worcester, Mass..........May 13th
H. MUNGER.

New Boston, N. H., (at Bro. Frederick Dodge's house), Tuesday evening, May 8th.
North Barrington, (where Bro. Preston may appoint), Sunday, May 13th.
Gonic Village, (at Bro. D. Varney's house), Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, May 14th, 16th, 17th, 18th.
Alton Corner..........Sunday, May 20th
J. PINKHAM.

CONCORD, N. H.
Geo. W. Brown, from Elliot, Me....Sunday, May 13th
Miles Grant..........Sunday, May 20th
Charles Ramsey..........Sunday, May 27th
Timothy Cole..........June 3d and 10th

Concord, N. H., (corner of Centre and Green streets) Sunday, May 13th.
Waterloo, Warner, Tues. and Wed. evenings, May 15th and 16th.
Bradford, (Pond meeting-house), Thursday and Friday evenings, May 17th and 18th.
Canaan..........Sunday, May 20th
GEO. W. BROWN, of Portsmouth, N. H.

[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request. Brethren will please bear in mind that there are two George W. Browns, and this is not the other one. H. MUNGER.

Belgrade (meeting-house)..........May 13th
Rome (Town House)..........May 20th
H. B. SEVEY.

Danielsonville, Ct..........May 13th
Bristol, Ct..........May 20th
Hartford, Ct..........May 27th
If any in the vicinity of Bristol or Hartford desire evening appointments while I am in Western Connecticut, write me at Danielsonville, Ct.
H. P. CARPENTER.

Cheshire, Ct..........Sundays, May 13th
CHAS. E. PIPER.

RICHMOND, R. I., (CLARK'S HALL.)
M. R. Phetteplace..........Sunday, May 13th
Augustus Durfee..........Sunday, May 27th

Agawam, Mass..........May 13th
GEO. A. STREETER.

Warner, N. H., Sunday, May 13th, at the school-house in Bro. Hamphill's District, about one mile from Waterloo school-house. SIMEON ROBY.

Yalesville, Ct..........Sunday, May 13th
Bristol, Ct..........Sunday, May 20th
Cheshire Street, Ct..........Sunday, May 27th
S. WOODRUFF.

PLEASANT VALLEY, CT.
R. Williams..........May 20th
Lovely Street, Ct..........May 13th
WM. J. RIPLEY.

East Parsham, (Bull school-house), Friday, 4 P. M., May 11th.
Stukeley, (near Lewis Brown's), Saturday, 4 P. M., May 12th.
At the Sargeant school-house, 10½ A. M., Sabbath, May 13th.
At the Lake, a quarterly meeting, commencing on Saturday, at 2 P. M., May 19th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Let all interested attend.
C. P. DOW.

EAST BOWDOINHAM.
H. D. Reed..........Sunday, May 20th

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house, with Bro. H D Reed), Sunday, May 13th. R. R. YORK.

Scitico..........May 13th
R. WILLIAMS.

Hartford, Ct..........May 13th
New Haven, Ct..........May 20th
New Britain, Ct..........May 27th
New Haven, Ct..........June 3d
Hartford, Ct..........June 10th
Warehouse Point..........June 17th

Manchester..........Lord's day, May 13th
G. C. STEVENS.

Redfield Square, N. Y..........May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburg, N. Y..........May 22d and 23d
Copenhagen, N. Y..........May 24th
C. H. WILLIAMS.

Springfield, Mass., Barnes' Block, Lord's days, May 6th and 13th, and through the week intervening.
SAMUEL CURRY.

Rochester, N. H., (McDuffee District, where Bro. Smith may appoint)..........Sunday, April 15th
JOSEPH PINKHAM.

Levant, (Hammerson's Mills)..........May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's)..........May 27th
I. K. LOMBARD.

Moultonborough..........May 13th
T. W. PIPER.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

P. Rice. Due from No. 530—$3.06 to No. 572.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 562. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each.—W. Rowand 564, J. P. Bowe 572, J. F. Sanborn 572, N H Broughton 572, A K Warren 550, N Potter 563, J Elkins 598, W Wilbur 478.

$1.25 each.—S Wood (25c on old acct) 572, W M Gibson 593, B. H. Straight 588, J Mitchell 582, S A Paine 569, S Barton 643, A M Nickason 584, L H Little 588, O Toothaker 557, S C Carpenter 572, N. R. Gould 572, M S Brownell 578, L L Beadle 578, S G Coon 578, W Hale 565, S Knobb 571, H. A. Smith 579, S D Holmes 556, P Smith 578, E Hall 578, G A Eastman 577, O W Dickenson 580, A. Low 595, E. Tompkins 542, J. Van Dam 572, H Bowe 561, W S Edwards 577, O B Baxter 577, E F Smith 577, M. D. Hathaway 577, C Wildrick 577, A. Lyon 577, L. H. Everett 577, S W Shirley 577, J M Stroud 577, L T Orinnell 577.

$2.00 each.—J. C. Millard 594, J Leighton 578, W W Wheeler 597, C. Russell 583, A. Good 593, L. Munson 592, J. Tame 598, D. Cogswell 590, A. Stirrers 558, E. Round 549, T. Woodard 583, E. Fisher 555, H Healey 593.

$2.50 each.—T E Clough 596, E Kittle 590, S L Reed 603, J P Babcock 603, I P Harden 565, L M Dates 603, A T Gorham 589, C. H. Willey 553, D M Cantight 603, E P Brownell 561, J. McDonald 603, R. Jackman 604, I B Clark 603, J H Parker 603, J. R. Austin 603, H B Baker 603, M Johnson 603, A Rhoades (what P. O.?), S W Pettis 579, S D Yaw 590, J P Palmer 603, J Mowder 587, H Arnold 603, J T Dennett 603, E Nelson 603, T Rundlett 603, P Wright 603, H. L. Thayer 603, E B Danewell 603.

Various Sums—W J Spencer $3.00, 603; W Tennant $1.00, 579; H. O. O. Sweet $7.00, 582; O. D. Eastman $3.20, 549; W Foster $3.50, 608; A W Low $5.00, 555; G. Avery 63c, 562; A. Shaw $3.00, 600; J. G. Putnam $3.00, 572; M J Quick 90c, 552; O Stetson $3.00, 573; B Moseley 63c, 564.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

C M Shepherd 50c, W F Fahenstock 30c, L Jackman $1.00, A S Tuttle $1.00, O D Eastman 30c, L H Little $1.00, H Graves $1.00, L Seabold 50c, S Cook $11.00, W Miller $2.00, W H Nevers 60c, F Platt $2.36 H. R. Evans $1.00, S G Coon 25c, J Tame 50c, S E Hoffman 60c, H Eaton $1.00, H S Hough $1.50, B Hitchcock 85c, F Phelps $1.00, D Cogswell $1.00, S D Yaw $1.00, M McKnight 25c, N Staples $2.00, H A Arnold $3.50, J Pinkham $6.20.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.—A. S. Tuttle, O D Eastman, L Jackman, A D Hoyt, W F Fahenstock, C H Shepherd, J. Tame, S E Hoffman, H B Eaton, H S Hough, B. Hitchcock, D Cogswell, E Phelps.

BY EXPRESS.—P S Butler, J Pinkham, H A Arnold, S Cook.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M L Tower, J Porter, C T Barton, E McCulloch, D Coggswell, S D Ackerman, J T Kimball, L. H. Little, N B McMurphy, A N Seymour, L. K. Lomard, M. W. Howard, M Whitaker, I I Leslie, O D Eastman, J T Walsh, "Anna," H. L. H., D F Newton, C. Daggett, Wm. M Ingham, L Boutell, C H Shepherd.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Eld. C. Goodrich—69 Marion Street, East Boston, Mass.
J. K. Bellows—392 Broome Street, New York City.
Dr. I. I. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
H K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francelia F. Curtis—149 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
P. H. Burbank, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
J. H. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
Mrs. Anna E. Smith—No. 360 Seventh Avenue, below 33d Street, New York City.
L. C. McKinstry—Great Falls, N. H.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—392 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Hillsburgh, Nova Scotia.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
Wm. A. Fenn—Pulaski, Oswego Co., N. Y.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass.
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. P. Nason—North Hermon, Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 57 Cedar St.
C. I. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co., Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion..........12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make itself?..........16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God?..16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible?..........24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament?..........16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable?..........16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles?..16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy..........32 pp., 6c.
9. Moses and the Prophets..........28 pp., 6c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars..........28 pp., 6c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise..........36 pp., 6c.
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture..........32 pp., 6c.
13. Science, or Faith?..........32 pp., 6c.

For the SET, (making 304 pp.)..........50c. postpaid. Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home..........16 pp.
2. Life Insurance..........16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost!..........8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet?..........8 pp.
5. About God (for children)..........4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing..........4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ..........4 pp.
8. Now..........4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent postpaid—

One set (64 pp.)..........8 c.
1300 pp...........$1.00
1800 pp., (by express, not prepaid)..........$1.00

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE STUDENT'S LIBRARY.

[illegible]

I. Signs of the Times; or, a Glance at Christendom as it is. [illegible]

II. The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer [illegible]

III. Thessalonica, or The Model Church: a Sketch [illegible]

IV. The Great Controversy between God and Man [illegible]

V. Future Punishment as taught in the Scriptures [illegible]

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 8c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 11c; by mail, 12c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 25c.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 15c; by mail, 20c.

THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. 20c.

THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 15c; by mail, 16c.

THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 6c.

THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $3.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.

CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.

ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 28c.

RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 28c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.

GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.

IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL: What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT: What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c; by mail, 8c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 3c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. [illegible]; by mail, 6c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c; by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS; A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Peshito Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.86.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.00; by mail, [illegible]

THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. [illegible]

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. [illegible]

THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; [illegible]

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT? [illegible]

AMERICA IN PROPHECY; [illegible]

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; [illegible]

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; [illegible]

HOW TO COOK [illegible]

COOKERY; [illegible]

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. [illegible]

THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT. [illegible]

EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS of a Bruised Reed. [illegible]

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; [illegible]

CHLOE LANKTON; [illegible]

NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. [illegible]

DIPHTHERIA; [illegible]

GLAD VOICES; [illegible]

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS. [illegible]

[illegible]

present situation as the professed people of God, but thought it necessary to search out our iniquities by the light of God's truth, believing that there is yet a balm in Gilead, and a fountain still open for sin and uncleanness. Yes, thank God, he has not utterly forsaken his people, although he has permitted them to walk in darkness for their sins. But methinks I see a little lifting of the cloud, and he reveals himself a God mighty to save, yea, long-suffering and waiting to be gracious. Light breaks forth, and already the glad news is heralded forth that there are tokens of great refreshing from the everlasting fountain; that the waters of salvation are beginning to flow, and some are getting ready for the coming of the Son of man.

But what are we doing? Are we waiting for God to do the work? Hear we not the voice of God in stirring tones saying, "Awake! thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light"? O, professed christian, we have a work to do. We cannot excuse ourselves by saying we have no talent, and can do but little, or that we are so cold we do not feel; such excuses will avail us nothing in the day of judgment. Souls are perishing all around us; and shall we stand idle? God forbid.

There is such an agent in the church as the Holy Spirit of God; it is among us to testify for Christ; to be the great anointing Spirit of his missionary witness, the church; and its unlimited aid can be obtained by prayer. We can be baptized with the Holy Ghost and endued with power to work for the salvation of sinners. O, ye who preach the gospel, believe the promise of the Spirit and be saved. Ye, who love the Lord, keep not silence. Send up an earnest, long, united, and unsparing entreaty for his promised aid. This is what we want. This is what we must have. This must be the burden of the church's prayer, for God has suspended to a great extent the outpouring of his Spirit upon the supplications of his people. By this he honors himself in being thus publicly acknowledged as the author of good, and at the same time honors his church by making her the medium through which the blessing descends. What a tremendous responsibility, then, does this devolve upon the church.

Christian, the moral world is in darkness. Sin reigns, and Satan triumphs, through the want of your prayers and holy example. Think of this, and tremble at your responsibility; and tremble still more at your insensibility. What we want is more prayer; prayer that takes hold by faith upon the arm that moves the world; prayer that claims salvation, full and free, through the merits of a bleeding Jesus, as a promised blessing.

And again, we must work as well as pray. We must be in earnest for the salvation of souls. We must also expect it, and look for it. We must believe that there is enough truth in the promise, and power in the Spirit of God to accomplish the work and raise the church out of its comparatively low condition. We want a faith equal to the promise of God. He is able to give us any measure of grace we need. Nothing is too hard for him to accomplish. He can open the windows of heaven and pour salvation down. He can make the wilderness like Eden, and the desert like the garden of the Lord; and yet we were never in more danger of distrusting him than in this age of skepticism.

Religion is God's own cause in the world. It is his noblest production on earth; that in which he has the deepest interest. And when did he ever fail to bless the labors of a faithful, praying band of believers? Never! The whole history of the church does not furnish a single instance of united, vigorous, humble, and believing prayer, labor, and expectation, being disappointed. O, christian, throw off your despondency, then. Adopt the noble maxim of the renowned Cary, "Attempt great things, expect great things." Are you ready for the work? Have you been to God with the prayer of the Psalmist—"Create in me a clean heart," and had your prayer answered, and thus been prepared to teach transgressors His ways, that they may be converted? Examine yourselves, individually, for it is an individual work. There is a fatal propensity in the members of all communities to get rid of individual responsibility, and to depend upon the body to do the work. But God deals with individuals, and we must each be resolved that, God being our helper, we will think, speak and act as individuals, for as such we must live, and die, and stand before God to be judged; and he who acts for himself in this matter will certainly influence others. Every man acts upon some other man. Example is influence. The diffusion of religion is like the kindling of a fire, the lighting of so many tapers; and the flame, by coming in contact, will set the whole in a blaze.

O, then, ye praying ones, who want to see the work of God revived, get your souls on fire with the love of God, and go forth to the work; and as you come in contact with others, their souls will be fired up, and the work will spread from heart to heart, until the whole church is lit up with the fire of God's glory, and hungry, benighted souls shall be gathered into his fold. Wake up, brother. Wake up, sister. There is no time for reposing now. Signs portend the soon coming of the glorious Redeemer. Soon shall a guilty world be aroused from their lethargy by the voice of the archangel summoning them to judgment; when those awful words shall be spoken—"He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still." And shall we fold our hands and slumber while our friends are out of Christ, exposed to death? Shall they perish for the want of a holy, praying, living church? This must not be. Shall we not arise and go forth in the strength of Israel's God, and, clad in the armor of righteousness, form a holy union with all his people of every name, and throw our sectarian creeds to the winds? The word of God shall be a pillar of fire to guide us, and in one grand army, with Christ our great commander, we'll march out of the wilderness of sin and darkness towards the heavenly Canaan, the glorious land of rest. And though the hosts of Satan shall seek to oppose our march, under the artful leadership of the boasting arch fiend, and our ranks are thinned by his improved mode of warfare, yet we have the blessed assurance of a glorious victory over all our enemies. And when our warfare is ended, our Leader crowned King of kings and Lord of Lords, his church will be clothed in beauty; and on the holy hill of Zion shall ascend the triumphant song of victory, which shall resound throughout the bounds of the new earth with loud hallelujahs to the and who hath redeemed us with his own precious blood, out of every kindred, tongue, and people. With this blessed prospect before us, shall we not unceasingly pray until Jesus comes, "O Lord, revive thy work"?

"Lamb who was slain, yet liveth again,"

S. C. Wellcome.

Garden City, Minn., Mar. 17th, '66.

Correspondence.

From Bro. D. Cogswell.

Bro. Grant:—I feel thankful to my heavenly Father that there are a few bold, honest men in these last days, when the word of God is so shamefully perverted by those who pretend to be preachers of Christ. I say, glory to God, that there are a few whom I will call God's freemen, who will stand up for God's word, and speak the truth boldly, and contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. If God's prophets are not rewarded until the seventh angel sounds, and when the seventh angel sounds the dead are to be judged; then it follows that they were not judged when they died; and if not judged when they died, then of course they were not rewarded, unless God rewards men before they are judged.

Now, Bro. Grant, how much better are preachers that preach and mislead the people in this way,—how much better are they than those priests that Christ had to contend with in his day? He told them that they made void the law of God by their tradition. If the church stumbled over Christ in his first and, according to the word of God, they are to stumble over him in his second advent, and on account of their falling on that stone, they were broken; and that stone (Christ), according to the word, is to fall on the professed church in his second advent and grind them to powder, and this is all on account of their perverting his word and turning away from it and making it void by their tradition;—it seems to me sure that the time has about come when we can expect the stone to fall with a mighty crash, and put an end to this awful perverting and abusing of his word.

My prayer is, that God's watchmen may stand firm at their posts, and cry aloud and spare not, and warn the people of what is coming on the earth. O Lord, help thy children to keep on the christian armor, and fight manfully the good fight of faith; so that we may be accounted worthy to escape those things that are coming on the earth, and to stand before the Son of man.

We read in Rev. 2: 18, 19,—if any man shall add to or take from the word of God, that God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book. Now I want to ask these gospel perverters, who teach the people that the prophets went to heaven when they died, if they cannot see that they are making void the word of God by their tradition? If the prophets have been in heaven ever since they died, have they not been in a rewarded condition, and if so, how comes it about that they are to be rewarded when the seventh angel sounds? Do you not see that Paul was right when he says, "If the dead rise not, . . . then they also which are fallen asleep are perished"?—1 Cor. 15: 16–18. Those who are preaching this "shall not . . . . die" of the serpent (Gen. 3: 4), I beg of you, in Heaven's name, look this subject over once more, and I think you will see that you are misleading the people, and that God will hold you accountable.

O that men would learn to look to Christ for life, and that too at the time when He who is our life shall appear; and cease to teach any longer that the devil opened the door to glory. O, can it be that professing christian men will continue to rob Christ of the glory that belongs to him, and insist on giving the devil the honor of opening the door of death, so that we can all climb up a shorter way, and get to glory without following Christ, by a resurrection from the dead? I pray God that some may yet have their eyes opened to see this deception of the devil, before it is too late. On this key stone of all error is built all of the false systems of theology that we have in the world. O that men would stop and think, that they may see where this lie of Satan is leading them. This "not die" of the devil has now gone to seed in Spiritualism, and is leading thousands and thousands, even of the professed church, to "give heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils."

What is the use of holding union meetings and trying to get sinners to come to Christ, and then teach them the lie of the devil,—that they are now immortal, and then let the devil take the advantage of that untruth and lead them by his demons into Spiritualism; and then the next step is, they will deny the word of God, and deny the Lord God that bought them, and then all is lost. All this is brought about by these perverters of God's word. No wonder that the stone on which the first church fell, will fall on the Gentile church to grind it to powder. No wonder that when Christ comes and sets up his kingdom, and some will ask for admission, that he will say, I do not know you; and they will begin to say, we have cast out devils and "done many wonderful works" in thy name. Perhaps they will say, Master, we have read some splendid essays, and have preached a great many beautiful sermons, though perhaps some good lawyer might have written some of them; but the answer will come according to his word, "I never knew you." O my Lord, is it possible that we are so near that solemn and awful time? O Lord, help the honest ones not to be led away by blind leaders, and so with the blind leaders fall into the ditch and be lost. D. Cooswell.

Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

Bro. Grant:—Death has visited our mission at Hackensack and taken from us our sister, Sarah Johnson, who sweetly sleeps in Jesus. She was among our first converts in that place last January. From the time of her conversion till the day of her death she lived a christian. When she was converted she embraced the blessed truth of Jesus' soon coming. She loved the doctrine, and died in the blessed hope of sleeping but a little while, till she should hear the trump sound, when she should arise and see the King in his beauty. She was one of the first converted; the first to join the mission; the first to give her name as tract distributor; the first to volunteer to hunt up children for the Sabbath school; the first in her Bible class; the first one buried with Christ in baptism, and the first to fall asleep. Her work is done. How we miss her. She was one of the sweet singers of Israel. May we live so as to meet her right early in the morning.

By her request, I spoke to the family and friends at the Mission church from 1 Cor. 15: 51–55, striving to show her faith and the true doctrine of the Bible, that we do not receive our reward at death, but at the resurrection, and that at the coming of Jesus our Lifegiver. The church was crowded inside and out with white and colored listeners.

I find this death has turned the tide of opposition. Some of our bitterest foes have said, "These must be christians," and say they will help us in our mission work. Pray for us, brethren and sisters, that the Lord may still be with us. Our Sabbath School has already subscribed for forty copies of the Young Pilgrim, and they are pleased with it.

Your sister in the highways and hedges,

Anna E. Smith.

No. 128 East 27th Street, New York City.

Obituaries.

Mathews. Died at Seneca Falls, N. Y., April 18th, 1866, Sr. Harriet Mathews, aged twenty-six years.

She was the only daughter of Bro. and Sister Mathews. Harriet was a great sufferer. For six long months she was confined to her bed with the consumption, but at last she had to yield to the power of the enemy, but not without a good hope of ere long triumphing over death and the grave. She exercised great patience in all her sickness, and her last breath (while she could talk) was spent in admonishing her friends to meet her in the kingdom. She died in full faith that she would rest in quiet slumber among the dead until the voice of the Son of God shall waken his sleeping saints.

"There'll be no more sorrow there."

Bro. and Sr. Mathews sorrow not without a good hope through grace, which they have cherished for many long years. May this affliction lead them to a closer walk with God, and may the four remaining brothers make haste in laying hold of the hope set before them in the gospel, that they too may live when God beautifies the earth and makes all things new.

Bro. S. S. Brewer preached the funeral discourse, from Job 14: 14. G. Dillabaugh.

Ackerman. Died in Sharon, Ct., April 21st, 1866, Hattie, daughter of John and Jerusha Ackerman, aged thirteen years.

Our breath is but fleeting, our days are but few,
In the sadness of parting we bid friends adieu;
We watch them while yielding their last feeble breath,
And follow them slowly to the valley of death.
From there, as we leave them, we look to the morn
When the glory of God the new earth shall adorn;
Where no graveyard, or death, will again meet our view,
Oh, may we all meet when the earth is made new.

Sermon by B. St. John, from Matt. 14: 12.

Waugh. Died in Morris, Ct., April 15th, from effects of cancer in the breast, Mrs. Lucy B. Waugh, aged forty-eight years.

Sister Maria was an affectionate wife and mother, and none knew her but to love her. For twenty-four years she was a member of the Congregational church, and several years before her death received new light from the Scriptures relative to the coming of Christ. Though she now sleeps unconscious in the tomb, we expect to meet her again in that "beautiful world" to come.

T. L. Waugh.

Beadle. Died in Savannah, Wayne Co., N. Y., March 20th, Sr. Maria, wife of Loami Beadle, aged fifty years.

Our dear sister has fallen. She had long stood at her post as a faithful sentinel. She rests from her labors. May her mantle fall on those she left behind to mourn her loss. We expect soon to meet her in the kingdom. Words of comfort administered on the occasion by the writer.

C. B. Turner.

Married.

In Portsmouth, N. H., May 2d, by Eld. J. W. White, Bro. William E. Woodworth, of Fall River, Mass., to Sr. Mattie S. Randall, of Portsmouth.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool April 22d.

The Washington Globe is authorized to state that the Government has received no information warranting belief in the statement published by the Times announcing a rupture of diplomatic intercourse between Austria and Prussia.

The Vienna journals reassert pacific arrangements between the two countries.

The Frankfort Diet had made a declaration of a peaceable character.

Great activity is reported in the Italian navy. All the vessels are being prepared for service.

Some apprehensions are felt of fresh disturbances in Spain.

The Portuguese Chamber of Deputies has approved the contract for a telegraph line to America by the Southern route.

Liverpool April 28th, Queenstown 29th.

It is stated that Austria has definitely determined upon adopting energetic military measures in Venetia.

The Reform bill has passed the House of Commons by a majority of five.

The German news is conflicting.

There is considerable uneasiness as to the relations between Austria and Italy, but the Italian Government denies having any warlike intention.

DOMESTIC.

New York, May 1. Valparaiso has been bombarded by the Spaniards. The town and $20,000,000 worth of property were destroyed. Great blame is attached to the British and American Admirals for not interfering with their ships to prevent such wholesale destruction of property, instead of leaving the harbor.

The Panama's Star's correspondence, after comments on the barbarity of the bombardment of Valparaiso, which was defenseless, without a gun to reply or a vessel to stand by it, states that from fifteen to twenty millions of dollars worth of property was destroyed, nearly all belonging to British, American and foreign merchants, including the commercial parts of the town, Custom House, government buildings, etc.

Valparaiso is the chief city of the Republic of Chili, and is built upon a narrow strip of land at the foot of a cliff at the head of the Bay of Valparaiso. It had a very extensive commerce, which was mainly in the hands of the Americans, English and French. It has a population of about one hundred and twenty thousand.

Memphis, Tenn., May 2. The negroes in South Memphis this morning fired on a citizen, wounding him, and assaulted a white woman. The Sheriff's posse attempted to disarm all the negroes, when they fled to Fort Pickering, firing as they ran. They were driven from the Fort this evening, and sought the woods. During the excitement seven negroes and one citizen were killed and a few houses burned. The military have been under arms all day. All is quiet to-night, but fears were entertained that the negroes will attempt to burn the city, but they are groundless. Up to the present time fifteen blacks and four whites have been killed.

Eastport, Me., May 2. A Custom House officer, just arrived from Lubec, reports that armed Fenians left there in a small fishing vessel this morning, but were put on board a large schooner back of Grand Menan, N. B.

The U. S. steamer Winooski has just left the harbor in pursuit of the Fenian privateer.

Wheeling, West Va., April 29. About three o'clock this morning six burglars entered the residence of the cashier of the Harrison National Bank of Cadiz, Ohio, bucked and gagged that gentleman, and compelled his wife to deliver up the keys of the bank and safe. Proceeding thence to the bank, they effected an entrance without much difficulty, and robbed the safe of three hundred thousand dollars in United States bonds and about fifty thousand dollars in deposits. After locking the watchman in the safe they made good their escape on a hand car, cutting the telegraph in two places. The robbers abandoned the hand car at a station near Alexandria, on the Pittsburg and Columbus Railroad, and took to the woods. The surrounding country has been aroused, and a large force has been in pursuit. Twenty thousand dollars reward is offered for the arrest of the robbers.

☞ It is stated that within a month after the opening of the New York State Inebriate Asylum, over fifteen hundred applications were made by wealthy parents for the admission of their daughters, who had contracted intemperate habits from the use of liquors at fashionable parties.

Head Centre Stephens.—For the satisfaction of all friends of Irish freedom, and to dispose of a rumor that has reached my ears since arriving in New York, set afloat by some parties for their own reasons, that James Stephens, C. E. I. R., does not mean to visit this country, I have to state that I was directed by him, on leaving Paris, to announce that he would positively sail from Havre for this port, via Brest, on the steamship Napoleon III.—which left the latter port on Saturday, April 28th, and which will probably arrive here on Wednesday, May 9th—for the purpose of making a tour through the principal American cities. Matters of the utmost importance to the Irish republic alone prevented his leaving France by the steamship Lafayette, which reached this port on Saturday, and on which he was expected to arrive. He will address the friends of Irish independence at the several cities, which will be designated through the public press in a few days.

Thomas J. Kelly, Adjutant Gen. I. R. A.

New York, April 26, 1866.

Halifax, N. S., May 7. The Merlin, from Newfoundland, reports that the ship William Penn, from Havre for N. York, touched at St. Johns on the 28th ult. Head Centre Stephens was on board.

Lawyers in Revival Work.—A Chicago dispatch says that among recent conversions by the preaching of Rev. Mr. Hammond, the revivalist, is Hon. John T. Lindsey of Peoria, Senator from that district, and one of the most distinguished lawyers in Illinois. Since his conversion he has addressed large meetings at Springfield, and other points, with great power and eloquence. Hon. W. O'Brien, a leading Democratic lawyer of Peoria, and heretofore a strong Roman Catholic, is also engaged in the same work with Mr. Lindsay.

In this city we have Mr. Durant, who is speaking with great success and presenting the truth in a manner which carries conviction to many hearts. We understand that at the close of a meeting held in Charlestown last evening, at which Mr. Durant spoke, there were nearly one hundred and fifty persons remained for religious conversation. Judge Smith of California, Mr. Durant's brother, who has also recently entered upon the christian life, is speaking with marked success at meetings in this vicinity.—Boston Journal.

An Interesting Relic.—Dr. Perkins exhibited at the missionary meeting at London last week a copy of the New Testament, which he found in Persia, which was seven hundred years old. It was written in the ancient Syriac language (the same spoken by Jesus Christ when on earth,) upon parchment, with a reed for a pen. Of course the volume was bulky, though not as large as we should suppose a Testament made in that way would be. It was not thicker than a Webster's unabridged, and not more than two-thirds as large. Dr. Perkins found three or four copies of the Testament in this form in that country, which were, if we understood him, the only written language for the Nestorians, and instructed them in it for nearly thirty years. Dr. Perkins said also that this New Testament, which had been transcribed in this rude manner several times, and handed down from the time of Christ, was, in every important respect, the same as the Word which we now have—a remarkable proof of the authenticity of our Bible.—Caledonian.

☞ The total receipts of the places of amusement in New York,—with the exception of Barnum's Museum and one other place which do not make complete returns,—for the six months ending with December, 1864, was six hundred thousand eight hundred and three dollars, and for the same period in 1865, six hundred and sixty-five thousand five hundred and fifty-one dollars, being an increase of nearly sixty-five thousand dollars over the same period last year.

☞ The Court of Rome stifles a rumor of an attempt at poisoning, of which the Holy Father appears to have been the object. The attempt is not imputed to the party of action, but to the Jesuits and reactionary fanatics, who fear that the Pope may return to a liberal policy, and come to an understanding with Italy.

☞ The fifty-eighth birthday of the Emperor of France was celebrated in Paris on the 20th ult.

Notices.

Notice.

Preaching brethren wishing to come to Concord, N. H. (Angelos Hall), will please correspond with T. H. Ford, A. H. Saltmarsh, or J. T. Kimball.

We take this opportunity to inform the preaching brethren and those interested, that we intend, by the help of the Lord, to have a free meeting,—free for all that love and serve Jesus,—making christian character the only test of fellowship. We wish it distinctly understood that we make no point of doctrine the test. We hope this will satisfy all that we have no hobby horse to ride. If you do not believe it, come and see. So we will say to all those preaching the gospel of the kingdom, Come over and help us. We will try and do you good. We hope and pray that we may be the means, in the hands of the Lord, of doing some little good. We will try to love and fellowship all that love the Lord Jesus Christ.

T. H. Ford,
For the Brethren, A. H. Saltmarsh,
J. T. Kimball.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held in Woodstock, N. H., commencing June 7th, Thursday, P. M., and hold over the following Lord's day. Brn. Couch, Ross, and others are expected to be present to preach the word of life. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer, that God may give us the victory through Christ, and that great good may be accomplished in his name.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

Notice.

The Second Advent Church in Savoy will hold their meetings until further notice in the Methodist church in Savoy Hollow. Our preaching brethren making appointments for this place will please bear this in mind, and make their appointments accordingly. We invite our preaching brethren to give us a call, as the Lord may direct.

For the brethren, E. M'Cullock.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the New York State Christian Conference will be held at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, June 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. As churches can only be represented by delegates, let delegates be appointed by every church. Let there be a good representation at this meeting. Arrangements of trains, etc., will be advertised in due time. For the Board, C. B. Turner.

Western Tent Meetings.

All who wish my services with the tent this season, will do well to inform me at once, so that I can arrange my summer's campaign in the most economical style. Expect to pitch somewhere in the counties of Sauk, Green, Fond Du Lac, and Monroe, Wisconsin, and probably in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and possibly in Missouri. Speak in time, that you may be remembered in the arrangement of the campaign. Wm. Sheldon.

Notice of the Iowa Miss. Tent.

Those in the West who wish Tent meetings will please make arrangements without delay. There is to be a Tent meeting in Butler and Floyd Co., Iowa, and I am to visit Minn. I can be engaged by the different kinds of Adventists who need Tent meetings till the tent is paid for, whether I preach much or not. Address Elder Peter S. Deyo, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Notice.

Any brethren in Western New York, especially in Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming, Allegany, Niagara or Chautauqua Counties, who should desire me to preach on impending events, the personal antichrist, the coming of our Lord, and kindred subjects, please direct to me, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N.Y.

Clinton Colegrove, Bap. Minister.

Notice.

I would say to those that have desired my labors, and to others who may desire them, that I expect to be able to comply with their requests as the Lord may direct. My address will be for the present, Sandisfield, Mass. Geo. L. Teeple.

Notice.

Eld. J. M. Muhlig is holding meetings at Bro. J. Russell's, E. Central St., Natick, Mass. We desire brethren and sisters living in adjoining towns to come in and take part with us next Sunday, May 13th. J. N. Shattuck.

To Preachers.

Dear Bro.:—When you come to Concord, N. H., to preach, and are not met at the depot by some one (as is often the case, as we do not know which train you are coming in), please call at Bro. Horace S. Abbot's, Union Street, and you will be provided for. Ministers, please copy the address.

Thos. B. Hamblin.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston.
John G. Hook....................Sunday, May 13th

Charlestown, Mass., (69 Maine Street), Sunday, May 13th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and 3 P. M. A farewell address. Acts 20: 18-38.
Wm. C. Thurman.

Bradford, N. H., (Pond meeting-house), Sunday, May 13th.
Wm. W. Sutherland.

West Abington, Mass....................Sunday, May 13th
Holliston....................Sunday, May 20th
W. C. Stone.

Madison, Conn....................Sunday, May 13th
B. Hitchcock.

Durham, Ct....................Sunday, May 13th
O. D. Woodruff.

Vernon, Vt....................Sunday, May 13th
Savoy, Mass., (where Bro. McCulloch may appoint), Sunday, May 20th.
Goshen....................Sunday, May 27th
J. Hemenway.

Chichester, (Dover school-house)....Sunday, May 13th
Nashua, N. H....................May 20th
Lawrence, Mass....................May 27th
Z. Ford.

Central, R. I....................May 13th
Natic R. I....................evenings, May 15th and 16th
Providence, R. I., (as Bro. Burd may arrange) May 17th and 18th.
Bristol, R. I....................May 20th
J. K. Bellows.

Freeport, Me., (Swamp school-house), evenings, May 9th and 10th.
Yarmouth....................Friday, May 11th, and over Sunday.
Cumberland, (Merrill school-house), May 14th and 15th
West Falmouth, (as Bro. Field may appoint), Wednesday evening, May 16th, through the week, and over the following Sunday.
Biddeford....................Sunday, May 27th
Dover, N. H....................Tuesday evening, May 29th
L. C. McKinstry.

Charlemont....................Sunday, May 20th
Hawley....................Sunday, May 27th
W. J. Blanchard.

Carver....................Sunday, May 13th
W. S. Campbell.

Woodstock, N. H....................Sunday, May 13th
East Landaff, N. H....................Sunday, May 20th
A. W. Sibley.

Warner, (Schoodoc school-house)... Sunday, May 13th
Waterloo, (school-house), Tuesday evening, 7 o'clock, May 15th.
Danbury, (Knowlton school-house), Lord's day, May 20th.
East Canaan....................Lord's day, May 27th
North Sutton, (at Bro. I. Andrews), Tuesday evening, May 29th.
B. P. Manning.

Concord, N. H., (Angelos Hall.)
A. Simpson....................Sunday, May 13th
J. G. Smith....................Sunday, May 20th
H. Pratt....................Sundays, May 27th and June 3d

Wrightville, Ct....................Sunday, May 13th
South Windsor, Ct....................Friday evening, May 18th and over Sunday, the 20th.
Hope to see a large gathering of the friends at these meetings. Will Bro. R. J. Whitehead arrange so as to be with me at South Windsor? C. Goodrich.

Lee, N. H.
H. M. Bryant....................Sunday, May 13th

Pittsfield, N. H....................Sunday, May 13th
Worcester, Mass....................May 20th and 27th
J. Couch.

East Springwater, N. Y., 10½ A. M., Sunday, May 13th
Tabor's Corners, 4 P. M....................Sunday, May 13th
Conesus, (Webster school-house), 10½ A. M., May 20th
Conesus Center, 4 P. M....................Sunday, May 20th
Seneca Falls....................Sunday, May 27th
Annual Conference....................June 3d
Dansville....................June 10th
Bristol and Honeoye....................June 17th
F. Burr.

Newhampton, N. H., (at Bro. Pike's), Sunday, May 13th
F. S. Ransom.
J. Knowlton.

Loudon Ridge, N. H....................Sunday, May 13th
Concord, (Angelos Hall)....................Sunday, May 20th
J. G. Smith.

Holliston, Mass....................Sunday, May 13th
West Abington, Mass....................Sunday, May 20th
Wm. H. Fisher.

Barnes' Hall, Springfield, Mass.
John G. Hook....................Sundays, May 20th and 27th

Goshen, Mass....................Sunday, May 13th
Albany, N. Y....................Sunday, May 20th
H. Pratt.

Chapin District....................May 13th
Square Pond....................May 20th
Scitico....................May 27th
Springfield....................June 3d
A. M. Higgins.

West Falmouth, Me.
I. C. Wellcome....................Sunday, May 20th
R. R. York....................Sunday, May 27th

Yarmouth, Me....................Sunday, May 6th
I. C. Wellcome.

Worcester, Mass....................May 13th
H. Munger.

New Boston, N. H., (at Bro. Frederick Dodge's house), Tuesday evening, May 8th.
North Barrington, (where Bro. Preston may appoint), Sunday, May 13th.
Gonic Village, (at Bro. D. Varney's house), Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, May 14th, 16th, 17th, 18th.
Alton Corner....................Sunday, May 20th
J. Pinkham.

Concord, N. H.
Geo. W. Brown, from Elliot, Me....Sunday, May 13th
Miles Grant....................Sunday, May 20th
Charles Ramsey....................Sunday, May 27th
Timothy Cole....................June 3d and 10th

Concord, N. H., (corner of Centre and Green streets) Sunday, May 13th.
Waterloo, Warner, Tues. and Wed. evenings, May 15th and 16th.
Bradford, (Pond meeting-house), Thursday and Friday evenings, May 17th and 18th.
Canaan....................Sunday, May 20th
Geo. W. Brown, of Portsmouth, N. H.
[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request. Brethren will please bear in mind that there are two George W. Browns, and this is not the other one. H. Munger.]

Belgrade (meeting-house)....................May 13th
Rome (Town House)....................May 20th
H. B. Sevey.

Danielsonville, Ct....................May 13th
Bristol, Ct....................May 20th
Hartford, Ct....................May 27th
If any in the vicinity of Bristol or Hartford desire evening appointments while I am in Western Connecticut, write me at Danielsonville, Ct.
H. P. Carpenter.

Cheshire, Ct....................Sundays, May 13th
Chas. E. Piper.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall.)
M. R. Phetteplace....................Sunday, May 13th
Augustus Durfee....................Sunday, May 27th

Agawam, Mass....................Sunday, May 13th
Geo. A. Streeter.

Warner, N. H., Sunday, May 13th, at the school-house in Bro. Hamphill's District, about one mile from Waterloo school-house. Simeon Roby.

Yalesville, Ct....................Sunday, May 13th
Bristol, Ct....................Sunday, May 20th
Cheshire Street, Ct....................Sunday, May 27th
S. Woodruff.

Pleasant Valley, Ct.
R. Williams....................May 20th
Lovely Street, Ct....................May 13th
Wm. J. Ripley.

East Farnham, (Bull school-house), Friday, 4 P. M., May 11th.
Stukeley, (near Lewis Brown's), Saturday, 4 P. M., May 12th.
At the Sargeant school-house, 10½ A. M., Sabbath, May 13th.
At the Lake, a quarterly meeting, commencing on Saturday, at 2 P. M., May 19th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Let all interested attend.
C. P. Dow.

East Bowdoinham.
H. D. Reed....................Sunday, May 20th

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house, with Bro. H D Reed), Sunday, May 13th. R. R. York.

Scitico....................May 13th
R. Williams.

Hartford, Ct....................May 13th
New Haven, Ct....................May 20th
New Britain, Ct....................May 27th
New Haven, Ct....................June 3d
Hartford, Ct....................June 10th
Warehouse Point....................June 17th

Manchester....................Lord's day, May 13th
C. C. Stevens.

Redfield Square, N. Y....................May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburg, N. Y....................May 22d and 23d
Copenhagen, N. Y....................May 24th
C. H. Williams.

Springfield, Mass., Barnes' Block), Lord's days, May 6th and 13th, and through the week intervening.
Samuel Curry.

Rochester, N. H., (McDuffee District, where Bro. Smith may appoint)....................Sunday, April 15th
Joseph Pinkham.

Levant, (Emmerson's Mills)....................May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's)....................May 27th
I. K. Lombard.

Moultonborough....................May 13th
T. W. Piper.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

P. Rice. Due from No. 520—$3.00 to No. 572.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.
To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 553. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

$1.00 each.—W. Rowand 564, J. P. Bower 572, J. F. Sanborn 572, N H Broughton 572, A K Warren 550, N Potter 563, J Elkins 596, W Wilbur 478.

$1.25 each.—S Wood (25c on old acct) 572, W M Gibson 593, B. H. Straight 588, J Mitchell 582, S A Paine 568, S Barton 643, A M Nickason 594, L H Little 598, O Toothaker 537, S C Carpenter 572, N. R. Gould 572. M S Brownell 578, L. L. Beadle 578, S G Coon 578, W Hale 585, S Knobb 571, H. A. Smith 579, S D Holmes 558, P Smith 578, E Hall 578, G A Eastman 577, G W Dickenson 569, A. Leer 595, E. Tompkins 542, J. Van Dam 572, H Buell 561, W S Edwards 577, O B Baxter 577, E F Smith 577, M. D. Hathaway 577, C Wildrick 577, A. Lyon 577, L. H. Everett 577, S W Shirley 577, J M Stroud 577, L T Grinnell 577.

$2.00 each.—J. C. Millard 594, J Leighton 578, W W Wheeler 597, C. Russell 593, A. Good 593, L. Munson 592, J. Tame 593, D. Cogswell 590, A. Stivers 558, R. Round 549, T. Woodard 583, E. Fisher 555, H Healey 593.

$2.50 each.—T E Clough 598, E Kittle 599, S L Reed 603, J P Babcock 603, I P Harden 565, L M Dates 603, A T Gorham 589, C. H. Willey 555, D M Canright 603, E P Brownell 563, J. McDonald 603, H. Jackman 604, I B Clark 603, J H Parker 603, J. R. Austin 603, H B Baker 603, M Johnson 603, A Rhoades (what P. O.?), S W Pettis 579, S D Yaw 590, J F Palmer 603, J Mowder 587, H Arnold 603, J T Dennett 603, E Nelson 603, T Rundlett 603, P Wright 603, H. L. Thayer 603, E B Dunswell 603.

Various Sums.—W J Spencer $3.00, 603; W Tennant $4.00, 579; H. O. G. Sweet $7.00, 582; O. D. Eastman $3.20, 549; W Foster $5.50, 608; A W Low $5.00, 555; G. Avery 63c, 562; A. Shaw $3.00, 600; J. G. Putnam $3.00, 572; M J Quick 90c, 552; O Stetson $3.00, 573; B Moseley 63c, 564.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

C M Shepherd 50c, W F Fahenstock 30c, L Jackman $1.00, A S Tuttle $1.00, O D Eastman 30c, L H Little $1.00, B Graves $2.00, L Scofield 50c, S Cook $11.00, W Miller $2.00, W H Nevers 40c, F Platt $2.36 H. R. Evans $1.00, S G Coon 25c, J Tame 50c, S E Hoffman 60c, H B Eaton $1.00, H S Hough $2.50, B Hitchcock 85c, F Phelps $1.00, D Cogswell $1.00, S D Yaw $1.00, M McKnight 25c, N Staples $2.00, H A Arnold $5.50, J Pinkham $6.20.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.—A. S. Tuttle, O D Eastman, L Jackman, A B Hoyt, W F Fahenstock, C H Shepherd, J. Tame, S E Hoffman, H B Eaton, H S Hough, B. Hitchcock, D Cogswell, E Phelps.

By Express.—P S Butler, J Pinkham, H A Arnold, S Cook.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M L Tower, J Porter, C T Barton, E McCulloch, D Coggswell, S D Ackerman, J T Kimball, L. H. Little, N B McMurphy, A N Seymour, L K. Lomard, M. W. Howard, M Whitaker, I I Leslie, O D Eastman, J T Walsh, "Anna," H. L. H., D F Newton, C. Daggett, Wm. M Ingham, L Boutell, C H Shepherd.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Eld. C. Goodrich—69 Marion Street, East Boston, Mass.
J. K. Bellows—392 Broome Street, New York City.
Dr. I. I. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
H K. Flagg—St. Louis, Mo.
Martha S. Butler—Box 634, Memphis, Tenn.
Francelia F. Curtis—149 North Sixth St., St. Louis, Mo.
F. H. Burbank, Missionary.—Residence S. W. Cor. 7th and Spring-Garden Streets, Philadelphia, Penn.
H. F. Carpenter—My address hereafter will be Danielsonville, Ct.
F. A. Baker—North Searsport, Me.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth, N. H.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia, N. H.
J. G. Smith—New Durham, N. H.
Eld. A. W. Sibley—No. 4 Meridian Place, East Boston, Mass.
J. R. Preston—Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis.
B. H. Couch—Concord, N. H.
R. J. Whitehead—Wallingford, Ct.
Mrs. Anna E. Smith—No. 360 Seventh Avenue, below 33d Street, New York City.
L. C. McKinstry—Great Falls, N. H.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.
C. E. Piper—41 Grove Street, Boston, Mass.
S. D. Daniels—Springfield, Mass.
G. W. Turner—West Point, Wis.
C. P. Dow—My P. O. address for United States' correspondents will be hereafter Franklin, Vt.
J. K. Bellows—392 Broome Street, New York City.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland, Ill.
P. W. Hough—Cascade, Iowa.
Mrs. Abigail Mussey—Hillsburgh, Nova Scotia.
Mrs. Walter Pratt—No. 4 Poplar Place, Boston, Mass.
Wm. A. Fenn—Pulaski, Oswego Co., N. Y.
W. Sheldon—Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls, Mass
J. Couch—Concord, N. H.
L. Boutell—Salem, Mass.
Eld. D. J. Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
Maria Mathews Weaver—Westfield, Mass.
N. A. Hitchcock—Exeter, Green Co., Wis.
N. F. Nason—North Hermon Me.
C. B. Turner—South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville, Conn.
Samuel Curry—Station E., New York.
W. H. Fisher—167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
S. P. Babcock—Malaga, N. J.
Josiah Durgin—Wadley's Falls, N. H.
H. Pratt—After March 20th, Springfield, Mass., 67 Cedar St.
C. I. Deyo—Richland, Kalamazoo Co, Mich.
Eld. Jacob Wilbur—Box 941, Janesville, Rock Co., Wis.
G. W. Stetson—Coopersville, Clinton Co., N. Y., until further notice.
S. S. Brewer—Newark, N. J., till further notice.

Fables of Infidelity in Tract Form.

Sent, postpaid, as follows:

1. I don't believe in Religion....................12 pp., 3c.
2. Did the World make itself?....................16 pp., 4c.
3. Is God Everybody, and Everybody God?....16 pp., 4c.
4. Have we any need of the Bible?....................24 pp., 4c.
5. Who wrote the New Testament?....................16 pp., 4c.
6. Is the Gospel Fact or Fable?....................16 pp., 4c.
7. Can we believe Christ and his Apostles?....16 pp., 4c.
8. Prophecy....................32 pp., 5c.
9. Moses and the Prophets....................28 pp., 5c.
10. Infidelity among the Stars....................28 pp., 5c.
11. Daylight before Sunrise....................36 pp., 5c.
12. Telescopic Views of Scripture....................32 pp., 5c.
13. Science, or Faith?....................32 pp., 5c.

For the Set, (making 304 pp.)......50c. postpaid.
Address all orders to Miles Grant, Boston Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home....................16 pp.
2. Life Insurance....................16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost!....................8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet?....................8 pp.
5. About God (for children)....................4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing....................4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ....................4 pp.
8. Now....................4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent postpaid—
One set (64 pp.)....................6 c.
1200 pp....................$1.00
1800 pp., (by express, not prepaid)....................$1.00
Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE STUDENT'S LIBRARY.

(IN FIVE VOLUMES (104 pp. each.)

For the set—[illegible]

Single Copy—cloth, $1.00; paper, 40 cts. [illegible]

I. Signs of the Times; or, a Glance at Christendom as it is. Exhibiting in a vivid and startling light the predicted perils of the last days, and the corruptions, crimes and cruelties of Christendom. By H. L. Hastings.

II. The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. [illegible] By D. T. Taylor.

III. Thessalonica, or The Model Church: a Sketch of Primitive Christianity, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE [illegible] SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION. By WM. RAMSEY. [illegible]

IV. The Great Controversy between God and Man. [illegible]

V. Future Punishment, as taught in the Scriptures; [illegible]

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Works on the Prophecies—The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, etc.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsey. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. With various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 1, By S. S. Brewer. 7c; by mail, 9c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 2, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.

THE LAST-DAY TOKENS, No. 3, By S. S. Brewer. 21c; by mail, 23c.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. 20c.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and Signs of the Times. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THESSALONICA; or, The Model Church. By H. L Hastings. 25c.

REVELATIONS XIII.; a treatise. By S. S. Brewer. 18c; by mail, 20c.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

SPIRITUALISM a Satanic Delusion. By Wm. Ramsay, D. D. 20c.

THE SEVEN SEALS. Exposition of Rev. vi. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

THE DAYS WE LIVE IN; The Lord soon to come. By S. S. Brewer. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c; by mail, 15c.

THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3c; by mail, 5c.

THE GREAT IMAGE soon to be dashed to pieces. By S. S. Brewer. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times of Daniel and John. Mounted on Rollers, by express, $3.00; on Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THE REIGN OF MESSIAH, the King of the Jews, on the Throne of his Father David; its Nature, and the Time of its Commencement. By Wm. Sheldon. 8c; by mail, 10c.

Works on Future Punishment, etc.

DEBT AND GRACE; or, The Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. A very able and learned work. $1.50.

CHRIST OUR LIFE. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. Cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, etc. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. 20c; by mail, 22c.

ETERNAL SUFFERING. A Discussion between Miles Grant and Dr. J. Litch. 25c; by mail, 29c.

RETRIBUTION; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. By H. L. Hastings 20c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. H. L. H. 10c.

GLAD TIDINGS; or, The End of Woe and Sin by the Destruction of the Wicked. (Three chapters from "Death not Life.") By J. Blain. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE OLD PATHS; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. H. 10c.

IMMORTAL SOUL THEOLOGY vs. BIBLE. By S. S. Brewer. 8c; by mail, 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, &c. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS MISERY an occasion of Scepticism. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ETERNAL DEATH in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 6c; by mail, 8c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. With remarks on Josephus. By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE RIGHTS OF WRONG; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 6c; by mail, 8c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof-texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 2c; by mail, 4c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

REV. JOHN FOSTER'S LETTER on Future Punishment. 1c; by mail, 3c.

Miscellaneous.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIAN HOLINESS: A Sermon, by S. H. Platt. 15c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.26c Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE, for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE SYRIAC NEW TESTAMENT. A literal translation from the Syriac Pesheto Version. By James Murdock, D. D. $2.50; by mail, $2.86.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THURMAN'S BIBLE CHRONOLOGY, or, the Sealed Book of Daniel Opened. $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE FROM HEAVEN; or, a Dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. 25c; by mail, 29c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM; its Duty and Objects. By I. C. Wellcome. 20c, postpaid; $2.00 per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURAL QUESTION BOOK; for Families and Sunday Schools. 15c; by mail, 19c; $1.50 per dozen; postage, 8c. on every three copies.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

AMERICA IN PROPHECY; an Exposition of Isaiah XVIII. By O. R. Fassett. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE; a Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. 80c; by mail, 88c.

HOW TO COOK—without Salt, Butter, Lard, or Condiments. By Mrs. Mary E. Cox, M. D. 20c. postpaid.

COOKERY; or How to prepare food from Grain, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. W. Hurd, M. D. 15c; by mail, 17c.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE OLD AND NEW COVENANT—Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 8c; by mail, 10c.

EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS of a Bruised Reed. By F. H. Chamberlain. By mail, 17c.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c.

NON-RESISTANCE. By W. C. Thurman. 20c; by mail, 24c.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

GLAD VOICES; Words by D. T. Taylor, Music by L. Reimer. 3c. single, by mail, 5c. 30 cents a dozen, postpaid.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. [illegible] copies for $1.00.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

SOCIAL HYMNS. Original and Selected. By H. L. H. Cloth, 30c; $3.00 per dozen. Paper 20c, $2.00 per dozen, postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

RAHAB THE HARLOT. The Scarlet Line the token of Safety; or, the fall of Jericho a type of the fall of the "cities of the nations." By Wm. Shepherd. 10c, postpaid; 85c. a dozen.

THE MISSION OF SUFFERING. By A. P. Jillson. 5c; by mail, 7c.

OUR MISSION WORK; a Report of the Organization of the American Advent Mission Society, its Constitution, Officers, Addresses, etc. [illegible]

EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS H. JONES, who was a Slave for forty-three years. 25c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. [illegible] dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c. [illegible]

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, [illegible]

"A SOWER WENT FORTH TO SOW."

Sow beside all waters,
Where the dew of heaven may fall,
Ye shall reap if ye be not weary,
For the Spirit breathes o'er all.

Sow, though the thorns may wound thee,
One wore the thorns for thee;
And though the cold world scorn thee,
Patient and hopeful be.

Sow ye beside all waters,
With a blessing and a prayer;
Name Him whose hand upholds us,
And sow thou everywhere.

Sow though the rock repel thee,
In its cold and sterile pride;
Some cleft there may be riven,
Where the little seed may hide.

Fear not, for some will flourish,
And though the tares abound,
Like the willows by the waters,
Will the scattered grain be found.

Work while the daylight lasteth,
Ere the shades of night come on;
Ere the Lord of the vineyard cometh,
And the laborer's work is done;

Work in the wild waste places,
Though none thy love may own;
God guides the down of the thistle,
The wandering wind hath sown.

Will Jesus chide thy weakness,
Or call thy labor vain?
The word that for him thou bearest,
Shall return to him again.

On, with thy heart in heaven,
Thy strength in thy Master's might,
Till the wild waste places blossom
In the warmth of a Savior's light.

Watch not the clouds above thee,
Let the whirlwind round thee sweep;
God may the seed-time give thee,
But another's hand may reap.

Have faith, though ne'er beholding
The seed burst from its tomb;
Thou knowest not which may perish,
Or what be spared to bloom.

Room on the narrowest ridges
The ripened grain will find,
That the Lord of the harvest coming,
In the harvest sheaves may bind.

—Selected.

For the World's Crisis.

LECTURES ON THE SACRIFICE OF THE MASS.

DELIVERED AT FLEURIER, SUISSE, FEB. 22D.

The word Mass, or Liturgy: Peter du Moulin, Dr. of Theology, A. D. 1636, said:—

"The word mass takes the place of Lord's Supper, or Eucharist; for when there is a change in the nature of any thing, a change of name becomes necessary. But this change was made by degrees, not suddenly. When the Latin tongue began to fall into disuse, the Latins commenced saying Remissa peccatorum for remissio, and consequently missa for missio; that is to say, for dismission. The word de remissa, for remissio, is found in the works of Tertullian, Lib. 4 in Marcionem c. 18, about two hundred years after the birth of our Savior. It is found more frequently in Cyprian, who wrote in A. D. 250. After this manner of speaking, the dismission given to Catechumens before communion was called missa, as Augustin informs us in sermon 237, in these words: 'Post sermonem missa Catechumenis manebunt fideles.' After the sermon dismission is given to the Catechumens, the faithful shall remain. And the fourth Council of Carthage, Canon 84, ordains: 'Let the Bishop hinder the entrance of any into the church, whether pagans, heretics or Jews (Usque ad missam Catechumenorum), until the dismissal of the Catechumens.' The word de missa remains in the mass, in this sense, until now. For at the close of the mass the priest says, "Ite, missa est": Go, you are dismissed.' Isidore de Seuille dit le mene au 6. Book de Origine, chap, de Officio. 'Quando Catechumi foras mittuntur damate Levita, si quis, Catechumenus mansit, exeat foras et inde Missa. Dicitur missa ab emittendo! When the Catechumens are dismissed, the deacons say, If any Catechumen remains, let him leave; thence comes the word Mass. Pope Innocent III., in the sixth book on the mysteries of the Mass, chap. 12, defines the word, saying that it signifies dismission; for when the priest begins to consecrate, the Catechumens are dismissed from church."

Alcuin, Rabanus, Maurus, give the same opinion, and Bellarmin, in his first book on the Mass, chap. 1st, says: "If the word Mass was of Hebrew origin, as some suppose, the Syrian and Greek churches would have retained it, instead of the Latin, which is the only one that uses the word Mass. He remarks that the word is found neither in Tertullian, nor in Cyprian, nor Jerome, in the sense in which we use it at present, in speaking of our sacrifice being a bloodless one, 'Sacrificium Laudis.' But as words change their signification in the progress of time, the word mass, three hundred and eighty years after the birth of Christ, began to have a new signification, for the reason that prayers were offered before and after the dismissal of the Catechumens. This word is thus used by Ambrose in his 33rd Epistle, to Sister Marcelline. And also to the Mileuitain Council, Canon 12. 'Pacuit illud ut preces vel orationes seu missaƐ quaƐ probatæ fuerunt in Concilio ab omnibus celebrentur.' It is ordained that the prayers and orisons that are approved by the council be celebrated by all. The Rule of St. Benoit, written about the year 520, chap. 17, commands that three hours after noon, and after the reading of the Psalms in the evening, mass be celebrated."—Meaning of the word Liturgy.

Mr. Bescherelle, dans son Dictionaire "National et Universal" says: "Liturgy Antiq: Name of three hundred of the richest citizens of Athens. It was the duty of the Liturges to provide by turns or together for all the extraordinary charges of state. Liturgy, from the Greek litourgia, service, public ministry; from litos public, and ergon, labor. The kind and order of ceremonies and prayers that constitute the divine service. Liturgy of the Latin, or Roman Papal church, Liturgy of the Greek and Anglican churches," etc., etc.

We read in Ecclesiastical history that the Greek church has recognized four papal Liturgies. The Liturgy of St. Basil, that of Chrysostom, that of Presanctifies, and that called St. James Liturgy.

Liturgy. The Greek priests at the festival of Pan* Athenees, conducted a troop in procession, singing certain songs and performing many solemn ceremonies that were celebrated in Athens in honor of Minerva, called Leitourgia. The little Panthenees were annual, the grand Panthenees occurred every five years. Finally, after many changes, the word mass, or Leitourgia, signifies, at present, a propitiatory, bloodless sacrifice, in which it is said that the body and blood of Jesus Christ are really sacrificed and offered as bread and wine for the redemption of the living and the dead."—Of Liturgies attributed to St. James, St. Matthew, St. Mark, and others.

* Pan, son of Jupiter and Tymbris, god of the woods, and particularly of shepherds. He is represented with an inflamed face, and with horns on his head, and the lower part of his body like a ram. The [illegible] of Pan, an instrument made of pieces of reed.

When the worship of God began to be corrupted, Satan, to give authority and course to this corruption, put it into the head of impostors to write Liturgies, which they attributed to St. James, St. Matthew, St. Mark, St. Clement, etc. For they say, "If we had no Liturgy, christian worship would lose its dignity, and we must listen to prayers and discourses more or less gifted."* Well, if we give ourselves the trouble to criticise this subject, we shall be enlightened in regard to it.

In the Mass, or Liturgy, attributed to St. James, is found the word consubstantial (consubstantia),† and also the expression "Mother of God," about which there has been so much controversy with the Arians and Nestorians, who contended that they were new expressions, that the first was authorized by the first Council of Nice, A. D. 325, and the last, by the first Council of Ephesus, A. D. 431. Had St. James been the author of these words, he would certainly have enlightened us in this regard in his general Epistle, and there would have been no need of a council on the subject. In the same Liturgy is the expression "three times holy," which had no place in the Greek Liturgy till A. D. 446. According to the testimony of Nicephore, fourteenth book, forty-sixth chapter, it was authorized by Proclus, Bishop of Constantinople, upon the relation of a child, said to have been transported to heaven, and to have heard angels chant it in song. Bellarmin, in the book of Ecclesiastical writers, says: "There is a Liturgy attributed to St. James, which has been so augmented by later writers that it is difficult to recognize of what part he is the author."

The Liturgy of St. Matthew and St. Mark make mention of the Council of Nice, of Constantinople, of Ephesus, and of Basle in Switzerland, and contain a prayer for the Pope. These are evident proofs that these Liturgies were made by impostors, who, under the influence of Satan, wished to disfigure the simplicity of the primitive church. The most ancient manner of administering the Lord's Supper practiced in the church of God since the true apostles, is the same as that which we find at the end of the second Apology of Justin Martyr, who wrote about A. D. 150, that is, some seventy years after the death of the true apostles. There is nothing, elsewhere, so short and simple. "The people being assembled, the first day of the week, a chapter of the Holy Scriptures was read, upon which he who presided exhorted the people, and then prayed; after which the disciples gave each other the kiss of peace. Then the bread and wine were placed upon the table (but not upon the altar), when the pastor gave thanks and praise to God for his blessings, and the people responded Amen. Then the deacon carried to each the bread and wine consecrated by prayer and giving of thanks, and a portion was also carried to the absent. All the faithful partook of the two kinds." Elevation and adoration of the bread and wine were unknown. Nothing is said of offering to God the body of Jesus Christ, a "bloodless sacrifice." No mention is made of sacerdotal garments, or apostolic sandals, the tunic, the dalmatics, the mitre, the gloves, the rings, or the gold cross upon the back to represent the cross of Christ.

The sacrifice of the mass is neither in accordance with Scripture nor with reason.

1st. Two-thirds of the Epistle of Paul to the Hebrews is employed in speaking of sacrifices, and the office of priesthood in the christian church, which makes no reference to the "Eucharist," nor any sacrifice of redemption, other than the death of Jesus Christ.

2nd. There are several important passages at the end of the 9th chapter. The apostle says: "As it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment, so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many." He thus teaches us that those who are in Christ die but once, their death being not reiterated; so the sacrifice of Jesus Christ for our sins is not reiterated. In chapter ten, it is expressly said that Christ offered himself. "Unicam oblationem"—"once for all," and is now set down at the right hand of God.

3rd. Since the death of Christ is a sacrifice sufficient for our redemption, there is no need of another sacrifice, a bloodless one.—For if, in order to apply the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, it is necessary to sacrifice him anew, for the same reason, in order to apply his death, it would be necessary that he should die (de-re-chef) afresh. Jesus Christ, and his death, is applied to us by the breaking of bread (1 Cor. 10: 16), and by baptism (Gal. 3: 27–29), and by faith, by which St. Paul says, "He dwells in our hearts" (Eph. 3: 17); but not by sacrificing him. The Apostle Paul does indeed speak of those who have been deeply enlightened in spiritual things, and afterwards fall away, as crucifying the Son of God "afresh"; but he speaks of it as a very fearful thing. Heb. 6: 6.

4th. But how can Jesus Christ, in the Liturgy, make satisfaction for our sins, when he is no more in a state to do so, neither to suffer, but only to intercede for us? As our adversary, Bellarmin, himself says: "Christus nunc nec mereri nec satifacere, potest tantum impetrare. Igitur impetracio propria est hujus sacrificii vis et efficientia."—Libro 2 de Missa. cap. 1. s. 2. Christ cannot now (says he) merit nor satisfy, but only intercede. For this reason the true virtue and efficacy of this sacrifice is intercession, and not satisfaction. Now the intercession of Jesus Christ, by which he makes supplication for us, being seated at the right hand of God (Rom. 8: 34), is sufficient, ergo, there is no need of sacrifice.

5th. The apostles and pastors of the true christian church are never called priests to distinguish them from the people. All the faithful are called priests, and also kings, by St. Peter, in his first Epistle 2: 9, and by St. John, Rev. 1: 6.

The apostle Paul, in his Epistle to the Ephesians, 4: 11, speaks of the "gifts" that Jesus Christ left with his church when he ascended on high. "He gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers." He says nothing of priests, neither does he in Timothy, nor in Titus, where he describes the duty of pastors, who were also called elders, or bishops, or deacons; no mention is made of the office of priests of the Liturgy.

It is evident that it is more excellent to be a priest, than to be a sacrifice. Thus Aaron was more excellent than the beasts that he offered for sacrifice; not only because he was a man, and had the sacrifices in his power, but also because the animals he offered were types of Jesus Christ, as man, who should die for us, whereas Aaron represented Christ, as the Son of God, who offered his body to his Father as a sacrifice for our sins. The pretended Roman priests and their imitators, who boast of sacrificing Christ, by so doing rank themselves above our Lord.

8th. In all sacrifices it is necessary that whatever is sacrificed as an offering to God, should be destroyed, or consumed. In the Mass, or Liturgy, Christ is not destroyed, therefore he is not sacrificed. To say that the body of Christ is consumed, is mockery; for Jesus Christ has but one being; his natural being. This expression, "Sacramental body," has the same value as "significant body," which is a chimera. In the Liturgy, it is pretended that Christ is sacrificed for our redemption. Now the sacramental or significative body of our Lord is not the price of our redemption, and is not sacrificed for us. For if the sacrifice is made when the bread and wine are destroyed, we must say that the sacrifice is made in the stomach, some hours after the Liturgy is finished, for time is necessary to destroy the bread and wine by digestion.

9th. Add to this that all sacrifices must be consecrated; but in Mass or Liturgy there is nothing to consecrate. Not the bread, for that is not offered to God in sacrifice, otherwise the Liturgy would be a sacrifice of accidents, of color, of taste, of lines and superfices.

10th. Our adversaries are never more troubled than to show in what this sacrifice consists, by which it is pretended that the consecrated bread is a propitiatory sacrifice to God. Does it consist in the words with which the pretended priest presents to God the body of Christ, and prays him to make the offering agreeable to himself? No! For our adversaries themselves confess (see No. 4) that Christ does not make this oblation, and presents nothing to his Father in the communion. Does the sacrifice consist in the breaking of bread? That is impossible; for Jesus Christ brake the bread before repeating the words, so called consecrating. He did not then break consecrated bread. Does it consist in manducation? That cannot be; for to eat is not to sacrifice; if so, all who partake of the bread would be priests, and the mouths of the people would be so many altars, and the Dimes should be put in the mouth of each.

11th. But how is it that by the words "do this in memory of me," Christ commanded in the sacrifice of the Liturgy an impossibility; for how can Christ be sacrificed in memory of Christ? Seeing also that St. Paul, immediately after these words, adds in explanation: "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come." 1 Cor. 11: 26. He teaches that we do this when we eat of the bread and drink of the wine, in commemoration of the death of our Lord. Therefore those who fear God and love Jesus Christ, must consider it a crime for mortal men and sinners to meddle with the sacrifice the eternal Son of God made to his Father, and style themselves "priests forever after the order of Melchisedec."

In conclusion, permit me, my dear friends, who belong to this new "Catholic Apostolic church," to relate to you what one of my dear friends, the pastor of an Evangelical church in Quebec, Canada, said under similar circumstances in which I am to-day: "The faith without which one cannot enter Paradise, is a disposition of mind that makes one admit, without examination, whatever it pleases priests to say is revealed. The religious truths revealed by God are the object of faith, and the motive of faith is the teaching of the church, resting on the new revelations of the church." That is, the Catholic Apostolic church reasons thus: "I believe such a dogma of Scripture that I never read, because it is revealed. I believe it is revealed, because the Apostolic church teaches me that it is revealed." I suppose you do not understand this, do you? Neither do I. But it is a mystery, and all is mystery in the Roman and Greek religions. Behold the Roman Catholic formula, also its act of faith. My God, I believe all that the priests and bishops say, without permitting myself to examine their teachings, without even knowing what they teach; for my pastor, who can make God in the sacrament of the holy Eucharist, is vice God on earth, consequently he cannot deceive me. There is another kind of formula that is an act of faith. A throne is raised, where is seated the grand Dominican Inquisitor with his principal officers. By their side several piles are raised, and seated upon each is a heretic clothed in a garment on which is pictured devils and flames; then at a signal given by the chanting of the 'Te Deum,' and ringing of bells, fire is set to the piles, that blood may not be spilt, for the church has in horror the spilling of blood. But this act of faith is no more practiced, to the great detriment of the holy church, that sees the number of its enemies augment with fearful rapidity, and much to the disadvantage of souls. All public discussions are also avoided. But in the place of polemics are heaped up the most disgusting falsehoods which they call 'inspiration of God through his apostles, of which Paul speaks in 2 Cor. 11: 13, 14. But they see not that God has already written upon the walls of their so called church, "Mene, Tekel, Upharsin."

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

Grandson, Canton de Vaud, Suisse, March 21st, 1866.

Voice of the West, please copy.

* See my report of 31st March, 1866.
† The three persons of the Trinity are consubstantial. The Son is consubstantial with the Father.

For the World's Crisis.

FORGIVENESS.

"Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us."

Are you aware, dear reader, that the condition on which we here ask forgiveness is, "as we forgive" those who wrong us? Consequently, every time we offer up this prayer, if we do not heartily forgive, we really pray God not to forgive us, but to destroy us forever. How dare you then repeat this prayer, when your heart is so full of bitterness that you cannot pray or speak in public without making an ill-natured fling at somebody? It is truly very essential that we be willing to forgive all; not only those who may have requested us to do so, but all who have in any way injured us. When we exercise this spirit of forgiveness, then we can in sincerity repeat the Lord's prayer.

Jesus, when expiring upon the cross, freely forgave those who had put him to death, and called upon the Father to do the same. And St. Stephen could say with his dying breath, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." This is the spirit of a christian. If we do not possess it, whatever else we may have, we are not Christ's.

Hardness and severity but illy become those who depend as we do upon God's forbearance. "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." "Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing, thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head." CHAS. H. SWEET.

Natick, R. I.

ON SHOUTING.

SHOUT! Let them shout, if they feel like it—live like it. There is no harm in shouting, when it comes from a full, overflowing heart of faith, love, and good works. Shouting is scriptural, a Bible doctrine. It was customary for good men, holy men, to shout in olden time. God commanded it. See Num. 23: 21; Josh. 6: 5; 2 Chron. 13: 15. In the time of Ezra, "when the people sang together, by course, praising and giving thanks unto the Lord; because he is good, for his mercy endureth forever. . . . And the people shouted with a great shout when they praised the Lord."—Ezra 3: 11. David was accustomed to shout—shout aloud. "Shout unto God with the voice of triumph." "Cry out, and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion; let them shout from the tops of the mountains." David brought up the Ark of God with shoutings of holy joy. "Shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy king cometh unto thee."

We could fill a volume of quotations, proving conclusively that shouting is no new thing, and that it is well pleasing in the sight of Heaven. It does one's soul good to see a holy man so full of love that he can't keep it in; it is thrilling, soul-kindling! Let it out, throw it out, shout it out, from pole to pole. Let the heavenly arches ring hallelujahs to God in the highest, else the very stones will cry out. Some very fastidious, pharisaical minds oppose shouting; go so far as to repudiate it entirely; manifest great hostility. Not long since, one church split all to pieces on this ground. One man felt like shouting, and would shout. Another man, starched up, said, "No, no; this shouting in God's house is out of the question, out of time and out of date, out of fashion. Shouting might have been endured once, but the times have altered. Society is more polished—shouting now will never do; it's impolite to shout." Thus a root of bitterness sprang up on the question of shouting, by which many were defiled.

To be sure, for a man to shout, groan, respond, or say Amen, hypocritically or insincerely, meanwhile leading a crooked life, walking disorderly, proudly, selfishly, making a "god of his belly," living in lust, is awful, grating, like the crackling of thorns under a pot! But a good, hearty response, or shout of praise to God from a holy, sanctified soul, walking in all the commandments of God blameless,—what harm in it? What reasonable objection can there be? We like it, God likes it, commands it. "Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous, and shout for joy, all ye upright in heart."—Ps. 32: 11.

D. F. NEWTON, Author of Home Thrusts.

For the World's Crisis.

VALENTINE.

DEAR CRISIS:—The following letter was written by my uncle, A. Boynton, the 14th of Feb., and sent to me as a Valentine. Thinking it might honor God and encourage the weak, as it has already encouraged me, I feel induced to give it publicity through your columns. ONE OF THE WEAK ONES.

West Batavia, N. Y., Feb. 14th, 1866.

Dear Niece:—I sit down this stormy morning to prepare for you my Valentine,—not in the shape of some comic or insignificant picture,—but a substantial letter of love and christian counsel. I am shut out from the world by force of circumstances, and shut up in God; so I can say with the Psalmist,—My "delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law" do I "meditate day and night." Now, Mary, is not my position an enviable one? Well, remember it cost something to obtain it. We cannot wish, or hope, ourselves into heaven, nor into a state preparatory for it; but a severe process of discipline is requisite in order that the carnal nature be driven out, expelled, and give place for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. This displacement, or removal of the one, and the occupancy by the other, constitutes the life-work and warfare of the christian. This work is ofttimes severe indeed, and is represented by Scripture phraseology as being crucified with Christ; cutting off right hands, or feet, etc.

Being born fleshly, earthly, carnal creatures, and as such subject to such control, it is impossible to obey a spiritual law. To obey such law (which is God's holy law of love, supreme to himself, and equality to our fellows), a necessity exists that we be possessed of another and higher principle by which to be governed—a principle superior in excellence and power to any that we naturally possess. This is proffered us in the gospel; here is the avenue of hope and life opened up to us. Jesus has prepared the way. While we were without strength, Christ died for the ungodly. Now he says, "Come unto me!" He has risen on high, and is become our High Priest in things pertaining unto God; so that we may come boldly unto a throne of grace, and obtain grace to help in every time of need.

You have entered upon this life-work of which I speak, and to encourage perseverance and strengthen faith, I write you. The object in pursuit is eternal life—an object well worthy our most ardent effort; to obtain which, no sacrifice should be accounted too great, or suffering too severe. Thus we must at all times view it, and not only so, but we are constantly called upon and required by our heavenly Father to bear the cross,—crucifying thereby the flesh, with not its lusts alone, but even its affections. Yes, the loves of a fleshly nature are opposed to and hinder Christ's love dwelling richly in our hearts. Be not disheartened nor discouraged at your want of perfect conformity to the divine mind, or at the warring of the fleshly mind. Christ having begun a good work in you, will bring it to a glorious completion if you by faith abide in him. This work of grace is not accomplished as speedily as some erroneously suppose. The young convert is like the scholar attending his first school,—has much to learn, much to unlearn; his attention must be called to only one thing at a time.

With a good teacher, proper and continued application, he masters one branch after another, practising as he proceeds, and so on, all his life long. Take the faithful scholar as your example in the school of Christ; yea, take the example of worldly seekers, in all the departments of worldly gain,—not of their wickedness, but of their unwearied perseverance and determination, suffering and privation. They, to gain bubbles—we, to gain an incorruptible crown. Suffering and pain is the common lot of all; a necessity consequent on mortality to the ungodly, working only death; but to the chosen of God, all of life's varied scenes, dark and trying as some of them often appear, are the harbingers of good, messengers of salvation. Stripes and chastisements leaving but the breath of life, shall yield "the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." Yes, faith founded in God, as revealed by the word, as a being supremely lovely, says, "He hath done all things well." He has placed man under the best conditions possible for a proper development of character, that he may destroy the chaff, yet save the wheat. True, living faith, sees God in all things; not a God of omnipotence merely, but a God of fatherly affection towards us, in all pertaining, or in any way connected with, or having relation to us. This faith, this comfortable assurance, dear Mary, is not the production of a day; it is not the fruit of one summer's harvest, but the blessed result of severe and continued discipline.

Properly to appreciate, and suitably to use a treasure, necessitates corresponding efforts in its acquirements; so in this case; "the hand of the diligent maketh rich." That wisdom which cometh from above is only attained as we seek and esteem it more than, or in preference to, all other. God can honor only those who honor him above all others. As you have chosen him, see that you ever keep your affections on the only object worthy of them. A fixedness of purpose, or consistency of effort—feeble though it be—is far more acceptable to God than deep theological knowledge, or the outgushing of powerful eloquence. The best way to attain religious truth, as a practical good, is invoking the aid of the Holy Spirit; and having this, study carefully the word on those points where inquiry arises. Thus doing, you will lay up a rich store, which will prove as a good foundation in time to come; it will make you strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might; enabling you to resist Satan always, being steadfast in the faith.

That you may receive the pure milk of the word, and thereby grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, ever prays

Your affectionate Uncle,
A. BOYNTON.

THE MISUNDERSTOOD PRAYER.

Dr. W. Leask, editor of the Rainbow, published in London, Eng., has written an excellent tract on the prayer—"THY KINGDOM COME," (Matt. 6: 10,) from which we make the following extract:—

"Others think, or rather say—for it is abuse of language to intimate that there has been any thought expended on the matter,—that this petition is a prayer that we may be fitted for heaven. In other words, the doctrine is, that instead of asking that the kingdom of God may be set up on the earth, we are to ask that He would prepare us for leaving the earth, and entering amidst the holy joys of heaven. This is to entirely reverse the words of our blessed Lord, and to make him mean exactly the contrary of what he said. It requires great patience to bear with such palpable misconstructions of the holy oracles. The thing is so perfectly absurd that one's understanding is offended and pained by it. One would not endure a critic or reviewer thus to trifle with the published sentiments of a friend; but it is astonishing how composedly christian men will look on when the inspired writers are wrested and travestied, so as to be compelled to mean the very opposite of what they said. The friend of an ordinary author would loudly complain of the misrepresentation; but when it is only an evangelist, or an apostle, or the Lord of both, that is trifled with, the matter may be left. Private judgment must not be interfered with. No, certainly not, God has given us that right, and we prize the boon too highly to let it fall from our hands; but the right of private judgment does not mean the right of private folly or private absurdity. But this vagary—for we cannot call it interpretation—is perfectly in keeping with the notion that finds, in all the passages where our Lord speaks of coming back to the world, only an assurance that we shall go to him at death. When he says that he will come, he of course means quite the opposite; namely, that he will send for us. When he says, 'I will come to you,' his meaning is, 'You shall come to me!'

It is melancholy to reflect on the amount of error that has thus been promulgated in the name of Jesus, and his illustrious prophets and apostles. The holy oracles have been made more enigmatical than those of ancient Greece. The true sayings of God have been reduced to inexplicable riddles by the perverse ingenuity of professed expositors. The verities of heaven have been removed from the statute roll to make room for the whims of a reinless imagination. The plainest book in human language has been turned into a mountain of mystery by the capricious annotations of scholastic theorists. The light of heaven has been compelled to reach us through the colored media of theological artists, instead of falling upon our understandings in its own native brilliance. Hence we have been perplexed and bewildered, instead of walking erect with cheerfulness in our eye, and a song upon our lips. The food of heaven, which should sustain us, and the water of life, which was intended to refresh us in our journey, have been presented in vessels of such construction that we cannot get enough, and are constantly compelled to cry out, Alas! our leanness, our leanness! The sun of light has been shorn of his beams, and we plod along with miserable lanterns in our trembling hands, which any passing breeze may extinguish.

In proportion to our convictions of the necessity of faith is the depth of our perplexity what to believe. The fine old prophetic formula, 'Thus saith the Lord,' with its positive certainty and Divine grandeur, has been exchanged for the shrill cry of 'Thus saith the sect,' with its palpable uncertainties and human littleness. The sure word of prophecy was sent down from heaven with the sacred injunction, 'Take heed to it;' but instead of walking in its serene light, the multitude are either climbing the mountains of vain speculation, or exhuming the dust of the fathers in search of ecclesiastical relics.

And when an earnest man here and there throws himself in the breach, and cries to the wanderers to reassemble around the Son of David, and to take the Lord of life at his word in unquestioning faith and childlike simplicity, leaving it to him to conquer all difficulties, and to realize his own magnificent purposes in his own perfectly wise manner, men stare, and say with the sons of Jacob, 'Behold, this dreamer cometh!' He who has resolved at all risks that his faith shall not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God, will act wisely to lay his account with side glances, instead of the direct look of open confidence which greeted him in the day when he walked with the multitude. If he says that all sects are too narrow to hold him, and that the Bible alone is the platform of his theology, he may expect for awhile to work single-handed; but let him take courage, for the cause is that of God and humanity, of truth and eternity, and though he fall in the struggle, he shall not have struggled in vain.

The rectification of one error is a great thing; the redemption of one forgotten truth from beneath the pile of human tradition is greater still; and the successful appeal to men to rally around Christ the Savior king, is the greatest of all. May this loftiest of honors wreath the brow of every man who is holding out the Bible to poor wandering humanity, and crying, 'Lo! it is the proclamation of God that he intends setting up a glorious kingdom upon this long-distracted and bleeding planet!'"

☞ Man, without a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, is a soldier without weapons, a horse without a bridle, a ship without a rudder, a bird without wings.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.—No. 3.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

We will now pass to the consideration of the symptoms of cholera; or, in other words, inquire into its private history and character. For the purpose of a more clear description, we will divide it into three stages:—First, or premonitory stage; second, or active stage; and third, or stage of collapse.

The premonitory symptoms of cholera have reference, first, to the whole community, and, secondly, to individuals. When the epidemic influence of the disease appears in any district with sufficient intensity to render an outbreak probable, that influence will be felt by most of the inhabitants. This is evinced by the general prevalence of an unnatural degree of sensibility of the stomach and bowels. Very slight causes, so slight, indeed, sometimes as to be unobserved, are sufficient to produce a high state of disturbance resulting in diarrhea and dysentery. As the morbific influence becomes more intense, cases of active and protracted diarrhea become more frequent, and present a more or less decided resemblance to the active symptoms of cholera. Symptoms of this kind may exist in a community for a longer or shorter period of time, and then gradually disappear without developing a single case of malignant cholera. These cannot be taken as the premonitory symptoms of cholera, but may be regarded as a premonition that the community where they prevail are threatened with a visitation of a malignant malady. But where an individual, situated near a locality where cholera actually prevails, experiences these symptoms, he will seldom fail to have the disease unless promptly relieved.

The premonitory stage varies much, both in duration and character of symptoms. These may be stated in general terms as follows: a derangement of the stomach, evinced by furred tongue, irregular appetite, pain and fulness in the head, with dizziness, and in some instances nausea and vomiting; intestinal disorder attended with diarrhea, slight colic pains, the discharges becoming light colored and thin, if not so at first, and each evacuation attended with a feeling of extreme debility; nervous disorder is manifested early, such as neuralgic pains, twitching of the muscles, and a disturbance of the brain. In some cases there will be a slight fever, but more commonly the skin will be relaxed and covered with perspiration. The urine and other glandular secretions are very scanty, and gradually become more and more so. This stage may continue for from an hour or two to several days. In some cases the most of the above symptoms are absent, the patient being surprised by the immediate appearance of the active symptoms.

Generally the premonitory symptoms are changed suddenly into those of a more active and alarming character. This condition is termed the active stage. This stage usually shows itself between sunset and sunrise, generally after midnight. It commences with copious watery discharges from the bowels. Vomiting sets in immediately, or soon follows. Cramping of the muscles now comes on to complete the patient's suffering. The vomiting and purging are usually simultaneous, very frequent, and attended with a sense of weight and oppression over the stomach, and of weakness and sinking away of the bowels, and frequently with severe spasmodic pains through the abdomen. Where the diarrhea has not existed previously, the discharge will first consist of the ordinary fecal matter; it will then rapidly change to a turbid, light-colored fluid resembling "rice water," and either odorless or having a faint, sickish smell. The quantity of this fluid is frequently enormous, and the calls for its discharge almost unceasing. The matter ejected by vomiting closely resembles that discharged from the bowels. The cramps usually commence in the muscles of the extremities, but soon extend to the body. The suffering produced by this symptom beggars description. The muscles, by the spasmodic contraction of their fibres, are drawn into hard knots with excruciating pain; this for a minute or two is followed by relaxation, and then repeated. Sometimes the muscles of only a part of the body take on this action, drawing the body into every conceivable shape, giving the sufferer not a minute's respite.

As the disease progresses the pulse rapidly sinks, becoming frequent, feeble, fluttering, and at last imperceptible. The surface is covered with a copious perspiration, which increases as the disease advances. The skin begins early to assume a dusky hue, which finally deepens into a blueish, leaden color, especially on the face and extremities; it loses its elasticity, and becomes shriveled and sodden. The surface soon becomes cold, and there is evidently a stagnation of blood in the capillaries. The urinary and other glandular secretions are entirely suppressed. The patient is extremely restless, and complains of intolerable distress in the centre of the abdomen, and of a difficulty of breathing. These symptoms continue to increase in violence for from two to twelve hours, when the vital force being completely exhausted, the patient sinks into collapse.

The stage of collapse. The pulse is now imperceptible at the wrist, and but a slight palpitation of the heart can be felt. If now a vein be opened, no blood, will escape, or at most a little tar-like blood may be squeezed from the orifice. The features are livid and shrunken away, the eyes have settled back into their orbits, and are dry and glaring. The skin feels doughy, and is covered with a cold, clammy sweat. The voice is lost, or nearly so; the breath is cold, breathing hurried and feeble, or slow and sighing. Evacuations either cease, or are involuntary, occasionally eructations instead of vomiting, hiccough, a few cramps return, and life is extinct.

Variations from the above train of symptoms sometimes occur. Occasionally vomiting will be absent until near the last, or may not appear at all. Again the vomiting may be the prominent symptom, diarrhea being absent. Or the patient may be seized suddenly with congestion of the brain; perhaps accompanied with obstinate convulsions. Not unfrequently, when in the stage of collapse, the patient manifests returning strength and warmth, and seems rapidly recovering, when suddenly he sinks and expires without a struggle. During the course of the disease the mind is but little disturbed.

We come now to the consideration of the most important part of our subject—prevention. I do not claim that the epidemic can be entirely prevented; but that its violence can be materially lessened I have not the least doubt; and by proper care many may escape the malady entirely, who otherwise will fall before it.

The means to be employed, as preventitive measures, should be employed before the disease makes its appearance on our shores. Now, before the warm weather sets in, is the time to prepare for cholera. The great barrier to the progress of this malady and to the severity of its symptoms is cleanliness. Clean up; clean yourselves inside and out; clean every thing around you; your houses, your cellars, out-houses and drains. See that no animal or vegetable matter is allowed to decay above ground, on or near your premises. Take out all of your old potatoes, turnips, cabbages, etc., and those unfit for use, burn or bury; and see to it that no such matter is decaying near you. See that your cellars are perfectly dry. If there is any water standing there, drain it off. Draw off all the old rubbish from around your buildings. In short, allow nothing to decay near your dwellings.

The next thing to be attended to is your own persons. I need only say here, that whatever promotes health guards against any disease; conversely, whatever impairs health is a predisposing cause of disease. I have no no time nor space to review those various measures here which would produce a healthy action of the system; but will merely allude to some of the more important ones that are concerned in preventing the disease under consideration. Cleanliness of the surface, a nutritious and unirritating diet, regular and moderate exercise, plenty of sleep, composed mind, well ventilated apartments, and regularity of habits, being "temperate in all things," are among the prime means of prevention. Use no strong drinks, no unusual diet, your present diet nutritious and easy of digestion; be extremely careful not to overload the stomach; use no hard water, for this is found to be a great means of increasing the violence of the malady. Avoid low, marshy districts, and thickly settled localities; keep in the pure atmosphere and bright sunshine; labor just enough to keep all the bodily functions in a healthy, vigorous condition, and to produce a good appetite and procure sound, refreshing sleep at night. Use no preventitive medicines, nor stimulants of any kind, except you feel the premonitory symptoms.

Were people to employ the above means, cholera would be divested of much of its malignancy, and thousands who will be hurled from the stage of action with but a few hours notice, during the prevalence of this epidemic, might be saved from an attack.

Bristolville, Ohio.

INDULGENCE OF THE APPETITE.

Parents should ponder well on the danger of an early and capricious indulgence of the appetites and imaginary wants of their children. Repetition soon becomes a habit, and a habit once formed, even in childhood, will often remain during the whole of after life, acquiring strength every year, until, at last, it sets all laws, human and divine, at defiance. Let parents who yield to the cries of their children for dainty and promiscuous food, or who allow them to torment domestic animals, or to strike their nurses, or to raise the hand against any person, consider well on the consequences. The moral effects of pampering the appetites of children are most melancholy. Is the mother afraid of an explosion of passion, a bribe is too often promised in the shape of a cake or tart, as a peace offering. Does it annoy a whole company by its boisterous or ill-timed pranks, it is persuaded to be quiet by the promise of some sweetmeats. If it has been good, as the phrase is, the reward is still too frequently something for the stomach. Eating is soon regarded as the chief end and object of life by a child, who sees in it the chief incentive to good behavior. A premium would truly seem to be given for gluttony. The use of the other nobler senses, and of the faculties of the mind, the early cultivation of the kindlier and better feelings of our nature—generosity, disinterestedness, pity, filial love—all are overcome or postponed in favor of the one sensual, selfish and absorbing act of gormandizing.

TRICHNA SPIRALSIS.—As this disease has become prevalent, it is well to state its cause, its effects, and its preventive. Pork is a heavy, rich, greasy, indigestible food cooked, and much more so in its raw state. To overload the stomach with it, it lies undigested so long that the animacules in it detach themselves, and assimilate with other matter in the stomach, the liver becomes inactive, the bile dries up, the blood in the veins gets so thick that circulation partially ceases, and venous blood becomes of the same nature as diseased matter, caused by the pork laying so long in the stomach, that worms breed out of the blood.

This cannot occur only in very billious, constipated people. Worms will create in the stomach of many persons that overload or give it more than it can do, and sometimes in weak and delicate persons whose digestion is feeble. It is in the nature of animal matter to decay and become impregnated with worms as soon as it loses its life-like circulation.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance..............$2.50 a year.
If not paid within six months....$3.00 a year.
Five copies, six months, to one address.........$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies, six months, to one address..........$10.00
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE.

Semi-monthly.

THE YOUNG PILGRIM:

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS:

Payable always in advance.

[illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 554. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1866. VOL. XXIII—NO. 9.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL, JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS,
S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN,
D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

ONWARD!

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Onward! onward! men of heaven,
Bear the gospel banner high;
Rest not till its light is given,
Star of every pagan sky.
Send it where the pilgrim stranger
Faints beneath the torrid ray;
Bid the hardy forest ranger
Hail it ere he fades away.

Where the Arctic ocean thunders,
Where the tropics fiercely glow,
Broadly spread its page of wonders,
Brightly bid its radiance glow.
India marks its lustre stealing,
Shivering Greenland loves its rays,
Afric, mid her deserts kneeling,
Lifts the untaught strain of praise.

Rude in speech or wild in feature,
Dark in spirit though they be,
Show that light to every creature,
Prince or vassal, bond or free.
Lo! they haste to every nation,
Hosts on hosts the ranks supply,—
Onward! Christ is your salvation,
Thou shalt gain the victory.

—Selected.

THE BURNING OF ROME.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

Will Rome be burnt? If so, how? and when? After devoting considerable thought upon these questions, I am inclined to the view that this so called "Eternal City" will experience an entire destruction, just prior to the coming of the Lord, and this destruction may be partly by human, but mainly by divine power, directing the earth's consuming forces. It will be done, not quietly, but amid the most alarming convulsions. It will come suddenly, too, while the boast is in Babylon's lips, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." Without entering into a minute analysis of the prophecies on this subject, and disclaiming all association with the "sensational" students of the prophetic word, I candidly invite attention to the following array of facts, criticisms and opinions on this remarkably interesting theme:—

The peninsula of Italy has been known for centuries as a volcanic region. Particularly so is its southern portion, embracing what is termed the two Sicilies. Doubtless the whole peninsula lies upon a bed of volcanic material, with sulphurous matter in immense quantities, which, together with several active volcanoes existing in its surface, subjects the country to frightful earthquakes, and devastating volcanic eruptions. The Apennines, averaging 4200 feet in height, stretch through the whole of Italy for a distance of 840 miles. Generally, they follow the line of the western coast—where lies Rome—at a distance of from six to fifteen miles. One branch of the sub-Roman Apennines terminates in the seven hills of Rome itself—the famous city. Naples, lying in the southwest coast, 118 miles from Rome, abounds in groups of volcanic mountains and hills. Vesuvius, one of the most active, is but ten miles away. This burning mountain has had from the earliest period to the present time sixty eruptions. As late as 1857, 1858, 1859, and 1861, the whole country around was laid waste, but the city escaped. Sometimes this volcano lies inactive for 325 years, and then suddenly bursts forth with great fury. Ashes from its crater have been carried to Constantinople, and even to Egypt and Syria, 1000 miles away. North of Naples, and between it and Gaeta, which is only seventy-six miles from Rome, are the volcanic groups of Roccamonfina, the Phlegrean Fields, and Mount Vulturo. This whole region, as far North as Rome, abounds with lava, ashes, asbestus, bitumen, petroleum, naphtha, sulphur, and other volcanic and igneous matter.

Some of the Italian hills discharge mud, others throw off carburetted hydrogen. The native sulphur of commerce is derived chiefly from Sicily, or Southern Italy, whose mines supply the whole world, and in 1861 produced 300,000 tons, worth thirty millions francs. Indeed, it is said by travelers that the very ground of Italy is in numerous places constantly on fire. And it is indisputably true that Italy, Sicily, and the neighboring islands containing the active volcanoes of Vesuvius, Etna, and Strombali, constitute the chief volcanic district of Europe. Stromboli has been constantly burning for 2000 years. Palermo, in Sicily, experienced fifty-seven earthquakes in forty years.

Volcanoes have been seen to burst out of the sea near the coast of Italy. We could mention a thousand facts, which all go to show how easy a thing it would be for God to overthrow the city of Rome in a deluge of volcanic fire, merely by setting in operation the terrible forces that underlie her soil.

For ages, the land of Italy has been famous for its earthquakes. We are informed by history that B. C. 439, "tremendous earthquakes shook Italy, at intervals, for a whole year, so, that Rome was fatigued with messengers, who were continually arriving with news of towns and villages demolished." In A. D. 79 occurred the fearful earthquake and eruption of Mount Vesuvius, which buried the cities of Herculaneum, Pompeii, and Stabiæ, in lava and ashes to the depth of eighty to one hundred and twelve feet. These cities were less than seventy miles from Rome. Their destruction was most sudden, as Vesuvius had lain quiet for ages previous. Just so sudden, yea, "in one hour," might Rome perish, as did Sodom and Gomorah. Baronius says that when Herculaneum was overthrown, many supposed the world was about to be utterly destroyed, so terrible was the sight. In the year 1005, Italy was for three months convulsed by earthquakes. And in A. D. 1117, says Noah Webster, "all Italy was shaken for forty days."

Again in 1185 Italy was shaken and Calabria destroyed. In 1456, Italy was violently shaken by an earthquake, and 40,000 people perished. Pistorious says it demolished forty towns. In 1638, Calabria, in the South of Italy, having an area of 6000 square miles, was again terribly convulsed, and 30,000 people were destroyed. Whole towns were entirely ruined. In 1693, a frightful earthquake shook all Sicily, and killed 60,000 souls. During the convulsion, a fountain was seen to discharge its waters as red as blood. Again, in 1783, a tremendous shock laid in ruins Calabria, Messina, and many other Italian towns, and nearly 40,000 persons perished in the ruins.

With all these facts and precedents before us, I am prepared at any time to hear that Rome, the sink of iniquity and seat of Satan, has suddenly, by the fiat of an avenging God, like a millstone dashed into the sea (Rev. 18: 21); been submerged by earthquake and volcanic forces in a lake of fire and brimstone; an event that will fill the world with astonishment and mourning, and prove the harbinger of the instant coming of the Lord. Both tradition and prophecy intimately associate the destruction of Mystic Babylon and her capitol city, with the end of the world. Gibbon has preserved a proverb recorded in the writing of Bede, of the year A. D. 800, and current in Europe for ten centuries, which strikingly says, "As long as the Colliseum stands, Rome shall stand; and when the Colliseum falls, Rome will fall; when Rome falls, the world will fall." Hist. chap. 21. And the Sibylline Oracles all taught that Rome will sink at last into an abyss of fire. We think the predictions of the seventeenth and eighteenth chapters of Revelation support this view.

The belief of the early Christians on this question, is fairly stated by Gibbon, who says they viewed pestilences, famines, comets and eclipses, earthquakes and inundations, as "so many preparatory and alarming signs of the great catastrophe of Rome, when the country of the Scipios and Cæsars should be consumed by a flame from heaven, and the city of Seven Hills, with her palaces, her temples, and her triumphal arches, should be buried in a vast lake of fire and brimstone. It might, however, afford some consolation to Roman vanity, that the period of their empire would be that of the world itself; which, as it had once perished by the element of water, was destined to experience a second and speedy destruction from the element of fire." And he speaks of Italy as in their opinion "chosen for the origin and principal scene of the conflagration, and the best adapted for that purpose by natural and physical causes; by its deep caverns, beds of sulphur, and numerous volcanoes, of which those of Etna, of Vesuvius, and of Lipari, exhibit a very imperfect representation. The calmest and most intrepid sceptic could not refuse to acknowledge that the destruction of the present system of the world by fire, was in itself extremely probably." And the infidel admits that the main authority in the early church for such a belief, was not so much reason and tradition, as it was the sacred Scriptures.—Hist. chap. 15.

Among more modern writers in the church who have shared in the belief, is found Brightman, Dr. Burnet, Mede, Bishop Newton, Daubuz, Simpson, Fraser, etc. On this deeply interesting subject, I propose letting these eminent authors speak for themselves.

Brightman, in 1611, wrote on Rev. 18th chapter, as follows:—"The calamities which are rehearsed belong partly to men whom death, sorrow, and famine shall devour, and partly to the city which shall be burned with fire, which declares that the city shall not be taken at the first assault, but by a siege, which, while continuing, the pest, sorrow, and famine shall assail within; and that at length the city shall come into the power of the enemies, who shall make it even with the ground, and bring her to ashes; then shall be fulfilled that which Sibyl prophesied, Rome shall be a street or empty place." And referring to the Hallelujahs at her fall, he says, "These are the funerals of the city of Rome, and the rites by which her burial shall be celebrated."—Com. on Apoc.

Daubuz, on Rev. 17: 16, says: "This is their last act towards this whore, or capital city. They shall not only take and plunder her, but destroy her with fire and sword, and by that means leave no refuge there to any of her lovers to hold up and maintain by her power the idolatry and tyrannical dominion exercised by her. Most certainly these symbols imply the entire destruction of this capital city, for as long as it stands it will one way or other maintain the same principles, and strive to keep the same power. So that the only way to take off all hopes of recovery, must be by destroying it utterly, and hindering its friends from ever settling there. Thus her fate will be like that of the literal Babylon, whose situation is now almost unknown," etc. On her smoke ascending up forever (chap. 18: 18, and 19: 3), he writes: "This is not to signify a continual burning, but by a metonymy of the efficient for the effect, to signify that it is burnt forever, and never to be restored," "it seeming morally impossible that a burning procured by human hands, as this is to be, being caused by some of the ten horns, should be perpetual; unless at the same time, God's acts should concur to make Rome's destruction like that of Sodom. . . . Nothing of a town will remain of Rome, so that the place shall know it no more."—Com. on Rev. 17: 20.

Mede makes Babylon, "First the royal city of the beast, to wit, the city of Rome; and again, the citizens or state of Rome, which doubtless the Pope with the Senate of the scarlet Cardinals do make," and on Rev. 19: 3, says,—"She shall be wholly turned into ashes, and made even with the ground, never after to be inhabited."—Key of the Rev., 1650.

Fraser also writes,—"Another circumstance clearly foretold, is the destruction of Rome by fire." Thus, Rev. 17: 16, "They shall burn her with fire." Rev. 18: 8, "She shall be utterly burned with fire; for strong is the Lord God that judgeth her." And her admirers are represented as lamenting bitterly when they see "the smoke of her burning." ver. 9, 18. In conjunction with the flames spread by the victorious enemy, shall be a subterraneous fire kindled by the breath of the Almighty, as appears from Isaiah 34: 9. 10. It is probable that a concussion of the earth, accompany this subterraneous fire, shall dam up the Tiber, so that, having no issue to the sea, it shall reduce the ground in the neighborhood of Rome to a lake or morass, while the hills of Rome shall appear as islands in the midst of the morass, with ruinous palaces, and these palaces inhabited by every unclean beast and bird," etc., etc. Fraser supposes that as Sodom, Gomorrah, and Babylon were probably, by the damming up and overflow of the Jordan and Euphrates, turned to the Dead Sea, and to vast morasses and ruin, so Rome, the prototype of all, shall in such like manner perish.—Key to the Proph. p. 224, 1802.

Bishop Newton, on Rev. 18th and 19th, thus comments: "These expressions can imply no less than a total destruction by fire, but Rome has yet never been totally destroyed by fire." "And her smoke rose up forever and ever;" which intimates that she should be made as signal a monument of divine vengeance as Sodom and Gomorrah. It is taken from Isaiah, who hath said much the same thing of Edom, and by Edom the Jews understand Rome. Isa. 34: 9, 10. "And the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch," in the genuine edition of the Chaldee paraphrase it is, "And the rivers of Rome shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch. It shall not be quenched night or day; the smoke thereof shall go up forever." This tradition of the Rabbins may receive some confirmation from these words of the Revelator, and such an event may appear the more probable, because the adjacent countries are known to be of a sulphurous and bituminous soil; there have even at Rome been eruptions of subterraneous fire, which have consumed several buildings, so that the fuel seems to be prepared, and waits only for the breath of the Lord to kindle it. And this eminent man proceeds to make this event the prelude to the introduction of God's kingdom.—Diss. on Proph. Vol. III., chap. 19, 1758.

Dr. Burnet makes the burning of Rome the very kindling of the last fires, it being most prepared for the torch "by the sulphurousness of its soil, and its fiery mountains and caverns." He says, "all accounts, ancient and modern, make it a storehouse of fire." "At the glorious appearance of our Savior, the conflagration will begin at the city of Rome, and the Roman territory. Nature hath saved us the pains of kindling a fire in these parts of the earth, for since the memory of man there have always been subterraneous fires in Italy. And the Romans did not preserve their vestal fire with more constancy than nature hath done her fiery mountains in some part of that territory. Let us then suppose, when the fatal time draws near, all these burning mountains to be filled and replenished with fit materials for such a design. Let Vesuvius, Etna, Strongyle, and all the volcanic islands, break out into flames, and by the earthquakes which then will rage, let us suppose new eruptions, or new mountains opened in the Apennines and near Rome, and to vomit out fire in the same manner as the old volcanoes. Then let the sulphurous ground take fire; and seeing that the soil of that country in several places is so full of brimstone that the steams and smoke of it visibly rise out of the earth, we may reasonably suppose that it will burn openly at that time. Lastly, the lightnings of the air and the flaming streams of the melting skies will mingle and join with burnings of the earth. . . . A dreadful fate will attend Rome, namely, to be absorbed or swallowed up in a lake of fire and brimstone, after the manner of Sodom and Gomorrah. This, in my judgment, will be the fate and final conclusion of mystical Babylon, to sink as a great mill-stone into the sea, and never to appear more. Hear what the prophet says: "A mighty angel took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all. Apoc. 18: 21. Simply to be burned does not at all answer to this description of its perishing by sinking like a mill-stone into the sea, and leaving no remains or marks of it. A city that is only burnt cannot be said to fall like a mill-stone into the sea, or that it can never more be found, for after the burning of a city the ruins stand, and its place is well known; wherefore in both respects, besides this exterior burning, there must be an absorption of this Babylon, the seat of the beast, and therefore a total disappearance of it. This also agrees with the suddenness of the judgment which is a repeated character of it. Chap 18: 9, 10, 17, 19. The manner is thus (chap. 19: 20): "The beast and the false prophet were cast alive into a lake of fire and brimstone." Not bound hand and foot and thrown in headlong, but swallowed up alive, they and theirs, as Korah and his company, or, to use a plainer example, after the manner of Sodom and Gomorrah, which perished by fire, and at the same time sunk into the Dead Sea, a lively type of the fate of Rome.—Theory of the Earth, Book II. chap. 19.

And David Simpson in his "Plea," 1799, often quoting Rev. 18th at length, tersely observes: "It will be allowed that these are very strong expressions, and imply a punishment extremely severe. It is remarkable, too, that all the country about the city of Rome is a kind of bitumen, or pitchy substance. And in the year of our Lord 80, a fire burst out beneath the ground, in the middle of the city, and burnt four of the principal heathen temples, with the sacred buildings of the capital. Italy indeed is a storehouse of fire; and when the one thousand two hundred days (years) are expired, Rome itself, with all its magnificence, will be absorbed in a lake of fire, sink into the sea, and rise no more at all forever."

What an absorbing and thrillingly interesting question is this touching the burning of Rome and the ruin of the Papal rulers therein! And how it magnifies and intensifies this interest to know that a hundred commentaries and students of prophecy affirm the ending of the 1260 years and the destruction of the Papal power this year, 1866! This awful year, when the eyes of the whole world are intently fixed on the Pope and the Seven-Hilled City! Mr. Fraser strikingly concludes from the typical Scriptures concerning Babylon and Nineveh (Jer. 51: 39, 57; Neh. 1: 10; Dan. 5, and Rev. 18: 7), that Rome's destruction will come upon her during the occurrence of some great festival, when the inhabitants were in a careless and boastful security. In startling correspondence with this, it is said that the Pope and his Cardinals propose to celebrate the eighteen hundreth anniversary of the martyrdom of St. Peter—said to have taken place at Rome A. D. 66—by a monster convention of all the Bishops, and Archbishops, Priests, Orders, and Laity, etc., from all parts of the world. And this magnificent festival, the greatest ever known, is to be held in St. Peter's church at Rome this year—1866!

O church of Christ! a voice from heaven says, WATCH. The great day may be just at hand. WATCH!—Advent Herald.

For the World's Crisis.

JOSEPHUS' CHRONOLOGY EXAMINED.

BY WM. C. THURMAN.

"Joseph Schaliger, after all his deeper inquiries, solemnly pronounces that" "Josephus was the most diligent, and the greatest lover of truth of all writers," "and is not afraid to affirm that" "it is more safe to believe him, not only as to affairs of the Jews, but also as to those that are foreign to them, than all the Greek and Latin writers; and this because his fidelity and compass of learning are everywhere conspicuous."

Though Josephus is almost unanimously regarded as one of the most reliable of all historians, his chronological dates have been set aside as of no worth, because they not only conflict with all writers on chronology, but even appear to clash with himself. I am willing to admit that Josephus may have been as capable of making a few mistakes in figures as other men; yet, if the historical portion of his work is so reliable; if, of "all writers," he was "the greatest lover of truth," I think that we should give him at least a fair hearing, before his chronology is condemned as unworthy of regard.

To give him a fair trial, we must notice his method of arranging his chronology; so that if we detect an error, we may be enabled to see how the mistake occurred. My opinion is, that at the time he wrote, he had two tables of chronology before him, both of which he sometimes used; but regarding the shortest as the correct one, he would correct the longer by the shorter one.

For example, it would appear that one of his tables gave 2656 years for the interval between creation and the flood, which he immediately corrects by saying 1656 (Jose. Ant. b. 1, c. 3, s. 3), which is the same I have given in my table of chronology.

2. Jerusalem was destroyed A. D. 70. In allusion to which, Josephus says, "From king David, who was the first of the Jews who reigned therein, to this destruction under Titus, were one thousand one hundred and seventy-nine years."—Jose. War, b. 6, c. 10, s. 1. This is admitted by all to be incorrect, by 54 years too long for Bishop Usher, 79 too long for Bosanquet, and 84 too long for my chronology. Whether Josephus, having given this longer period, corrected it by adding the shorter which has been omitted by the transcribers; or whether this was a willful corruption made after the death of Josephus, we cannot now say. But however the error may have occurred, we are fortunate in being enabled to correct it by the very author whom we think it most likely Josephus followed in the arrangement of his chronology; I mean Demetrius the learned Jew, who lived about three hundred years before Josephus.

This Demetrius, as we have observed in our article called "Truth Discovered," gives us B. C. 558 for the beginning of the captivity, and B. C. 547 for the ruin of the city. That Demetrius has made no mistake here, and that no error has crept in by the carelessness of transcribers, we prove, by the three different ways in which it is given.

Many years before I knew any thing about these authors, I had proved the same by the authority of the word of God; but as my object here is to establish a chronology by Jewish authors, independent of the Bible, I prefer not to use that authority here. Bosanquet regards the authority of Demetrius as the best found outside of the Bible. Having such an abundant proof of the time at which Jerusalem was destroyed by the king of Babylon, we shall regard B. C. 547 as the fixed date from which to reckon all of Josephus' dates.

3. We will now try another date. Says Josephus, "Jerusalem . . . was demolished entirely by the Babylonians, four hundred and seventy-seven years and six months after . . . David."—Jose. War, 6, c. 10, s. 1. If to B. C. 547, we add 477 with the odd months, we have B. C. 1025 for the beginning of the reign of David, which is but one year short of my chronology. Thus it will be discovered that Josephus' chronology is not far from the truth, when we understand his method of reckoning.

4. Having observed that the Jews' chronology, as followed by Josephus and Demetrius, gives B. C. 1025 for the beginning of the reign of David, we are now prepared to examine the date extending from this to the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, in A. D. 70.

Josephus says, "From king David, who was the first of the Jews who reigned therein, to this destruction under Titus, were one thousand one hundred and seventy-nine years," as we mentioned in section second. We have observed that the date given by Demetrius has detected an error here of just 84 years, which being taken from 1179, leaves 1095. And if from this we take the year A. D. 70, we have B. C. 1025, for the beginning of the reign of David. This is again but one year short of my chronology.

5. Says Josephus, in another place, "The temple was burnt . . . one thousand and sixty-two years, six months, and ten days from the departure out of Egypt."—Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 5. It was burnt according to Demetrius, on the tenth day of the fifth month, B. C. 547, to which add 1062 years and six months, and we have B. C. 1610, which is again one year short of my chronology.

6. Says Josephus, "The kings of David's race, ... being in number twenty-one, ... reigned five hundred and fourteen years, six months and ten days, of whom Saul, their first king, retained the government twenty years."—Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 4. According to Demetrius their reign ended on the tenth day of the fifth month, B. C. 547, to which add 514 years, six months and ten days, and we have the first day of the eleventh month, B. C. 1062. This is four years short of my chronology. But as all writers are liable to slight mistakes, we may correct this by his other dates. We have observed in section third, that the dates given by Josephus and Demetrius give B. C. 1025, for the beginning of the reign of David; and both Josephus and Paul give Saul 40 years.—Jose. Ant. b. 6, c. 14, s. 9; Acts 13: 20. If to 1025 we add 40, we have B. C. 1065, which is again just one year short of my chronology. Thus it would appear that Josephus' chronology continues to run just one year short of mine.

7. Says Josephus, "Now the temple was burnt four hundred and seventy years, six months, and ten days after it was built."—Jos. Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 5. The temple was burnt on the tenth day of the fifth month, B. C. 547, to which add 470 years, 6 months, and 10 days, and we have B. C. 1018. But this is 35 years too long for my chronology, and 46 too long for Bishop Usher's. In section fifth, we observed that the interval given by Josephus between the leaving of Egypt and the burning of the temple, was but one year short of my chronology. And yet Josephus, in another place, gives but 592 years for the interval between the leaving of Egypt and the foundation of the temple, which is 36 years short of what I had given. The way we suppose Josephus made this mistake is noticed on page seventy-two of the "Book of Daniel Opened."

In allowing Josephus to correct himself by his own dates, we there made the interval 628 years, instead of 592, that is, just 36 years longer. And if we take this from the 470 years, which he gave for the interval between the building and burning of the temple, we have 434 years for the corrected date, which, with the odd months added to B. C. 547, gives B. C. 982 for the time of the building of the temple. This is again just one year short of my chronology.

8. Says Josephus, "From the deluge to the destruction of the temple, the whole interval was one thousand, nine hundred fifty-seven years, six months, and ten days."—Jose. Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 5. If to B. C. 547, we add 1957 years with the odd months, we have B. C. 2505, which is 36 years too long for my chronology, and 196 too long for Bishop Usher's. Now to correct this mistake, it is only necessary to notice how it occurred. We have before mentioned that Josephus appears to have had before him two tables of chronology; the longer one being incorrect, he corrected it by the shorter. But it would appear that he sometimes, through mistake, adds his dates to the longer instead of the shorter. For example, we have just observed in section seventh, that through mistake, according to his own dates, he made the interval between the building and burning of the temple 36 years too long. Therefore, if in arranging this portion of his chronology, he added his dates to that which was 36 years too long, it follows that to get the correct chronology, we must take 36 from it. And if from 1957 we take 36, we have 1921 years for the interval between the deluge and destruction of the temple; which being added to B. C. 547 with the odd months, gives B. C. 2469 for the time of the deluge. This is the same year that I have given in my chronology.

8. Says Josephus, "From the generation of Adam until this befell the temple, there were three thousand, five hundred and thirteen years, six months and ten days."—Jose. Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 5. If to B. C. 547 we add 3513 with the odd months, we have B. C. 4061. This is 65 years short of my chronology, but 98 too long for Bishop Usher. That there is some mistake here is clear, for we have just noticed in section eight that Josephus' date, as it stands, gives B. C. 2505 for the deluge, and in section first we observed that he gave 1656 for the interval between Adam and the deluge, which, being added to 2505, gives 4161, or one hundred years more than this date. Therefore, we must admit that this date needs revision.

(To be continued.)

ONE BAPTISM.

The apostle Paul teaches there is one Lord, one faith, one baptism. Now it is certain that if the baptism of the Holy Spirit is the one baptism, then it is certain there is no such thing (or command) as water baptism. Did Jesus command believers of the gospel to be baptized with the Holy Spirit, or in water as he set them example, when he was baptized by John in Jordan? Matt. 28: 19, 20; Mark 16: 15, 16. Did Paul baptize those disciples he found at Ephesus into the Holy Spirit? or did they not receive the Holy Spirit after he had baptized them? Did not Philip baptize the eunuch in water? And who instructed the eunuch concerning water baptism, if Philip did not? And did not Peter teach the truth on the day of Pentecost, when he instructed those who inquired of him what they must do to be saved, to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and they should receive the gift of the Holy Spirit?

1. Baptism includes a burial and a rising up to "newness of life." "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him." —Col. 2: 12; 3: 1–4; Rom. 6:5; Acts 8: 12, 35, 38.

2. Baptism is the "form" or type of gospel doctrine. Romans 6: 17. The gospel, as preached by Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 1, 4, is that Jesus died for our sins, was buried and rose again according to the Scriptures. Baptism gives it a formal expression.

3. Obedience to Jesus in this ordinance honors the gospel. It makes our life, death, and resurrection a reality. Those "buried" in the waters of "baptism" could never "walk in newness of life," if they were not "raised up" from the water to that end. So, also, if the dead in Christ are not raised, then they "are PERISHED." All depends on the resurrection.

4. No other act of obedience secures a distinct promise of a resurrection. "If we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."—Rom. 6: 5. That "likeness" of Christ's death" and burial; that being "planted . . . in the likeness of his (Christ's) death," is stated in the preceding verse to be "buried with him by baptism."

We will give unquestionable testimony from the learned men of past ages. Rosenmuller says: "Immersion in the water of baptism, and coming forth out of it, was a symbol of a person's renouncing his former life, and, on the contrary, beginning a new one. The learned have rightly reminded us that, on account of this emblematical meaning of baptism, the right of immersion ought to have been retained in the christian church."

Martin Luther, after speaking of baptism as a symbol of death and resurrection, says: "On this account, I could wish that such as are to be baptized should be completely immersed into water, according to the meaning of the word, and the signification of the ordinance, as also, without doubt, it was instituted by Christ.

Dr. Knapp, an eminent and pious German divine, says: "We are, like Christ, buried as dead persons, by baptism, and should arise like him to a new life."

Dr. Bloomfield, one of the most profound Biblical scholars of Great Britain, says: "We have been thus buried in the waters of baptism." He adds: "There is a plain allusion to the ancient custom of baptism by immersion."

Barnabas, the companion of Paul, says: "We descended into the water, and come out of it."

Justin Martyr: "Those who believe are led to some place where is water, and then bathe in the water." In another place, he says: "We represent our Lord's sufferings and resurrection by baptism in a pool.

Tertullian: "We are immersed in water—let down into the water and dipped—Peter immersed in the Tiber."

Dionysius Areopag: The total concealment in water fitly represents Christ's death and burial."

Chrysostom: "We, as in a sepulchre immersing our heads in water, the old man buried and sinking down, the whole is concealed at once, then, as we immerge, the new man again rises."

Jerome: "Three times we are immersed."

Augustine: "Rightly are ye immersed three times, who have received baptism in the name of Christ."

Neander: "Baptism was originally by immersion."

Tholuck, on Rom. 6: 4, says: "In order to understand the figurative use of baptism, we must bear in mind the well-known fact, that the candidate in the primitive church was immersed in water, and raised out of it again."

Winer: "In the apostolic age, baptism was by immersion."

Bretschneider: "The apostolic church baptized only by immersion."

Schleusner, Wahl, and Bretschneider, the three great New Testament lexicographers of Germany, limit baptism, as a sacred ordinance, to immersion.

Wall: "According to apostolic instruction and example, baptism was performed by immersing the whole body."

Prof. Lange: "Baptism, in the apostolic age, was a proper baptism; the immersion of the whole body in water. Plunging under water represents death, and the rising out of it the resurrection to a new life."

In short, from the days of the apostles downwards for 1,300 years, we have an unbroken chain of evidence, showing that baptism was performed by immersion, and by immersion only. Now, who would set at nought such testimony, if it were given on any other subject? Is such testimony good for anything when it is in harmony with revelation, which shines as clear as the noonday sun on this most glorious subject, which represents in figure the death and resurrection of Christ our Life-giver? If any wish more testimony, and can procure the German Book of Martyrs, they will there find that the united testimony of the church, from the first ages of primitive christianity down through succeeding centuries, all sustain the testimony already given, that baptism by immersion in the water is the "one baptism" spoken of by Paul. And with all christian kindness, I would ask how believers are buried in baptism by, or with the Spirit, or, by sprinkling or pouring, are they planted in the likeness of Christ's death? If Christ did not command baptism by immersion, when he commissioned his apostles to go and preach the gospel of the kingdom, and to observe all things whatsoever he commanded, what did he command? And why did his apostles preach and practise baptism by immersion, if Christ did not set the example when he went down into Jordan and was baptized?

Now we invite our sprinkling and pouring friends to come out and meet this question, and let the people know who have the truth. If the New Testament teaches any other mode of baptism as obedience of faith in the gospel of the kingdom than immersion, let the proof be given from the Scriptures, and from history through past ages. We feel bold in affirming that none have obeyed Christ, or "put him on" in baptism, by any other mode than by immersion.

"Cease from man whose breath is in his nostrils"; but give heed to the voice which spake from heaven, "This is my beloved Son: HEAR HIM."—Luke 9: 35.

Seneca Falls. G. DILLABAUGH.

For the World's Crisis.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

BRO. GRANT:—By request of a brother, and two sisters of the church, I write this on "The Signs of the Times." Look at the sin of the world as it is at the present time. See the great mass of people, and where are they going to? Look at the pride manifested on every hand, wherever you go. O Lord, what are the people thinking of? See how they are letting selfish pride lead them. See how they close their eyes to their terrible rush to inevitable destruction. If you speak to them of their heavenly Father, they say they do not know him, or they call you a "fanatic." They do not know, or seem to care to know any thing but money, or the latest fashions. The command of God is, "Of all thy gettings get understanding"; meaning, in the ways of the blessed Jesus. But the world says, Of all thy getting get money, gold, silver, or greenbacks.

Crime is multiplying all around us; but the world says, Who cares, as long as it does not trouble me. But it should trouble all of us, and does to a certain degree. O Lord, when will the people open their eyes; when will they open their heart and look therein, and see if the love of God is there. But I am afraid there are but few that do it. O how few, compared to the great mass of people in the world. How few bow before their Lord and Maker, and say, "Our Father, which art in heaven," morning and evening, and expect to be heard through the blessed Jesus, God only knows. In these times, people laugh and scoff if we preach the kingdom of heaven is at hand. We learn that John preached, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." Christ sent out his disciples to preach the kingdom of heaven is at hand; but if it is preached in these last days, those that preach and those that believe are laughed to scorn.

When our Lord drove out the money changers and those that sold doves, sheep and cattle in the temple, he said, It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves."

Look at the festivals held in the churches at the present time. See the money changers, and the fine things for sale,—the grab bags, post offices, etc. The professors of religion join in these things,—the merry-makings in the church dedicated to God's worship. Well may it be called "a den of thieves." It shows that the almighty dollars and things of this earth are worshiped more than our Creator. Then there is that monster pride in their hearts. For the love of God, cast it out, and become pure; for, "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Cast it out, and place in its stead love to God for the many blessings bestowed upon us from his bountiful hand. Love him, for he first loved us, and sent his only begotten Son to die for us.

Look inside of the church to-day. Ten go to see and be seen, where one goes to hear and learn the will of God. There can be seen the latest fashions. The 24th chapter of Matthew tells us where we are. We pray for the kingdom to come, and when it does come, we want to be prepared to say, This is our Lord, we have waited for him; and if we prove faithful to the end, we expect to hear our Savior say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." JAS. TRUEY.

North Adams, Mass.

☞ Richest is he who wants the least.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 554. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1866. VOL. XXIII.—NO. 9.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. O. MATHEWSON, WM. H. MITCHELL, JOHN COUCH.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. F. CARPENTER, H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, J. G. HAMBLIN, D. MATHEWSON.

GEORGE T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

ONWARD!

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Onward! onward! men of heaven,
Bear the gospel banner high;
Rest not till its light is given,
Star of every pagan sky.
Send it where the pilgrim stranger
Faints beneath the torrid ray;
Bid the hardy forest ranger
Hail it ere he fades away.

Where the Arctic ocean thunders,
Where the tropics fiercely glow,
Broadly spread its page of wonders,
Brightly bid its radiance glow.
India marks its lustre stealing,
Shivering Greenland loves its rays,
Afric, mid her deserts kneeling,
Lifts the untaught strain of praise.

Rude in speech or wild in feature,
Dark in spirit though they be,
Show that light to every creature,
Prince or vassal, bond or free.
Lo! they haste to every nation,
Hosts on hosts the ranks supply,—
Onward! Christ is your salvation,
Thou shalt gain the victory.

—Selected.

THE BURNING OF ROME.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

Will Rome be burnt? If so, how? and when? After devoting considerable thought upon these questions, I am inclined to the view that this so called "Eternal City" will experience an entire destruction, just prior to the coming of the Lord, and this destruction may be partly by human, but mainly by divine power, directing the earth's consuming forces. It will be done, not quietly, but amid the most alarming convulsions. It will come suddenly, too, while the boast is in Babylon's lips, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." Without entering into a minute analysis of the prophecies on this subject, and disclaiming all association with the "sensational" students of the prophetic word, I candidly invite attention to the following array of facts, criticisms and opinions on this remarkably interesting theme:—

The peninsula of Italy has been known for centuries as a volcanic region. Particularly so is its southern portion, embracing what is termed the two Sicilies. Doubtless the whole peninsula lies upon a bed of volcanic material, with sulphurous matter in immense quantities, which, together with several active volcanoes existing in its surface, subjects the country to frightful earthquakes, and devastating volcanic eruptions. The Apennines, averaging 4200 feet in height, stretch through the whole of Italy for a distance of 840 miles. Generally, they follow the line of the western coast—where lies Rome—at a distance of from six to fifteen miles. One branch of the sub-Roman Apennines terminates in the seven hills of Rome itself—the famous city. Naples, lying in the southwest coast, 118 miles from Rome, abounds in groups of volcanic mountains and hills. Vesuvius, one of the most active, is but ten miles away. This burning mountain has had from the earliest period to the present time sixty eruptions. As late as 1857, 1858, 1859, and 1861, the whole country around was laid waste, but the city escaped. Sometimes this volcano lies inactive for 325 years, and then suddenly bursts forth with great fury. Ashes from its crater have been carried to Constantinople, and even to Egypt and Syria, 1000 miles away. North of Naples, and between it and Gaeta, which is only seventy-six miles from Rome, are the volcanic groups of Roccamonfina, the Phlegrean Fields, and Mount Vulturo. This whole region, as far North as Rome, abounds with lava, ashes, asbestus, bitumen, petroleum, naphtha, sulphur, and other volcanic and igneous matter.

Some of the Italian hills discharge mud, others throw off carburetted hydrogen. The native sulphur of commerce is derived chiefly from Sicily, or Southern Italy, whose mines supply the whole world, and in 1861 produced 300,000 tons, worth thirty millions francs. Indeed, it is said by travelers that the very ground of Italy is in numerous places constantly on fire. And it is indisputably true that Italy, Sicily, and the neighboring islands containing the active volcanoes of Vesuvius, Etna, and Stromboli, constitute the chief volcanic district of Europe. Stromboli has been constantly burning for 2000 years. Palermo, in Sicily, experienced fifty-seven earthquakes in forty years.

Volcanoes have been seen to burst out of the sea near the coast of Italy. We could mention a thousand facts, which all go to show how easy a thing it would be for God to overthrow the city of Rome in a deluge of volcanic fire, merely by setting in operation the terrible forces that underlie her soil.

For ages, the land of Italy has been famous for its earthquakes. We are informed by history that B. C. 439, "tremendous earthquakes shook Italy, at intervals, for a whole year, so that Rome was fatigued with messengers, who were continually arriving with news of towns and villages demolished." In A. D. 79 occurred the fearful earthquake and eruption of Mount Vesuvius, which buried the cities of Herculaneum, Pompeii, and Stabiæ, in lava and ashes to the depth of eighty to one hundred and twelve feet. These cities were less than seventy miles from Rome. Their destruction was most sudden, as Vesuvius had lain quiet for ages previous. Just so sudden, yes, "in one hour," might Rome perish, as did Sodom and Gomorrah. Baronius says that when Herculaneum was overthrown, many supposed the world was about to be utterly destroyed, so terrible was the sight. In the year 1005, Italy was for three months convulsed by earthquakes. And in A. D. 1117, says Noah Webster, "all Italy was shaken for forty days."

Again in 1185 Italy was shaken and Calabria destroyed. In 1456, Italy was violently shaken by an earthquake, and 40,000 people perished. Pistorious says it demolished forty towns. In 1638, Calabria, in the South of Italy, having an area of 6000 square miles, was again terribly convulsed, and 30,000 people were destroyed. Whole towns were entirely ruined. In 1693, a frightful earthquake shook all Sicily, and killed 60,000 souls. During the convulsion, a fountain was seen to discharge its waters as red as blood. Again, in 1783, a tremendous shock laid in ruins Calabria, Messina, and many other Italian towns, and nearly 40,000 persons perished in the ruins.

With all these facts and precedents before us, I am prepared at any time to hear that Rome, the sink of iniquity and seat of Satan, has suddenly, by the fiat of an avenging God, like a millstone dashed into the sea (Rev. 18: 21); been submerged by earthquake and volcanic forces in a lake of fire and brimstone; an event that will fill the world with astonishment and mourning, and prove the harbinger of the instant coming of the Lord. Both tradition and prophecy intimately associate the destruction of Mystic Babylon and her capitol city, with the end of the world. Gibbon has preserved a proverb recorded in the writing of Bede, of the year A. D. 800, and current in Europe for ten centuries, which strikingly says, "As long as the Colliseum stands, Rome shall stand; and when the Colliseum falls, Rome will fall; when Rome falls, the world will fall." Hist. chap. 21. And the Sibylline Oracles all taught that Rome will sink at last into an abyss of fire. We think the predictions of the seventeenth and eighteenth chapters of Revelation support this view.

The belief of the early Christians on this question, is fairly stated by Gibbon, who says they viewed pestilences, famines, comets and eclipses, earthquakes and inundations, as "so many preparatory and alarming signs of the great catastrophe of Rome, when the country of the Scipios and Cæsars should be consumed by a flame from heaven, and the city of Seven Hills, with her palaces, her temples, and her triumphal arches, should be buried in a vast lake of fire and brimstone. It might, however, afford some consolation to Roman vanity, that the period of their empire would be that of the world itself; which, as it had once perished by the element of water, was destined to experience a second and speedy destruction from the element of fire." And he speaks of Italy as in their opinion "chosen for the origin and principal scene of the conflagration, and the best adapted for that purpose by natural and physical causes; by its deep caverns, beds of sulphur, and numerous volcanoes, of which those of Etna, of Vesuvius, and of Lipari, exhibit a very imperfect representation. The calmest and most intrepid sceptic could not refuse to acknowledge that the destruction of the present system of the world by fire, was in itself extremely probably." And the infidel admits that the main authority in the early church for such a belief, was not so much reason and tradition, as it was the sacred Scriptures.—Hist. chap. 15.

Among more modern writers in the church who have shared in the belief, is found Brightman, Dr. Burnet, Mede, Bishop Newton, Daubuz, Simpson, Fraser, etc. On this deeply interesting subject, I propose letting these eminent authors speak for themselves.

Brightman, in 1611, wrote on Rev. 16th chapter, as follows:—"The calamities which are rehearsed belong partly to men whom death, sorrow, and famine shall devour, and partly to the city which shall be burned with fire, which declares that the city shall not be taken at the first assault, but by a siege, which, while continuing, the pest, sorrow, and famine shall assail within; and that at length the city shall come into the power of the enemies, who shall make it even with the ground, and bring her to ashes; then shall be fulfilled that which Sibyl prophesied, Rome shall be a street or empty place." And referring to the Hallelujahs at her fall, he says, "These are the funerals of the city of Rome, and the rites by which her burial shall be celebrated."—Com. on Apoc.

Daubuz, on Rev. 17: 16, says: "This is their last act towards this whore, or capital city. They shall not only take and plunder her, but destroy her with fire and sword, and by that means leave no refuge there to any of her lovers to hold up and maintain by her power the idolatry and tyrannical dominion exercised by her. Most certainly these symbols imply the entire destruction of this capital city, for as long as it stands it will one way or other maintain the same principles, and strive to keep the same power. So that the only way to take off all hopes of recovery, must be by destroying it utterly, and hindering its friends from ever settling there. Thus her fate will be like that of the literal Babylon, whose situation is now almost unknown," or. So he writes (chap. 18: 18, and 19: 3), he writes; "This is not to signify a continual burning, but by a metonymy of the efficient for the effect, to signify that it is burnt forever, and never to be restored," "it seeming morally impossible that a burning procured by human hands, as this is to be, being caused by some of the ten horns, should be perpetual; unless at the same time, God's acts should concur to make Rome's destruction like that of Sodom. . . . Nothing of a town will remain of Rome, so that the place shall know it no more."—Com. on Rev. 17: 20.

Mede makes Babylon, "First the royal city of the beast, to wit, the city of Rome; and again, the citizens or state of Rome, which doubtless the Pope with the Senate of the scarlet Cardinals do make," and on Rev. 19: 3, says,—"She shall be wholly turned into ashes, and made even with the ground, never after to be inhabited."—Key of the Rev., 1650.

Fraser also writes,—"Another circumstance clearly foretold, is the destruction of Rome by fire." Thus, Rev. 17: 16, "They shall burn her with fire." Rev. 18: 8, "She shall be utterly burned with fire; for strong is the Lord God that judgeth her." And her admirers are represented as lamenting bitterly when they see "the smoke of her burning." ver. 9, 18. In conjunction with the flames spread by the victorious enemy, shall be a subterraneous fire kindled by the breath of the Almighty, as appears from Isaiah 34: 9. 10. It is probable that a concussion of the earth, accompany this subterraneous fire, shall dam up the Tiber, so that, having no issue to the sea, it shall reduce the ground in the neighborhood of Rome to a lake or morass, while the hills of Rome shall appear as islands in the midst of the morass, with ruinous palaces, and these palaces inhabited by every unclean beast and bird," etc., etc. Fraser supposes that as Sodom, Gomorrah, and Babylon were probably, by the damming up and overflow of the Jordan and Euphrates, turned to the Dead Sea, and to vast morasses and ruin, so Rome, the prototype of all, shall in such like manner perish.—Key to the Proph. p. 224, 1802.

Bishop Newton, on Rev. 18th and 19th, thus comments: "These expressions can imply no less than a total destruction by fire, but Rome has yet never been totally destroyed by fire." "And her smoke rose up forever and ever;" which intimates that she should be made as signal a monument of divine vengeance as Sodom and Gomorrah. It is taken from Isaiah, who hath said much the same thing of Edom, and by Edom the Jews understand Rome. Isa. 34: 9, 10. "And the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch," in the genuine edition of the Chaldee paraphrase it is, "And the rivers of Rome shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch. It shall not be quenched night or day; the smoke thereof shall go up forever." This tradition of the Rabbins may receive some confirmation from these words of the Revelator, and such an event may appear the more probable, because the adjacent countries are known to be of a sulphurous and bituminous soil; there have even at Rome been eruptions of subterraneous fire, which have consumed several buildings, so that the fuel seems to be prepared, and waits only for the breath of the Lord to kindle it. And this eminent man proceeds to make this event the prelude to the introduction of God's kingdom.—Diss. on Proph. Vol. III., chap. 19, 1758.

Dr. Burnet makes the burning of Rome the very kindling of the last fires, it being most prepared for the torch "by the sulphurousness of its soil, and its fiery mountains and caverns." He says, "all accounts, ancient and modern, make it a storehouse of fire." "At the glorious appearance of our Savior, the conflagration will begin at the city of Rome, and the Roman territory. Nature hath saved us the pains of kindling a fire in these parts of the earth, for since the memory of man there have always been subterraneous fires in Italy. And the Romans did not preserve their vestal fire with more constancy than nature hath done her fiery mountains in some part of that territory. Let us then suppose, when the fatal time draws near, all these burning mountains to be filled and replenished with fit materials for such a design. Let Vesuvius, Etna, Strongyle, and all the volcanic islands, break out into flames, and by the earthquakes which then will rage, let us suppose new eruptions, or new mountains opened in the Apennines and near Rome, and to vomit out fire in the same manner as the old volcanoes. Then let the sulphurous ground take fire; and seeing that the soil of that country in several places is so full of brimstone that the steams and smoke of it visibly rise out of the earth, we may reasonably suppose that it will burn openly at that time. Lastly, the lightnings of the air and the flaming streams of the melting skies will mingle and join with burnings of the earth. . . . A dreadful fate will attend Rome, namely, to be absorbed or swallowed up in a lake of fire and brimstone, after the manner of Sodom and Gomorrah. This, in my judgment, will be the fate and final conclusion of mystical Babylon, to sink as a great mill-stone into the sea, and never to appear more. Hear what the prophet says: "A mighty angel took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all. Apoc. 18: 21. Simply to be burned does not at all answer to this description of its perishing by sinking like a mill-stone into the sea, and leaving no remains or marks of it. A city that is only burnt cannot be said to fall like a mill-stone into the sea, or that it can never more be found, for after the burning of a city the ruins stand, and its place is well known; whereas in both respects, besides this exterior burning, there must be an absorption of this Babylon, the seat of the beast, and therefore a total disappearance of it. This also agrees with the suddenness of the judgment which is a repeated character of it. Chap 18: 9, 10, 17, 19. The manner is thus (chap. 19: 20): "The beast and the false prophet were cast alive into a lake of fire and brimstone." Not bound hand and foot and thrown in headlong, but swallowed up alive, they and theirs, as Korah and his company, or, to use a plainer example, after the manner of Sodom and Gomorrah, which perished by fire, and at the same time sunk into the Dead Sea, a lively type of the fate of Rome.—Theory of the Earth, Book II. chap. 10.

And David Simpson in his "Plea," 1799, often quoting Rev. 18th at length, tersely observes: "It will be allowed that these are very strong expressions, and imply a punishment extremely severe. It is remarkable, too, that all the country about the city of Rome is a kind of bitumen, or pitchy substance. And in the year of our Lord 80, a fire burst out beneath the ground, in the middle of the city, and burst four of the principal heathen temples, with the sacred buildings of the capital. Italy indeed is a storehouse of fire; and when the one thousand two hundred days (years) are expired, Rome itself, with all its magnificence, will be absorbed in a lake of fire, sink into the sea, and rise no more at all forever."

What an absorbing and thrillingly interesting question is this touching the burning of Rome and the ruin of the Papal rulers therein! And how it magnifies and intensifies this interest to know that a hundred commentaries and students of prophecy affirm the ending of the 1260 years and the destruction of the Papal power this year, 1866! This awful year, when the eyes of the whole world are intently fixed on the Pope and the Seven-Hilled City! Mr. Fraser strikingly concludes from the typical Scriptures concerning Babylon and Nineveh (Jer. 51: 39, 57; Neh. 1: 10; Dan. 5, and Rev. 18: 7), that Rome's destruction will come upon her during the occurrence of some great festival, when the inhabitants were in a careless and boastful security. In startling correspondence with this, it is said that the Pope and his Cardinals propose to celebrate the eighteen hundredth anniversary of the martyrdom of St. Peter—said to have taken place at Rome A. D. 66—by a monster convention of all the Bishops, and Archbishops, Priests, Orders, and Laity, etc., from all parts of the world. And this magnificent festival, the greatest ever known, is to be held in St. Peter's church at Rome this year—1866!

O church of Christ! a voice from heaven says, Watch. The great day may be just at hand. Watch!—Advent Herald.

For the World's Crisis.

JOSEPHUS' CHRONOLOGY EXAMINED.

BY WM. C. THURMAN.

"Joseph Schaliger, after all his deeper inquiries, solemnly pronounces that" "Josephus was the most diligent, and the greatest lover of truth of all writers," "and is not afraid to affirm that" "it is more safe to believe him, not only as to affairs of the Jews, but also as to those that are foreign to them, than all the Greek and Latin writers; and this because his fidelity and compass of learning are everywhere conspicuous."

Though Josephus is almost unanimously regarded as one of the most reliable of all historians, his chronological dates have been set aside as of no worth, because they not only conflict with all writers on chronology, but even appear to clash with himself. I am willing to admit that Josephus may have been as capable of making a few mistakes in figures as other men; yet, if the historical portion of his work is so reliable; if, of "all writers," he was "the greatest lover of truth," I think that we should give him at least a fair hearing, before his chronology is condemned as unworthy of regard.

To give him a fair trial, we must notice his method of arranging his chronology; so that if we detect an error, we may be enabled to see how the mistake occurred. My opinion is, that at the time he wrote, he had two tables of chronology before him, both of which he sometimes used; but regarding the shortest as the correct one, he would correct the longer by the shorter one.

For example, it would appear that one of his tables gave 2656 years for the interval between creation and the flood, which he immediately corrects by saying 1656 (Jose. Ant. b. 1, c. 3, s. 3), which is the same I have given in my table of chronology.

2. Jerusalem was destroyed A. D. 70. In allusion to which, Josephus says, "From king David, who was the first of the Jews who reigned therein, to this destruction under Titus, were one thousand one hundred and seventy-nine years."—Jose. War, b. 6, c. 10, s. 1. This is admitted by all to be incorrect, by 54 years too long for Bishop Usher, 79 too long for Bosanquet, and 84 too long for my chronology. Whether Josephus, having given this longer period, corrected it by adding the shorter which has been omitted by the transcribers; or whether this was a willful corruption made after the death of Josephus, we cannot now say. But however the error may have occurred, we are fortunate in being enabled to correct it by the very author whom we think it most likely Josephus followed in the arrangement of his chronology; I mean Demetrius the learned Jew, who lived about three hundred years before Josephus.

This Demetrius, as we have observed in our article called "Truth Discovered," gives us B. C. 558 for the beginning of the captivity, and B. C. 547 for the ruin of the city. That Demetrius has made no mistake here, and that no error has crept in by the carelessness of transcribers, we prove by the three different ways in which it is given.

Many years before I knew any thing about these authors, I had proved the same by the authority of the word of God; but as my object here is to establish a chronology by Jewish authors, independent of the Bible, I prefer not to use that authority here. Bosanquet regards the authority of Demetrius as the best found outside of the Bible. Having such an abundant proof of the time at which Jerusalem was destroyed by the king of Babylon, we shall regard B. C. 547 as the fixed date from which to reckon all of Josephus' dates.

3. We will now try another date. Says Josephus, "Jerusalem . . . was demolished entirely by the Babylonians, four hundred and seventy-seven years and six months after . . . David."—Jose. War, b. 6, c. 10, s. 1. If to B. C. 547, we add 477 with the odd months, we have B. C. 1025 for the beginning of the reign of David, which is but one year short of my chronology. Thus it will be discovered that Josephus' chronology is not far from the truth, when we understand his method of reckoning.

4. Having observed that the Jews' chronology, as followed by Josephus and Demetrius, gives B. C. 1025 for the beginning of the reign of David, we are now prepared to examine the date extending from this to the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, in A. D. 70.

Josephus says, "From king David, who was the first of the Jews who reigned therein, to this destruction under Titus, were one thousand one hundred and seventy-nine years," as we mentioned in section second. We have observed that the date given by Demetrius has detected an error here of just 84 years, which being taken from 1179, leaves 1095. And if from this we take the year A. D. 70, we have B. C. 1025, for the beginning of the reign of David. This is again but one year short of my chronology.

5. Says Josephus, in another place, "The temple was burnt . . . one thousand and sixty-two years, six months, and ten days from the departure out of Egypt."—Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 5. It was burnt according to Demetrius, on the tenth day of the fifth month, B. C. 547, to which add 1062 years and six months, and we have B. C. 1610, which is again one year short of my chronology.

6. Says Josephus, "The kings of David's race, ... being in number twenty-one, ... reigned five hundred and fourteen years, six months and ten days, of whom Saul, their first king, retained the government twenty years."—Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 4. According to Demetrius their reign ended on the tenth day of the fifth month, B. C. 547, to which add 514 years, six months and ten days, and we have the first day of the eleventh month, B. C. 1062. This is four years short of my chronology. But as all writers are liable to slight mistakes, we may correct this by his other dates. We have observed in section third, that the dates given by Josephus and Demetrius give B. C. 1025, for the beginning of the reign of David; and both Josephus and Paul give Saul 40 years.—Jose. Ant. b. 6, c. 14, s. 9; Acts 13: 20. If to 1025 we add 40, we have B. C. 1065, which is again just one year short of my chronology. Thus it would appear that Josephus' chronology continues to run just one year short of mine.

7. Says Josephus, "Now the temple was burnt four hundred and seventy years, six months, and ten days after it was built."—Jos. Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 5. The temple was burnt on the tenth day of the fifth month, B. C. 547, to which add 470 years, 6 months, and 10 days, and we have B. C. 1018. But this is 35 years too long for my chronology, and 46 too long for Bishop Usher's. In section fifth, we observed that the interval given by Josephus between the leaving of Egypt and the burning of the temple, was but one year short of my chronology. And yet Josephus, in another place, gives but 592 years for the interval between the leaving of Egypt and the foundation of the temple, which is 36 years short of what I had given. The way we suppose Josephus made this mistake is noticed on page seventy-two of the "Book of Daniel Opened."

In allowing Josephus to correct himself by his own dates, we there made the interval 628 years, instead of 592, that is, just 36 years longer. And if we take this from the 470 years, which he gave for the interval between the building and burning of the temple, we have 434 years for the corrected date, which, with the odd months added to B. C. 547, gives B. C. 982 for the time of the building of the temple. This is again just one year short of my chronology.

8. Says Josephus, "From the deluge to the destruction of the temple, the whole interval was one thousand, nine hundred fifty-seven years, six months, and ten days."—Jose. Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 5. If to B. C. 547, we add 1957 years with the odd months, we have B. C. 2505, which is 36 years too long for my chronology, and 196 too long for Bishop Usher's. Now to correct this mistake, it is only necessary to notice how it occurred. We have before mentioned that Josephus appears to have had before him two tables of chronology; the longer one being incorrect, he corrected it by the shorter. But it would appear that he sometimes, through mistake, adds his dates to the longer instead of the shorter. For example, we have just observed in section seventh, that through mistake, according to his own dates, he made the interval between the building and burning of the temple 36 years too long. Therefore, if in arranging this portion of his chronology, he added his dates to that which was 36 years too long, it follows that to get the correct chronology, we must take 36 from it. And if from 1957 we take 36, we have 1921 years for the interval between the deluge and destruction of the temple; which being added to B. C. 547 with the odd months, gives B. C. 2469 for the time of the deluge. This is the same year that I have given in my chronology.

8. Says Josephus, "From the generation of Adam until this befell the temple, there were three thousand, five hundred and thirteen years, six months and ten days."—Jose. Ant. b. 10, c. 8, s. 5. If to B. C. 547 we add 3513 with the odd months, we have B. C. 4061. This is 65 years short of my chronology, but 98 too long for Bishop Usher. That there is some mistake here is clear, for we have just noticed in section eight that Josephus' date, as it stands, gives B. C. 2505 for the deluge, and in section first we observed that he gave 1656 for the interval between Adam and the deluge, which, being added to 2505, gives 4161, or one hundred years more than this date. Therefore, we must admit that this date needs revision.

(To be continued.)

ONE BAPTISM.

The apostle Paul teaches there is one Lord, one faith, one baptism. Now it is certain that if the baptism of the Holy Spirit is the one baptism, then it is certain there is no such thing (or command) as water baptism. Did Jesus command believers of the gospel to be baptized with the Holy Spirit, or in water as he set them example, when he was baptized by John in Jordan? Matt. 28: 19, 20; Mark 16: 15, 16. Did Paul baptize those disciples he found at Ephesus into the Holy Spirit? or did they not receive the Holy Spirit after he had baptized them? Did not Philip baptize the eunuch in water? And who instructed the eunuch concerning water baptism, if Philip did not? And did not Peter teach the truth on the day of Pentecost, when he instructed those who inquired of him what they must do to be saved, to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and they should receive the gift of the Holy Spirit?

1. Baptism includes a burial and a rising up to "newness of life." "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him."—Col. 2: 12; 3: 1–4; Rom. 6: 5; Acts 8: 12, 35, 38.

2. Baptism is the "form" or type of gospel doctrine. Romans 6: 17. The gospel, as preached by Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 1, 4, is that Jesus died for our sins, was buried and rose again according to the Scriptures. Baptism gives it a formal expression.

3. Obedience to Jesus in this ordinance honors the gospel. It makes our life, death, and resurrection a reality. Those "buried" in the waters of "baptism" could never "walk in newness of life," if they were not "raised up" from the water to that end. So, also, if the dead in Christ are not raised, then they "are PERISHED." All depends on the resurrection.

4. No other act of obedience secures a distinct promise of a resurrection. "If we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."—Rom. 6: 5. That "likeness" of Christ's death" and burial; that being "planted . . . in the likeness of his (Christ's) death," is stated in the preceding verse to be "buried with him by baptism."

We will give unquestionable testimony from the learned men of past ages. Rosenmuller says: "Immersion in the water of baptism, and coming forth out of it, was a symbol of a person's renouncing his former life, and, on the contrary, beginning a new one. The learned have rightly reminded us that, on account of this emblematical meaning of baptism, the right of immersion ought to have been retained in the christian church."

Martin Luther, after speaking of baptism as a symbol of death and resurrection, says: "On this account, I could wish that such as are to be baptized should be completely immersed into water, according to the meaning of the word, and the signification of the ordinance, as also, without doubt, it was instituted by Christ.

Dr. Knapp, an eminent and pious German divine, says: "We are, like Christ, buried as dead persons, by baptism, and should arise like him to a new life."

Dr. Bloomfield, one of the most profound Biblical scholars of Great Britain, says: "We have been thus buried in the waters of baptism." He adds: "There is a plain allusion to the ancient custom of baptism by immersion."

Barnabas, the companion of Paul, says: "We descended into the water, and come out of it."

Justin Martyr: "Those who believe are led to some place where is water, and then bathe in the water." In another place, he says: "We represent our Lord's sufferings and resurrection by baptism in a pool.

Tertullian: "We are immersed in water—let down into the water and dipped—Peter immersed in the Tiber."

Dionysius Areopag: The total concealment in water fitly represents Christ's death and burial."

Chrysostom: "We, as in a sepulchre immersing our heads in water, the old man buried and sinking down, the whole is concealed at once, then, as we immerge, the new man again rises."

Jerome: "Three times we are immersed."

Augustine: "Rightly are ye immersed three times, who have received baptism in the name of Christ."

Neander: "Baptism was originally by immersion."

Tholuck, on Rom. 6: 4, says: "In order to understand the figurative use of baptism, we must bear in mind the well-known fact, that the candidate in the primitive church was immersed in water, and raised out of it again."

Winer: "In the apostolic age, baptism was by immersion."

Bretschneider: "The apostolic church baptized only by immersion."

Schleusner, Wahl, and Bretschneider, the three great New Testament lexicographers of Germany, limit baptism, as a sacred ordinance, to immersion.

Wall: "According to apostolic instruction and example, baptism was performed by immersing the whole body."

Prof. Lange: "Baptism, in the apostolic age, was a proper baptism; the immersion of the whole body in water. Plunging under water represents death, and the rising out of it the resurrection to a new life."

In short, from the days of the apostles downwards for 1,300 years, we have an unbroken chain of evidence, showing that baptism was performed by immersion, and by immersion only. Now, who would set at nought such testimony, if it were given on any other subject? Is such testimony good for anything when it is in harmony with revelation, which shines as clear as the noonday sun on this most glorious subject, which represents in figure the death and resurrection of Christ our Life-giver? If any wish more testimony, and can procure the German Book of Martyrs, they will there find that the united testimony of the church, from the first ages of primitive christianity down through succeeding centuries, all sustain the testimony already given, that baptism by immersion in the water is the "one baptism" spoken of by Paul. And with all christian kindness, I would ask how believers are buried in baptism by, or with the Spirit, or, by sprinkling or pouring, are they planted in the likeness of Christ's death? If Christ did not command baptism by immersion, when he commissioned his apostles to go and preach the gospel of the kingdom, and to observe all things whatsoever he commanded, what did he command? And why did his apostles preach and practise baptism by immersion, if Christ did not set the example when he went down into Jordan and was baptized?

Now we invite our sprinkling and pouring friends to come out and meet this question, and let the people know who have the truth. If the New Testament teaches any other mode of baptism as obedience of faith in the gospel of the kingdom than immersion, let the proof be given from the Scriptures, and from history through past ages. We feel bold in affirming that none have obeyed Christ, or "put him on" in baptism, by any other mode than by immersion.

"Cease from man whose breath is in his nostrils"; but give heed to the voice which spake from heaven, "This is my beloved Son: HEAR HIM."—Luke 9: 35.

Seneca Falls. G. DILLABAUGH.

For the World's Crisis.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

BRO. GRANT:—By request of a brother, and two sisters of the church, I write this on "The Signs of the Times." Look at the sin of the world as it is at the present time. See the great mass of people, and where are they going to? Look at the pride manifested on every hand, wherever you go. O Lord, what are the people thinking of? See how they are letting selfish pride lead them. See how they close their eyes to their terrible rush to inevitable destruction. If you speak to them of their heavenly Father, they say they do not know him, or they call you a "fanatic." They do not know, or seem to care to know any thing but money, or the latest fashions. The command of God is, "Of all thy gettings get understanding"; meaning, in the ways of the blessed Jesus. But the world says, Of all thy getting get money, gold, silver, or greenbacks.

Crime is multiplying all around us; but the world says, Who cares, as long as it does not trouble me. But it should trouble all of us, and does to a certain degree. O Lord, when will the people open their eyes; when will they open their heart and look therein, and see if the love of God is there. But I am afraid there are but few that do it. O how few, compared to the great mass of people in the world. How few bow before their Lord and Maker, and say, "Our Father, which art in heaven," morning and evening, and expect to be heard through the blessed Jesus, God only knows. In these times, people laugh and scoff if we preach the kingdom of heaven is at hand. We learn that John preached, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." Christ sent out his disciples to preach the kingdom of heaven is at hand; but if it is preached in these last days, those that preach and those that believe are laughed to scorn.

When our Lord drove out the money changers and those that sold doves, sheep and cattle in the temple, he said, It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves."

Look at the festivals held in the churches at the present time. See the money changers, and the fine things for sale,—the grab bags, post offices, etc. The professors of religion join in these things,—the merry-makings in the church dedicated to God's worship. Well may it be called "a den of thieves." It shows that the almighty dollars and things of this earth are worshiped more than our Creator. Then there is that monster pride in their hearts. For the love of God, cast it out, and become pure; for, "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Cast it out, and place in its stead love to God for the many blessings bestowed upon us from his bountiful hand. Love him, for he first loved us, and sent his only begotten Son to die for us.

Look inside of the church to-day. Ten go to see and be seen, where one goes to hear and learn the will of God. There can be seen the latest fashions. The 24th chapter of Matthew tells us where we are. We pray for the kingdom to come; and when it does come, we want to be prepared to say, This is our Lord, we have waited for him; and if we prove faithful to the end, we expect to hear our Savior say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." JAS. TANNER.

North Adams, Mass.

☞ Richest is he who wants the least.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

HOW SHALL WE EXTEND IT?

Few questions demand the special attention of God's people at this time more than this. Our children, in too many places, are sadly neglected. Our Sunday-schools and Sunday-school interests need enlargement and extension. We are doing much to feed full-grown babes with the bread of life, but comparatively little to nourish and strengthen Christ's lambs with the pure milk of the word. We ought to do more. The Master requires it of us. One of his last and most solemn injunctions was, "Feed my lambs!" Shall we do it?

There are, it is estimated, some eight millions of children in the United States, between the ages of five and sixteen, not more than three millions of whom are now in Sabbath-schools; leaving at least five millions of children, of Sabbath-school age, not under Sunday-school instruction. The work to be done for the salvation of these neglected and perishing ones is a great work, and needs thousands of earnest christian hands and hearts to carry it on. Others are doing their part in this great work; shall we do ours?

Of these millions who do not attend the Sabbath-school, many doubtless receive religious instruction at home; but the great majority do not,—and these are the ones who especially need to be brought under the influence of the gospel and the instruction of pious teachers. It might not be possible to bring them all in; but who can question the affirmation of a distinguished advocate of Sunday-school interests, that the present number of Sunday-school children in this country might easily be doubled, and instead of three, there might be six millions of children under Sunday-school instruction? Of our own people, we have said before, that we might have twice as many Sunday-schools as we now have, and twice as many children in them. And, in view of the approaching judgment, and our duty to Christ and his little ones amid the peculiar perils of these last days, we would add—we not only might do it, but we ought to do it.

But by what means shall it be done? By universal, systematic, persistent canvassing. This is the first step. That it would succeed, who can doubt?—for what church ever failed to gather in more or less children as the result of a vigorous canvass? Then, when we have gathered them in, let us keep them there, by kind and christian instruction, by due attention to their welfare, and by providing them with good and interesting books and Sunday-school papers; not forgetting the end and object of all our labors,—their conversion to Christ, and the cultivation of a christian character that will fit them for the kingdom of heaven.

Another means by which Sunday-school interests may be extended, and the young benefited, is the establishment of Mission Schools. In many of our large cities and villages, there are low and densely crowded neighborhoods, where multitudes of poor and ragged children, who do not and will not attend any church-school, might, by a little effort and a charitable provision for their wants, be gathered into a school by themselves. Such Mission Schools have been established in many places, and always with good success.

Here, then, brethren and sisters, is Sunday-school work for you who have a hand and a heart for it. Will you do it? It may require time, labor, money, and self-denial. But what are these, compared with the good that you may do to the needy and perishing youth, and the glory that will be given to Christ in their salvation?

The great day hastens! The working time is short! Go forth, then, into the field at once. Give your neighborhood and town a thorough canvassing. See what you can do to establish, improve, and enlarge the Sabbath-school. Sow the precious seeds of truth and righteousness in the hearts of the young now; and, in the great day of harvest, when you shall come before the Lord of the harvest, great will be your joy to bring your sheaves with you. W. B. H.

WHAT ONE WOMAN DID.

Ten years since, there was a little town in the mountainous regions of Pennsylvania, which had about six hundred inhabitants, but not a single church or place of worship, nor, so far as known, a single individual in it who made any pretensions to personal religion. About that time, a lady who resided there was called to visit some friends in the west, and during her absence was thrown under religious influences, which resulted in her conversion, as she believed. Immediately her heart became interested in the spiritual state of the place of her residence, and she returned to it, determined, by the grace of God enabling her, to undertake something in its behalf.

Accordingly she spoke to several, but received no encouragement, but was rather repulsed. At length she resolved upon commencing a Sabbath-school. While walking to her place the first morning, she met a friend, and told him her purpose; but he, too, discouraged her. She, however, went on; had two scholars that day, the next Sabbath six, and, before the summer was closed, one hundred and sixty. Shortly after the school was started, the pupils began to be interested; many became personal inquirers after Christ; a minister and regular preacher were sought; and now, as the population has steadily increased, and religious duties have been persisted in, there are five organized churches in that place; three Sabbath-schools, with about six hundred children in them; and six young men have gone from that place, and from this effort, into the christian ministry.

And all this was the result of the labors of a single christian woman, who began the work with a Sabbath-school of only two scholars! You see from this, gentle reader, what one good woman can do, with God's help. Can you not do something, too? W. B. H.

The Young Pilgrim for May 15th.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

The Little Pilgrim (poetry.) Pilgrims of Jesus (cont.) What is a Type? A Young Hero. "I don't love you now, Mother." The Chimney Sweep. We love the Truth (poetry.) God will know it. Presence of God. Pray Always. Beware of Idleness. Never Fret. One Child and then Another. Safe in Danger. Rain from Heaven. Be Pleasant (poetry.) Like begets Like. Being Useful (cut.) The Band of Hope. Pilgrim Letters, from Mary, Rhoda, David, Cynthia, Orson, and Mary.

The Young Pilgrim is published semi-monthly at 50 cents a year; 10 copies, 40 cts.; 100 copies, 35 cts. Address Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

"MY FATHER'S HOUSE—how it lifted up my heart in praise to God. I read and wept, read and wept, and my wife sat and laughed at me." R. W.

Published by H. L. Hastings. Price $3.00 per 100. For sale at this office.

The World's Crisis AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, May 16, 1866.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year; but if delayed six months beyond the time of payment, the price is $3.00 a year. Thus 50 cents a year is saved by paying in advance.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

DISCUSSION.

We are to have a discussion at Kezar Falls, Me., with Mr. K. Atkinson, of Cornish, Me., to commence May 23d, at 2 P. M., to continue four days, two sessions a day, of two hours each.

QUESTIONS.

1. "RESOLVED, That man is wholly mortal, and remains unconscious between death and the resurrection.

2. "RESOLVED, That the wicked will be destroyed and cease to exist as conscious beings."

OCEANPORT.

Oceanport, where we spent the first week in May, is in N. J., about thirty-five miles from New York City, and about two miles from Long Branch, a noted watering place, where thousands gather in the warm weather to enjoy sea air and bathing. They have several large hotels, one of which is said to have one thousand feet of front; and there are others nearly as large. It is a very pleasant ocean beach, and the place may soon be a rival of Saratoga.

Our meetings at Oceanport were interesting. Four were baptized, and several others requested prayers. We found a good home in the family of Bro. E. T. Welch. Brn. A. F. Pawley and E. Wolcott also reside in the place, all of whom preach the word, and are making efforts to get the people ready for the coming of the Son of man.

The people manifested much interest to hear. All could not get into the house, and several listened at the windows. On Lord's day evening, we had a pleasant communion season, with about thirty of Jesus' disciples. It was a good place. The peace of God rested upon us. We parted with bright hopes of meeting soon in the kingdom of God.

On our way to Oceanport, we spent the last Lord's day in April in Natick, R. I., where we had a full meeting, and a good interest was manifested to hear about the coming of our Savior. There appears to be an open door for the truth in that place. We purpose to have a discussion there soon, with a Universalist minister from Providence, who claims that Christ came at the destruction of Jerusalem.

We spent one evening at West Haven, Ct., and found the church doing well.

WRITE COARSELY.

It would be quite a favor to our compositors, if those who write for the Crisis would write a coarse hand, with good black ink. They wish to read the writing some distance from the eyes, and can get along much faster and pleasanter when they have plain writing.

Another thing we wish all would observe, which is to write proper names very plainly. We are often much perplexed to find out the name of the writer, or his P. O. address. He is so familiar with it himself, he thinks others can read it easily. Please remember these suggestions, and we shall be thankful for the favor.

WHAT IS NEEDED?

Do not fail to read the articles of Brn. Wm. H. Spencer and G. Thompson, headed, "The last day of conflict," and "Draw the line." They have struck the key note for these times. Let us bring ourselves to "concert pitch," and sound the alarm, fearless of the frowns and sneers of men. This is the time for men of God to stand forth in high-relief, "a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men."—1 Cor. 4: 9. Let us not faint at the sight of the foe, but glory in the cross of Christ. Whatever we are called to suffer for his sake, let us bear without a murmur. Our trials, if borne patiently, will only help fit us for the marriage of the Lamb.

THE FENIANS.

The Fenians are full of lively interest at present. Stephens, their Head Centre, has just arrived in New York, on board the Steamship Napoleon, from Havre, in France. He says he has come "to unite all the Irish people." He is reported to have said the Irish army would "fight on their own soil before the expiration of the present year." We may expect trouble in the political waters soon. It is truly "sublime" to be living in these last days of the present dispensation,—so near the coming of "the King of kings."

THE BURNING OF ROME.—In this paper will be found a very interesting article on the burning of Rome. We think the position taken by Bro. Taylor is correct. We may reasonably expect startling developments in the history of the Roman power before a year passes. Now is the time, for all who wish to be ready to meet Jesus, to keep themselves unspotted from the world. The day of bright glory must be near.

"O hail happy day."

"THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT."—We have received a work with the above title, that every one should read, who ever read, or intends to read, a work published by A. J. Davis, entitled "144 self-contradictions of the Bible." "The Bible Triumphant" is a reply to the work of Davis, by Sr. H. V. Reed, Harvard, Ill. She has done the work well.

The book is for sale at this office. Price 50 cts., postage paid.

OPPOSITION TO THE FREEDMEN.

Facts show that the rebellion is not over yet. In many sections it is said that the freedmen fare worse than before the war. Their former masters will not provide any assistance for them, and seem determined that no one else shall. Where southern influence rules, it seems to be of but little use to establish schools for the education of the colored people; for the whites are so bitterly opposed, that they resort to all means to prevent success.

The following account of the late riot at Memphis, Tenn., published in the Cincinnati Gazette, illustrates the state of feeling at the South, and shows what others may expect:—

"Last night (Wednesday) May 2nd, was emphatically a night of terror. As early as 9 o'clock the torch of the incendiary was applied in almost every quarter of the city inhabited by the freedmen, and at midnight the heavens were lurid with the flames from as many as thirty negro churches, school-houses and dwellings."

"GRANT THE DISPUTANT."

The above is the heading of an editorial in the Gospel Banner, (Universalist,) published in Augusta, Me. It is often quite gratifying to know what others think of us; especially those who are competent to arrive at a correct decision. The following may give our readers some new information. The Editor of the Banner says of "Grant the Disputant:"

"If this man can be believed—and he ought to be, as he is one of 'the Saints' who is waiting patiently for the Lord, and a change of worlds—he is a great man. Some one has forwarded us the 'World's Crisis' of last week in which appears his account of his discussion with Mr. Gunnison; and it is charming to see how easily he vanquished his opponent. Mr. Johnson was disposed of in the same quiet but effectual manner. In the opinion of others, however, Mr. G's dimensions are comparatively considerably dwarfed. One writes us:—'I attended the discussion at North Norway. Grant is a flippant speaker but superficial.' Another writes: 'I attended the discussion between Br. Gunnison and Mr. Grant. I think Grant is partially insane. His arguments, if they can be called such, are exceedingly weak.'"

SCOFFERS.

If there were no scoffing at the coming of Christ, the Scriptures would be broken; but Jesus said,—"the Scripture can not be broken." Then there must "come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?"—2 Pet. 3: 3–4. The foregoing scripture came to our mind, when reading the following from the Banner of Light:—

THE END OF THE WORLD THEORY EXPLODED.

This is what the London Spectator says of the end of the world: "Almost all European writers, whatever their subject, politics or society, now tacitly assume that the human race is to progress forever, or, to state their latent idea more strictly, is to advance steadily for an indefinite period toward a nobler life and a higher civilization. The idea of a fixed term to history which so greatly influenced the Middle Ages has utterly disappeared; the semi-religious belief in a cataclysm to occur at a distant but visible date, though still entertained, has ceased to be professed by anybody but Dr. Cumming, and does not influence him. The reverie of the politician is no longer of the coming overturn of all things—an idea never absent from the great minds of the first four centuries—but of a coming millennium, when all mankind shall be allied, and the motive force of the European, and the subtle brow of the Arab, and the deft hand of the Mongol, shall all be employed together in making earth more lovely and more convenient for its people."

What will our Second-Advent friend, Miles Grant, say to this? It only proves that his "calculations" have been mere moonshine, as we have always supposed; and we believe the writer in the Spectator takes a common sense view of what is to be in the future ages. This is what Spiritualists teach, and what the angels endorse. The time will surely come when all bitter feelings between man and man must cease—nature demands this—the hosts of living intelligences pray for it—then, indeed, shall earth become a paradise."

CONVERSATION WITH SPIRITS.

The spirits teach some strange things, and tell some truth. They contradict one another and they all oppose the doctrine of the Bible At the Banner of Light office, in Boston, is a noted medium, through whom the spirits communicate very freely. One common method of receiving information through this medium is by questions and answers. The following in the Banner for Jan. 21st, 1865, is a sample:—

"Q.—Do these material forms exist in the spirit-world?

A.—No, certainly not. It is a self-evident fact; for if you leave these forms here, how can you have them in spirit-life?

Q.—I mean forms corresponding to these material forms?

A.—No, we do not.

Q.—Then what constitutes the object of spirit vision? What is it that they see?

A.—It would be impossible for us to demonstrate the true condition of spirit after death in such a manner as you would clearly understand while dwelling in mortal. You must wait until you, too, cast off the physical, in order to become fully satisfied with regard to these things."

In this case it is acknowledged that spirits do not have "forms" corresponding to these material forms." Then we may reasonably conclude that they have no forms at all.

The following question and answer brings out the point more fully:—

Chairman.—H. A., of Fayette, Iowa, sends the following question:

Q.—In the Banner of Dec. 10th, I notice that the Summer Land of A. J. Davis is a production of fancy. And you then say, the soul is removed from the law of material things when it leaves the body. It is, then, thought—absolute thought; it lives in the world of thought; and I thence infer that you hold thought as immaterial. I would simply ask: Can there be personality, place, existence, or anything, where there is nothing, or no substance?

A.—Thoughts are never without form and place. Your thoughts are your real selves. The body through which thoughts are projected is not the real man or woman, by any means. It is only the rude, mortal mechanism, through which thought manifests itself. Now, to some, thought is a kind of material, intensely sublimated, to be sure, for thought is capable of being dissolved, disintegrated, changed, therefore it must possess somewhat of material life, else it would not be subject to the law of change. Your correspondent need have no fear that he will be dissatisfied with his condition as a spirit because he is nothing but thought, for that thought is the real, not the ideal; the personal, not the fanciful; a something entirely substantial, not unsubtantial. It is something more than breath, something more than form, something more than reality, as you understand the term reality. It is an immortality, an individualized entity; a something capable of memory; a something capable of love; a something capable of rearing for itself a home that shall satisfy itself."

Here we find it assumed that we shall exist in the future world as thoughts; and not as real, tangible persons. But thoughts are not entities which leave men at death, any more truly, than does pain or joy. No one would claim that pain can be taken out of a man and preserved as an object, but this may be done as well as thought can exist as an object, independent of the person who thinks. Thought, in man, is the result of an active brain, as pain is the result of certain action in his system. Both cease at death. In the day a man's "breath goeth forth, . . . in that very day his thoughts perish."—Ps. 146: 4. When the physical organism of any being dies, that being thinks no more till he rises from the dead; and if the dead never rise, then there is no future consciousness for those who die. This point is philosophically correct, and scripturally true.

The following, from the Banner of Dec. 17, 1864, is an important confession:—

Q.—Have spirits the power to return and deceive us? to pass themselves off for another?
A.—Certainly they have. Why not?"

PLAIN TALK.

The time has come when the Pope is treated with contempt by his own subjects, and is obliged to bear it, because "his dominion" is taken away, and he finds himself shut up within narrow limits, unable to help himself. His position is a critical one, and daily becoming more uncertain. His days are all numbered; and soon we may expect to hear the saints rejoicing over the downfall of the seven-hilled city.

Signor Mazzini has published an address to the Pope, in which he says:—

"There was a time when the Popes were the depositaries and guardians of the moral law. Believing in their mission of justice and liberty for all—intrepid against all who sought to violate their power—and ready to suffer for their faith, which was then the faith of the peoples—the Popes, from the fifth to the thirteenth century aided and promoted the progress which Pio Nono now condemns. But you are both a prince and the servant of princes at the present day. You reign through force, not through faith; your party is corrupt and corrupting; the Sanctuary is surrounded by Neapolitan brigands, upon whom you confer your blessing, while you have no word of comfort for the peoples who invoke God's liberty and equality. Your predecessors might and ought, you might and ought to have accompanied us upon the path of discovery and advance, in order to have left us, as Moses left his people, on the borders of the promised land, and have blessed us in dying even as a dying father blesses the children who are to survive him. You expire cursing the spirit of inquiry, cursing the power of intellect, cursing faith in the discovery of the truth, cursing the peoples who seek their freedom, cursing mankind and life itself. An apostate from Jesus and humanity, you condemn yourself to expire in isolation, deprived of all communion with your brother man. As Pope, six hundred years of impotence—the betrayal of every precept of Christ—your church's adultery with the wicked princes of the earth—the idolatry of the form substituted for the spirit of religion—the systematic immorality of the men who surround you, and the negation of all progress sanctioned by yourself as the condition of your existence, rise in judgment against you. As prince, the blood of Rome, and the impossibility of your remaining there a single day other than by brute force, rise in judgment against you. Reconcile yourself with God; with humanity you cannot."—JOS. MAZZINI.

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

A Paris correspondent of April 20th, says: "The public discontent is great, and not without cause. The possibility of a war between the two great powers of Europe would alone suffice to create uneasiness; but this uneasiness is aggravated by the conviction every one is possessed of, that to the culpable silence of the French government the losses which have already occurred in the financial world, and which are reported to be very great, are to be ascribed."

Things look more and more alarming in the old world. There is but little hope of a long time of peace. The most prudent statesmen now see but little chance to escape a terrible political storm. The different powers in Europe are preparing for war on a grand scale. They dread to begin the bloody onset, but see no way of escape. Thank the Lord, the christian sees the dawn of a brighter day at hand, when the Prince of Peace will be our ruler.

"Come and reign; come and reign,
Jesus, on thy throne;
And, O, it fills my heart with joy,
To know we're almost home."

THE "FINAL NATIONAL KINGDOM."

We have received a circular from one who is operating for the spirits in preparing the way for the new government which they purpose to establish soon. After giving the order of organization, he closes by saying:—

"All who look for this final national kingdom for earth to come 'ready made,' from 'heaven' or any other source, to them, may rest assured that all will be left outside of it except those of and by whom it shall be already made up. So if they want a place within it they had better set themselves at work to make up the part they want to be of it. Their own works will place them where they naturally belong."

We hope to be found among those who "will be left outside." We do not care to take "the mark of the beast."

WORSE THAN A "GHOST STORY."—Brother J. N. Williams, Ottawa, Minn., sent us, some time since, an account of a very remarkable affair which is said to have taken place in Grand Traverse, Mich., in 1858. It was taken from the Crown Point (Indiana) Register. This wonderful account of the resurrection of a Mrs. Hayden, by the spirits, was published in several papers. We wrote to Grand Traverse in 1858, and found the whole thing was a fabrication.

[illegible] TRACT FUND.

For the Free Distribution of Tracts.

Previous acknowledgments	$2035.32
John G. Palmer	1.00
E. M. Ripley	.75

POOR FUND DONATIONS.

To send the Crisis to the Poor.

Whole number sent free, 580. Ann'l Expense, $1400.00

Previous acknowledgments	$314.65
A friend	1.50
E. H. Crockett	.25

THE AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All communications relating to the business of the Society, and all applications for situations as teachers or missionaries, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, WILLIAM B. HERRON, "Crisis" Office, Boston.

All donations of money, or clothing, or other supplies for the Freedmen, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEORGE T. ADAMS, 167 Hanover Street, Boston. In sending supplies, enclose in a letter to the same address a notice and list of the articles sent.

Advent Mission Fund.

For the establishment of Missions among the Freedmen, the building of a Chapel and Mission House in Memphis, etc.

Previous acknowledgments	2034.34
J. V. Himes (pledge paid)	75.00
Solomon Hovey (for the Mission House)	25.00
William B. Herron "	10.00
A. W. Sibley "	2.00
T. Apthorp "	2.00
"Woburn" "	5.00
N. W. Wait "	100.00
H. "	5.00
Erd. Baker	5.00
Anson Bronson	2.50
Y. P. Fund	.60

CLOTHING RECEIVED.

One barrel from friends in Pleasant Valley, Ct.

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$476.45
N. Sagendoph	1.00

For the World's Crisis.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

Bro. Leslie writes:—We have at last entered fully upon our work in the new field. We have established a school in the northern part of the city, and have admitted sixty-one scholars, and the number is daily increasing. We shall not be able long to continue to receive, for our house will not accommodate more than eighty; and when about that number have been received, we shall have to turn away those who then come. This will make us feel sad. I have no doubt but that nearly two hundred scholars might be gathered in here with a very little effort, if we had a building or buildings in which to teach them, and teachers to instruct them. Quite a number who have been attending the schools in the city the past year, have applied for admission to our school.

All the scholars are delighted with Sr. Butler and her teaching; and when she has fully entered the work here, I believe her influence among these poor wandering ones will be almost unlimited. We want, however, another good teacher and missionary to help us. We cannot well do the work that is now crowding upon us, and this work will continue to increase. Sr. Butler cannot, alone and unassisted, teach so large a school as we shall and must have if we do the work here demanded.

As the school is but the first step in the great work to be done for these poor benighted beings, it will not do to spend all our time and strength in this part of the work, leaving the crowning portion undone. I have an evening school for adults, who cannot attend during the day, and I cannot go into the school and teach both day and evening, without leaving undone much of the missionary work which is most important here. I cannot teach constantly, and at the same time visit all these parents and the people at their homes, as I should and must do in order to bring them under the influence of the gospel, and lead them up to a higher and holier life here, and to the life hereafter. Neither can I teach daily, and discharge the various other duties devolving upon me. Even if I could do it for a time, I should eventually break down under the burden, and another would have to take my place. Friends at home are not aware of the amount of work here to be done, and the great disadvantages under which we labor in doing it. Double the labor is required here to accomplish the same thing that is required at the North, especially in New England. The facilities here for doing any thing are many less than there. It is an up-stream voyage, rowing always against the current. Yet we do not complain. We only ask for more help to be able to accomplish the work which on every hand is crowding upon us.

Thousands are here perishing, and we want, under God, to save them. Who that is truly qualified, and would love the work, will come? And who will help such an one to come? I believe there are those among the waiting ones who are fully qualified as teachers and missionaries, and who would come here and share with us the labor, burdens and privations which we are bearing, if they could be sent. I believe that God would be pleased to have the "household" send them. What say you, brethren and sisters? Shall we have another laborer in this part of the vineyard? It lies with you to decide whether we shall struggle on here alone, or have more help.

Their never was a greater work than this. If you were here you would say so. This work will not be in vain in the Lord. With tears we are going forth, bearing precious seed, and shall we come again without sheaves? God's word says we shall not. We shall bring our sheaves with us; and you who invested in the sowing, shall receive of the harvest in the reaping. "He that soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully." This may be "casting thy bread upon the waters," but you will find it again, and doubtless before many days. The reaping time is at hand. Sow, then, before it comes.

Can we not afford to work hard in this eleventh hour of the day, when just to be called to our reward? Can we try to do too much for Christ, and for them for whom he died and arose? Have we any thing too good to sacrifice or yield up for his sake, and those for whom he laid aside his glory and gave up his life? Let us not forget that he died as well for these poor outcast ones as he did for us. The same blood he shed for us, he shed for them. The same life he lived when he arose, he lived for them as well as for us. Their eternal existence is as important as ours. One saved from among these poor ones will be as dear to Christ in his kingdom as another who came from the fairer of earth's son's and daughters. All will be alike perfect there. Let us think as Christ does in regard to this; labor as he labored, and die, if need be, as he died, for those whom we may be the instruments of saving.

Our work here is a most arduous and trying one. Never, it seems to me, did it require more true courage and endurance on the part of any servants of Christ, than it is ours to exercise. Every obstacle which Satan and men can place in our pathway, we have to surmount, if we go on. In our own strength we could not do it; but in the strength and by the might of Israel's God, we can and shall overcome. Our duty to these poor, benighted, cast out ones, will be done. We shall be faithful to our trust, and the high mission which God and his waiting church have sent us here to fulfil. With the wisdom and strength which God giveth, we shall labor, and by his blessing and the aid of the Holy Spirit, some here will be saved through our efforts and toil. But the glory will be Christ's; and this will be our happiness and joy.

Your invitation to the friends of the Mission to write to us, thus cheering our hearts with words of sympathy and remembrance, we thankfully acknowledge. In whatever way they can aid us in this work, it will not only be done for us, but unto Christ, for whose glory and the sake of these poor ones we are here. We trust they will remember that we "have need of these things," and that they must come from God through them. A more minute account of the present month's labor, I shall soon give you and the friends of the Mission at large. With thanks to God, and all the friends of the Mission, for many blessings and favors received, I subscribe myself yours in this work and in earnest,

I. I. LESLIE.

Memphis, Tenn., April 25th.

AFTER THE RIOTS.

The above letter from Bro. Leslie was written before the recent riots in Memphis. Another is just received, written since the riots ended and the excitement began to subside, from which we make an extract below. The riots, it will be borne in mind, were confined to South Memphis, and did not extend to North Memphis, where our missionaries are. W. B. H.

DEAR BRO. HERRON:—Troops have arrived, and things begin to quiet down. We shall go to work again soon. Sister Butler will go on with the school next week, and Carrie Bywater with hers also. Judge Jones here thinks they will not be molested. In two weeks I shall be able to go on with my work, perhaps with a new interest on the part of the people. The work, under God, will go on. Our prospect is good. We have a clear field, and I am now full of hope and courage. Full protection will soon be given us.

Some have fled from the city; but, after much deliberation and prayer, I have determined to "stick by the stuff." I believe God will protect me, and give me success in the work he has sent me here to do. If I fall, it will be because my work is done. I shall not fall before.

I shall begin our Sabbath school to-morrow, and make an effort to bring the frightened scholars and people out. As I said before, I still think that, in a short time, perfect order will be restored, and our work go on more prosperous than before.

Yours as ever, I. I. LESLIE.

Memphis, May 6th.

Freedmen's School-houses in Memphis.

The Boston Journal of Monday morning contains the following item concerning the schools in Memphis:

New York, May 12. Gen. Howard has received a dispatch from Gen. Fiske at Memphis, stating that the school-houses for colored children, destroyed by the mob, will be rebuilt and occupied in ten days.

Late Memphis papers speak to the same effect; and while they blame the negro soldiers as provoking the riot by disorderly behavior, they deprecate the excesses committed by the Irish police and the low class of whites by whom the riots were carried on. Let us be thankful that peace is again restored. Pray for the Missionaries. W. B. H.

OUR MEETINGS.

The meetings in Lowell Street Chapel, last Sabbath, were of more than common interest. Bro. Hook was present again, somewhat improved in health, and full of zeal for the salvation of souls. The morning and afternoon meetings were spent in prayer and conference. They were heavenly sittings together indeed. Seven came forward for prayers, and found peace and pardon; one of them a Spiritualist and backslider for ten years.

NEW BOOKS.

THE ENGLISH NEW TESTAMENT. The common English version, as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union.

We have a supply of this work on hand, beautifully printed, and bound in three different styles, at the following prices by mail, postpaid:—Cloth, 90c.; extra cloth, colored edges, $1.15; sheep, $1.40. A work of sixteen years labor, by some of the best biblical scholars of the age. It is well worthy a place in the library of every Bible student.

Czechowski's Thrilling Narrative.

A small edition of this work has been printed in paper covers, to be disposed of for the benefit of the European Mission. The book will be sent post-paid to every one who contributes $1.00 or more to the aid of the Mission. Bro. Czechowski is in need of help. Let the friends take this means to aid him, and receive an interesting book in return. The book will be sent to those only who order it.

For the World's Crisis.

N. Y. STATE ANNUAL MEETING.

I now write to all interested in proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom, and the soon coming of Christ. Our work is almost done, therefore let us unite our efforts in doing what we can to arouse a sleeping world. At this meeting, we propose to organize a State Tract Society, for the purpose of supplying our ministers with tracts for gratuitous circulation; believing that every State ought to supply their own tracts. The Lord has blessed our efforts the past year. Our quarterly meetings have been blessed of God.

We invite all churches living in the vicinity of this conference, believing in the soon coming of Jesus, to appoint their delegates, and send them on. Let isolated ones, living destitute of the privilege of hearing the gospel of the kingdom, come up to this feast. We invite all ministers, within the bounds of this conference, looking for "that blessed hope," to unite with us. We hope to see Bro. D. T. Taylor, and Bro. O. R. Fassett, as they are laboring in this State, at this meeting.

Come, Brn., one and all. Come to this meeting. Come full of the Spirit of Christ: Come prepared to work for the Lord. Come to do good and get good. Come armed and equipped as the word of God directs; and I trust as the result the enemies of God will be made to flee, and much good be done in the name of the Lord. C. B. TURNER.

For the World's Crisis.

DRAW THE LINE.

It is all important in these last days, when the watchmen are called upon to "blow . . . the trumpet in Zion," and to "sound an alarm in" the "holy mountain," that the line of demarkation between the church and the world be distinctly drawn; especially when we remember that the great day of decision is drawing very near; the day in which it will be said, "He that is filthy, let him be filthy still." It may do for a time-serving ministry to say, "Peace, peace," and preach smooth things, and covet the smiles and fondling embrace of a semi-christianized world, hugging to their bosom the fond delusion that the world has conformed to the church; but God's commissioned servants may not, yea, dare not do this; but, on the authority of their divine Master, they must proclaim in thunder tones "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." "Be not conformed to the world." "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; . . . he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption."

Such preaching, in connection with what Peter calls "present truth" (2 Pet. 1: 12), may not be popular,—will not be attractive to the masses,—will be apt to bring in more reproaches than dollars,—would not be likely to induce the young men of the town to vie with the church members in getting up a sociable donation party for the benefit of the preacher,—might possibly reduce the pew rents, and seriously curtail the subscription list; but, blessed be God, there are some things, and glorious things too, which the preaching of God's truth brings. It brings, first, a consciousness of rectitude and duty done. It brings the sweet consolations of God's "exceeding great and precious promises,"—"Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end." "Forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." And it brings the honest-hearted ones out from the rubbish of the world.

In this age, church members in general are afraid of being thought singular. They think that they must conform to the customs and fashions of the day, or be considered eccentric; but such forget that God is purifying "unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Titus 2: 14), and that his church, the bride of the Lamb, is making "herself ready." She is arraying herself "in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints."—Rev. 19: 7, 8. They remember, also, that it is written, "Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments."—Rev. 16: 15. What are the saints' garments? "Fine linen." What is the fine linen? "Righteousness." What is righteousness? It is to have a pure heart, a spotless character, washed in the blood of the Lamb, and then we are told that "if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1: 7. The time has come for decision of character. God's people are not to be afraid of being considered singular. Dare to be right. Dare to be godly. Dare to walk on the right side of the line. Be peculiar. Be courageous. Be strong in the Lord. Be faithful. Be humble. Be Christ-like. Be watchful. Be ready.

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."—2 Cor. 6: 14–18. O that God's people would walk right out on the principles of God's eternal truth, and cease to be apologists for the pleasures of a worldly church. O that they would recognize the portrait as drawn by the inspired artist,—"This know, also, that in the last days . . . men shall be lovers of their own selves; . . . lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; FROM SUCH TURN AWAY."—2 Tim. 3: 1–5. G. THOMSON.

Munroe, Wis.

For the World's Crisis.

THE LAST DAY OF CONFLICT.

The coming millennium has long been a subject of joyful anticipation by the faithful disciples of Christ. It is the morning star of coming glory, shining through the dark cloud of our perilous times. As to the commencement of this era, I have little to add to what has already been presented to this generation. It is near at hand. Of this there can be no doubt. But, christian brethren, while we sing and shout in millennial tones, "The millennium is at hand," let us seriously consider that, in the meantime, there is waiting for sudden development the elements of fiercer persecution than ever yet raged on earth. These, the living church of God must endure; and she should be preparing for these tribulations. We are to come out of great tribulations. The devil has come down with new power, knowing that his time is short. Is the mention of these persecutions unwelcome news? But they ought to be most welcome.

Persecutions are precursory of Christ's coming. "In the last days perilous times shall come." If perils are to herald the reign of the Messiah, should we dread them? They are the dark graves which lie between us and the millennium. They are the deep shadows which must gather around us, that out of deepest gloom may arise the morning Star of our redemption. Shall we lament the trials which are to usher us into the holy city, where God will wipe away all tears, and there shall be no more death, nor sorrow? No! We will herald the era of persecution. If we must pass through this straight gate to the millennium, let us make ready for the travail. Perhaps the question arises, "What should constitute a preparation for these persecutions?" The church should have on the whole armor of God. She is putting off her armor as though her enemies were finally and forever repulsed. There was never a time in the history of the church so full of brooding mischief as now. Let her sound an alarm in God's holy mountain. Let her arouse her drowsy, enfeebled senses. The foe! the foe! should ring along the battlements of Zion.

An army of errorists press her on one side, and hosts of formalists on the other. Under the mixed poisons of both she nods and sickens, while her inspirited foes marshal their fiendish hosts for her last persecution. In this condition she forgets the power of prayer.

If you wish to select the most efficient of Christ's militant followers, to whom Zion is indebted for her advances and victories, where would you look for them? In the pulpit? Would you fix your eye on a public-spirited professor? You might be greatly mistaken. Come with me to the closet, and show me the man who spends most of his time in secret prayer, and wrestles with most faith and fervor for God's blessing on a judgment-hastening world, and I will show you, with bold assurance, the most efficient of God's militant followers. And here is the place to put on God's armor, that will shield you through coming tribulations. Here is the place to consecrate yourself wholly to the Lord, and receive the witness and seal of the Spirit, that will bear you safely through the terrible deluge that is about breaking forth in all its latent fury. The humblest subaltern of Zion's army may here be made the bravest of her warring band. The most invincible soldier in the Messiah's army are those who, with uplifted weapon, receive the enemy on their knees. Woe to the foe that approaches in this direction. They will be scattered like the chaff before the wind.

The whole church, in order to make her preparation sure, needs to awake to earnest, devout prayer. When each member thirsts after God, and seeks in the bitterness of penitent tears for a closer walk with God, a heavenly power will descend and shield her through the coming storm. What means this lull over the world? Ah! it is the calm that precedes a fierce and terrible storm. The spirit of past ages is rolling back upon us, and already we can see the swell and hear the surge. Romanism gathers its conspirators for the last onset. You may doubt it; but they say "a new day is dawning on this chosen land; a new chapter is about to open in our history, and the (Roman) church is to assume her rightful position and influence." What mean these boasts of the Catholics? It means they are about to open a new chapter of persecution for the people of God. God's people have endured sharp conflicts, and have won hard-fought fields. But to her it cannot be said as to Abdiel—"The easier conquest now remains to thee." Her enemies having invented new instruments of war, compass the camp of the saints, and, under the dark cloud of secrecy, train their infernal machinery to lay waste their habitation. The severest sufferings of God's people will flow from direct, cruel persecutions. Our business should be to prepare for this. But some feeble heart may ask, What can I do? I answer, pray. Pray as Abraham did for Sodom, and with more perseverance. Do this, and you shall stand in the front of the battle, and fear not; for God will be your shield, and will shield till the storm be overpast.

Rochester, N. Y. WM. H. SPENCER.

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. D. Eastman.

BRO. GRANT:—I prize the Crisis as a very great treasure. Its very choice instruction, and kind words of counsel, are worth far more than silver and gold. I rejoice to be so often admonished with solemn exhortations, and refreshed with cheering words from the scattered friends of Jesus.

I felt sad to learn of the death of our dear Bro. Rice, of Nova Scotia, whom we loved in the Lord; but we are comforted with the hope that he sleeps in Jesus, and that he will awake in Christ's likeness, and we shall see him beyond the dominion of death, where no tears will ever come.

I do believe the Lord will soon come to gather his waiting people, and hope through his rich grace to be able to hail him with joy in that glad day. May the Lord continue to bless and sustain you in all your toils, while giving the last warning to this wicked world; and bestow his rich blessings on all his dear saints, is my sincere prayer. Yours truly,

Landaff, N. H. O. D. EASTMAN.

From Bro. L. H. Little.

BRO. GRANT:—The choice selection of tracts came safe to hand, and the most of them are now telling the glad story of the coming of Jesus. It was pleasing to see the eagerness manifested by the people to get a tract, after telling them of the glorious truths they would present. O that I had the means to scatter them by the thousand in this wicked part of the great harvest field. By distributing tracts and talking of the coming kingdom of God, I hope to do some good, glorify God, and be prepared for his coming. If there are any of like faith in the State of Missouri, I am not aware of it.

I delight to talk of the glorious hope of redemption soon to dawn on God's despised children. The Crisis is all the preaching I ever heard on the soon coming of Christ; and I hope to be able to read it till its publication is no longer needed on earth, and editor and reader join the blood-washed company on the new earth. LEWIS H. LITTLE.

Chapel Hill, Lafayette Co., Mo.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—I leave here this morning for New Haven and Wallingford. Since my last, I have been here and in Madison, and have preached to good congregations every evening, and there is much interest to hear. One meeting only creates a desire for more, so much so that we hardly know how to stop. There was a deep feeling, some inquiring the way to life, and many almost persuaded to step on the Lord's side.

Our meetings at Guilford Green were well attended by a class of people who manifested much interest to hear the gospel of the kingdom. Afternoon and evening there was a full house. I could but hope the impression made upon many minds would be lasting, and that an effectual door might be opened, so that truth adapted to the times in which we live may be freely preached in this region. There are a few old veterans here, who have stood amid the storms, and borne reproach cheerfully for Christ's sake. They are strong in faith, giving glory to God, and you find welcome homes with them. They have had additions to their number from the good, substantial, well-to-do farmers, and their families in Madison, and all goes on gloriously at present. I had a very pleasant time with them, long to be remembered. God bless them all, and help them to be steadfast in the faith, living as the grace of God teaches.

Guilford, Ct., is a delightful place, on the Shore Line R. R., on the sea-board; and I hope there will be an interest to hear more about Jesus and his coming. I hope our brethren will be greatly encouraged to make more effort to get our faith before the people. I became warmly attached to them, and it was hard parting, after having ten days of preaching, praying and singing with them; but there was one blessed consolation, that soon we should have a meeting that would never break up. Thine in hope of a better life,

Guilford, Ct. L. BOUTELL.

P. S.—There seems to be an ear to hear our peculiar doctrines, almost every where; and although many sectarians hate the truth, and all that believe and preach it, yet, nevertheless, it makes all that do believe it love God and one another more. It seems as though we were doing up our last work. L. B.

SISTER MARY WHITAKER, Newfane, Vt., writes:—"The Lord has truly commenced a work in this place. Two have been hopefully converted, though we have no preaching. The Lord is able to work through feeble clay. Yet we need help from preaching brethren. It does seem that while you have so many preachers in Mass., some of them might come into Vt. We are poor in this world's goods, but, thank the Lord, we have enough to eat and drink, and some to spare sometimes. Come, brethren, come over and help us. Any one coming this way may inquire for William, or Joseph Whitaker, Whitakerville, Newfane, Vt."

A Bro. from New Bedford writes:—"The Lord is blessing the labors of Bro. Allen Damman, a young man now laboring in Acushnet, Mass. Sixteen happy souls were baptized in that place last Lord's day. The work is still going on."

Obituaries.

ROSE. Died at Slocumville, R. I., April 20th, 1866, Mary, wife of W. O. Rose, daughter of Mrs. S. T. Dixon, and sister of Eld. J. T. Dixon, aged forty-four years.

Many years ago, Mary made choice of the good part, and in her life and death she shared the hope and trust of those who wait for the Son of God from heaven, and who, through much tribulation, shall enter the kingdom of God.

Eight children, the objects of her unwearied labors, and the subjects of her latest prayers, are left to mourn her loss. May the God of all consolation heal their broken hearts, and hear, on their behalf, their mother's dying prayers.

"Soft be the turf on thy dear breast,
And heavenly calm thy lone retreat.
How longed the wearied frame for rest,
The rest is come, and oh how sweet."

So rests the worn and wearied heart,
So sleeps the pale and wasted form,
Till the dull shades of night depart,
Till bursts the fair eternal morn.

The fading glow of health is gone,
Passed the fair brightness of life's prime;
Shattered beneath affliction's storm,
She leaves the woes and tears of time.

But though the dust of death may hide
This withered and decaying form,
There comes a life that shall abide,—
There comes a calm beyond the storm.

Those eyes no more in grief shall weep,
That wearied heart no more shall sigh;
God's love the soul in peace shall keep,
While endless years are gliding by.

O mourning ones, bereft and sad,
Motherless, desolate, forlorn,—
Her God can make the mourners glad,
And heal the hearts by sorrow torn.

On the bright hills of endless day,
Stands her eternal mansion fair;
Her path has marked the homeward way,—
Say, children, will you meet her there?

B. L. H.

WORKS. Suddenly killed by the cars in Salem, Mass., April 20th, 1866, John Calvin Works, aged thirty-seven.

He was one of our best men in the employ of the railroad company. He was beloved by those who were over him, and those under him. As a husband and son, he was ever confiding, dutiful, and faithful, thus endearing him lovingly in all his domestic relations. As a christian, he was bold, uncompromising; but gentle, easy to be entreated, and full of good fruits. If not full of words, he was full of acts corresponding with this text,—"All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." In the church he was consistent and perseveringly faithful, always ready to fill the gap, and cheerfully bear the burden for Christ's and the truth's sake. In the Sunday school and Bible class, he was intelligently instructive, making him useful and beloved in every department of life. Thus he has lived, and his influence for good has been felt everywhere, by all that knew him.

In his death, we have met with no common loss. We deeply feel it. An irreparable loss to the wife of his love, and companion of his youth, that made domestic life cheerful and happy; to the little lad, that he loved most dearly; and to the aged mother that watched him from the cradle to his manhood. These loving hearts have been suddenly and unexpectedly broken, but they weep not without hope. Although his fall was in a moment, unexpected even by him, "he was ready to be offered." He sleeps in Jesus. While we shall miss him at his home, at the church, in the vestry, at the Sunday school, yet he will not be missed when the jewels are made up.

L. BOUTELL.

WHITEHEAD. Died in Wallingford, Conn., Apr. 5th, 1866, Jimmie Whitehead, youngest child of Bro. Rufus J. and Mary Whitehead, aged eight years and seven months.

Jimmie was a good boy, and loved by all who knew him. Often might his voice be heard in singing the songs of Zion, but it is now silenced in death. He will sing again in a little while, when he comes from the land of the enemy, to his own borders. Then death can no more disturb his sweet voice in praising God. It was a severe trial for Bro. and Sr. Whitehead to give him up, yet they mourn not as those who have no hope. They had just moved to Wallingford, when the shafts of death struck their dear boy. Just before he died, his father took him in his arms, and said, "Can't you kiss father once more?" He tried to press his trembling lips to his father's cheek, but failed. He laid him on his bed, and he sweetly fell asleep in Christ, after an illness of about four days.

B. HITCHCOCK.

FORBES. Fell asleep in Jesus April 3d, 1866, in Royalston, Mass., Anna M. Forbes, aged twenty-one years, nineteen days.

It was my privilege to be by the side of the subject of this notice the most part of the last week of her life, and, truly, it was a profitable week to me. Consumption was her disease, and as she lingered month after month, growing weaker and weaker, she was led to think upon her future state, which resulted in an entire consecration of herself, soul and body, to the Lord; with full assurance that at the resurrection morn she should come forth in the likeness of her Savior, to wear the crown of life. Her last days upon this earth were peaceful and serene. "All is well," "His will, not mine," "I am all ready and waiting"; were expressions which often fell from her lips, as she bowed beneath death's waves. S. D. ACKERMAN.

WOOD. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Exeter, R. I., April 23, Byron J., son of Edwin B. and Abby A. Wood, aged ten weeks and four days.

So fades the lovely, blooming flower,
Frail, smiling solace of an hour;
So soon our transient comforts fly,
Earth's pleasures only bloom to die.

BINGHAM. Died in Norwichville, C. W., April 21st, 1866, of consumption, [illegible] Jane Bingham, wife of Gustavus C. Bingham, aged twenty-nine years.

Sister Bingham was a member of the Methodist church for some six or seven years; but in January, 1865, while Bro. Henry Stevens, of Foothill, was holding a series of meetings in this place, she embraced the Advent faith, and was baptized by him. She suffered some thirteen months, gradually declining, and wasting away, without severe pain. Her faith and trust in God was firm till the last moment. She fell asleep in Jesus, in the triumphs of faith, leaving a husband and five children to mourn her loss. W. MCCLELLAN.

ISBELL. Died, April 20th, after a short illness, Annie Adell Isbell, infant daughter of R. W. and S. A. Isbell, aged thirteen months.

Married.

In Richmond, Me., May 24, 1866, by H. D. Reed, Mr. ANDREW GATCHELL, of Brunswick, and Miss ADDIE R. GATCHELL, of Richmond, Me.

At Lapeer, Mich., May 24, 1866, by Rev. W. T. Bartle, Mr. CORNELIUS PIKE, of Fort Edward, N. Y., and Miss LAURA A. BARBER, of Waterloo, Wis.

In Exeter, R. I., May 6th, 1866, by Eld. Edwin R. Wood, JOSEPH S. ARNOLD and HANNAH B. ALLEN, both of North Kingstown.

In East Weare, N. H., May 8th, 1866, by Eld. T. M. Preble, G. FRANK LOCKE, of East Weare, and S. ANNA GLAZIER, of Haverhill, N. H.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool May 2nd, Queenstown 3rd.

A police constable has been shot in Dublin by the Fenians.

The German question continues warlike. The relations of Austria and Italy are decidedly menacing. Both governments deny aggressive designs, but both are represented as vigorously preparing for war. The Italian Parliament promptly voted authority to the government to raise means for the defense of the country. Popular meetings have been held at Naples in favor of government armaments, and universal enthusiasm represented to exist throughout Italy in view of a probable war.

It is asserted that the Italian government has called out 150,000 men. The Austrian force in Venetia is estimated at 160,000.

The Florence correspondent of the London Times says: "There can be no doubt that the Italian government desires war, as the only means of extrication from its exceedingly false and difficult situation."

Austrian and Prussian relations show no improvement. A Berlin dispatch talks of a probable increase of armaments by Prussia.

The Austrian iron clads are stated to have received orders to put to sea. Their destination is believed to be the German Ocean and the Baltic.

DOMESTIC.

Washington, April 28. [Special dispatch to the Evening Post.]—The Reconstruction Committee have agreed upon a plan, and determined to make it public. It is in the form of a constitutional amendment, and is in effect as follows:

First—No distinction on account of race or color in civil rights.

Second—Representation to be founded on population, excluding all males above twenty-one years of age, in the States where they are not allowed to vote.

Third—All persons who participated in the rebellion to be disfranchised until after 1870, so far as voting for federal officers is concerned.

Fourth—Repudiation of the rebel debt.

Fifth—The power of Congress to enforce these demands is declared.

The foregoing amendment, when ratified by the Southern States, is to define the conditions of the representation in Congress. The committee have agreed to report this plan to the House of representatives on Monday next.

San Francisco, May 6. A special messenger arrived yesterday from Los Angelos, bringing a dispatch from the commander of Fort Grant to Gen. Mason, announcing that Fort Goodwin, Arizona, had been taken by two thousand Indians, and the garrison, numbering one hundred twenty-four, were all massacred with one exception, and the fort burned.

The man who escaped was out hunting at the time and witnessed the commotion from a distance. He saw the fort burning and heard the firing of guns during the fight, which lasted nearly an hour. It is supposed the Indians gained admission to the fort under the pretext of entering into a treaty of peace, which Gen. Mason had instructed the commander of the fort to make.

New York, May 10. A Valparaiso correspondent says certain highly important documents, sent to the Chilian President by the Dictator of Peru, have been forwarded by Gen. Kilpatrick to Washington, showing that some time ago a French stranger died suddenly in Lima, and that among his effects were found papers proving him to have been a French agent coming with proposals to the Dictator of Peru to make himself King or Emperor, promising aid in men and money from France, under the Mexican flag—in other words through Maximilian. This exposes a scheme between France and Spain to make a "jump" at all the small South American Republics. England approves, but does not help by men or money.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 10. A special dispatch from New York states that the arrival of Stephens caused important movements among the Fenians, and that Gen. Meade had been ordered to Buffalo with a considerable number of U. S. troops.

Later. Some important movements are expected in this region. The U. S. steamer Michigan, which was on the point of sailing for Erie, has been ordered to remain here.

New York, May 11. Stephens, the Head Centre of the Fenians, was met on his arrival here last evening by a committee of Fenians, and thousands of Irishmen, and escorted to the Metropolitan Hotel. In conversation with those who called on him, he said the Irish army would fight on their own soil before the expiration of the present year. There is to be a grand demonstration at Jones' Wood, when the Head Centre will fully explain the object of his mission to this country.

Mr. B. Doran Killian has issued a war bulletin to the brotherhood, stating that he has made no report on his actions heretofore, because the public should not know everything connected with the war purposes until the action proposed is defeated or successful; but he says his enterprise on the eastern border is only temporarily balked. He concludes by saying he and O'Mahoney are on the best of terms.

At midnight the 99th regiment, Col. O'Mahoney, serenaded Stephens, who made a brief address. He said he did not belong to any party, but came here to unite all the Irish people, and he would let no man be accused until fairly tried and found guilty. Party expression had done great harm to the cause, and he advised all sensible minded Fenians to refrain from such a habit. He said he came here by invitation and should keep quiet for a time. When the committee to inquire into the Irish Republic matters reported, then he would have something to say. He said the people of Ireland had been prepared for a long time, but they had been disappointed in not receiving support.

Washington specials say Secretary Seward has sent his protest against Austria's sending troops to Mexico; and at the same time writing to our Minister that if troops had already started, nothing could be done, but if none had already gone, he (Mr. Motley) was instructed to withdraw in case any troops should depart after his protest had been presented, and before the reply and our response should have been received.

THE MEMPHIS RIOTS—Nearly Seventy Freedmen Killed.—The Chicago Tribune makes the following startling statements on the authority of its correspondent at Memphis:

"The leading rebel citizens claim to have murdered twenty-four negroes, while the police slaughtered nineteen more, including three women and two infant children, and firemen, besides burning down every negro church and schoolhouse in the city, and a vast number of tenements, slaughtered enough negroes to make the total of colored men, women and children killed, nearly seventy.

The riot seems to have been begun by three policemen hiring a white vagrant to 'pick a quarrel' with a colored boy of ten years of age. This succeeding, they rushed in and shot the colored boy. Some colored soldiers present, without violence, begged them not to shoot 'so small a boy,' and thereupon they killed four of the colored soldiers. Immediately, as if by a concerted plan, hundreds of ex-rebels, armed to the teeth, 'ran a muck' over the city, killing every negro they met, while the police and firemen turned out, not to quell the mob and preserve the peace and the property of citizens, but to set fire to negro churches, school houses and dwellings.

In one instance, from pure fiendishness, a poor old negro of seventy years, ignorant even of the existence of the riot, for pleading that he had 'never done no injury to no one,' was knocked down, his mouth wrenched open with a knife, and his tongue cut out by the roots. This, our special correspondent writes that he saw. A little girl of five years of age, for the offence of '[illegible]' when asked by these devils to point out her father's hiding place, has her eyes cut out, and is thrown then mangled into the flames of their burning cabin and roasted alive."

Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, M. C. from Pennsylvania, has received letters which corroborate the general tenor of the above. One letter is dated May 4th, and says:

"I have been here during the late riots, and am struck indignation dumb. Such outrageous, fiendish barbarity was never perpetrated in any civilized age. I have spent five days here, during which time I have been an eye-witness to such sights as should cause the age in which we live to blush. Negro men have been shot down in cold blood on the streets; barbers at their chairs and in their own shops; draymen on their drays, while attempting to earn an honest living; hotel waiters while in the discharge of their duties; hackmen while driving female teachers of negro children to their schools; laborers while handling cotton on the wharves, etc. All the negro schoolhouses and many of the houses of the negroes have been burned; this, too, under the immediate auspices of the city police and the Mayor; in fact most of these outrages were committed by the police themselves, all Irish, and all rebels, and mostly drunk. This is not the half. I have no heart to recount the outrages I have seen. The most prominent citizens stand on the streets and see negroes hunted down and shot, and laugh at it as a good joke. Attempts have been made to fire every government building, and fire has been set to many of the abodes and business places of the Union people."

In a subsequent letter the writer states that women and children were burnt alive with the dwellings of the negroes. Also that there is a secret organization (which General Runkle knows all about) sworn to purge the city of all Northern men who are not rebels, all negro teachers, all Yankee enterprise, and return the city "to the good old days of Southern rule and chivalry." There was a plot to kill all the teachers on the night of the 4th, but one of the conspirators, who had a little humanity, revealed the design, the teachers were notified, and they all left in the evening boat for Cairo.—Boston Journal.

A NEWLY DISCOVERED CITY.—The ruins of an extensive Mexican aboriginal city, which have just been discovered, are situated in the forest of Jicorumbo, in the province of Tlaxicala. The temples are of immense size, some with vaulted roofs, and so well preserved that ancient paintings appear fresh. The courts are filled with hideous and grotesque idols, and pyramids surmounted by the same. The whole is enveloped in a dense forest of cedar and ebony trees. Some of these cedars are of such immense size, that eight men taking hold of hands together could not reach around one of them. These forests are of healthy table lands, about fifty miles from the port of Tuxan.

☞ Intelligence has been received at Nashville that a mob broke into and sacked a building occupied by the Freedmen's Bureau at Meridian, Miss., and set fire and burned the building. It is also stated that on the 30th ult. Geo. Barrs, at Grenada, Miss., was foully murdered.

☞ Two churches occupied by colored people at Petersburg, Va., have recently been burned and another set on fire. The city authorities have offered $5000 for the arrest and conviction of the incendiaries. The larger church, worth $15,000, was not insured.

☞ A terrible state of affairs is said to exist in some counties in the north of Georgia. Murders, outrages and robberies are committed daily. If the troops sent there do not speedily check this, hundreds will be compelled to leave their homes.

A genuine case of leprosy is reported in New Orleans. The victim is a young girl. One of her feet has already dropped off, and one arm is nearly gone. The most eminent physicians pronounce her disease leprosy.

☞ A fish epidemic is reported at Richmond. Large numbers and all sizes float on the water, and when taken out appear bloated and die in a few minutes.

Notices.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held in Woodstock, N. H., commencing June 7th, Thursday, P. M., and hold over the following Lord's day. Brn. Couch, Ross, and others are expected to be present to preach the word of life. Brethren, make this meeting a subject of prayer, that God may give us the victory through Christ, and that great good may be accomplished in his name.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the New York State Christian Conference will be held at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, May 31st, and hold over the following Sunday. As churches can only be represented by delegates, let delegates be appointed by every church. Let there be a good representation at this meeting. Arrangements of trains, etc., will be advertised in due time.

South Butler lies four miles north of Savannah Station, on the direct R. R. from Syracuse to Rochester. Take the way trains, as all trains do not stop at this station. Teams will be in readiness on the arrival of the afternoon trains. Those coming on the morning trains will take the stage to Butler. For the Board, C. B. TURNER.

Notice.

If there is no preventing providence, I will commence a meeting in Houseman's Hall, in Winona City, Minn., May 19th, at 8 o'clock P. M., and continue over the following week, and next Lord's day.

Also, a tent meeting in the Iowa Mission tent, at New. Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, to commence Wednesday night, June 6th, and continue over Lord's day. Will the friends at Parkersburg, Boylen Grove, Marble Rock, Rock Grove, Floyd, and Stacyville, write me and let me know the time that will suit them best to have a meeting. Let there be a general coming up to the help of the Lord in these meetings. PETER S. W. DEYO.

Advent Tabernacle Meeting.

Our big Tent, which we have named "Advent Tabernacle," will be pitched in Dubuque, Iowa, on the 18th of May, as Bro. Cook shall arrange. Perhaps the meeting will continue over two Sundays. Eld. Hough will help us in this and other meetings. Let us have a rally of friends from the adjoining region. We shall have works on prophetic themes which friends can purchase to scatter, and thus help "sound the alarm." WM. SHELDON.

Tent Meeting at Sparta, Wis.

The "Advent Tabernacle" will be pitched in the village of Sparta, Wis., on Thursday, May 31st, and the meetings will continue several days.—Friends from adjoining regions can come with provisions and bedding, and lodge in the tent, as at campmeeting, as this is a new field. Eld. Hough will be present to help proclaim the truth. Let the friends of truth rally. WM. SHELDON.

Publications for sale, subscriptions received for the paper, etc., at this meeting.

Tent Meeting at Elliota, Minn.

The "Advent Tabernacle" will be pitched at Elliota, Fillmore Co., Minnesota, as Bro. Elliott shall arrange, on Friday, June 15th, and continue there some days. Bro. Hough will be present to help us. Hope to see a general gathering of the saints from the surrounding region. Come in the Spirit, and work for God. WM. SHELDON.

Wisconsin Campmeeting.

Shall we have one or two this year? If but one, shall it be near Madison, or near Upper Sauk? Who will come with tents if held near Madison, and who if held near Sauk? And who if held at either place. Please communicate your thoughts to me by letter, to Baraboo, Wis., shortly, that we may act correctly in the matter.

WM. SHELDON.

Tent Meeting at Prescott, Wis.

We expect to pitch the "Advent Tabernacle" at Prescott, Wisconsin, July 12th. Let the friends from the other side of the Mississippi River attend if they can. Eld. Hough is to be with me.

WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Cascade, Dubuque Co., Iowa, to commence on Thursday, June 21st, 1866, and hold over the following Lord's day. All brethren and sisters who love to hear of the soon coming of the Lord, are invited to be there.

JOB GILDERSLEEVE, Clerk.

The Dubuque and Sioux City railroad will return the brethren free. There will be teams on the first day of the conference, at Farley, to carry them to the meeting. PETER S. W. DEYO.

Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly session of the Advent Conference will be held in Jefferson, Me., Trask meeting-house, Thursday, June 14th, at 5 o'clock P. M., and continuing over the following Sunday. Come to the conference.

JEREMIAH PARTRIDGE, Pres.
JOSHUA HEMINWAY, Clerk.

Notice.

Finding it would delay my work on the Millennium longer than I wish to wait, if published in a separate volume, I have concluded to run it thro' the pages of the "Banner;" and the first part will appear in the April number. It will fill up about six numbers of the "Banner," and we will mail those numbers to subscribers who do not wish to take the "Banner," for $1. Or the "Banner," including the "Millennium," for $2.—all in advance. Yours in hope of the coming kingdom.

JOHN T. WALSH.

Notice.

Preaching brethren wishing to come to Concord, N. H. (Angelos Hall), will please correspond with T. H. Ford, A. H. Saltmarsh, or J. T. Kimball.

We take this opportunity to inform the preaching brethren and those interested, that we intend, by the help of the Lord, to have a free meeting,—free for all that love and serve Jesus,—making christian character the only test of fellowship. We wish it distinctly understood that we make no point of doctrine the test. We hope this will satisfy all that we have no hobby horse to ride. If you do not believe it, come and see. So we will say to all those preaching the gospel of the kingdom, Come over and help us. We will try and do you good. We hope and pray that we may be the means, in the hands of the Lord, of doing some little good. We will try to love and fellowship all that love the Lord Jesus Christ.

T. H. FORD,
For the Brethren, A. H. SALTMARSH,
J. T. KIMBALL.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON.
Timothy Cole....Sunday, May 20th

EAST BOSTON.
Israel Damman....Sunday, May 20th

Boston, (Hudson Street Chapel, corner of Kneeland Street), Sunday, May 20th. H. L. HASTINGS.

Yearly meeting of the Indians at Southampton, Long Island, N. Y., June 3d. MILES GRANT.

Manchester, N. H., (baptism)....Sabbath, May 20th
T. M. PREBLE.

Plymouth, Mass....Sunday, May 20th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

New Britain, Ct....Sunday, June 3d
H. E. LADD.

Howick, C. W., (as Elder Sims may appoint), Lord's day, May 27th and June 3d. J. BLAIN.

Lake Village, N. H....Sunday, June 3d
J. COUCH.

Lynn, Mass....Sunday, May 20th
Portland, Me....Tuesday evening, May 22d
Yarmouth, Me....Wednesday evening, May 23d
West Poland, Me., (Free Chapel)....Sunday, May 27th
JAS. A. LIBBEY.

Portsmouth, N. H....Sunday, May 27th
A. SIMPSON.

Sutton, (at the house of Elliott Wells), Saturday, May 19th, at 2 P. M.
Waterloo....Sunday, May 20th
Schoodac....Sunday, June 3d
C. W. SARGENT.

Melvin Village....May 27th
Water Village....June 3d
Moultonborough....June 10th
Sandwich, (Vittum school-house)....June 17th
B. W. PIPER.

LEE, N. H.
W. W. Sutherland....Sunday, June 3d
J. W. Briton....Sunday, June 10th

New Britain, Conn....Sunday, May 20th
Brethren in adjoining towns are invited to meet with us. HIRAM MUNGER.

Locke's Corner, Barnstead, N. H., Thursday evening, May 17th, and hold each evening through the week, and over Sunday, the 20th. Brn. Boody and Willey are expected to be present. J. H. F. VARNEY.

Chichester, (Pine Ground)....Sunday, May 20th
Haverhill, Mass....Sunday, May 27th
S. S. MOONEY.

Holliston....Sunday, May 20th
W. C. STONE.

Savoy, Mass., (where Bro. McCulloch may appoint), Sunday, May 20th.
Goshen....Sunday, May 27th
J. HEMENWAY.

Nashua, N. H....May 20th
Lawrence, Mass....May 27th
Z. FORD.

Bristol, R. I....May 20th
J. K. BELLOWS.

West Falmouth, (as Bro. Field may appoint), Wednesday evening, May 16th, through the week, and over the following Sunday.
Biddeford....Sunday, May 27th
Dover, N. H....Tuesday evening, May 29th
L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Charlemont....Sunday, May 20th
Plainfield Ponds....Sunday, May 27th
W. J. BLANCHARD.

East Landaff, N. H....Sunday, May 20th
A. W. SIBLEY.

Danbury, (Knowlton school-house), Lord's day, May 20th.
East Canaan....Lord's day, May 27th
North Sutton, (at Bro. I. Andrews), Tuesday evening, May 29th. B. P. MANNING.

Redfield Square, N. Y....May 17th and over Sunday, May 20th.
West Martinsburg, N. Y....May 22d and 23d
Copenhagen, N. Y....May 24th
C. H. WILLIAMS.

Levant, (Emmerson's Mills)....May 20th
Sebec, (near Bro. Harriman's)....May 27th
I. K. LOMBARD.

CONCORD, N. H., (ANGELOS HALL.)
J. G. Smith....Sunday, May 20th
H. Pratt....Sundays, May 27th and June 3d

South Windsor, Ct....Friday evening, May 18th and over Sunday, the 20th.
Hope to see a large gathering of the friends at these meetings. Will Bro. R. J. Whitehead arrange so as to be with me at South Windsor? C. GOODRICH.

LEE, N. H.
Worcester, Mass....May 20th and 27th
J. COUCH.

Conesus, (Webster school-house), 10½ A. M., May 20th
Conesus Center, 4 P. M....Sunday, May 20th
Seneca Falls....Sunday, May 27th
Annual Conference....June 3d
Dansville....June 10th
Bristol and Honeoye....June 17th
F. BURR.

Concord, (Angelos Hall)....Sunday, May 20th
J. G. SMITH.

West Abington, Mass....Sunday, May 20th
WM. H. FISHER.

BARNES' HALL, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
John G. Hook....Sundays, May 20th and 27th

Albany, N. Y....Sunday, May 20th
H. PRATT.

Square Pond....May 20th
Scitico....May 27th
Springfield....June 3d
A. M. HIGGINS.

WEST FALMOUTH, ME.
I. C. Wellcome....Sunday, May 20th
R. R. York....Sunday, May 27th

Alton Corner....Sunday, May 20th
J. PINKHAM.

CONCORD, N. H.
Miles Grant....Sunday, May 20th
Charles Ramsey....Sunday, May 27th
Timothy Cole....June 3d and 10th

Canaan....Sunday, May 20th
GEO. W. BROWN, of Portsmouth, N. H.
[Bro. Brown goes this trip by my request. Brethren will please bear in mind that there are two George W. Browns, and this is not the other one. H. MUNGER.

Rome (Town House)....May 20th
H. B. SEVEY.

Bristol, Ct....May 20th
Hartford, Ct....May 27th
If any in the vicinity of Bristol or Hartford desire evening appointments while I am in Western Connecticut, write me at Danielsonville, Ct.
H. F. CARPENTER.

ROCHESTER, N. H., ([illegible] HALL.)
Augustus [illegible]....Sunday, May 27th

Bristol, Ct....Sunday, May 20th
Cheshire Street, Ct....Sunday, May 27th
E. WOODRUFF.

